The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to consider amendment No. 114 now. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 7. That in consideration of an ordinance passed by the City Council of the city of Chicago on February 4, 1921, giving to the United States the use and maintenance for 20 years from July 1, 1921, of certain premises in the city of Chicago for barge-office quarters, upon terms and conditions therein set forth and payment to the United States of the appraised value of the land to be condemned, such value to be not less than $25.50 per square foot, the city of Chicago is hereby authorized to acquire for street purposes by condemnation proceedings all interest of the United States in and to lot 10 in block 2 in Fort Dearborn addition to Chicago, section 10, township 39 north, range 14 east, of the third principal meridian, in the city of Chicago, in the State of Illinois.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman from Indiana yield me five minutes?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield the gentleman five minutes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, the city of Chicago, in the process of making better communications between the north and south sides of the city, is widening several streets in connection with the Rush Street Bridge, which is the easterly bridge over the Chicago River. The Government of the United States owns what is called the old barge property, an irregular piece of land 5½ feet at one end and 35 or 40 at the other end, with sides of different length. It is not in use; probably never would be built upon. The Government rents a barge office, and I am told that the expense of the rental, light, heat, janitor service, and so forth, amounts to about $1,500 a year. The city of Chicago has an ordinance passed for the condemnation of the land necessary for the widening of those streets. This property is included in the condemnation suit, but, of course, the Government can not be brought into the suit without the consent of Congress. The city of Chicago has offered to construct on the Rush Street Bridge itself a tower commanding a view of the river, in the very best of order, and rent it to the Government for 20 years at a nominal rental of $10 a year, and besides desires the privilege of paying full value for the property taken, which in the bill is fixed at not less than $25.50 per square foot, which is the appraised value made by the Treasury Department. All of the Government officials who know about it are in favor of the proposition. It seems to be absolutely just. The rental which will be given to the Government in the 20 years will amount to $30,000. The value of the property is probably $25,000 or $30,000. That will be paid for in full by the city, but it is necessary to have it in the condemnation proceedings, because that is the only way that we have of carrying out the project. I move that the House recede from its disagreement and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I have no objection.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 79, line 24, after the figures "$22,360" insert: Provided, That nothing contained in this act or any other act shall be construed as precluding the detail upon duties of a technical or military nature of not to exceed eight warrant officers, or enlisted men of the Coast Artillery Corps, in the office of the Chief of Coast Artillery.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I will state that the purpose of this amendment is to permit the detail of eight warrant officers to the District of Columbia. Under the law these warrant officers can not be employed in the District of Columbia, but if this authorization is granted it will permit their use in the discharge of technical duties here, resulting in a saving to the Government, for if they can not be used technical civilians will have to be employed.

I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 101, after line 7, insert: To enable the Secretary of the Navy to install cerain fittings and make such necessary changes, alterations, and moves in the new Navy Building, Seventeenth and B Streets northwest, as will provide sufficient office space for the accommodation of the United States Shipping Board, $75,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this amendment is to utilize part of the space of the Government building for the accommodation of the Shipping Board, which will result in a saving of about $75,000 a year that otherwise would have to be expended for rent, and it will also give employment to that much space in one of the Government buildings. I desire to move that the House recede and concur in this amendment with the following amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves to recede and concur in Senate amendment No. 82, and agree to the same with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In the last line of the matter inserted by Senate amendment, after the word "necessary," insert the following: "to be available immediately."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 98: Page 125, line 5, after the figures "$500" insert the words "assistant chief clerk, $3,000."

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in Senate amendment No. 98. This amendment was put on the bill after a hearing showing that the Department of Justice was in need of this additional position.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Indiana to recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 99: Page 126, line 2, strike out the figures "$484,310" and insert "$487,310."

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. The purpose of this amendment is to change the total. I move that the House recede and concur.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana moves that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 112: On page 157, strike out all of lines 1 to 17, inclusive, and insert:

"SEC. 4. That no part of any money appropriated by this or any other act shall be used during the fiscal year 1922 for the purchase of any standard typewriting machine, except bookkeeping and billing machines, at a price in excess of the following, to wit: For correspondence models with carriages which will accommodate paper 10 inches in width, $70; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 12 inches in width, $75; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 14 inches in width, $77.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 16 inches in width, $82.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 18 inches in width, $85; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 20 inches in width, $92.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 22 inches in width, $95; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 24 inches in width, $97.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 26 inches in width, $100; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 28 inches in width, $102.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 30 inches in width $105; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 32 inches in width, $107.50."

All purchases of typewriting machines during the fiscal year 1922 by the various branches of the Government of the United States for use in the District of Columbia or in the field, except as hereinafter provided, shall be made from the surplus machines in the stock of the General Supply Committee. The War Department shall furnish the General Supply Committee, immediately upon the approval of this act, a complete inventory of the various makes, models, and classes of typewriters in its possession, the condition of such machines, and the point of storage, and shall turn over to the General Supply Committee such typewriting machines in such quantities as the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time may call for by specific requisition for sale to the various services of the Government. If the General Supply Committee is unable to furnish serviceable machines to any branch of the Government, it shall furnish unserviceable machines at current exchange prices and such machines shall then be applied by the branch of the Government receiving them as part payment for new machines from commercial sources in accordance with the prices fixed in the preceding paragraph. And in selling typewriting machines to the various branches of the Government service the General Supply Committee may accept an equal number of unserviceable machines as part payment thereon at the exchange prices quoted in the current general schedule of supplies. Until June 30, 1922, the War Department shall not dispose of any typewriting machines except to the General Supply Committee as authorized herein.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I wish to state to the House that it is my intention to move to concur in the Senate amendment with some amendments. The major portion of the language already read, and which will be in the motion to recede and concur with an amendment, is the same as the language now in the current law, except that those of you who have the bill before you will see that we provided under the old law for the purchase of typewriting machines during the fiscal year 1921 for the various branches of the Government of the United States for use in the District of Columbia, and so forth, and we provide an amendment there that that should only apply to the executive and independent establishments.

There has been great complaint made to the Clerk of the House with reference to the provision for typewriters for the use of the Members under this law as it now stands, and this amendment will provide that the Members may get the character of machine that they desire. We have also stricken from the current law the limitation or provision which provided that until June 30, 1922, the War Department shall not dispose of any typewriting machine except to the General Supply Committee, as authorized herein. We struck that out for the reason that the War Department has been using that as an excuse for not declaring a surplus of a very great number of machines, and perhaps technically they were right. They have a great many machines like the little Coronas, that were used during the war by the various clerks, and so forth, that there is no demand for in the departmental service now, and there are a great many other machines that are not used in the departmental service which are not salable and can not be salable with this provision in it. So the amendment I am offering provides for striking out that portion of it.

The other portion, which is new, provided by the amendment has to do with fixing the prices of these machines. Under the old law and the current law the prices used in the purchase of these machines go back as far as 1914, and they were a jumble of prices. The Senate in its amendment has attempted to fix the prices as indicated by the amendment read by the Clerk, but a mistake was discovered with reference to them. Instead of the $85 machine, that machine should be $87.50, and the $92.50 should be $94, and the $100 machine should be $103.50, and the $102.50 should be $104. These were made to correspond with the prices compared with the smaller priced machines. And the average price that is now being paid, the current price, is made the same now for all similar machines, which is at $70. This will result in the Government's paying from $1.50 to $2.50 for the most of the machines that are in use, and I think applies to all of them, except possibly the Royal machine, which was sold cheaper to the Government than any other—sold for $58.50—which brings that up to the level of the $70, and gives them a minimum of $11.

Mr. MILLER. What was the basis of these prices? How did they get them?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. It was fixed in 1914, as I understand, at the time these various machine companies were competing against each other and offering all kinds of prices to different branches of the Government, and even to different divisions in the same department, each trying to outbid the other for advertising purposes. And by reason of some legislation at that time, instead of agreeing upon a fixed price, they agreed that the Government should not pay a higher price to any manufacturing concern than the lowest price that any of the departments were paying.

Mr. MILLER. Does this fix a minimum price or maximum price?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. It fixes a maximum price.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes; I yield.

Mr. SNYDER. Is it the effect of the amendment to strike out the figures as to the amount to be paid? For instance, the bill now states that a certain typewriter shall be $70 and certain others $72.50, and so on.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Does the amendment that the gentleman offers strike out the figures?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I have indicated the ones that are changed, and the only ones that are changed.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield to me two or three minutes to make a statement in regard to that?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, the effect of this amendment as it stands now, with the prices written in, will be almost disastrous to the typewriter interests of this country, for the very reason that the Government is buying these typewriters at a lower price than they are offered for to the public, due to the fact that the gentleman just stated, that in the years gone by the sale of typewriters to the Government was used as an advertisement for the sale of typewriters elsewhere. But it has come about that the American typewriters are used almost universally abroad. Now we are passing a bill here fixing in it a price in figures that the Government is to pay for typewriters.

I want to ask the gentleman whether he thinks that the prices of those typewriters being advertised as the prices that the Government shall pay, any foreign Government that is now buying typewriters in this country would be willing to pay a larger price than the one mentioned in the bill? As since it is conceded, and the testimony all shows, that these figures are approximately the cost of producing typewriters in this country, does he think it fair to force into a bill the price of a commodity that will fix the world value?

It is eminently unfair and ought not to be put into this bill. It is not a question with me or with the typewriter concerns so much now as to what they get for a typewriter, but that the Government is now fixing a price in figures not only for itself but for everyone else.

I would like to say further that within a week one of these typewriter concerns was solicited by the Du Pont Powder Co., that desired to buy a large number of typewriters, to quote prices of machines, and immediately this question was raised, "Do you expect us to pay more for typewriters than the Government of the United States is paying for them?" It was stated that the Government had fixed the price, and that, of course, the typewriter concerns had nothing to do but accept it. Well, the Du Pont people said, "If it will help you any, we will call a meeting of the board of directors, and we will have a resolution passed that we can not pay more than this price for typewriters."

Now, I maintain that this is the only commodity that the Government buys that it sets the price upon, and we are fixing a price here for the typewriter concerns, not only for this Government but for any other Government that desires to buy them.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Does the gentleman know that there is any truth in this assertion that is sometimes made that the typewriters which are manufactured in this country, several of the makes which are used by the Government, are, as a matter of fact, in a trust, and that the typewriter manufacture of the United States is, in fact, a monopoly?

Mr. SNYDER. No; I do not so understand. I know that these men are competing in the market as seriously against each other as the producers of any other commodity that is being offered to the public.

Mr. WALSH. There is not much difference in the prices of different standard machines.

Mr. SNYDER. I am not quarreling with the price at which the Government buys typewriters, but I say it is putting a penalty upon the typewriter concerns in this country that are selling to the Government typewriters and forcing them to make that same proposition to other Governments that are buying typewriters in large quantities. I do not think that provision should be put in there. I think the amendment should be so framed that it would not disclose the actual price. It is unfair to the typewriter manufacturers, due to the fact that we do not do it to anybody else.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, in answer to what the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] has said, I will state that it is almost an impossible thing to adopt language that would serve the purpose that the gentleman from New York would like to serve with respect to these typewriter manufacturing concerns in the sale of their machines abroad and commercially. The prices fixed by this amendment are maximum prices. We hope that the supply committee may be able to buy many of these machines for a less figure than that fixed. It is far more to the advantage of the manufacturer that the prices be fixed as we are now fixing them than under the old scheme, where under the law they were compelled to furnish their machines to the Government at a smaller price than that at which they will be compelled to furnish them under this maximum price. If there was any disadvantage to them, it has been removed to some little degree. Now, this provision is only for this year, when it is the hope and the desire of the committee, if we can find out the actual cost of the manufacture of these machines, with the decrease in the cost of material and labor, that a lower price may be fixed upon them for the future.

Mr. SNYDER. Taking the gentleman's statement that this is only for this year, would it not have been better to have waited a year to see if a scheme could not be figured out that would be satisfactory? Would it not be better to do that than to ruin the business of a big industry in this country by fixing a price of 30 or 35 per cent below the price at which the typewriter must be sold in order for the industry to succeed in this country?

Mr. SISSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I do not know of any one provision that has given the committee any more trouble to arrange it satisfactorily than this item here. The subcommittee share largely the gentleman's view in reference to the principle of fixing the price of an article in the bill. In fact, that is most objectionable to me. If I could have had my way about it I would not have fixed the price of anything by law. This does not do that exactly. It is a proviso that virtually means that no more than a certain amount of money shall be paid for typewriters of a certain kind. Now, I do not share the alarm of my friend [Mr. SNYDER] about this destroying the typewriter companies throughout the country. From the various hearings that we have had, extending back several years, I do not think the typewriter companies selling in large quantities at the figures fixed in this bill will suffer any loss, but I believe the dividends will be ample for people who want to make a reasonable return on their money. But that is not the point. The point I object to is that the Government ought not to fix the price at all.

Mr. SNYDER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. In a moment. At the same time if you gentlemen had to go through the mill as this subcommittee have had to, and as the committee in the Senate have gone through the mill, and if you had had the various difficulties that we have had in arriving at a just and fair proposition for the Government and at the same time for the typewriter companies, you would appreciate that we have done the very best we could in this item, and we have done the best we could to satisfy to a certain extent the demands of the typewriter companies and at the same time protect the Goverment.

Mr. SNYDER. The only objection I have to the proposition is that the figures are written in the bill, and that is a penalty on the typewriter concerns, and those figures ought to be stricken out.

Mr. SISSON. Personally I share the views of the gentleman exactly.

Mr. SNYDER. And I want to say to the gentleman one thing further, in reply to what he says about the profits of typewriter companies. I have lived for 35 years next to one of the biggest typewriter concerns in this country, and they have never declared a dividend.

Mr. SISSON. You will find a great many railroads that do not make money, and a great many farms that do not make money. Still that may be due to bad management. One man may own a farm on one side of a fence and another man may own another farm identically like it on the other side of the fence, and one man will make money and the other will not. Then there are certain prices that people ought to pay for all of these commodities, and I feel that we have fixed a very fair amount; and I do not believe the agents of the typewriter companies who talk to us will say that this price is too small, with the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD].

They do not say that; they do not say that the price is too small. They will not say that in selling typewriters in large quantities there is no margin of profit.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. Yes.

Mr. REED of West Virginia. Will it be possible for the Government to sell the machines for a price so that anyone can not find out the Government price?

Mr. SISSON. I think the gentleman from West Virginia has stated the facts. If anybody wants to find out the price that the Government pays they can go and make the inquiry. Now, I do not object to the price fixing on this matter on the same grounds that the gentleman from New York does. I do not believe in fixing the price of anything by the Government; I do not believe in fixing the price of things by law. The gentleman from New York does not want it written in the bill for fear it will injure business. I do not want to injure anybody's business. The only reason that he gives is that he says he does not want it printed in the law. As the gentleman from Virginia says, when the Government makes a contract for the purchase of typewriters or automobiles, anyone can go and find out what price the Government paid.

Mr. SNYDER. But the Government is not putting it in the law and advertising it. The gentleman has overlooked the fact that these typewriters were sold to the Government at cost.

Mr. SISSON. If the typewriter companies find this bed too hard, it was not made by the Congress nor by the subcommittee. This bed was made by the typewriter companies by virtue of their dealings with the Government in the first place, and Congress had to take the matter in hand to stop the abuses that have grown up.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede, and concur with the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. WOOD of Indiana moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment No. 112, and agree to the same with the following amendment: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 4. That no part of any money appropriated by this or any other act shall be used during the fiscal year 1922 for the purchase of any standard typewriting machine, except bookkeeping and billing machines, at a price in excess of the following, to wit: For correspondence models, with carriages which will accommodate paper 10 inches in width, $70; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 12 inches in width, $75; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 14 inches in width, $77.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 16 inches in width, $82.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 18 inches in width, $87.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 20 inches in width, $94; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 22 inches in width, $95; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 24 inches in width, $97.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 26 inches in width, $103.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 28 inches in width, $104; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 30 inches in width, $105; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 32 inches in width, $107.50.

"All purchases of typewriting machines during the fiscal year 1922 by executive departments and independent establishments for use in the District of Columbia or in the field, except as hereinafter provided, shall be made from the surplus machines in the stock of the General Supply Committee. The War Department shall furnish the General Supply Committee, immediately upon the approval of this act, a complete inventory of the various makes, models, and classes of typewriters in its possession, the condition of such machines, and the point of storage, and shall turn over to the General Supply Committee such typewriting machines in such quantities as the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time may call for by specific requisition for sale to the various services of the Government. If the General Supply Committee is unable to furnish serviceable machines to any branch of the Government, it shall furnish unserviceable machines at current exchange prices, and such machines shall then be applied by the branch of the Government receiving them as part payment for new machines from commercial sources in accordance with the prices fixed in the preceding paragraph. And in selling typewriting machines to the various branches of the Government service the General Supply Committee may accept an equal number of unserviceable machines as part payment thereon at the exchange prices quoted in the current general schedule of supplies."

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with an amendment by striking out section 4.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Will the gentleman yield to me to ask the gentleman from Indiana a question?

Mr. SNYDER. I will.

Mr. LINTHICUM. I want to know why bookkeeping and billing machines were excepted?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Because there was no reason for their being in. There are very few of these machines purchased.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Then, you can purchase them at any price that you can arrange for; there is no price fixed?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Through the General Supply Committee; yes.

Mr. SNYDER. My motion is to amend the motion of the gentleman from Indiana.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana has offered an amendment striking out all of the Senate amendment.

Mr. SNYDER. The amendment of the gentleman from Indiana carries the figures that are objectionable, and what I desire is to strike out that part with reference to the figures beginning on line 24.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman wishes to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana by striking out the first paragraph of the amendment.

Mr. SNYDER. That is what I want.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman proposes to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana by striking out the first paragraph.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman from Indiana yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes.

Mr. WALSH. Will the gentleman state what was the idea of striking out the words "by various branches of the Government of the United States for use of the District of Columbia" and restricting it to the Executive?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. That occurred because of the very great number of complaints made by Members of the House that they could not get new machines and could not get the character of machines they desired.

Mr. WALSH. But if the gentleman will permit——

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the hour of 6 o'clock has arrived.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will determine when the hour of 6 has arrived.

Mr. BLANTON. I would like to submit a point of order, that under the previous order of the House the House should recess.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recess the House at 6 o'clock.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will permit, in the language of his amendment he says "If the General Supply Committee is unable to furnish serviceable machines to any branch of the Government." That would seem to convey the impression——

The SPEAKER. The hour of 6 o'clock having arrived, the House will stand in recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

RECESS.

Accordingly (6 o'clock p. m.) the House stood in recess until 8 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House (at 8 o'clock p. m.) resumed its session.

SPEAKERS PRO TEMPORE FOR MEMORIAL EXERCISES.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will designate Mr. FORDNEY, of Michigan, to preside to-morrow over the memorial exercises for Mr. NICHOLS, of Michigan; and Mr. CARTER, of Oklahoma, over the exercises for Mr. MORGAN, of Oklahoma.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present. I withhold that temporarily.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I wish to modify the amendment which I proposed to Senate amendment 112 just before the recess by striking out in next to the last sentence of the proposed amendment the word "branch" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "such service," and in the same sentence immediately following, and in the second line, the word "branch" and insert in lieu thereof the word "service," and in the last sentence strike out the words "branches of the Government service" and insert the word "services." I have indicated this amendment to the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment in the manner which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In the last sentence of the amendment strike out the word "branch" and insert in lieu thereof "such service." In the second line below where it first occurs strike out the word "branch" and insert the word "service." And in the last sentence strike out "branches of the Government service" and insert in lieu thereof the word "service."

The SPEAKER. Without objection the amendment will be——

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object—does this amendment increase the maximum limit as set by the Senate amendment or decrease it?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Well, it has nothing to do with decrease or increase. It makes the amendment consistent with reference to the amendment we made providing for the furnishing of typewriters to Members of Congress.

Mr. BLANTON. The price is the same as the Senate amendment?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. It has nothing to do with that.

Mr. BLANTON. I mean the original amendment, it does not change the price at all as fixed by the Senate amendment?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. The amendment changes the price in reference to three different classes of machines.

Mr. BLANTON. Increases it?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Yes; a dollar and a half or two dollars. That was done because of a mistake in the computation.

Mr. BLANTON. It is just merely to correct a mistake and it does not purposely increase the price?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Absolutely not.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I offer as an amendment to strike out the first paragraph of the amendment down to and including the figures "$107.50."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves to amend the amendment by striking out the first paragraph thereof.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, as I stated before the recess, the reason for this is that this establishes and fixes the price the world over on typewriters which have been heretofore sold to the Government and are being sold to the Government in such quantities as they are being to-day on the basis of no profit considering the advantage of being sold to the Government at the purchase price. If this amendment of the gentleman from Indiana is adopted the typewriting concerns of this country will be unable to sell typewriters outside of the United States to Governments for a price greater than this, which will be a great hardship to them, and if this section is stricken out it will not cost the Government of the United States one penny, because the purchase of typewriters would recur instantly to the price that is being paid to-day, which is in some cases a little less than these figures mentioned. It is, in my judgment, penalizing the typewriting concerns of this country to advertise the prices that the Government is paying in figures so that one can see as they run what the prices are that the Government is paying, and in addition to that it works a hardship upon the people of this country. The purchasers of large quantities of typewriters naturally get a lower price than those who buy a single typewriter, but no concern can sell their goods at a price which is just nominally above the cost of the article, and it has been stated by the chairman of the subcommittee that they only proposed to carry those prices for one year.

Now, I say, that that being so, it would be a great deal better for the people of this country to have that omitted for this year and see during the year if some arrangement can not be perfected whereby you can get along without fixing prices. This also establishes a precedent. This is the first time in the history of this Congress, so far as I have been able to discover, when the Government has advertised the price it pays for any commodity. It is establishing a bad precedent, and it will not be long before the Government will be unable to buy from manufacturers in this country at a better price than the ordinary consumer, if this thing is continued.

Mr. TILSON. Does the gentleman know when these prices were fixed?

Mr. SNYDER. These prices in here?

Mr. TILSON. The prices given in the original Senate amendment?

Mr. SNYDER. Within the last week or 10 days.

Mr. TILSON. Those are the present prices at which the Government can buy these typewriters?

Mr. SNYDER. There has been a great discussion about this matter. The committee, I am sure, has worked hard on it, and consistently, with the endeavor not to give the typewriter people more for their goods, notwithstanding the fact that they are entitled to it. But the gentlemen of this House know that that is the only commodity that the United States Government has purchased from anyone during the period of the war that they have not made an increase on. They are selling them to-day at the price they got in 1913 and 1914. Is it fair to them to insist that they shall continue at the old price and advertise the price so that they can not get a dollar more from anybody else? I assure you that my motion to strike out that section is justifiable and should be carried by this House.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say in answer to the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] that the committee appreciates the position occupied by these typewriter manufacturing concerns. I do not think it is nearly as serious as the gentleman from New York seems to think it is, or as it is represented to me by these manufacturing concerns. But I wish to call the attention of the House to the situation that we will be in in the event that this proposed amendment is adopted. Unless something else is offered in its place the Government of the United States will be at the mercy of these typewriter men. As was suggested by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON] before we recessed, the Members of this House are not responsible for the unfortunate condition in which these firms find themselves. They prepared their own resting place, and it has been the effort of this subcommittee, and of the House, I think, to relieve them as far as possible and at the same time protect the best interests of the Government.

Now, as I stated before, this thing is to last but one year, and unless the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] can offer us something better than we have offered in trying to relieve them—and we thought we had relieved them some, and we have—certainly his amendment should be voted down, and the Government of the United States should not be left to the mercy of these typewriter people.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman knows that several propositions have been presented for the consideration of the committee, and some of the committee were favorable to the proposition which left the typewriter concerns in the same position that they are in now, before this law becomes an act. The gentleman has stated on this floor that there were many thousands of typewriters in existence. This amendment of his fixes it so that there will be a complete interchange of typewriters between the various departments, and, further than that, this House will be supplied with second-hand typewriters for its use by reason of this, and if his statement and the statement of the committee is correct with regard to the number of typewriters we have now in Government ownership, it will not be necessary to purchase any typewriters for the next year. So nobody will be harmed by striking out this section. The manufacturers and the laboring men that operate those factories will be benefited by reason of striking this thing from the bill.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the committee, in addition to what was said before we took the recess, that your subcommittee of conference has done everything on earth that they could to get this matter settled. Now, if you should send this matter back to conference, you will put us right back into the situation where the House and the Senate conferees have been at great difference. We have had a great deal of difficulty in getting what we have now gotten. I do not like, nor, I will say frankly, do your conferees like, the idea of fixing the price, but, as it was argued by the Senate conferees, this is not fixing the price, it is simply putting a limitation on it; and if you will read the language there you will see it is simply a limitation that more than this amount of money shall not be paid for these typewriters. Now, it is the best relief we can get for the situation. What the gentleman says is largely true in reference to the price that has been paid for the typewriters. But there was never such a purchase of typewriters in the history of the world than when the War Department and the other departments of the Government took practically all the typewriters that could be manufactured.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SISSON. Yes.

Mr. KNUTSON. How many typewriters were purchased?

Mr. SISSON. I wish I could tell you.

Mr. KNUTSON. Approximately?

Mr. SISSON. If you can determine by a month's investigation the number of typewriters that were purchased, I think the subcommittee will give you a chromo of efficiency. Nobody knows.

Mr. KNUTSON. I have heard that 200,000 were purchased by the War Department. How far is that off?

Mr. SISSON. I do not know. I understand that, as a matter of fact, the typewriters purchased for overseas and typewriters purchased for use in the United States were about 200,000.

Mr. KNUTSON. That is by the War Department?

Mr. SISSON. Yes; that is by the War Department alone. Be that as it may, I believe I and the two other conferees have gone into this matter as fully as we could. We wanted to find out the situation with regard to typewriters, but we did not know that the typewriters were in town. The chairman of this subcommittee happened to hear a rumor to the effect that there were some typewriters stored in a certain building, but did not know how many. My friend, the chairman of this subcommittee [Mr. WOOD of Indiana], and the gentleman from New Hampshire [Mr. WASON] and I went down and found the garage, and went up on the third floor and up to the fourth floor of that garage, which was about 120 feet wide and 250 feet long, and there were perfect piles and piles of typewriters that had never been taken out of the boxes, besides numerous typewriters that had practically never been used. There they were, stacked pile on pile.

We found those typewriters by making an investigation on our own hook. Then we began to find some more typewriters here and there.

Now, I do not believe the typewriter manufacturers of the country have the right to claim that they have not been fairly treated. I would like, if I had the time now, to tell the House some of the things that the subcommittee has had to deal with, and about the general conduct of the typewriter people. As my friend said, if this is a bad bed for the typewriter manufacturers, God knows they have made it themselves, and they must lie in it. [Applause.]

Neither I myself nor either of these two gentlemen who were on the conference with me would do any typewriter manufacturer any injustice. In fact, we objected seriously to the fixing of a price in the bill. We wanted them to make a profit, and we wanted them to make a return, in secret if they desired, as to the cost of manufacturing these typewriters, under oath, and then we would have been glad to see them get a percentage of profit.

Now, listen, gentlemen: We can not ourselves make this provision. We have got to deal with the Senate conferees. I think the typewriter factories are extremely fortunate in the fact that we were able to get the agreement that we have obtained out of the Senate conferees on this matter. I think the subcommittee has done a good service to the typewriter companies.

Now, in conclusion, let me say that we agree with the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] that we ought not to fix the prices of commodities, but if you will take that provision a read it, you will see that it is in the nature of a limitation; and if these gentlemen do not want to sell the typewriters at those prices there is no compulsion on them to dispose of them at those prices.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. The gentleman has just stated that he has found thousands of typewriters in this city?

Mr. SISSON. Yes.

Mr. SNYDER. And there will not be any great need for any more for a year?

Mr. SISSON. I should think so.

Mr. SNYDER. So do I. Now, since we both believe that there will be no further purchases for the time being, what harm will there be in striking out these words?

Mr. SISSON. I thought I had said enough on this subject in the statement I have made, but the gentleman continues to provoke me to say something more. It was understood when the Government purchased these typewriters it was advised that they should not be put back on the market at a price too low, for fear that would break the market price. For that reason the War Department has been holding on with grim tenacity to these typewriters which it has in its possession. We have done our best. I want to congratulate the gentleman from Indiana and the gentleman from New Hampshire, my colleagues, on the result that we have obtained.

Mr. SABATH. Is there any evidence as to the amount of money that these manufacturers of typewriters have lost on those typewriters? [Laughter.]

Mr. SISSON. Never a word, and I never heard of it until this afternoon.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] to recede and concur with an amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 113, page 160, line 4, insert:

SEC. 6. That all civilian employees of the Governments of the United States and the District of Columbia who receive a total of compensation at the rate of $2,500 per annum or less, except as otherwise provided in this section, shall receive during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, additional compensation at the rate of $240 per annum: Provided, That such employees as receive a total of annual compensation at a rate more than $2,500 and less than $2,740 shall receive additional compensation at such rate per annum as may be necessary to make their salaries, plus their additional compensation, at the rate of $2,740 per annum, and no employee shall receive additional compensation under this section at a rate which is more than 60 per cent of the rate of the total annual compensation received by such employee: Provided further, That the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, shall not be computed as salary in construing this section: Provided further, That where an employee in the service on June 30, 1920, has received during the fiscal year 1921, or shall receive during the fiscal year 1922, an increase of salary at a rate in excess of $200 per annum, or where an employee, whether previously in the service or not, has entered the service since June 30, 1920, whether such employee has received an increase in salary or not, such employees shall be granted the increased compensation provided herein only when and upon the certification of the person in the legislative branch or the head of the department or establishment employing such persons of the ability and qualifications personal to such employees as would justify such increased compensation: Provided further, That the increased compensation provided in this section to employees whose pay is adjusted from time to time through wage boards or similar authority shall be taken into consideration by such wage boards or similar authority in adjusting the pay of such employees.

The provisions of this section shall not apply to the following: Employees paid from the postal revenues and sums which may be advanced from the Treasury to meet deficiencies in the postal revenues; employees of the Panama Canal on the Canal Zone; employees of the Alaskan Engineering Commission in Alaska; employees paid from lump-sum appropriations in bureaus, divisions, commissions, or any other governmental agencies or employments created by law since January 1, 1916, except employees of the United States Tariff Commission, and the Women's Bureau, who shall be included and except that employees of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance shall receive increased compensation at one-half the rate allowed by this section for other employees: Provided, That employees of the said Bureau of War Risk Insurance who are compensated at rates below $400 per annum shall receive additional compensation only at the rate of 60 per cent of the annual rates of compensation received by such employees. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees whose duties require only a portion of their time, except charwomen, who shall be included; employees whose services are utilized for brief periods at intervals; persons employed by or through corporations, firms, or individuals acting for or on behalf of or as agents of the United States or any department or independent establishment of the Government of the United States in connection with construction work or the operation of plants; employees who receive a part of their pay from any outside sources under cooperative arrangements with the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia; employees who serve voluntarily or receive only a nominal compensation, and employees who may be provided with special allowances because of their service in foreign countries. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees of the railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems taken over by the United States, and nothing contained herein shall be deemed a recognition of the employees of such railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems as employees of the United States.

Section 6 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved May 10, 1916, as amended by the naval appropriation act approved August 29, 1916, shall not operate to prevent anyone from receiving the additional compensation provided in this section who otherwise is entitled to receive the same.

Such employees as are engaged on piecework, by the hour, or at per diem rates, if otherwise entitled to receive the additional compensation, shall receive the same at the rate to which they are entitled in this section when their fixed rate of pay for the regular working hours and on the basis of 313 days in the said fiscal year would amount to $2,500 or less: Provided, That this method of computation shall not apply to any per diem employees regularly paid a per diem for every day in the year.

So much as may be necessary to pay the additional compensation provided in this section to employees of the Government of the United States is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to employees of the Government of the District of Columbia is appropriated, 40 per cent out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and 60 per cent out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, except to employees of the Washington Aqueduct and the water department, which shall be paid entirely from the revenues of the water department, and to employees of the minimum-wage board and the playgrounds department, which shall be paid wholly out of the revenue of the District of Columbia.

So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to persons employed under trust funds who may be construed to be employees of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia is authorized to be paid, respectively, from such trust funds.

Reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next regular session showing for the first four months of the fiscal year the average number of employees in each department, bureau, office, or establishment receiving the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum and the average number by grades receiving the same at each other rate.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 113 and agree to the same.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California moves that the House recede and concur. The question is on the gentleman's motion.

Mr. BLANTON. I ask for a division of that question.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recede and concur with certain amendments, and I also ask for a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman demands a division of the question, to which he is entitled. The question is on the motion to recede.

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 169, noes 1.

Mr. BLANTON. I make the point of no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and seventy-eight Members present; not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 255, nays 3, not voting 170, as follows:

YEAS—255.

Ackerman	Carter	Focht	Humphreys
Almon	Chindblom	Fordney	Hutchinson
Anderson	Christopherson	Foster	Igoe
Andrews, Nebr.	Cleary	Freeman	Jacoway
Anthony	Coady	French	Johnson, Ky.
Ashbrook	Cole	Fuller	Johnson, Miss.
Aswell	Collier	Gallagher	Johnson, S. Dak.
Babka	Connally	Gallivan	Johnson, Wash.
Bankhead	Cooper	Ganly	Jones, Tex.
Barbour	Crago	Gard	Kearns
Barkley	Cramton	Garrett	Keller.
Bee	Crisp	Glynn	Kelly, Pa.
Begg	Crowther	Goodykoontz	Kennedy, R. I.
Benham	Cullen	Graham, Ill.	Kiess
Black	Currie, Mich.	Green, Iowa	Kincheloe
Bland, Mo.	Curry, Calif.	Greene, Mass.	King
Bland, Va.	Dallinger	Greene, Vt.	Kinkaid
Boies	Darrow	Griest	Kleczka
Bowers	Davis, Tenn.	Griffin	Knutson
Bowling	Denison	Hadley	Lampert
Box	Dickinson, Iowa	Hardy, Colo.	Lanham
Brand	Doremus	Harrison	Lankford
Briggs	Dowell	Hastings	Larsen
Brooks, Ill.	Dunbar	Hawley	Layton
Brooks, Pa.	Dyer	Hayden	Lazaro
Buchanan	Eagan	Hays	Lee, Ga.
Burdick	Echols	Hernandez	Lehlbach
Burke	Elliott	Hersey	Lesher
Burroughs	Emerson	Hickey	Linthicum
Byrnes, S. C.	Esch	Hoch	Little
Byrns, Tenn.	Evans, Nebr.	Hoey	Luce
Campbell, Kans.	Fairfield	Holland	Lufkin
Campbell, Pa.	Farr	Huddleston	Luhring
Candler	Ferris	Hudspeth	McAndrews
Carew	Fields	Hulings	McClintic
Carss	Fisher	Hull, Iowa	McFadden

McKeown	Ogden	Scott	Tincher
McLaughlin, Nebr.	Oldfield	Sells	Towner
McLeod	Osborne	Shreve	Treadway
MacGregor	Overstreet	Siegel	Valle
Magee	Padgett	Sinclair	Vestal
Major	Park	Sinnott	Vinson
Mansfield	Parrish	Sisson	Voigt
Mapes	Peters	Smith, Idaho	Volstead
Martin	Phelan	Smith, Mich.	Walters
Mays	Porter	Smithwick	Ward
Mead	Purnell	Stedman	Wason
Michener	Radcliffe	Steenerson	Watson
Miller	Raker	Stephens, Ohio	Weaver
Milligan	Ramseyer	Stoll	Webster
Minahan, N. J.	Randall, Wis.	Strong, Kans.	Welling
Monahan, Wis.	Rayburn	Strong, Pa.	White, Kans.
Mondell	Reed, N. Y.	Summers, Wash.	Wilson, La.
Moore, Ohio	Reed, W. Va.	Sumners, Tex.	Wilson, Pa.
Moore, Va.	Rhodes	Sweet	Wingo
Mudd	Ricketts	Swindall	Winslow
Murphy	Riddick	Swope	Wood, Ind.
Nelson, Mo.	Riordan	Tague	Woods, Va.
Nelson, Wis.	Robsion, Ky.	Taylor, Ark.	Woodyard
Newton, Minn.	Rogers	Taylor, Tenn.	Wright
Newton, Mo.	Romjue	Thompson	Yates
Nolan	Rose	Tillman	Young, N. Dak.
O'Connell	Rouse	Tilson	Zihlman
O'Connor	Sabath	Timberlake

NAYS—3.

Blanton	Quin	Walsh

NOT VOTING—170.

Andrews, Md.	Fess	Longworth	Rowe
Ayres	Fish	McArthur	Rubey
Bacharach	Flood	McCulloch	Rucker
Baer	Frear	McDuffie	Sanders, Ind.
Bell	Gandy	McGlennon	Sanders, La.
Benson	Garner	McKenzie	Sanders, N. Y.
Bland, Ind.	Godwin, N. C.	McKinley	Sanford
Brinson	Goldfogle	McKinley	Schall
Britten	Good	McLaughlin, Mich.	Scully
Browne	Goodall	McPherson	Sears
Brumbaugh	Goodwin, Ark.	Madden	Sherwood
Butler	Gould	Maher	Sims
Caldwell	Graham, Pa.	Mann, Ill.	Slemp
Cannon	Hamill	Mann, S. C.	Small
Cantrill	Hamilton	Mason	Smith, Ill.
Caraway	Hardy, Tex.	Merritt	Smith, N. Y.
Casey	Harreld	Montague	Snell
Clark, Fla.	Haugen	Moon	Snyder
Clark, Mo.	Hersman	Mooney	Steagall
Classon	Hicks	Moores, Ind.	Steele
Copley	Hill	Morin	Stephens, Miss.
Costello	Houghton	Mott	Stevenson
Dale	Howard	Neely	Stiness
Davey	Hull, Tenn.	Nicholls	Sullivan
Davis, Minn.	Husted	Oliver	Taylor, Colo.
Dempsey	Ireland	Olney	Temple
Dent	James, Mich.	Paige	Thomas
Dewalt	James, Va.	Parker	Tinkham
Dickinson, Mo.	Jefferis	Patterson	Upshaw
Dominick	Johnston, N. Y.	Pell	Vare
Donovan	Jones, Pa.	Perlman	Venable
Dooling	Juul	Pou	Volk
Doughton	Kahn	Rainey, Ala.	Watkins
Drane	Kelley, Mich.	Rainey, Henry T.	Welty
Drewry	Kendall	Rainey, John W.	Whaley
Dunn	Kennedy, Iowa	Ramsey	Wheeler
Dupré	Kettner	Randall, Calif.	White, Me.
Eagle	Kitchin	Ransley	Williams
Edmonds	Kraus	Reavis	Wilson, Ill.
Ellsworth	Kreider	Reber	Wise
Elston	Langley	Robinson, N. C.	Young, Tex.
Evans, Mont.	Lea, Calif.	Rodenberg
Evans, Nev.	Lonergan	Rowan

So the motion to recede was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Mr. McARTHUR with Mr. WHALEY.
Mr. SCHALL with Mr. POU.
Mr. LANGLEY with Mr. CLARK of Florida.
Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota with Mr. MONTAGUE.
Mr. TEMPLE with Mr. PELL.
Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan with Mr. HARDY of Texas.
Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. STEVENSON.
Mr. KELLEY of Michigan with Mr. DICKINSON of Missouri.
Mr. SLEMP with Mr. DUPRÉ.
Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. NICHOLLS.
Mr. MERRITT with Mr. STEAGALL.
Mr. WHEELER with Mr. HOWARD.
Mr. BUTLER with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.
Mr. CANNON with Mr. SHERWOOD.
Mr. MADDEN with Mr. SIMS.
Mr. WHITE of Maine with Mr. BRIGGS.
Mr. ELSTON with Mr. YOUNG of Texas.
Mr. HOUGHTON with Mr. UPSHAW.
Mr. DEMPSEY with Mr. HERSMAN.
Mr. PAIGE with Mr. RUBEY.
Mr. TINKHAM with Mr. CARAWAY.
Mr. JEFFERIS with Mr. LEA of California.
Mr. VOLK with Mr. RANDALL of California.
Mr. RANSLEY with Mr. OLIVER.
Mr. LONGWORTH with Mr. JAMES of Virginia.
Mr. HICKS with Mr. SULLIVAN.
Mr. SNELL with Mr. McDUFFIE.
Mr. BROWNE with Mr. NEELY.
Mr. McPHERSON with Mr. RUCKER.
Mr. MOORES of Indiana with Mr. SMALL.
Mr. PARKER with Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi.
Mr. SANDERS of New York with Mr. BRINSON.
Mr. JONES of Pennsylvania with Mr. EVANS of Montana.
Mr. KRAUS with Mr. WATKINS.
Mr. KENDALL with Mr. ROBINSON of North Carolina.
Mr. MANN of Illinois with Mr. DOMINICK.
Mr. GOOD with Mr. BELL.
Mr. SNYDER with Mr. HULL of Tennessee.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to concur with an amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does not the motion of the gentleman from California [Mr. NOLAN] come first?

The SPEAKER. No; after the motion is divided the amendment has preference. The gentleman from Indiana offers an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from California to concur, which amendment the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. WOOD of Indiana to the Senate amendment: In lieu of the matter inserted by the Senate amendment insert:

"SEC. 6. That all civilian employees of the Governments of the United States and the District of Columbia who receive a total of compensation at the rate of $2,500 per annum or less, except as otherwise provided in this section, shall receive, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, additional compensation at the rate of $240 per annum: Provided, That such employees as receive a total of annual compensation at a rate more than $2,500 and less than $2,740 shall receive additional compensation at such rate per annum as may be necessary to make their salaries, plus their additional compensation, at the rate of $2,740 per annum, and no employee shall receive additional compensation under this section at a rate which is more than 60 per cent of the rate of the total annual compensation received by such employee: Provided further, That the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, shall not be computed as salary in construing this section: Provided further, That where an employee in the service on June 30, 1920, has received during the fiscal year 1921, or shall receive during the fiscal year 1922, an increase of salary at a rate in excess of $200 per annum, or where an employee whether previously in the service or not, has entered the service since June 30, 1920, whether such employee has received an increase in salary or not, such employees shall be granted the increased compensation provided herein only when and upon the certification of the person in the legislative branch or the head of the department or establishment employing such persons of the ability and qualifications personal to such employees as would justify such increased compensation.

"The provisions of this section shall not apply to the following: Employees paid from the postal revenues and sums which may be advanced from the Treasury to meet deficiencies in the postal revenues; employees whose pay is adjustable from time to time through wage boards or similar authority to accord with the commercial rates paid locally for the same class of service; employees of the Panama Canal on the Canal Zone; employees of the Alaskan Engineering Commission in Alaska; employees paid from lump-sum appropriations in bureaus, divisions, commissions, or any other governmental agencies or employments created by law since January 1, 1916, except employees of the United States Tariff Commission, who shall be included and except that employees of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, officers and members of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and the United States park police who receive the compensation fixed by the act approved December 5, 1919, and officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia who receive the compensation fixed by the act approved January 24, 1920, shall receive increased compensation at one-half the rate allowed by this section for other employees: Provided, That employees of the said Bureau of War Risk Insurance who are compensated at rates below $400 per annum shall receive additional compensation only at the rate of 60 per cent of the annual rates of compensation received by such employees. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees whose duties require only a portion of their time, except charwomen, who shall be included; employees whose services are utilized for brief periods at intervals; persons employed by or through corporations, firms, or individuals acting for or on behalf of or as agents of the United States or any department or independent establishment of the Government of the United States in connection with construction work or the operation of plants; employees who receive a part of their pay from any outside sources under cooperative arrangements with the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia; employees who serve voluntarily or receive only a nominal compensation, and employees who may be provided with special allowances because of their service in foreign countries. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees of the railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems taken over by the United States, and nothing contained herein shall be deemed a recognition of the employees of such railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems as employees of the United States.

"Section 6 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved May 10, 1916, as amended by the naval appropriation act approved August 29, 1916, shall not operate to prevent anyone from receiving the additional compensation provided in this section who otherwise is entitled to receive the same.

"Such employees as are engaged on piecework, by the hour, or at per diem rates, if otherwise entitled to receive the additional compensation, shall receive the same at the rate to which they are entitled in this section when their fixed rate of pay for the regular working hours and on the basis of 313 days in the said fiscal year would amount to $2,500 or less: Provided, That this method of computation shall not apply to any per diem employees regularly paid a per diem for every day in the year.

"So much as may be necessary to pay the additional compensation provided in this section to employees of the Government of the United States is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

"So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to employees of the government of the District of Columbia is appropriated, 40 per cent out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and 60 per cent out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, except to employees of the Washington Aqueduct and the water department, which shall be paid entirely from the revenues of the water department, and to employees of the Minimum Wage Board, the community center department, and the playgrounds department, which shall be paid wholly out of the revenue of the District of Columbia.

"So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to persons employed under trust funds who may be construed to be employees of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia is authorized to be paid, respectively, from such trust funds.

"Reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next regular session showing for the first four months of the fiscal year the average number of employees in each department, bureau, office, or establishment receiving the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum and the average number by grades receiving the same at each other rate."

Mr. DUNBAR. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer the following amendment to the amendment:

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment by Mr. DUNBAR to the amendment offered by Mr. WOOD of Indiana: In the second paragraph of the amendment, after "the United States Tariff Commission," insert the words "and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance," and strike out the following: "Employees of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance," and also strike out the following: "Provided, That the employees of the said Bureau of War Risk Insurance were compensated at rates below $400 per annum shall receive additional compensation only at the rate of 60 per cent at the annual rate of compensation received by such employees."

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to come to some agreement as to the time. The gentleman from Indiana has one hour, and those of us in favor of the motion to concur would like to have 30 minutes.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the trouble with the request of the gentleman from California is that I understand he is opposed to this motion, or a certain portion of it, and some other gentlemen are opposed to certain other portions of it. I am perfectly willing to give the combined opposition half of my hour.

Mr. BLACK. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BLACK. Is it in order to offer an amendment now, or will the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] have to be voted on first?

The SPEAKER. The amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] will have to be voted on before any other amendment can be offered.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I will yield five minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR].

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield? I understand that debate will take an hour.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I have an hour to dispose of the question, but I hope that it will not take that time.

Mr. DYER. I understand, under the order, the House is to adjourn at 10 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. There is no such order; there is no time fixed for adjournment.

Mr. DUNBAR. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Congress, the object of this amendment which I have offered is to pay the employees of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance $240 bonus, the same bonus that is paid to the other clerks in different departments doing the same kind of work. Now, I think it is generally admitted that the work required of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance is far-reaching in that it affects a greater number of persons in the United States than the work performed by any other department.

I make that motion in order that they may receive a salary equal to those who are paid for doing similar work in other departments. I wish to quote to you from the findings of the Congressional Joint Commission on Reclassification of Salaries the lack of equity and uniformity in the present rate of compensation as applied to the clerk of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. This is to be found in chapter 2, page 21, of the report of the commission. I read:

Comparison between the employees of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and the "war workers" in the War Department shows the bonus introduces a further variation. The statistical evidence tends to indicate that the War Department paid higher basic salaries than the Bureau of War Risk Insurance for the same work in many large clerical classes.

Mr. LITTLE. Does the Senate amendment include that?

Mr. DUNBAR. The Senate amendment provides for a bonus of $120. My amendment provides for $240.

The difference was commonly about $100. Given a $120 bonus to the employees of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and a $240 bonus to the employees of the War Department, increases the common variation to $220.

Mr. VESTAL. The gentleman's amendment, as I understand it, simply puts back into the bill the same provision that was in the House bill in the first place before the whole bonus question went out on a point of order.

Mr. DUNBAR. That is my understanding.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNBAR. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Is the gentleman's amendment an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] or to the Senate amendment?

Mr. DUNBAR. It is an amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WALSH). The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. DUNBAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes more.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes additional in addition to the hour allotted to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. DUNBAR. Yes.

Mr. LAYTON. Is there any difference between the basic salary of the employees of the War Risk Insurance and the other bureaus?

Mr. DUNBAR. There is.

Mr. LAYTON. Is it higher in the War Risk Insurance Bureau than the average in other bureaus?

Mr. DUNBAR. It is lower.

Mr. LAYTON. The basic salary is lower?

Mr. DUNBAR. The basic salary is lower.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNBAR. Yes.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota. With the gentleman's amendment adopted, will it place the employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau in the same position they are now in for the present fiscal year?

Mr. DUNBAR. It will increase them $120.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. DUNBAR. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Those who desire to vote to concur in the Senate amendment but at the same time would like to increase the bonus for the employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau will have an opportunity to do that only provided the Wood amendment is voted down?

Mr. DUNBAR. If the Wood amendment is voted down, I have another amendment ready to offer to take the place of the amendment that I have now presented. I continue to quote from the findings of the congressional commission:

At a hearing on November 29, 1920, before the subcommittee of the House Committee on Appropriations, for the fiscal year 1922 Commissioner Williams, of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, stated that his employees received an average annual salary of $1,605 (without bonus), which has been officially corrected to $1,660.

The average salaries, exclusive of the bonus were: $1,660 per annum, January 31, 1921, in the Bureau of Internal Revenue; $1,377 per annum, February 5, 1921, in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance.

That is nearly $300 less in the War Risk Bureau than the amount paid for similar work in the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Mr. CRISP. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DUNBAR. Just let me finish this statement. I am informed by Mr. Jones, the director in charge, that he has great difficulty in retaining clerks in his employment for the reason that they leave positions in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and are employed in similar positions in the Internal Revenue Department. I now yield.

Mr. CRISP. Will the gentleman tell the House what reason is advanced why the employees in the War Risk Insurance Bureau should receive a bonus of only $120 and the other employees doing similar work a bonus of $240?

Mr. DUNBAR. I do not know the reason for that, except possibly that when the Bureau of War Risk was first established the basic salary paid was then a little bit larger than the basic salary paid in the other departments. But that has long since ceased to exist. I have a compilation here of statistics prepared by the Congressional Joint Commission of Reclassification of Salaries, presented April 30, 1919. Of 12,591 employees in the Bureau of War Risk, as compared with 50,488 employees in the Treasury, War, and Navy Departments, statistics show that the average salary, exclusive of bonus, received by the clerks in the War Risk Bureau, who were entitled to a bonus, was $1,186 per year, while the average salary received by those employed in the other agencies in similar work was $1,239 per year. The average salary, including the bonus as paid, is as follows:

In the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, $1,306, and the amount paid in the other agencies which I have just mentioned—the Treasury, War, and Navy Departments—for doing similar work is $1,479, or an average of $173 per annum more than is paid to the employees in the Bureau of War Risk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Indiana has expired.

Mr. DUNBAR. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for two minutes more.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana asks unanimous consent to proceed for two additional minutes, in addition to the time allotted to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DUNBAR. The report shows that those employed in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance received $173 less than those doing similar work in other departments. Now, if we increase the bonus under my amendment from $120 a year to $240 a year to the employees of the War Risk Insurance, they would still receive $53 a year less than is paid for doing similar work in other departments, and I submit to you, gentlemen, here to-night, that their work affects every soldier boy in the land who may be appealing for compensation, and because of the small wages paid to these employees in the Bureau of War Risk Insurance it can not be expected that they can do as efficient work so that our soldier boys may receive the justice and prompt consideration to which they are entitled. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. NOLAN].

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I am in favor of the application of the $240 per year bonus for Federal employees without discrimination. I am in favor of its application to employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau; I am in favor of its application to the policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia [applause]; I am in favor of its application to the Women's Bureau; and I am in favor of its application to the navy-yard and arsenal employees of the country. [Applause.] The parliamentary situation is such here now that if the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] is adopted you will deprive the policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia of $120 per year and cut their bonus to $120 instead of $240. My suggestion to the House is that you vote down the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR]——

Mr. DUNBAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NOLAN. In just a moment—also the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD], and we can then take the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] and add it as an amendment to my motion to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. DUNBAR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NOLAN. The gentleman has had 12 or 14 minutes, and I have to cover a good deal of ground. Now, the navy yard and arsenal employees of this country are doing a great work, they are doing a constructive work, and they are entitled to as much consideration as any other set of employees, and if you adopt the substitute or amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] to my motion to concur, you are going to reduce the wages of the navy-yard and arsenal employees of this country $240 a year. Now, to prove that assertion I am going to read you a letter that was written by the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, to Mr. FREAR, a Member of this House, under date of January 11, three days before the legislative bill passed this House. It is addressed to Mr. FREAR, and I am going to read that portion that particularly pertains to the action of the Navy Department.

MY DEAR MR. FREAR: I have your letter of January 11 in regard to the allowance of the $240 per annum bonus to employees of the Naval Establishment.

Prior to the increase authorized by the department, effective September 16, 1920—

Effective September 16, last year, remember—the rate of pay for representative trades was $6.40 per diem, or $0.80 per hour. Under the 5 per cent increase allowed under the above-mentioned readjustment, which was in addition to the allowance of the congressional bonus of $240 per annum, the basic rate of pay for representative trades was $6.72 per diem, or $0.84 per hour, which, plus the above-mentioned bonus of $0.76 plus per diem, or $0.09½ plus per hour, equals $0.93½ per hour, this being the official rate determined and approved by me as a proper and just rate at this time.

At that time, taking into consideration the fact that those gentlemen have been enjoying since the 1st of July last this congressional bonus of $240 a year and an additional 5 per cent granted them by the Wage Adjustment Board of last September, the Secretary of the Navy tells you that the present rate of pay, including the bonus, of 93½ cents per hour is a proper rate of pay for the mechanical trades. Now, there is only one way to meet this situation and meet it right, if we want to give each and every department of the Government fair and just treatment without discrimination, and that is to vote down the amendment and give us an opportunity to vote upon the motion to concur in the Senate amendment and include the War Risk employees. Now, the navy-yard and arsenal employees are entitled to equal consideration. The chairman of the subcommittee will tell you that their wages are fixed from time to time by law and that the amount of money that they receive annually ought to be taken out of the naval appropriation bill and not through this legislative bill. Now, it does not make any difference how they get it. The civilian employees of the Navy Department and the civilian employees of the War Department are provided for in this legislative bill, and why differentiate between them at this time and the mechanical employees and have this House of Representatives go on record as favoring the reduction of wages from the rate set by the Secretary of the Navy that he says is fair—93½ cents per hour?

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. NOLAN. I yield.

Mr. BARKLEY. If I understand it, the Senate amendment gives the navy-yard employees the $240 bonus. Is that correct?

Mr. NOLAN. It does.

Mr. BARKLEY. It also gives the policemen and fireman in the District $240?

Mr. NOLAN. It does.

Mr. BARKLEY. And it also gives the War Risk employees $240?

Mr. NOLAN. No; it is $120. To correct that it will be necessary to vote down and offer an amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. I appreciate the fact that the Senate amendment includes $120 for the employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau.

Mr. NOLAN. I call attention to the fact that the navy-yard and arsenal employees and the policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia will be beneficiaries of the $240 bonus if my amendment prevails.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana eliminate navy-yard employees?

Mr. NOLAN. Absolutely.

Mr. BARKLEY. Does it reduce the War Risk Insurance employees to $120 bonus?

Mr. NOLAN. It holds it at $120.

Mr. BARKLEY. And what does it do to the firemen and police?

Mr. NOLAN. It holds them to $120.

Mr. GALLIVAN. And it also reduces it to the employees in the Women's Bureau?

Mr. NOLAN. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. How does that compensation of approximately 93½ cents compare with the pay received by civilian employees in the same trade in the localities where the navy yards are located?

Mr. NOLAN. It is based absolutely on what is paid for similar employment throughout the country. A committee that was appointed by the Secretary of the Navy, which consisted of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and one other, fixed 93½ cents an hour as the proper rate, taking into consideration the fact that these men were enjoying a bonus.

Mr. DUNBAR. The gentleman thinks it best to vote down my amendment and then vote down the amendment of the chairman of the committee? Does he not think it would be best to vote for my amendment, so that if the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] is voted down we will have another opportunity to restore the Bureau of War Risk employees?

Mr. NOLAN. If the gentleman wants to get this thing straightened out instead of having it in a parliamentary tangle, if he can get unanimous consent to withdraw his amendment he can vote down the amendment of his colleague and attach his amendment to my motion to concur.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield again?

Mr. NOLAN. I will.

Mr. BARKLEY. Assuming the House would adopt the Wood amendment, would it be better or worse to adopt as an amendment to it the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR]?

Mr. NOLAN. If you adopt the Wood amendment, you discriminate against the navy-yard and arsenal employees and the policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia.

Mr. BARKLEY. Assuming that the House does that?

Mr. NOLAN. I assume they will not.

Mr. LITTLE. Does not the gentleman think we had better put the Dunbar amendment on, so that if the Wood amendment does carry, DUNBAR's will also?

Mr. FIELDS. In other words, those of us who want to give the employees of the War Risk Bureau $240 ought to vote for the Dunbar amendment every time we have a chance?

Mr. TAGUE. Is it not a fact that in computing the wage for the employees of the navy yards and arsenals we must take into consideration the fact that they are not permitted to earn overtime, notwithstanding the fact that they are compelled to work overtime, but must take that out in compensatory time?

Mr. NOLAN. They must take it out in part time. I think, gentlemen of the House, the navy-yard and arsenal employees surrendered during the past year something they had enjoyed for a great many years, and that is the half holiday with full pay. They now work 44 hours a week and get 44 hours' pay, and are not now enjoying the holidays formerly enjoyed by them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from California has expired.

Mr. NOLAN. I trust the House will vote down the Wood amendment.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SABATH. If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] should be voted down, would he be permitted to offer it to the amendment of the gentleman from California [Mr. NOLAN]?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair does not understand the gentleman's parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SABATH. If the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] should be defeated, can he then offer it anew to the motion that has been offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. NOLAN]?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would state that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] can only offer one amendment once. He could not offer the identical amendment to another motion.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, does the Chair mean to hold that this amendment, having been offered to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD], if it is defeated later on it would not be in order to offer it as an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from California [Mr. NOLAN] to concur in the Senate amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would state that the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] offered to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] having been voted down, it would not be in order for him to offer the identical amendment.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would it be in order for any other Member to offer it?

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Let the Chair finish his statement.

Mr. BARKLEY. Could it be offered to another amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The amendment could be offered to the amendment of the Senate.

Mr. DUNBAR. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DUNBAR. Suppose the amendment which I offered to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] should pass, and then the amendment offered by the chairman of the committee [Mr. WOOD] with my amendment added should not pass—his amendment as amended—then would I have an opportunity at another time to offer my amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman could offer it as an amendment to the Senate amendment.

Mr. DUNBAR. I would have the opportunity?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair understands so.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Chairman, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Mississippi is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. SISSON. Mr. Speaker, I hope the House will take into consideration, in voting upon this question, the fact that the $240 bonus is a pure gratuity. I hope you will take into consideration the fact that when this bonus was granted I was one of the Members of Congress who felt the justness of it at that time to take care of the actual increase in the cost of living. A great many employees were taken into the Government service during the war under lump-sum appropriations whose salaries were very much higher than those employees who were on the statutory roll, and for that reason in some cases the Committee on Appropriations limited the application of the bonus to those who were regularly on the statutory roll, because whenever a lump-sum appropriation controlled the salaries the recipients got anywhere from 50 per cent more to twice as much salary as those on the statutory roll. Since the war ended, to a very great extent, you have gotten down to the statutory roll.

Now, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] retains the bonus of $240, and the application of that bonus is just as it is in the current law. The application of the $120 bonus also is just as it is in the current law. There are many Members of Congress who believe that this bonus ought to cease now, but rather than do the employees any injury your Committee on Appropriations reported to this House—and a point of order was made against it—the present bonus now carried in the current law. It went over to the Senate, and there the item was loaded down with an amendment as to which no one in this House knows, nor will the Senate hearings show, how much burden that will impose upon the Federal Treasury. There were no elaborate hearings held, such as there were when the committee first wrote the bonus in the beginning of the bonus proposition.

Now, we hope that a reorganization of the salaries may come about during the next year, and that one year from the 1st of July next we may be able to eliminate this gratuity entirely.

But when gentlemen talk about the bonus being given to the employees of the arsenals and navy yards throughout the country, in my judgment they are doing a gross injustice to every employee in the Government service on the statutory roll. The lowest rate of pay to crafts in the arsenals and navy yards is 80 cents an hour, and if they work overtime they get an increased compensation. Now, that is the lowest wage, and that wage was fixed by a board which took into consideration the highest wage paid outside of the navy yards in like employments, and then fixed that on the average slightly above that which is paid in outside employments in the neighborhood of these navy yards.

Mr. LITTLE. When were the rates fixed?

Mr. SISSON. They were fixed at several times, but the last time they were fixed was about a year ago. That was when the wages were highest in America. And I want to say to this House that when you look abroad in the land upon the suffering condition of labor everywhere, not only in New England, not only on the Pacific coast, but in the South and throughout the country, you will find that these people in the navy yards are getting vastly more compensation than the suffering people who are paying the tax burdens, that these navy-yard employees are getting vastly more than the taxpayers themselves are getting in the most favored labor situations.

Mr. CRISP. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SISSON. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. CRISP. Admitting that the bonus is a gratuity and that the salaries paid in the War Risk Insurance are about the same as those paid in the other departments, why did your committee recommend a bonus of $240 to the other civil employees of the Government and $120 to the employees of the War Risk Insurance?

Mr. SISSON. I presume my friend has been on a good many conferences. If I were speaking for myself alone I would give the War Risk Bureau employees the same bonus that we give to the others.

Mr. CRISP. I think they ought to be treated alike.

Mr. SISSON. But the gentleman must understand that in these conferences you have not only your own differences to settle, but you have got to settle with the conferees, and we have brought back here an amendment which the Senate conferees will support, and we felt that we ought to have the support of the House in it, because the policy will be to get rid of the bonus as soon as possible. Therefore for this next year why enlarge this gratuity? We ought to get rid of it as quickly as possible. We all believe in paying employees fair salaries, but there is nothing fair in paying a bonus on top of the already big salaries that we find in the Government service. Therefore I think this House will do wisely to follow the committee. If they want to adopt the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] with reference to the War Risk Insurance employees, I myself personally have no objection to that; but in the event that you do adopt that, then unless you want to go into the Treasury far more deeply than many of you realize, and if you expect to do the right and the just and the fair thing by the taxpayers, do not go any further. I beg your pardon for mentioning the despised taxpayers in this House, because when you mention them in connection with Government salaries you usually find a cold response; but I want to raise my voice humbly in behalf of those people who sent this enormous Republican majority here to vote for economy, to ask you now: Where are you going? How much money will it cost you to include the employees of the navy yard and all the employees of that character? How many thousands and thousands of these men will there be? What evidence have you upon which to base it? Remember that they are getting from $6.40 a day—the lowest salary—to $12 or $15 a day, and getting a certain leave of absence, and in the navy yards getting medical attention, getting the finest services which the surgeons of the American Navy can give them, getting their dental work free, getting all their medical service. In view of this I want to ask you: Can you go back home to the taxpayers and say to them that you have taken this additional sum out of their pockets to give these already highly paid and highly favored employees this additional bonus?

I want to say this much in support of the amendment which your conferees have brought back here. We agreed upon it unanimously after quite a long conference, and it is no easy matter to iron out these differences. And now in the closing hours of this session this bill ought to be gotten ready to be engrossed. It ought to pass and it ought to pass at this session, and I do not think it ought to be held up for one moment unnecessarily.

Mr. RAMSEYER. Have the Senate conferees agreed to it?

Mr. SISSON. They will agree to it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield to the gentleman one minute more.

Mr. SISSON. The Senate conferees will agree to this amendment which we offer. In other words, we could not agree to it in conference, because under the new rule, this being legislation on an appropriation bill, we were forced to bring back to this House a disagreement. Except for that your conferees would have agreed on this amendment, which the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] now offers to you, and we are coming to you and asking you to indorse our labors, because it was with some difficulty that we reached this agreement.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLY].

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, in spite of all the confusion and complexity in the present situation, as elaborated by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON], one thing stands out clearly and distinctly. That is that the Senate amendment on this bonus provision does justice to the policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia, while the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] discriminates against these protectors of life and property, as faithful and efficient as any in the United States.

There has been grave injustice done them in the past. When the act was passed fixing the compensation for the policemen and firemen, it was definitely understood by the House that the full bonus of $240 was to be paid to them. I quote from the report of the District Committee which accompanied the bill:

> To these above basic salaries amounting to $2,500 or less will be added the Government bonus of $240 per annum.

The bonus was not paid these men despite this express promise. Instead they were given $120 bonus last year, on what line of reasoning I have never been able to discover.

Now, there comes this proposition to-night to continue this unjust discrimination. There might be some reason for it if the policemen and firemen of Washington were higher paid than those of other cities of the same size. But the very opposite is true. The fighters against fire and crime in the District are about the poorest compensated in comparison with similar sized cities in all the country.

Do you realize that a fireman in the Youngstown, Ohio, fire department receives more pay than the basic salary of a captain in the Washington fire department? Youngstown is a magnificent little city, but it is not yet in the class of the Capital of the United States.

Seattle, Wash., Jersey City, Bridgeport, and Newark all pay their highest grade privates in the fire department $2,000 a year, while the basic pay in Washington is $1,660. Hoboken, N. J., pays $2,250; New York City, $2,280; Detroit, Mich., $2,160. These cities and many more pay a much larger salary than Washington policemen and firemen will receive even with the full bonus of $240.

The situation with regard to policemen is exactly the same. Other cities of similar size pay more than the Washington men will receive even with the bonus.

Mr. Speaker, the policemen and firemen of 25 of the smaller cities in Pennsylvania are supplied with various articles of uniform and equipment. In Washington these men must pay for all these articles, absolutely essential for their public work, out of their own pockets.

Other Government employees, on an 8-hour day and a 6-day week, are given 30 days leave with pay each year. The policemen and firemen, on a 12-hour day and 7-day week, receive 20 days leave a year.

Is there not discrimination enough without the further injustice of taking half the bonus from these faithful public servants?

The men who serve in these positions must pass a rigid physical test and they must serve eight years before reaching the rank of highest-grade privates, with its basic pay of $1,660 a year.

In view of all the facts, no class of employees in all the service are so justly entitled to this bonus as these policemen and firemen.

They are, indeed, of those "who can not boast of the morrow, for they know not what a day may bring forth." The other night a police officer was killed while in the performance of duty. Scarcely a week passes without the casualty record of these departments being increased through the death or injury of a member who gave life or limb for the protection of the people and the property of this Capital City.

Let us do justice to them in this action. They have been promised this bonus of $240 a year. They have deserved it, and they will deserve it in the year ahead. Let us see that they get it. [Applause.]

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. DALLINGER].

Mr. DALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, the Senate amendment which comes to us for consideration to-night was thoroughly discussed in the Senate and was adopted by a record vote. Now, the gentleman from California in reading the letter from the Secretary of the Navy to Mr. FREAR neglected, through inadvertence, I think, to read one sentence of that letter:

> Should Congress fail to continue the bonus, the result will be the automatic decrease of an amount received by the men below the sum which I have already approved as being just and proper.

Now, when this matter was before the House on the question of the employees of the arsenal and navy yards I put in as a part of my remarks the wages received in private establishments for similar kinds of work, and it showed that in the Watertown Arsenal, in my district, the rate, even with the bonus, was less than that paid in private establishments for the same kind of work—in some cases very much less.

It has been repeatedly stated that the bonus to the arsenal and navy-yard employees was in addition to the average wage paid in private establishments. That statement is not true so far as the Watertown Arsenal is concerned; and I understand it is not true so far as any arsenal or navy yard is concerned. These men received the bonus through the last fiscal year, but for some unknown reason the Committee on Appropriations of the House proposed to take it away, and it has been restored in the Senate.

I simply want to say to my Republican colleagues that the Republican Party in some of our industrial centers has been accused of being unfriendly to labor, and I can not see how we can go back to our constituents and defend the proposition of taking away the bonus given to all the other civilian employees of the Government from the policemen, firemen, and the employees of the arsenals and navy yards.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, there has been more or less discussion from time to time as to the understanding of the House at the time the salary increase legislation was passed for the policemen and firemen of the District. Of course I can not tell what the understanding of the other members of the House was, but it certainly was the understanding of the members of the District Committee that they were to receive the regular bonus in addition to the increase provided in that legislation. The members of the House subcommittee who framed the bill took into consideration the fact that the men would receive the bonus, knowing that if they increased the pay of the men to a point where it would be sufficient under the abnormal conditions which existed at that time and still exist, without the bonus, that that pay would continue after conditions got back to normal, and under normal conditions it would perhaps be too much.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I wish to state that I was present as a member of the District Committee when the matter now under discussion was under consideration. I can state without fear of contradiction that the basic salaries of the policemen and firemen would have been made larger than they are except for the fact that it was understood in the committee that they were to get the same bonus that other people were to get. [Applause.]

Mr. MAPES. I am glad the gentleman from Kentucky has made that statement. I think every member of the committee would indorse the statement. I want to say this, that these men in the police and fire departments are, as a rule, men with family responsibilities, and the testimony taken before the committee showed that a great many of them were obliged to seek private employment in order to make enough to meet their necessary family expenses. Some of them were being helped out by the more fortunate brothers or relatives, and one man, I remember, said that he was working in the Potomac Electric Power Co.'s office—I believe it was—for four hours or more a day, hastening over there as soon as his eight hours were up in the department.

Mr. CRAGO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MAPES. Testimony of that kind which came before the committee was the rule rather than the exception.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Michigan has expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODS].

Mr. WOODS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I call the attention of the House, in respect to the policemen and firemen of the District, to a circumstance which seems to have been overlooked. It will be recalled that in 1919 this body attached to the bill a provision that the policemen and firemen of the District should withdraw their affiliation with any organization which used the strike as a means of enforcing its demands. They had affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. We rightfully said to these men, "You must owe allegiance solely to your Government and to the community which you serve." They acquiesced in that. They surrendered their affiliation with that organization, which we all know has been somewhat potent in influencing legislation and in protecting its membership. Since that was done, it seems to me it is doubly incumbent upon this House to carry out the understanding which was had at that time in respect to fixing the basic salary that they could trust to Congress to properly compensate them. Mr. GOULD, of New York, was on that subcommittee. I was on it. We discussed the question deliberately that if we fixed a high salary in those abnormal times it would be difficult to reduce it when living costs became normal. Therefore we concluded to fix a low basic salary, with the understanding, and the distinct understanding, that the bonus should be added to it until living costs became normal.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOODS of Virginia. In just a moment. Later on, when I was presenting this question to the Committee of the Whole, the question was distinctly asked me by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK] as to whether or not it was the understanding that to the basic salary we were fixing the bonus should be added, to which I replied affirmatively. I now yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. TREADWAY. Will the gentleman explain why the evident intention of the House to retain the $240 bonus for the policemen and firemen did not become part of the bonus system, why it was reduced to $120?

Mr. WOODS of Virginia. There is no reason, and that is what I am trying to tell this House now.

There can be no good reason; and good faith, gentlemen, and simple, common honesty demand we restore that bonus to these men, and the only thing that can save this House from committing what would seem to be a breach of faith is the consideration that you might take the view that living costs have already come down to such amount as would justify it. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON].

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, if the bonus is given to any employee, it should be given to the policemen and firemen, although I am still against paying bonuses to civilians. This is not the first bonus to be paid to civilian employees, for we have already paid three bonuses of $240 each and one of $120, making $840 to each civilian employee already paid. By the record vote a moment ago, with only three votes against it, is shown a determination by this House to pay the fifth bonus to civilians. Yet there is still existing the discrimination we have been making against one class of worthy Americans in the United States that ought to be rectified, and I speak of the soldier boys and all the ex-service men who carried that flag to victory in France and on the sea and brought home the greatest world victory ever known in the history of warfare. They have been appealing for some recognition, for simple justice, and yet this House has done nothing beyond sending a bill months ago to the Senate without further action, and the whole matter is now in a pigeonhole. What are we going to do for the soldier boys of this country, for many of them are in need and dire necessity at this time?

I want to say that if we do justice to any employees let us do justice to the policemen, and let us do justice to the firemen, and let us see to it if we can before this Congress adjourns that more than the little $60—not enough to buy a good suit of clothes—is given to the soldier boys and all ex-service men, no matter how much taxes we levy upon the profiteers in the war to pay for it. Let us do justice, no matter what it costs. The profiteers should pay for it. Are we going to consider cost when we begin to consider the men who fought the battles of this country and carried that flag for us when it was a dangerous, arduous duty, who faced the death trenches of France at $30 a month? Gentlemen speak of 80 cents an hour and of $2,500 a year, seven hours a day! Our soldiers fought for 24 hours a day, and if they had ever faltered a moment at their post of duty they would have been shot against a brick wall with everlasting dishonor. I want to see no discrimination. I want to see all employees treated alike; but before Congress adjourns let us do our duty by the soldiers and the sailors, the ex-service men of this country, before we pay another bonus to civilian employees.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BLANTON. I will.

Mr. BARKLEY. I agree entirely with what the gentleman from Texas says concerning the soldiers, but the House having passed the soldiers' bonus bill and sent it to the Senate, what else can the House do in that regard at this time?

Mr. BLANTON. Well, the gentleman knows that the House steering committee can do wonders if it sets its head to it. It has influence in the Senate, and it can send word to bring that bill back passed, and then get it through conference and enact it into law before we adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK].

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment which he sends to the Clerk's desk to be read for information.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLACK: Strike out the figures "$2,500" wherever they occur in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] and insert the figures "$2,000"; strike out the figures "$2,740" wherever they occur in said amendment and insert the figures "$2,240."

Mr. BLACK. Gentlemen of the House, in the time allotted to me I will try briefly to explain what my amendment will accomplish if it should be adopted. The Wood amendment, in part, reads as follows:

That all civilian employees of the Government of the United States and the District of Columbia who receive a total compensation at the rate of $2,500 per annum or less during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, shall receive the $240 per annum bonus, provided such employees as receive a total of annual compensation at a rate of more than $2,500 and less than $2,740 shall receive additional compensation at such rate per annum as may be necessary to make their salaries, plus their additional compensation, at the rate of $2,740 per annum.

Now, my amendment if adopted would provide that the bonus should be paid to all Government employees who receive $2,000 or less per annum, and that any Government employee who receives less than $2,240 per annum should receive enough to make it $2,240, so that no employee would be reduced in salary. In other words, the Wood amendment gives the bonus to employees up to $2,500, and where their salaries do not exceed $2,740 it gives them the additional to make the $2,740. My amendment would only pay the bonus to employees receiving $2,000 or less.

Now, I do not expect that my amendment will be adopted, because it would accomplish some economy, and the House is not in the habit of adopting economy amendments. It has been my experience that economy has more friends in debate and less on roll call than any subject I know. But I think, in view of the changed conditions that are now taking place, we might well consider as to whether or not we shall pay a bonus to employees who receive more than $2,000 per year.

A day or two ago I read figures in a speech, which I delivered in the House, showing that since the fall of 1920 agricultural products have decreased more than 50 per cent in a great many cases. And I do not intend to go back to my people in a time like this and tell them I voted to pay a bonus to men who are making more than $2,000 a year. It is getting time we were paying some attention to the rights of the taxpayer as well as the Government employees.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I wish to call your attention to the parliamentary situation. The amendment I have offered is what is practically current law, except it takes the bonus away from the arsenal and navy-yard employees. It leaves the bonus exactly what it now is, a payment to the clerks in general, except $120 to those employed in the War Risk Bureau and $120 to those employed in the police department and in the fire department.

Now, then, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] has introduced an amendment to my amendment to increase the salary of those employed in the War Risk Bureau to $240. Many people think, and I confess I can see no reason after the investigations I made with reference to the equalization of the salaries between the War Risk Bureau and other departments, why they should not receive that same salary. Now, that item should stand or fall upon what you think is best. I asked for a division of these questions, so that each one of these items should stand or fall as you want them. Those of you who think the policemen and firemen should have an additional $120 per year will have an opportunity, if you so desire, to amend this motion of mine to increase it to $240. I am not one of those who are of the opinion—and I am still unconvinced—that we should give them the $240. I may be wrong. I want to be right. I take the position I occupy for the reason that the salaries of these policemen and these firemen have been increased since the war, and you can examine the increases I have before me, and you will find that the least increase is greater than the maximum bonus of $240, without a single exception.

Mr. WOODS of Virginia. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. No.

I wish to call those facts to your attention. The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOODS] said, and the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES] said, and the gentleman from Kentucky also, I think, testified, that if they had not considered the bonus would be added they at that time would have made their basic salary more than they did make it. If that is correct, we ought to keep faith with them.

But there is one class here that we can not justify ourselves in giving this bonus to. If we do it we are not only going to outrage the Treasury of the United States, but we are going to outrage every other civil service employee in this Government. I refer to those employees in the navy yards and arsenals. You can take the testimony of Mr. Woodbury, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who tells us—and it is in the record as a part of the hearings—that the gentlemen in the arsenal—and the same is true of those in the Navy—are to-day receiving more than men receive for like service anywhere else in the United States. And this thing you must take into consideration, that not only are they receiving more than men employed in the same service outside are receiving, but they are paid when the factory is shut down for repairs. They have 30 days' leave and vacation during the year. They have their sick leave, too, if you please. None of these perquisites is granted to those employed in like service on the outside. I say it would not only be an outrage against the Treasury of the United States, but a greater outrage, if possible, against the other civil service employees of the Government. In order to do exact justice, if we are to grant this $240 bonus to the arsenal and navy-yard employees, we should increase the salaries of every other civil service employee upon a basis equal to salaries received on the outside by those doing like service, and then give them a bonus on top of that. That is what we ought to do. It is a considerable item, and is worthy your attention, for if this bonus goes on, in addition to those employees receiving far more than anybody else is receiving for like service, we will take out of the Treasury very near $30,000,000 for the payment of these bonuses. And bear this in mind, that the salaries of those employed in the arsenals and navy yards are changed from time to time by this salary-adjustment board. They were changed very nearly a year ago.

Their salaries were then made equal, if you please, to the salaries received by those who were doing like work outside. That salary remains fixed, and will remain fixed at that figure until this wage-adjustment board readjusts it, while the salaries received by men on the outside are constantly going down, down, down. And if that adjustment were made to-day, instead of having been made a year ago, it would result, if you please, in a reduction of at least 30 per cent.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I regret I have not the time to yield. So, gentlemen, we ought not to let any maudlin sentimentality run away with us. We should not let specious appeals run away with us. We should decide each question in accordance with the facts ascertained and stated in each case. I honestly believe that the employees of the War Risk Insurance should receive the same bonus that other civil service employees receive. There is a difference of opinion here with reference to whether the firemen and policemen should or should not receive the total bonus of $240.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. No; I do not yield. Let those who think they ought to have it offer such an amendment. Let each class be considered upon its respective merits. But I insist that no one, in face of the facts, in face of what has been said by Mr. Woodbury, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, should support any attempt to bestow this bonus on the employees at work in the Government arsenals and navy yards. The Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Woodbury, who has been very regardful of the interests of those working under him, tells us that those men are receiving, without the bonus, more than those in similar work outside receive, and Secretary Daniels says the same thing.

Therefore; gentlemen, we can not in justice to the taxpayers of the United States afford to vote a single cent as bonus to the arsenal employees and the navy-yard employees.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. I do not yield.

I ask you, gentleman, to take and consider first the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] in reference to increasing the bonus to those employed in the War Risk Bureau. Then let some one, if he desires, offer an amendment to increase the bonus of those in the fire department and police department, and then you can vote upon it as a separate amendment, and then vote upon the amendment as amended. That is all I desire to say upon this question.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for five minutes at this time.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I desire to withdraw my motion for the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana withdraws his motion of the previous question. The question now is on the motion——

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. In the event that the Dunbar amendment should be defeated and the Wood motion should be adopted, will there then be any further opportunity to offer an amendment touching either the firemen and policemen, or the War Risk employees, or the navy-yard employees?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There would not.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. NEELY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from West Virginia objects.

Mr. DENISON and Mr. KING rose.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman from Illinois rise?

Mr. DENISON. I would like to ask, if the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR] is adopted, will it not then be in order to offer a further amendment with reference to the firemen and policemen before the vote on——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana is adopted, it would not be in order to offer any further amendment which would change the Dunbar amendment, but it would be in order to offer an amendment amending any other part.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.

Mr. BURKE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, at the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BURKE] I withdraw the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws the point of no quorum. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR].

Mr. QUIN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to hear that motion reported again.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the Dunbar amendment.

The amendment of Mr. DUNBAR was again read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. WALSH). The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. DUNBAR].

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. BLACK) there were—ayes 189, noes 7.

Accordingly the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. NOLAN. Inasmuch as the Dunbar amendment to the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] has been adopted, I wish to ask, if the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] is now voted down, will it not be in order to offer the Dunbar amendment again?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has already answered that inquiry, that it would be in order to offer the Dunbar amendment to the Senate amendment.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. MAPES. Before offering the amendment I would like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. MAPES. If the motion should be made and carried to strike out of the Wood amendment all reference to the policemen and firemen of the District of Columbia, would that give them the bonus, or would it be necessary to make the motion to strike out $120 and insert $240?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that that does not appear to be a parliamentary inquiry, but is a question as to the meaning of the words of the amendment.

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. BLACK. I have an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has recognized the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES], who said he desired to offer an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. MAPES:
In line 13 of the second paragraph strike out the words "except that," and in line 20 of the second paragraph strike out the words "at one-half."

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, on that amendment I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan moves the previous question upon the amendment which he has offered.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES].

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BLACK. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. BLACK. To offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BLACK:
Strike out the figures "$2,500" wherever they occcur in the Senate amendment and insert the figures "$2,000," and strike out the figures "$2,740" wherever they occur in said amendment and insert the figures "$2,240."

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois will state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Is the Senate amendment now before the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is not.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. I make the point of order that the amendment is not in the proper form. It relates to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair thinks that the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK] is a motion to amend the Senate amendment. The Chair will state that the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana was one offered apparently as a substitute for the Senate amendment. The amendment offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK] is an amendment which apparently seeks to perfect the text of the Senate amendment, and therefore would be in order. The question is upon the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLACK].

The question being taken, on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON), there were—ayes 15, noes 178.

Accordingly the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Iowa offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. GOOD: Page 161, at the end of line 13, insert: "Provided further, That the rate of total annual compensation received by employees whose pay is adjustable from time to time through wage boards or similar authority shall not exceed the commercial rate paid locally for the same class of service."

Mr. IGOE. I make a point of order against that amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. IGOE. That it is not germane; that it seeks to write into this bill legislation not germane to the paragraph under consideration.

Mr. GOOD. It certainly is germane.

Mr. ANDERSON. It is a limitation.

Mr. GOOD. It is a limitation on the appropriation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that the amendment seems to be a limitation upon the provision with reference to the payment of a bonus to certain employees and limits or restricts the payment to a certain class who would otherwise be included if the restriction did not apply, and the Chair overrules the point of order.

Mr. GOOD. Mr. Speaker, I have long felt that the bonus provided for by Congress, if any objection could be made to it at all, has not been generous enough to meet the increased cost of living. So far as the vast number of Government employees are concerned we have provided but one increase and that has been an increase of $20 per month. But there is another class of Government employees whose wages are fixed by wage boards. These wage boards are directed by law to fix the compensation on the current rate paid in the community. We know that the wage boards in fixing the rates for increase of wages have increased them from 50 to 200 per cent for some of the Government employees. These Government employees have had the increase that all other employees of a similar character throughout the United States have enjoyed. Their wages have been increased.

My amendment simply provides that when wage boards increase the wages of employees and bring them up to the level paid by employers of labor of like employment then they shall not be entitled to a further bonus. They have already had their bonus, and in some cases it amounts to $700, $800, or $900 a year, and in some cases more than that. It doubles the pay, and my amendment simply provides that this class of employees shall not have a double bonus. When the wages are once increased by wage boards, that will be the end of it.

Not so with the Government employees in Washington and elsewhere whose wages are fixed in this bill and other bills. They have had no increase since the war began and no increase except this $240 bonus. We do not give them any more than that here. But it is proposed that they shall not have an increase of wage where the wage board have increased their salaries. We mean to say that we will not put on top of that $240. Here is a man employed in the navy yard who gets $1,000 a year, here is a man employed in the machine shop alongside of him and his wages are $1,000 a year. Here is another employee in private establishment and his wages are $1,000 a year, but we come back to the man in the navy yard and say, notwithstanding his wages have been increased 30 or 40 per cent, we will give him $240 more, which is $240 more for like employment than the man gets in the private establishment. It seems to me it is fair and just, and I hope the amendment will be agreed to, and I move the previous question.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the Senate amendment and all amendments thereto.

Mr. IGOE. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. IGOE. If the previous question is adopted will that shut off the Dunbar amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It shuts off all amendments. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and there were 126 ayes and 71 noes.

Mr. IGOE. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri demands the yeas and nays.

Mr. BARKLEY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the previous question should be ordered and the Wood amendment should be voted down, would it then be in order to offer a further amendment to the Senate amendment?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It would not. The question is on ordering the yeas and nays.

The question was taken; and the yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I want to present a unanimous-consent request. In the motion which I sent to the Clerk's desk the word "at" was stricken out, and to have the amendment read properly the word "at" should be stricken out of the amendment. I ask unanimous consent that the word "at" may be stricken out.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would state that that motion is not in order, the yeas and nays having been ordered on the previous question.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Will the Chair kindly inform the House how a unanimous-consent request can be entertained when a motion to adjourn can not?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman can submit a unanimous-consent request that the House adjourn, but a motion to adjourn is not in order. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 147, nays 132, answered "present" 1, not voting 148, as follows:

YEAS—147.

Ackerman	Ferris	Layton	Scott
Anderson	Fisher	Lee, Ga.	Sherwood
Ashbrook	Fordney	Lehlbach	Sisson
Begg	Foster	Lesher	Steagall
Benham	Freeman	Luce	Stedman
Black	French	Luhring	Steenerson
Bland, Mo.	Fuller	McDuffie	Stephens, Miss.
Blanton	Garrett	McFadden	Stephens, Ohio
Boies	Glynn	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Stoll
Bowling	Godwin, N. C.	McPherson	Strong, Kans.
Brand	Good	MacGregor	Strong, Pa.
Brooks, Ill.	Goodykoontz	Magee	Sumners, Tex.
Brumbaugh	Green, Iowa	Major	Swindall
Buchanan	Greene, Mass.	Michener	Taylor, Colo.
Burroughs	Greene, Vt.	Mondell	Taylor, Tenn.
Byrnes, S. C.	Griest	Nelson, Mo.	Tillman
Byrns, Tenn.	Hardy, Colo.	Newton, Minn.	Tilson
Campbell, Kans.	Harreld	Oldfield	Timberlake
Campbell, Pa.	Haugen	Oliver	Tincher
Chindblom	Hawley	Padgett	Treadway
Christopherson	Hernandez	Paige	Valle
Clark, Fla.	Hickey	Park	Vestal
Collier	Hicks	Parrish	Vinson
Connally	Hoch	Peters	Volstead
Cramton	Hoey	Porter	Walsh
Crisp	Hulings	Purnell	Ward
Currie, Mich.	Hull, Tenn.	Quin	Wason
Davis, Tenn.	Hutchinson	Radcliffe	Watson
Dempsey	Jacoway	Ramseyer	Weaver
Denison	Jones, Tex.	Rayburn	Welling
Dickinson, Iowa	Kearns	Reber	White, Kans.
Doremus	Kelley, Mich.	Rhodes	Wilson, La.
Dyer	Kiess	Ricketts	Winslow
Eagle	Kincheloe	Riddick	Wood, Ind.
Elliott	Kinkaid	Rogers	Woods, Va.
Esch	Kraus	Romjue	Young, Tex.
Evans, Nebr.	Langley	Rose

NAYS—132.

Almon	Farr	Lankford	Phelan
Andrews, Nebr.	Fields	Larsen	Raker
Aswell	Focht	Lazaro	Randall, Calif.
Babka	Gallagher	Lea, Calif.	Randall, Wis.
Bankhead	Gallivan	Linthicum	Reed, N. Y.
Barbour	Gandy	Little	Reed, W. Va.
Barkley	Ganly	Lufkin	Robsion, Ky.
Bee	Gard	McAndrews	Rouse
Bland, Va.	Goldfogle	McClintic	Sells
Bowers	Graham, Ill.	McKeown	Siegel
Box	Griffin	McLeod	Sinclair
Briggs	Hadley	Mansfield	Sinnott
Burdick	Harrison	Mapes	Smith, Idaho
Burke	Hastings	Martin	Smith, Mich.
Carew	Hayden	Mays	Smithwick
Carss	Hays	Mead	Summers, Wash.
Carter	Hersey	Miller	Sweet
Cleary	Holland	Milligan	Swope
Coady	Huddleston	Minahan, N. J.	Tague
Cooper	Hull, Iowa	Monahan, Wis.	Taylor, Ark.
Crago	Humphreys	Moore, Ohio	Thompson
Crowther	Igoe	Moore, Va.	Tinkham
Cullen	Johnson, Ky.	Mudd	Towner
Curry, Calif.	Johnson, Wash.	Murphy	Voigt
Dallinger	Juul	Neely	Walters
Darrow	Keller	Nelson, Wis.	Webster
Donovan	Kelly, Pa.	Newton, Mo.	Wheeler
Dowell	Kennedy, R. I.	Nolan	Williams
Dunbar	King	O'Connell	Wilson, Pa.
Eagan	Kleczka	O'Connor	Wingo
Echols	Knutson	Ogden	Yates
Emerson	Lampert	Osborne	Young, N. Dak.
Fairfield	Lanham	Parker	Zihlman

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Sabath

NOT VOTING—148.

Andrews, Md.	Edmonds	Lonergan	Rowan
Anthony	Ellsworth	Longworth	Rowe
Ayres	Elston	McArthur	Rubey
Bacharach	Evans, Mont.	McCulloch	Rucker
Baer	Evans, Nev.	McGlennon	Sanders, Ind.
Bell	Fess	McKenzie	Sanders, La.
Benson	Fish	McKiniry	Sanders, N. Y.
Bland, Ind.	Flood	McKinley	Sanford
Brinson	Frear	McLaughlin, Mich.	Schall
Britten	Garner	Madden	Scully
Brooks, Pa.	Goodall	Maher	Sears
Browne	Goodwin, Ark.	Mann, Ill.	Shreve
Butler	Gould	Mann, S. C.	Sims
Caldwell	Graham, Pa.	Mason	Slemp
Candler	Hamill	Merritt	Small
Cannon	Hamilton	Montague	Smith, Ill.
Cantrill	Hardy, Tex.	Moon	Smith, N. Y.
Caraway	Hersman	Mooney	Snell
Casey	Hill	Moores, Ind.	Snyder
Clark, Mo.	Houghton	Morin	Steele
Classon	Howard	Mott	Stevenson
Cole	Hudspeth	Nicholls	Stiness
Copley	Husted	Olney	Sullivan
Costello	Ireland	Overstreet	Temple
Dale	James, Mich.	Patterson	Thomas
Davey	James, Va.	Pell	Upshaw
Davis, Minn.	Jefferis	Perlman	Vare
Dent	Johnson, Miss.	Pou	Venable
Dewalt	Johnson, S. Dak.	Rainey, Ala.	Volk
Dickinson, Mo.	Johnston, N. Y.	Rainey, Henry T.	Watkins
Dominick	Jones, Pa.	Rainey, John W.	Welty
Dooling	Kahn	Ramsey	Whaley
Doughton	Kendall	Ransley	White, Me.
Drane	Kennedy, Iowa	Reavis	Wilson, Ill.
Drewry	Kettner	Riordan	Wise
Dunn	Kitchin	Robinson, N. C.	Woodyard
Dupré	Kreider	Rodenberg	Wright

So the previous question was ordered.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. MANN of Illinois with Mr. SABATH.

Mr. MCLAUGHLIN of Michigan with Mr. HARDY of Texas.

Mr. SHREVE with Mr. ROBINSON of North Carolina.

Mr. MCARTHUR with Mr. WHALEY.

Mr. SCHALL with Mr. POU.

Mr. ANTHONY with Mr. BELL.

Mr. EDMONDS with Mr. DEWALT.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota with Mr. MONTAGUE.

Mr. DUNN with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.

Mr. CANNON with Mr. FLOOD.

Mr. FESS with Mr. OVERSTREET.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. GOODALL with Mr. RAINEY of Alabama.

Mr. MASON with Mr. KETTNER.

Mr. KENNEDY of Iowa with Mr. MAHER.

Mr. PATTERSON with Mr. RUBEY.

Mr. WOODYARD with Mr. HUDSPETH.

Mr. VARE with Mr. MOONEY.

Mr. SANFORD with Mr. RIORDAN.

Mr. COPLEY with Mr. AYRES.

Mr. ANDREWS of Maryland with Mr. BENSON.

Mr. COSTELLO with Mr. CANTRILL.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. OLNEY.

Mr. SNYDER with Mr. CALDWELL.

Mr. BRITTEN with Mr. WRIGHT.

Mr. VOLK with Mr. CANDLER.

Mr. JAMES of Michigan with Mr. MOON.

Mr. WHITE of Maine with Mr. NICHOLLS.

Mr. RANSLEY with Mr. WISE.

Mr. ELLSWORTH with Mr. DOOLING.

Mr. BLAND of Indiana with Mr. WELTY.

Mr. MCCULLOCH with Mr. DREWRY.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota with Mr. VENABLE.

Mr. STINESS with Mr. CASEY.

Mr. HILL with Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi.

Mr. MOTT with Mr. SMITH of New York.

Mr. ELSTON with Mr. MANN of South Carolina.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois with Mr. ROWAN.

Mr. MERRITT with Mr. DOMINICK.

Mr. BROOKS of Pennsylvania with Mr. WATKINS.

Mr. FREAR with Mr. EVANS of Nevada.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana with Mr. RUCKER.

Mr. MCKENZIE with Mr. KITCHIN.

Mr. MORIN with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. BROWNE with Mr. CARAWAY.

Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. SEARS.

Mr. REAVIS with Mr. GARNER.

Mr. FRENCH with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. CLASSON with Mr. SULLIVAN.

Mr. BUTLER with Mr. MCGLENNON.

Mr. HUSTED with Mr. DAVEY.

Mr. KAHN with Mr. DENT.

Mr. COLE with Mr. DICKINSON of Missouri.
Mr. GOULD with Mr. DOUGHTON.
Mr. FISH with Mr. DRANE.
Mr. DALE with Mr. HERSMAN.
Mr. IRELAND with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.
Mr. SNELL with Mr. MCKINIRY.
Mr. MCKINLEY with Mr. JOHN W. RAINEY.
Mr. RAMSEY with Mr. JOHNSTON of New York.
Mr. KREIDER with Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY.
Mr. JEFFERIS with Mr. HOWARD.
Mr. ROWE with Mr. LONERGAN.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I voted "no," but I have a pair with the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. MANN, and not knowing how he would vote I desire to withdraw my vote of no and answer "present."

The name of Mr. SABATH was called, and he answered "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. NOLAN) there were—ayes 41, noes 148.

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Forty-eight gentlemen have arisen—not a sufficient number.

So the motion was rejected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD].

The question was taken, and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

On a division (demanded by Mr. NOLAN) there were—ayes 149, noes 80.

So the amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question now is——

Mr. LITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer an amendment, which I ask to be read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state that amendments are not in order, the previous question having been ordered. The question now is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana as amended.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. May we have the amendment reported?

Mr. NOLAN. Mr. Speaker, on that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Fifty-seven gentlemen have arisen, a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 173, nays 101, answered "present" 1, not voting 152, as follows:

YEAS 173.

Ackerman	Foster	Lesher	Sherwood
Anderson	Freeman	Little	Siegel
Andrews, Nebr.	French	Luce	Sisson
Ashbrook	Fuller	Luhring	Smith, Idaho
Begg	Gandy	McClintic	Stedman
Benham	Ganly	McDuffie	Steenerson
Bland, Mo.	Garrett	McFadden	Stephens, Miss.
Boles	Glynn	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Stephens, Ohio
Brand	Good	McLeod	Stoll
Brooks, Ill.	Goodykoontz	McPherson	Strong, Kans.
Brumbaugh	Green, Iowa	Magee	Strong, Pa.
Buchanan	Greene, Mass.	Major	Summers, Wash.
Burroughs	Greene, Vt.	Mays	Sweet
Byrns, Tenn.	Griest	Michener	Swindall
Campbell, Pa.	Griffin	Monahan, Wis.	Swope
Caraway	Hadley	Mondell	Thompson
Carter	Hardy, Colo.	Moore, Ohio	Tillman
Chindblom	Harreld	Murphy	Tilson
Christopherson	Harrison	Nelson, Mo.	Timberlake
Clark, Fla.	Hastings	Newton, Minn.	Tincher
Cleary	Haugen	Ogden	Treadway
Cole	Hays	Oldfield	Valle
Collier	Hernandez	Osborne	Vestal
Connally	Hickey	Padgett	Vinson
Cooper	Hoch	Paige	Volstead
Crago	Hoey	Park	Walsh
Cramton	Hull, Tenn.	Peters	Ward
Crisp	Hutchinson	Porter	Wason
Currie, Mich.	Jacoway	Purnell	Watson
Darrow	Johnson, Ky.	Radcliffe	Webster
Davis, Tenn.	Johnson, S. Dak.	Raker	Welling
Dempsey	Johnson, Wash.	Ramseyer	Wheeler
Denison	Kearns	Randall, Calif.	White, Kans.
Dickinson, Iowa	Kelley, Mich.	Reber	Williams
Doremus	Kiess	Reed, W. Va.	Wilson, Ill.
Dunbar	Kincheloe	Rhodes	Wilson, La.
Dyer	Kinkaid	Ricketts	Wilson, Pa.
Elliott	Knutson	Riddick	Wingo
Emerson	Kraus	Rogers	Winslow
Esch	Langley	Romjue	Wood, Ind.
Evans, Nebr.	Larsen	Rose	Woods, Va.
Fairfield	Layton	Rouse	Woodyard
Ferris	Lee, Ga.	Scott
Fields	Lehlbach	Sells

NAYS—101.

Almon	Echols	Lanham	Phelan
Aswell	Farr	Lankford	Quin
Babka	Fisher	Lazaro	Randall, Wis.
Bankhead	Focht	Lea, Calif.	Rayburn
Barbour	Gallagher	Linthicum	Reed, N. Y.
Barkley	Gallivan	Lufkin	Robsion, Ky.
Black	Gard	McAndrews	Sinclair
Bland, Va.	Godwin, N. C.	McKeown	Sinnott
Blanton	Graham, Ill.	MacGregor	Smith, Mich.
Bowers	Hawley	Mansfield	Smithwick
Bowling	Hayden	Mapes	Steagall
Box	Hersey	Martin	Sumners, Tex.
Briggs	Holland	Mead	Tague
Burtick	Huddleston	Miller	Taylor, Ark.
Burke	Hulings	Milligan	Taylor, Tenn.
Campbell, Kans.	Hull, Iowa	Minahan, N. J.	Tinkham
Carew	Humphreys	Moore, Va.	Towner
Carss	Igoe	Neely	Voigt
Coady	Jones, Tex.	Nelson, Wis.	Weaver
Crowther	Juul	Newton, Mo.	Yates
Cullen	Keller	Nolan	Young, N. Dak.
Curry, Calif.	Kelly, Pa.	O'Connell	Young, Tex.
Dallinger	Kennedy, R. I.	O'Connor	Zihlman
Donovan	King	Oliver
Dowell	Kleczka	Parker
Eagan	Lampert	Parrish

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Sabath

NOT VOTING—152.

Andrews, Md.	Edmonds	Kreider	Rodenberg
Anthony	Ellsworth	Lonergan	Rowan
Ayres	Elston	Longworth	Rowe
Bacharach	Evans, Mont.	McArthur	Rubey
Baer	Evans, Nev.	McCulloch	Rucker
Bee	Fess	McGlennon	Sanders, Ind.
Bell	Fish	McKenzie	Sanders, La.
Benson	Flood	McKinley	Sanders, N. Y.
Bland, Ind.	Fordney	McKinley	Sanford
Brinson	Frear	McLaughlin, Mich.	Schall
Britten	Garner	Madden	Scully
Brooks, Pa.	Goldfogle	Maher	Sears
Browne	Goodall	Mann, Ill.	Shreve
Butler	Goodwin, Ark.	Mann, S. C.	Sims
Byrnes, S. C.	Gould	Mason	Slemp
Caldwell	Graham, Pa.	Merritt	Small
Candler	Hamill	Montague	Smith, Ill.
Cannon	Hamilton	Moon	Smith, N. Y.
Cantrill	Hardy, Tex.	Mooney	Snell
Casey	Hersman	Moores, Ind.	Snyder
Clark, Mo.	Hicks	Morin	Steele
Classon	Hill	Mott	Stevenson
Copley	Houghton	Mudd	Stiness
Costello	Howard	Nicholls	Sullivan
Dale	Hudspeth	Olney	Taylor, Colo.
Davey	Husted	Overstreet	Temple
Davis, Minn.	Ireland	Patterson	Thomas
Dent	James, Mich.	Pell	Upshaw
Dewalt	James, Va.	Perlman	Vare
Dickinson, Mo.	Jefferis	Pou	Venable
Dominick	Johnson, Miss.	Rainey, Ala.	Volk
Dooling	Johnston, N. Y.	Rainey, Henry T.	Walters
Doughton	Jones, Pa.	Rainey, John W.	Watkins
Drane	Kahn	Ramsey	Welty
Drewry	Kendall	Ransley	Whaley
Dunn	Kennedy, Iowa	Reavis	White, Me.
Dupré	Kettner	Riordan	Wise
Eagle	Kitchin	Robinson, N. C.	Wright

So the amendment of Mr. WOOD of Indiana, as amended, was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. FORDNEY with Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina.
Mr. MANN of Illinois with Mr. SABATH.
Mr. KENDALL with Mr. BEE.
Mr. VESTAL with Mr. GOLDFOGLE.
Mr. WALTERS with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.
Mr. MUDD with Mr. VENABLE.
Mr. BROWNE with Mr. HUDSPETH.
Mr. BAER with Mr. DICKINSON of Missouri.
Mr. BACHARACH with Mr. EAGLE.
Mr. HICKS with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.
Mr. MCLAUGHLIN of Michigan with Mr. HARDY of Texas.
Mr. SHREVE with Mr. ROBINSON of North Carolina.
Mr. MCARTHUR with Mr. WHALEY.
Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota with Mr. MONTAGUE.
Mr. SCHALL with Mr. POU.
Mr. ANTHONY with Mr. BELL.
Mr. CANNON with Mr. FLOOD.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I voted "nay." I am paired with the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. MANN, and desire to be recorded as "present."

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER pro tempore. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MAPES. To submit a unanimous-consent request.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MAPES. I renew my request to strike out the word "at" where it last appears in the motion which I submitted, and which was adopted.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the word "at" where it last appears in his motion to amend the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. WOOD] may be stricken out. Is there objection?

Mr. BLACK. Reserving the right to object, may it be reported, Mr. Speaker?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment without the word "at."

The Clerk read as follows:

In line 13 of the second paragraph, strike out the words "except that," and in line 20 of the second paragraph strike out "one-half."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

PENSIONS.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 13944) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war, and I move to concur in the amendments of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table an omnibus pension bill and concur in the amendments of the Senate. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

HOUR OF DAILY MEETING, COMMENCING MONDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1921.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the hour of meeting Monday and the balance of next week shall be at 11 oclock a. m.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that the hour of meeting beginning Monday of next week shall be at 11 o'clock a. m. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Does the gentleman wish to make any announcement as to further business?

Mr. MONDELL. There will be no further business, Mr. Speaker, to-night except the conference reports on the pension bills and the submission of a conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill.

The SPEAKER. Not to be acted upon?

Mr. MONDELL. Not to be acted upon.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. ANDERSON, from the committee of conference, submitted a conference report on the bill (H. R. 15812), making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, for printing under the rules.

PENSIONS.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments on the bill H. R. 13944, the omnibus pension bill.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. FULLER. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. FULLER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were agreed to was laid on the table.

Mr. SELLS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 14063, an act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, and move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table an omnibus pension bill——

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, how long will it take?

Mr. SELLS. I am going to ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the Senate amendments. They have all been reported favorably to the House by the Committee on Pensions.

The SPEAKER. It will not take over five minutes, anyhow. I think they had best be read. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. SELLS. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves to concur in the Senate amendments. The question is on agreeing to that motion.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. SELLS, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the Senate amendments were agreed to was laid on the table.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION REFERRED.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, the following Senate concurrent resolution was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee, as indicated below:

Senate concurrent resolution 35.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States earnestly calls upon the people of the United States to contribute out of their substance to the humanitarian activities in behalf of the needy of the world—to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 11554. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 7775. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 9281. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 10515. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 14461. An act to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States, for his approval, the following bills:

H. R. 15872. An act making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922;

H. R. 15662. An act to extend temporarily the time for filing applications for letters patent, for taking actions in the United States Patent Office with respect thereto, for the reviving and reinstatement of applications for letters patent, and for other purposes;

H. R. 1856. An act for the relief of Arthur J. Burdick;

H. R. 13402. An act for the purchase of lands occupied by experiment vineyards near Fresno and Oakville, Calif.;

H. R. 15682. An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922;

H. R. 1300. An act for the relief of Alfred E. Lewis;

H. R. 15935. An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 15962. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and prior fiscal years, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 15441. An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. TILSON. Mr. Speaker, I wish to propound a unanimous-consent request. A few evenings ago Mr. Walter Camp delivered in the House Office Building, at the request of certain Members, a lecture on "How to keep well." Many of the Members attended, and quite a number of them, as well as some of those who did not attend, have asked me if Mr. Camp would permit his lecture to be published in the RECORD. I have Mr. Camp's permission to do so, and I should like to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing that lecture for the benefit of the Members of the House.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, there will be nothing extended except that lecture?

Mr. TILSON. Just the lecture of Mr. Camp.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Connecticut?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted—

To Mr. AYRES, for two days, on account of illness;

To Mr. WATKINS (at the request of Mr. WILSON of Louisiana), on account of death in his family; and

To Mr. REAVIS (at the request of Mr. EVANS of Nebraska), on account of illness of himself and a member of his family.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of no quorum.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly at 11 o'clock and 36 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Sunday, February 27, 1921, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

428. A letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of waterway connecting Indian River and San Carlos Bay, Fla., by way of St. Lucie River, St. Lucie Canal, Lake Okechobee, and Caloosahatchee River; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. VOLSTEAD, from the Committee on the Judiciary, to which was referred the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 233) giving consent of the Congress of the United States to the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Nebraska, or any two or more of said States, to agree upon the jurisdiction to be exercised by said States over boundary waters between any two or more of said States, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1376), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. SNYDER, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (S. 4039) to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes," reported the same with an amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1377), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. FOCHT, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6375) for the relief of Kentucky drafted men, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 1378), which said bill and report were laid on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 3213) for the relief of George M. Leahy, receiver of the New Orleans Mechanics' Society, of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 1379), which said bill and report were laid on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4160) for the relief of Leander Mason and others, heirs of Thomas M. Mason, deceased, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 1380), which said bill and report were laid on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 6932) for the relief of Edward B. Fox, administrator of the last surviving partner of the firm of Child, Pratt & Fox, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 1381), which said bill and report were laid on the table.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 4152) for the relief of J. C. Hendricks, administrator of the estate of Samuel Houston, deceased, reported the same adversely, accompanied by a report (No. 1382), which said bill and report were laid on the table.

Mr. O'CONNELL, from the Committee on War Claims, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 1801) for the relief of the legal representatives of Robert Dillon, deceased, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1383), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Invalid Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 16082) for the relief of Thomas F. Rose, and the same was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MOORE of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 16153) granting the consent of Congress to the Washington & Old Dominion Railway, a corporation, to construct a bridge across the Potomac River; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. REED of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 16154) providing for the election of a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. ROMJUE: A bill (H. R. 16155) to create a separate bureau in the Department of the Interior, to be known as the Bureau for the Incapacitated Soldiers and Sailors of the World War, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MACGREGOR: Resolution (H. Res. 699) appointing a committee to investigate Fox Hills Hospital and the officers of the Federal Board for Vocational Education in New York City; to the Committee on Rules.

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Montana, asking that certain lands known as the Gates of the Rocky Mountains be established as a national monument; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also (by request), memorial from the Legislature of the State of Maine, favoring an amendment to the water power act so that there shall be no interference with and control of the water powers within the State of Maine; to the Committee on Water Power.

By Mr. BURDICK: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Rhode Island, favoring legislation now pending in Congress for the relief of disabled World War veterans; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KLECZKA: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, urging the passage of House bill 11641 and Senate bill 3686; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. PETERS: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Maine, urging an amendment to the Federal water-power act, so that there will be no Federal interference with water-power control in the State of Maine; to the Committee on Water Power.

By Mr. RIDDICK: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Montana, requesting that certain public lands known as the Gates of the Rocky Mountains be withdrawn from entry and set aside for a national monument; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. STEENERSON: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, favoring tariff legislation of agricultural products from foreign countries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII,

Mr. KLECZKA introduced a bill (H. R. 16156) granting a pension to John F. Brannan, which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

6079. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of Ste. Cecile Council, No. 115, of L'Union St. Jean-Baptiste d'Amerique, of Ware, and St. Joseph Council, No. 9, L'Union St. Jean-Baptiste d'Amerique, of Turners Falls, both in the State of Massachusetts, protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6080. By Mr. CRAMTON: Petition of Rev. W. J. O'Rourke and the parishioners of Sacred Heart Church, Caro, Mich., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6081. By Mr. DOREMUS: Petition of Polar Bear Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, No. 436, of Detroit, Mich., commending the Department of Justice in suppressing radical organizations that advocate the overthrow of our Government by force and violence; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

6082. By Mr. EMERSON: Petition of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, of Cleveland, Ohio, opposing the nationalization of industry; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6083. By Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania: Petition of the Knights of St. George, of Pittsburgh, Pa., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6084. By Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island: Resolution of Council Marguerite Bourgeois, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Pawtucket, R. I., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6085. Also, resolutions of Council Marie Stuart, Pawtucket; Council Gagnon, Woonsocket; Council St. Jean Baptiste, Central Falls; Council Juliette, Woonsocket; Council Notre Dame de Lourdes, Providence; and Council Marie de L'Incarnation, Woonsocket, all in the State of Rhode Island, all affiliated with L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6086. Also, resolutions of Council St. Jean Baptiste, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, of Manville, and Council Madeline de Vercheres, of Woonsocket, both in the State of Rhode Island, protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6087. By Mr. KLECZKA: Petition of 670 citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill providing for Federal aid to State schools; to the Committee on Education.

6088. Also, petition of St. Catherine's Court 246, W. C. O. F., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6089. By Mr. MAGEE: Petition of Mr. Joseph Haas and other citizens of Syracuse, N. Y., protesting against alleged conditions in the occupied zone on the Rhine; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

6090. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, favoring an appropriation of $20,000 for the retention of the passport office in New York City; to the Committee on Appropriations.

6091. By Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY: Petition of B. R. Pruitt and other citizens of Beardstown, Ill., favoring beer and light wines and opposing the Sunday blue laws; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

6092. By Mr. RAKER: Petition of J. F. Baker, of Copperopolis; Henry W. Bowen, of Woodlief; A. G. Chapman, of Guadalupe; George Shane, of Napa; W. C. Brown, of Beswick; all in the State of California, asking extra compensation for star-route contractors; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

6093. Also, petition of the Pasadena Ice Co., of Pasadena, Calif., favoring a 1-cent drop-letter rate; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

6094. Also, petition of the Solano Farm Bureau, of Fairfield, Calif., urging a protective tariff on olives; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6095. Also, petition of Maillard & Schmiedell, of San Francisco; Moore Shipbuilding Co., of Oakland; and the California White & Sugar Pine Manufacturers' Association, of San Francisco, all in the State of California, protesting against the Federal live-stock bill and the Federal coal bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6096. Also, petition of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, urging protection for the epsom salts industry of California; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6097. Also, petition of the Improvement Club of Auburn, and the Alpha Literary and Improvement Club of Lompoc, both in the State of California, indorsing the Smith-Towner bill, the Sheppard-Towner bill, the Rogers bill, and the Fess bill; to the Committee on Education.

6098. Also, petition of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, by Seth Man, opposing that section of House bill 9521 which makes dairy products cold-storage goods if moving in refrigeration for more than 10 days; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6099. Also, petition of Herbert Myrick, of Springfield, Mass., in support of the Muscle Shoals project; to the Committee on Appropriations.

6100. By Mr. RIORDAN: Petition of George Gregory and sundry citizens of New Brighton and Long Island, N. Y., protesting against the occupation of Germany by French colonial troops; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

6101. By Mr. TEMPLE: Petition of Albert A. Reineke, of Monaca, Pa., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6102. By Mr. WOODYARD: Petition of James Wood Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Parkersburg, W. Va., favoring the passage of the Fess-Capper bill; to the Committee on Education.

6103. By Mr. ZIHLMAN: Petition of Hagerstown Central Labor Union, favoring the establishment of trade relations with the Russian Government; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

6104: Also, petition of Washington Camp, No. 41, Patriotic Order Sons of America, through Elmer Lewis, president, Thomas G. Jeffries, secretary, and Thomas H. Morgan, favoring immediate passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6105. By Mr. BABKA: Petition of Licensed Tugman's Protective Association, Local No. 5, Cleveland, Ohio, favoring a duty on imported fish; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6106. By Mr. GLYNN: Petition of the General Board of l'Union St. Jean-Baptiste d'Amérique, Waterbury, Conn., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6107. Also, petition of Washington Camp, No. 18, Patriotic Order Sons of America, Waterbury, Conn., to make armistice day, November 11, a State and National holiday; to the Committee on the Library.

6108. By Mr. YATES: Petition of Mr. William Weindel, of Pierron, Ill., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6109. Also, petition of Mr. L. M. Pierron, of Pierron, Ill., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6110. Also, petition of Mr. O. B. McGlasson, of Chicago, Ill., of the McNeil & Higgins Co., Chicago, protesting against the cold-storage bill, which has been referred to the Senate and House conference committee; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6111. Also, petition of Mr. R. J. Schreiber, of Pierron, Ill., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6112. Also, petition of Mr. W. J. Abbott, Pierron, Ill., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6113. Also, petition of Mr. Oscar Frey, of Pierron, Ill., protesting against the Smith-Towner Bill; to the Committee on Education.

6114. Also, petition of Miss Aloys Bock, of Pierron, Ill., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6115. Also, petition of Mr. Albert N. Merritt, of Chicago, Ill., protesting against the conference-committee amendments to the cold-storage bill as passed by the Senate; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6116. Also, petition of Mr. William Fellowes Morgan, of the Merchants' Association of New York, N. Y., protesting against the Muscle Shoals project; to the Committee on Agriculture.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SUNDAY, February 27, 1921.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon, and was called to order by Mr. FORDNEY as Speaker pro tempore.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, our heavenly Father, possess with Thy spirit our souls; for spirit may meet spirit and soul mingle with soul in consolation and hope.

Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man shall hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me.

We have assembled to memorialize the lives, characters, and public services of two men who have served upon the floor of this House and left behind them records that may give light and comfort to those who follow them. Be with their comrades, friends, and kinsfolk in this hour of distress and sorrow. Comfort them with the blessed hope of the immortality of the soul, that has come down to us through the ages and has been recorded in public writ.

Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me.

In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also.

Blessed thought! We thank Thee, our Father, for that thought, for that consolation, for that hope; in Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE JOURNAL.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal be deferred until to-morrow.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal be deferred until to-morrow. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE NICHOLS, OF MICHIGAN.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the special order.

The Clerk read as follows:

On motion of Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan, by unanimous consent,
Ordered, That Sunday, February 27, 1921, at 12 o'clock noon, be set apart for addresses on the life, character, and public service of Hon. CHARLES A. NICHOLS, late a Representative from the State of Michigan.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Michigan offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 700.

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended, that opportunity may be given for tributes to the memory of Hon. CHARLES A. NICHOLS, late a Representative from the State of Michigan.

Resolved, That as a particular mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, and in recognition of his distinguished public career, the House, at the conclusion of the exercises of the day, shall stand adjourned.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Resolved, That the Clerk send a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. DOREMUS. Mr. Speaker, we assemble to-day to honor the memory of and pay our tribute of respect to a departed colleague.

CHARLES A. NICHOLS was the son of Thomas and Jane Fletcher Nichols, and was born at Boyne, Mich., August 25, 1876. Early in life he manifested a deep interest in politics. His first active political work was performed in the campaign of 1896. Although at that time scarcely 21 years of age he organized a First Voters' McKinley Club and was elected its president. Soon thereafter he became a newspaper reporter, beginning his journalistic work on the Detroit Journal, with which paper he remained for about two years. In 1898 he became attached to the staff of the Detroit News, upon which paper he achieved a country-wide reputation as a reporter and investigator of crimes.

About 20 years ago a woman's body was uncovered in the woods near the village of Royal Oak, Mich., where it had lain for nearly a year. Much of the clothing had been torn from the body. The feet had been stripped of shoes, and there was no evidence to prove the identification of the victim. The police were baffled and had about given up hope of solving the mystery when Mr. NICHOLS went to work on the case. The masterly manner in which he handled this celebrated case and landed the murderer in the penitentiary is yet fresh in the minds of many people in Michigan. It is regarded in police annals as one of the finest pieces of detective work ever done in Michigan or in any other State. He remained with the News until July 1, 1905, when he was appointed secretary of the Detroit police department.

In 1909 Mr. NICHOLS was elected clerk of the city of Detroit. He was reelected, serving in that capacity for a period of four years. He was a strong supporter of Theodore Roosevelt in 1912 and went down to defeat with the progressive leader as a candidate for reelection to the office of city clerk. Two years later he was a candidate for Congress on the Republican ticket in the new thirteenth district of Michigan and was elected. He was reelected in 1916 and again in 1918. In Congress he soon became known to his colleagues as a man of independent thought and action. It was his fortune to serve during the most momentous period of American history, and on all questions which came before Congress he was guided by a fine spirit of patriotism. Indeed, I may truthfully say that in his public career Mr. NICHOLS steadfastly refused to sacrifice principle for expediency. He never hesitated to place what he believed to be his country's welfare above personal considerations. At the time of his death he was a member of the Committees on the Public Lands, Insular Affairs, Industrial Arts and Expositions, and the chairman of the Census Committee.

I speak to-day of our departed friend and colleague as one who knew him intimately. Close personal association with him gave me an opportunity to fairly assess those qualities of mind and heart which endeared him to his friends and stamped him a man's man and a faithful public servant. First of all, being true to nature, he could not be otherwise than true to himself. Ostentation and display were foreign to his nature. In him there was no taint of affectation.

Mr. NICHOLS had a keen sense of his responsibility to the public. He squared his official acts with his highest conception of duty. He possessed moral courage to an exceptional degree, and when the path of duty lay clear he never hesitated to follow it.

When quite a young man the work of providing for his mother devolved upon him. It was a duty that he never shirked, and his devotion to her continued until the hour of his death.

His friends were his most valued possessions. Among them his happiest hours were passed. His loyalty to them was intense. He found great delight in doing little acts of kindness. It can be truly said of him that he left the world better than he found it. What better monument can any man rear to his memory?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, we meet to-day to commemorate the life and character of our departed friend and colleague, CHARLES A. NICHOLS. He departed this life in the noonday of his active career, in the city of Washington, at the age of 44 years. He passed away at his home where he was entertaining friends, and apparently in the best of health. There is not one of us who knew him who did not feel that in his departure he had lost a personal friend. He was kind-hearted, of a pleasing disposition, manly, upright, courteous, and knew the value of friends. He was serving his third term in Congress. He started a poor orphan boy, and was the author of his own career. He was born in Michigan. His first work was that of journalism, then secretary of the police commission of his home city, afterwards city clerk of Detroit, which position he held for two terms. Then the opportunity came and he was elected to the Sixty-fourth Congress from the thirteenth district of Michigan. The successful career of our departed friend shows the opportunity that any young man of ordinary ability has in our country for advancement. Here wealth, position, and honor are the prizes offered for energy, and every poor boy can compete. I might add that failure only comes to those who let opportunity go, or are indifferent to their own best interests. Mr. NICHOLS was a man of untiring energy, industrious, and of good, plain, everyday judgment and common sense. We all miss him, and now that his book of life is closed we may still revere his memory, praise his good qualities, and are pleased that we knew him.

What the future holds for us we know not. Whether we cross the river in darkness, or we are ushered to a higher and better life, where happiness awaits, it is not given us to know. The intelligence of the world, the highest and brightest minds, all believe in a Divinity, and that the future is eternal. But we are authors of our own career in this life, and for guidance I have often thought of the admonition of the revered Bryant—

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death,
Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon, but sustained and soothed
By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave
Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch
About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.

Mr. NICHOLS was at the time of his decease very much interested in adjusted compensation for the World War veterans. Indeed, he had a deep solicitation for their welfare, not only during the war, but afterwards. He was instrumental in having the Three hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment returned from Russia, and went to the seacoast to accompany the remains of the boys who had made the supreme sacrifice for their country back to their long homes. I think Mr. NICHOLS would be glad to have this said of him because of his untiring efforts in their behalf. He wished them to have an extra compensation as a slight contribution to the financial sacrifices they made to join the service and sustain the flag.

I was privileged to attend his funeral in his home city of Detroit. His body lay in state in the city hall, where he had devoted his services in former years to the welfare of his city. Throngs crowded the corridors, civic societies passed by his remains, showing the high esteem and respect in which he had engrafted himself into the affection of the inhabitants of all classes in the city; and as he lived, upright and just and true in life, so now will we with affectionate remembrance hold him in high esteem in the innermost recesses of our remembrance as our friend and colleague, an upright citizen, and leave him not to be forgotten, but remembered for all time to come. We can only say adieu and abide our time, when we must all make the same journey. May it be well with us then as I am sure it was with Mr. NICHOLS.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me!
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell,
When I embark;

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

—Tennyson.

Mr. CURRIE of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, it is fitting and proper that we should gather here and endeavor to honor, in a humble way, the memory of our late colleague. We miss his companionship and his counsel. In his untimely death family and friends were grievously shocked and the Nation suffered a distinct loss.

Mr. NICHOLS, through diligent and faithful service, had reached a high place in the councils of the greatest legislative body on the face of the earth. He was chairman of the Committee on Census. Every 10 years a Federal census is taken, and the legislation for the census of 1920 stands as the handiwork of the Hon. CHARLES A. NICHOLS.

He was a student of public affairs who never lost sight of his mission and trust. His vigorous efforts before committees and upon the floor of the House accomplished much good and saved the Nation vast sums of money. His earnest and aggressive work before governmental bureaus and departments brought relief and happiness to many a weary and discouraged soldier and sailor boy. No person was too humble for an audience with him, and no man was great enough to deter him in his mission of right and justice as he saw it.

The soldiers had in him a true and sympathetic friend. I remember that when the first ship bearing bodies of our heroes who died in Russia was on its way to the United States it was Mr. NICHOLS who challenged the attention of Congress to its duty on behalf of the Nation to honor their memory by a suitable service at the docks in New York.

Along life's pathway, whether it was as a press reporter, city official, or a Congressman of the United States, his thought and action showed him the friend of man. No testimonial of high esteem that our words may speak here to-day can equal that mute tribute by thousands of his home people at Detroit—rich, poor, humble, and great—who formed a procession that was hours in passing as his body lie in state at the city hall.

My friends, the true test of a successful life is not how long but how useful to his fellow beings; and, measured by that standard, the life of CHARLES A. NICHOLS was a distinct success.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, it is very timely that as we are gathered here to-day to pay tribute to the services of our colleague, CHARLES A. NICHOLS, mention should be made of the fact that it was through his activity that the Congress, representing the people of the Nation, arranged that tribute should be paid at New York when the first of our dead from the Great War came back to our shores. It was the occasion of the return of the dead of the Three hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment from northern Russia, but they chanced to be the first of our Nation's dead to be returned, and Mr. NICHOLS felt that that opportunity should not be permitted to pass without the Nation paying its tribute, not only to those dead but to all who had given their lives in the great conflict upon the other side. Through his activity at the War Department and on the floor of this House that opportunity was not permitted to pass without being properly recognized. Mr. NICHOLS was the chairman of the committee that had those services in charge. Now, he, too, has passed, and we pay tribute, not to one who served his country on the field of battle or in the military service but to one who served his country with no less devotion in civic place of high responsibility.

To those of us who served with him, members of the delegation from the State of Michigan, his sudden death was to each and every one of us a shock. It was more than that. It took from each one of us a highly valued friend; because to those of us who knew him best he was not Congressman NICHOLS, but he was CHARLIE NICHOLS. He was not alone a public servant honored highly by his city and his congressional district, but he was the man and the friend.

It is a pleasure to me to recall that, not having met him personally when he came into Congress, although I had known much of him, though political conditions threatened at first to lead to some separation of our paths, that difference was not permitted to stand in the way of the growth of a deep and real friendship between us. Very early in my acquaintance with him I found what each day of that acquaintance only emphasized, that the great thing about CHARLIE NICHOLS was his real, deep humanity, his thorough sincerity of purpose, and his courage to face and perform a duty.

It comes back to me now, the first time that I saw CHARLIE NICHOLS. It was at the famous Bay City convention in Michigan in 1912. He was in office in the city of Detroit as city clerk, and could have remained in that office indefinitely with his strong ties of friendship throughout the city. But when the contest came, through the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt, it appealed to CHARLIE NICHOLS with such force that he gave to it all the devotion of his nature and put upon the altar of sacrifice his position in the city government of Detroit. In the course of that contest, he made a tremendous fight against odds in the city of Detroit, and carried with him to the State convention a delegation from that county, a convention where all was tumult, as the two factions gathered from all over Michigan for the most bitter political conflict in Michigan for a generation. The State militia had been called out as a police measure. I, as a spectator, was on my way into the convention, was endeavoring to get into the Armory Building where it was in session. I was on my way in with a visitor's ticket when I saw CHARLIE NICHOLS on his way out, his delegation excluded, and he physically thrown out of the convention, passed back through the packed lobby, handed along over the heads of all by burly hangers-on of the opposing faction.

That first sight of him has always emphasized to me that while his was a mild and gentle nature, nevertheless when he embraced a cause he was willing to put everything into it; that while he loved peace, he was willing to fight for his principles and ideals.

Mention has been made of the fact that CHARLIE NICHOLS was preeminent as a newspaper man. A mutual friend of his and mine who served with him in the newspaper game and is now on the bench in the city of Detroit, the Hon. Arthur E. Gordon, knowing him better in his newspaper days than I did, I asked my friend to give me something of his estimate of CHARLIE NICHOLS as a newspaper reporter and as a man. He has handed me this:

"CHARLIE NICHOLS as a reporter and a man.

"I can not differentiate, because a decent reporter is always a man.

"CHARLES A. NICHOLS was a decent reporter. I knew him in the beginning of his career in the newspaper business; was with him on the Detroit News in 1898 and 1899 and against him on the Detroit Journal from 1899 to 1903 while he was still on the News.

"He began on the police beat, that prolific source of good newspaper men, where cubs are sent to learn to observe human nature and to write about concrete things. Any man can be a fair police reporter if he is industrious and observing. He can be a good police reporter or a star police reporter if he has reasoning faculties developed to a high enough degree; if he is endowed with those subtle qualities which enable him to win the confidence of utter strangers within a few minutes; to extract from them the most sacredly preserved secrets; to pick out the handful of grain concealed within the bushel of chaff which is poured out in moments of great strain by principals in or witnesses to some great tragedy; if he is trained in logical reasoning, so that he can follow a tenuous trail marked only here and there by a definite fact which serves as a guidepost to the solution of a criminal mystery.

"This was CHARLES A. NICHOLS as a reporter. He was a star police reporter. He solved many of the great murder mysteries of Detroit of two generations ago when the police and trained detectives were utterly at sea or resolutely following the wrong trail. He was more than this as a reporter. He never betrayed a confidence. Because he would let himself be scooped on a big story rather than disclose to the public what had been told him in confidence or under a pledge that it be withheld until the happening of some event he had the confidence of the heads of the detective and police bureaus and of the courts. He always played fair with his fellow newspaper men. Therein lies the greatest test of a man in the newspaper business or profession. No reporter can have the confidence of his fellow reporters unless he has consistently played fair with them. He must not stoop to petty deceptions. He must not lie to them.

"CHARLES A. NICHOLS had no enemy among the newspaper men of Detroit. He was loyal to his paper to the highest degree. He spared no effort, no expenditure of time or energy in pursuing the elusive story which makes the paper. While at work he knew nothing but the objective. He spared no effort to get a better story than the reporter opposing him on the other papers, yet he was always fair, so that after the bitter competition of the day the stoutest competitors were oftenest closest of friends. Thus it was with CHARLES A. NICHOLS. His rival on the opposing paper was usually seen around the town with him at night after the competition for that day had ceased and the evanescent glory of the day's scoop had passed into newspaper history.

"And this is the measure of a man in the newspaper profession, that he can be indefatigable in the interests of his paper while at work, yet be so fair to the man he is trying to beat that he can not fail to win the respect and friendship of his opponent. This was CHARLES A. NICHOLS, brilliant newspaper man, criminal investigator, and decent man, imbued with the highest qualities of American citizenship. These qualities which served him in such good stead as a newspaper reporter were broadened and enlarged by his newspaper career, and his sympathies were so sharpened by his experience that when he entered the field of politics he never lost his human interest, his ability to get the other man's viewpoint, to see both sides of the 'story,' and not form hasty conclusions. As a result he was a capable public servant, always being the highest type of man."

My friend Gordon has emphasized the real point, that when we come into public service we continue in public service to be just the kind of men that we were before we came into public service. And a man who has played the game fairly, who has been earnest and indefatigable in his work before he came to Congress, will prove earnest and indefatigable in his work here.

So CHARLES A. NICHOLS, in the short time he was in Congress, rose to the chairmanship of the Committee on the Census, and distinguished himself as well by thorough work on the Public Lands Committee, where he was rendering a real public service. But the real tribute to NICHOLS the man and NICHOLS the Congressman, after all, is not in what we may have to say here, but in the expression of respect and love for him which poured out not here alone, but poured out in his home city upon the occasion of the return of his body to that city.

I remember, and will long remember, as we stood there in the corridors of the city hall, the building where he had served the city as city clerk, where he had always been ready to perform service to and help the humblest citizen of Detroit who came to him for aid—in that city hall, as his body lay there in state, the people for hours poured through the corridors to pay their silent tribute of love and respect to the man that they knew as the friend of each and every one of them.

Mr. MICHENER. Mr. Speaker, we have met here on this Sabbath Day to pay our tribute of love and respect to our late lamented colleague, Congressman CHARLES A. NICHOLS. These services are not perfunctory in their character; they are more. It is but proper that this, the greatest legislative body in the world, should set aside this day to commemorate the memory of one of its departed Members. Each one of us has his small place to fill in the great human family, and when the death angel beckons we must of necessity leave vacant chairs. Today we mingle with our friends, we enjoy their associations, but we know not what the morrow holds in store for us. The ties formed in this body are difficult to sever, and these occasions bring us face to face with realities.

The grim reaper has exacted an unusual toll from the Sixty-sixth Congress. Fourteen times has he entered our ranks. Fourteen times have we realized that—

> Death takes us unawares
> And stays our hurrying feet,
> The great design unfinished lies,
> Our lives are incomplete.

It has been said that death is the black camel that stops at every man's door. It is seldom welcome but sure to come. It lies in every passing breeze and lurks in every flower.

> Leaves have their time to fall,
> And flowers to wither at the north wind's breath,
> And stars to set; but all,
> Thou hast all seasons for thine own, O Death!

And so when we learned of the passing of our colleague it seemed that his going was untimely, unwarranted. In the prime of life, in the bloom of manhood, in the day of his usefulness, his final summons came. Without warning, unexpected, it was a great shock to his friends. He surely died at the post of duty. I met him in the House Office Building on that Sunday afternoon; he was in apparent good health—jovial and agreeable, as usual—and in but a few hours later cold in death.

I first met Mr. NICHOLS in the closing days of the Sixty-fifth Congress—about two years ago. I came to Washington, as most new Members do, to get acquainted with the surroundings. I will ever remember the courtesy and consideration shown me by Mr. NICHOLS. From that time on he was my friend. I soon learned to love him for his true worth. He was a kind, genial, whole-souled, companionable man. To know him was to admire him. True to his friends always. One could not know Mr. NICHOLS long without knowing something of his home life. His devotion to his widowed mother was marked. The consideration of her pleasure entered into his every plan. On many occasions during the sessions of Congress I have known him to leave his seat on the floor just to call up mother and see that all was well with her. Such attention, thoughtfulness, and love of mother always inspires admiration and confidence, and so it seemed but fitting that the end should come as it did, in his mother's arms.

It was my privilege to accompany the funeral party to Detroit. I did not wonder at the large number of friends at the depot and at the funeral. There were members of organizations, military and civil; there were his friends—all knew him, all mourned his loss. As the body lay in state in the great city hall of Detroit, in which building he had so faithfully served his people, I saw many people in solemn procession pass the coffin and take a last look at all that was mortal of their friend. Some had known him as a lad, some had known him as a young newspaper reporter, some had known him as a mature newspaper writer, some had known him as secretary of the police department, some had known him as city clerk, some had known him as their Representative in Congress. All knew him to be worthy of confidence, all loved him. Three times was he elected to Congress, each time by an increased majority. He was truly a self-made man. His career should be an inspiration to every American lad. He conclusively exemplified opportunity in America. He again demonstrated that the "barefoot boy, with cheek of tan," is a presidential possibility. His success was not the result of chance, it was the result of merit.

It can be honestly said that "when he departed he took a man's life along with him." What is true greatness and true success, except the development of those qualities which we summarize and emphasize in the one word—manhood. It touches the attractive as well as the noble features in the life of man. It is a word difficult to define, yet, without definition, we recognized and appreciated it in Congressman NICHOLS. He lived out his days and his years in the State of his birth. He held the affection and the friendship of the home folks, and after all—

> Friends are in life's exchange the sterling coin;
> True, tender for all the rarest forms of joy;
> The only pauper is the friendless man.

Judged by this standard our friend was, indeed, a wealthy man. No constituent was too humble or too lowly to receive the utmost consideration. His office was the clearing house for the wants and requests of all ex-service men. No member of this body took a keener interest in the welfare of those who served during the late war, and those who were dependent upon them. It was Mr. NICHOLS who introduced the first resolution in Congress providing that suitable arrangements be made for the reception of the remains of those who made the supreme sacrifice on the other side. His office was the headquarters for Michigan American Legion Welfare Officers while in Washington, and in his death these boys lost an earnest supporter and an energetic advocate. It is not for me, a comparatively new Member here, to call attention to the legislative ability and statesmanship of our colleague. This will be done far better by those who have had longer service with him, and who are better qualified to speak.

Suffice it for me to say that the thirteenth congressional district has lost an able Representative, the State has lost an honored citizen, and the country has lost a wise legislator. His faults we write upon the sand, his virtues upon the tablets of love and memory.

Mr. McLEOD. Mr. Speaker, although I was not fortunate enough to be numbered among his bosom friends, I do not believe there were many people in Detroit who were unfamiliar with the name of my predecessor, the late Congressman NICHOLS, and I consider it a great honor to be allowed to pay my tribute to his memory at this ceremony.

A President could not have been accorded a more befitting burial than that bestowed upon him by the people of his loved city. His sudden tragic death from heart failure occurred in the arms of his revered mother. On the arrival of his body from Washington it was met by an array of policemen and a squad of medaled service men in their overseas uniforms. His body lay in state for two days at the city hall, where it was viewed by thousands of mourners.

His presence among his friends was always welcome on account of his care-free, lovable disposition. He always looked on the sunny side of life, even when everything went dead wrong. He was a man of sympathetic understanding and never failed to extend a helping hand to a discouraged fellow creature. Longfellow said:

Into each life some rain must fall.

Mr. NICHOLS therefore must have had his share; but such days were never intimated to or inflicted on his friends. One of his most commendable and noticeable attributes was his devoted attention to his constant companion, his mother, a frail sweet-faced gray-haired mother, such as poets love to describe.

At the age when most boys are enjoying the free existence of school life he had undertaken the arduous task of a newspaper reporter. He was famous for his ability in solving homicide cases which others had abandoned.

He was appointed secretary of the Detroit police department in 1905, where he served three years. In 1908 his merit was rewarded by his election to the public office of city clerk and his reelection in 1910. In 1914 the public further displayed their confidence in him by sending him to the United States Congress. I need not go into the details of his service here, as you, my dear colleagues, are acquainted with his unblemished record here. However, I can not but touch upon his patriotic war record. During this critical time he never once flinched. He took an important part in the legislation for the welfare of soldiers. He served his constituents well in all capacities. Even a few hours before his untimely death, which was on Sunday, when he should have been resting after the strenuous toil of the week, he was writing a report upon a measure of vital importance to every man and woman in the country, as it related to the extraordinary cost of shoes.

My great desire is that I may have the wisdom to follow in his footsteps here.

How can he be dead who lives immortal in the hearts of men?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Members who so desire may extend their remarks in the RECORD on the life and character of the late CHARLES A. NICHOLS.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

Mr. WHITE of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, until I came here this morning, I knew little more of the life of CHARLES A. NICHOLS before I met him upon entering on my duties in the Sixty-sixth Congress than I found in one of the very briefest biographies in the Congressional Directory. I can not speak of the record of his life and achievements with the familiarity that his colleagues are able to speak, but I am pleased and honored, Mr. Speaker and gentlemen, to speak for a few minutes of my friend CHARLES A. NICHOLS.

It is not for me to explore the domain of metaphysical idealism. I indulge in no speculation, for me it is sound philosophy—true religion, and supreme consolation to hold to that maxim. I know that it shall be well with the righteous.

And whatever betides beyond the frontier of the unknown world, I believe that a conscious entity of our departed friend is consciously existent, and that with the same intense courage that characterized his work here, his undaunted soul is to-day grappling in the forum of eternity with its mysterious problems. Ironquill says, in what I regard as one of his greatest poems, The Washerwoman's Song, giving expression to that spirit of doubt which assails, perplexes, and at times tortures the thinking mind—

Human hopes and human creeds
Have their root in human needs;
Yet I would not want to strip
From the washerwoman's lip
Any songs that she may sing,
Any comfort songs may bring.
For the woman has a friend
That will keep her to the end.

But again the same writer, in his poem "Criterion," which seems to be a reflective answer or an echo of that apparently agnostic sentiment expressed in the "Washerwoman's Song," says:

And yet the soul doth seem to be
In sunshine which it can not see.
Sometimes the spirit seems to roam
Above the clouds, above the foam,
Back to some half-forgotten home;
And so I think that it may be
That man and his finality
Is not an ideality, but is, indeed, reality.

CHARLES NICHOLS's faith was of a positive, unquestioning character. I know this, for he told me so. It was builded upon the words of Him Who spake as never man spake, Who said, "Because I live, you shall live also." I think of few men whom I have met in a long period of private and official life who in so short a time I came to know so well and to esteem so highly as I did the gentleman from Michigan, the Hon. CHARLES NICHOLS, in respect for whose memory and services we meet here to-day. It was largely due, perhaps, because of our mutual service on the Committee on the Public Lands. In this connection I feel there is no impropriety in referring to one incident at least in the official experience of Mr. NICHOLS, which illustrates in a high degree his quality as a statesman and his rare political integrity. He was enthusiastically for the payment of a soldier's bonus to the American ex-service men of the great World War.

Although not rugged in health, he devoted much time and energy to advancing this legislation, but he opposed with equal energy the bill, H. R. 487, authorizing the appropriation of $500,000,000 for the establishment of projects upon Government reclaimed land. Seventeen members of the committee were strongly in favor of the measure, while only four opposed it, but so strongly that, on account of the objections urged by Mr. NICHOLS, a minority view, written by him, was signed and printed; and it was due to his opposition more than to any other one thing that the measure failed. It was an exhibition of unusual, yet of admirable courage, to throw down the gage of battle to a great committee of the House and to the majority leadership on his own side, when there was every probability of being misunderstood. These are the qualities that compel admiration from everyone; but beyond all this, it was the splendid qualities of the man of which I am thinking most. His was the gentle, kindly spirit. I spent many happy hours in his office, and he in mine, and when you and I have invoked every source of consolation, have conjured the beauty and usefulness of his life in terms of love and admiration, contemplating all of the fine and noble qualities of a splendid man that show in all the acts of that wonderously perfect life, and in none more perfectly than in the tender care and solicitude shown for the dear kind mother, to be so cruelly and unexpectedly bereaved, we must pause disconsolate because we have no voice with which to reach the ear of him whom we have loved. Hopeless of entire consolation we ask the age old question, never affirmatively answered—

Can storied urn, or animated bust,
Back to its mansion call the fleeting breath?
Can honour's voice provoke the silent dust,
Or flatt'ry soothe the dull cold ear of death?

Time, at once the builder and the leveler, thou shalt, thou must write justly and truly the story of this man's life; and there shall appear no recorded act unworthy of a noble man.

Mr. SIEGEL. Mr. Speaker, it is said by the psalmist that "man is like to vanity. His days are as a shadow that passeth away."

We know these things to be self-evident, and yet during the short space of time which man has upon this earth he accomplishes very often in a short span of life more than many others succeed in doing in a much longer one. Our able, esteemed, kind-hearted, industrious worker and patriotic friend CHARLES A. NICHOLS was no exception. He passed away when yet young in years. But he is mourned by all who recognized the value of his real conscientious and earnest work for one of the largest constituencies which any Member of the House has ever represented. He looked after the affairs of thousands of young men who entered the service from the city of Detroit. His district, according to the latest figures of the 1920 census, had a couple of hundred thousand of inhabitants, to which task he devoted himself with all the energy and strength which a man of his years possessed.

I first met him when he came to Congress over five years ago. He discussed with me at that time the complex problems of a heterogeneous population such as his. He and I compared the efforts which we were both exerting to make that population homogeneous. Later, when we both served on the Census Committee, of which he was the honored chairman at the time of his decease, we frequently discussed the same problem. He typified the highest ideal of American citizenship. His devotion to his mother and his great love and affection for her won for him the highest admiration of all who knew him. His sincerity in all his undertakings was thoroughly appreciated by all who met him. He loved this country and its institutions to the utmost. He took great pride in the great city of Detroit.

Frequent, indeed, were his references to the soldier boys on the other side, and when the first of our heroes came back to America it was upon his resolution that a committee of the House and Senate were sent to meet and receive the honored dead, whose memories we shall ever hold in the highest esteem and respect. He died the same as a soldier upon the field of battle. On that same Sunday afternoon, which was to be his last, he wrote the report, which the Census Committee later adopted as its report, upon the skin and hide bill, which became a law. That evening he hoped to return and examine it once more. When he left the House Office Building on that Sunday afternoon little did he think or know that he would never again return to it.

On the other side a couple of years ago I used the expression "That where there is life there is death." If ever the statement was true, it was in the case of our dear lamented friend, CHARLES A. NICHOLS. If the gathering of wealth was to be deemed the foundation of success, then CHARLES A. NICHOLS was a failure; but to me, Mr. Speaker, he made the greatest progress which a human being could make, because he believed in service. Service and sacrifice were his motto. There is no greater love than that of mother for her child. There is no greater obedience to the mandate of the Ten Commandments than to honor and obey thy parents. CHARLES A. NICHOLS carried and followed that commandment in the fullest sense of the term. He typified the man described by Henry Victor Morgan in his famous poem, "Success":

I hold that man alone succeeds
Whose life is crowned by noble deeds,
Who cares not for the world's applause,
But scorns vain custom's outgrown laws;
Who feels not dwarfed by nature's show,
But deep within himself doth know
That conscious man is greater far
Than ocean, land, or distant star;
Who does not count his wealth by gold,
His worth by office he may hold,
But he feels himself, as man alone,
As good as king upon a throne;
Who, battling 'gainst each seeming wrong,
Can meet disaster with a song,
Feel sure of victory in defeat,
And rise refreshed the foe to meet;
Who only lives the world to bless,
Can never fail—he is success.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] will please take the chair.

Mr. CARTER took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, the House of Representatives is full of men who started life with little. The American boy, no matter how poor, has hovering over his cradle the angels of Political Liberty and Unlimited Opportunity. Give him health and he can rise as high as he will. We meet to-day to honor the memory of a boy who was born poor, who rose high, who was good to his mother, and who was one of the countless examples of what this country does for those who render faithful service.

CHARLES A. NICHOLS was a product of the finest region in all the world—a child of the Old Northwest. New England is proud of her Puritans, and Virginia of her Cavaliers. The thirteen Colonies brought forth this Government; but the fairest child of the Revolution was the territory northwest of the Ohio River, where labor has always been free and where opportunity has showered her choicest blessings on her sons. That great territory got her political bearings even before the rest of the United States, because her immortal ordinance of '87 was adopted before the Constitution, and no other Government charter had ever equaled it. One sentence in it contains more of the spirit of human progress than all the mandates of kings. I wish it could be written on the sky: "Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall be forever encouraged."

Under this influence the Old Northwest Territory has produced more Presidents and statesmen than any other part of the United States. And into this atmosphere and these traditions CHARLES A. NICHOLS was born at the little town of Boyne, Charlevoix County, Mich., amid the music of the sawmills and the perfume of the pines. He got his education in the unsurpassed public schools which the State of Michigan provides for all her children. He learned to write forcible English; and that accomplishment, with a natural nose for news, gave him employment as a newspaper reporter in Detroit, so he became intimately acquainted with the affairs of that phenomenal city. He probably never enjoyed himself more than while he was a police reporter in the most rapidly growing city in America. He saw a greasy young mechanic riding about the streets in a queer horseless wagon with iron-bound tires and a trail of smoke; and from those experiments he beheld the rocketlike growth of the greatest automobile manufacturing center in the world. He loved the city and its stately river, with its endless movie show of ships, a more numerous fleet than can be seen in any harbor on any ocean.

In his work as a police reporter he was fortunate in his field. On one side of the river was his home city and country, on the other side was the Canadian frontier, and across that border many a fleeing lawbreaker carried the plots of international detective stories more interesting than any fiction. Young NICHOLS had a great capacity for observation, and the ability to tell a true story well. So he won wide acquaintance and an enduring good name. There are unhappy countries where criminals are in less danger than honest men, where poverty is permanent, where speech is enslaved, and newspapers are either subservient or suppressed. CHARLES A. NICHOLS, as a police reporter, helped to make crime a dangerous business for the criminals. When he had written and lived more detective stories than any novelist ever wrote, there came to Mr. NICHOLS the opportunity to become a public servant, first as secretary to the police board; afterwards he was elected city clerk of Detroit, and then he was three times chosen to represent a great industrial district in the House of Representatives. He learned to know his people and their needs, and he served them well.

Mr. NICHOLS as a Member of this House was the same efficient, straightforward, independent man that he had been in his public service at home. He seldom spoke on the floor, but the less he spoke the more he heard, and there have been men here who talked loud and often who have never attained the influence or the affection in which Mr. NICHOLS was held.

At the time he died he was chairman of the Committee on the Census. It is the work of this committee to provide for the taking, every 10 years, of the record of our national growth. Figures can not picture it, but they give some idea. In 1800 the census found in the Northwest Territory 51,000 people. In 1850 the number had grown to 4,500,000, and in 1920 to 21,000,000, or about one-fifth of the population of the United States. These millions live in a country where the hired laborer of to-day is working for himself to-morrow and hiring others the day after; where the good man can not be kept down and where every boy has a chance; which was never better shown than in the life of our beloved friend and fellow Member, CHARLES NICHOLS.

THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE MORGAN, OF OKLAHOMA.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the special order.

The Clerk read as follows:

On motion of Mr. CARTER, by unanimous consent,
Ordered, That Sunday, February 27, 1921, be set apart for addresses on the life, character, and public service of Hon. DICK T. MORGAN, late a Representative from the State of Oklahoma.

Mr. SWINDALL. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 701.

Resolved, That the business of the House be now suspended, that opportunity may be given for tributes to the memory of Hon. DICK T. MORGAN, late a Representative from the State of Oklahoma.

Resolved, That as a particular mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, and in recognition of his distinguished public career, the House at the conclusion of these exercises shall stand adjourned.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate.

Resolved, That the Clerk send a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members who desire to do so may extend their remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that all Members be permitted to extend their remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOWARD. Mr. Speaker, we are here to-day to pay tribute to the memory of our departed colleague, DICK T. MORGAN, whom I have known intimately and well for over 30 years. My first acquaintance with Mr. MORGAN was in the pioneer days of Oklahoma in 1889. Those were days that tested the mettle of men, and he was one of Oklahoma's pioneers who even in those days met the test. He was to me in those days a boyhood benefactor. When I first met him he was engaged in the publication of Morgan's Land Laws, a publication that was of great benefit to the early settlers of Oklahoma and one which is now often referred to by the courts of Oklahoma in decisions relating to real estate titles, especially on the west side of the State. It was in the capacity of a boy printer working on that publication that I first came to know him intimately, and I have never forgotten the kindly interest that this good man took in me as a boy at that time and have on numerous occasions had reason to remember the good advice given me by him in the days in which I was passing from boyhood to manhood. Ever after we were intimate friends, and I mourn his loss to-day.

Mr. MORGAN was a strong and courageous man, never hesitating to do what he believed was right. He had many warm friends who at all times stood by him loyally. He has done a great deal for his district in Oklahoma and for the entire State, and for this he will long be remembered even by those who knew him slightly. The greatest service that can be rendered is to give to those who are in need of help and who are unable to help themselves and are unable to return to you the services which you might render them or the benefits which you might bestow upon them; in other words, unselfish service and favors from a pure motive with no hope of return or personal reward. In his service to his district and State Mr. MORGAN was unselfish and untiring in his efforts to help those who needed help. He was the soul of courtesy, true as steel, firm as a rock. No man ever did him a kindness he did not repay. His death is a loss to his State and to the Republic. He was patriotic in the fullest sense of the term. He cherished America, the same as an infant loves its mother. He exemplified true home life in every way. He was devoted to his wife and children, and in their company he found rest and pleasure. DICK T. MORGAN has passed to the great beyond, but he leaves many behind who will long mourn his loss and always keep his name in pleasant memory. So on this Sabbath morning I say peace to his ashes and rest and happiness to his soul.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, the death of DICK THOMPSON MORGAN came as a shock to each Member of the Oklahoma delegation and to his thousands of friends in our home State.

When I last saw him, he was in his usual good health. He was about to leave for home to enjoy a well-earned vacation. I deeply regret that when death came I was out of the State on the Pacific coast and not privileged to attend the funeral.

Before coming to Congress six years ago I had a slight acquaintance with him. He was known by reputation to practically every one of the citizens of our home State. While serving in the House with him I learned to know him intimately and to appreciate his many admirable qualities. He was one of the hardest working men in Congress. No man kept in closer touch with the people of his district than he did, and no man more nearly represented their views upon the floor of the House than DICK T. MORGAN. He represented one of the great agricultural districts of the Southwest, and his intense loyalty to the farmer was well known to every Member of the House. He took a deep interest in all legislation affecting the farmers of the country, and they had no more loyal or intelligent supporter.

He was greatly interested in rural credits and wrote a splendid book upon the subject. I preserved the volume that he was kind enough to give me and appreciate the vast amount of data that he collected. When the farm loan act was up for consideration, he took an active interest in the bill and was of material assistance in securing legislation upon the subject.

He was the ranking majority member of the Judiciary Committee and took much interest in the work of the committee.

While DICK THOMPSON MORGAN was a Republican, he was liberal in his views, loyal to his friends, and trusted by each Member of the Oklahoma delegation. We were always glad to invite him into our councils and glad to have his advice. He leaves to his wife and son a splendid reputation and the heritage of a good name. He was a faithful and affectionate husband, a loyal and consistent friend, and a patriotic and beloved public servant. The district, State, and Nation that he so loyally and patriotically served will miss him. I want to take occasion to say this word in behalf of his memory and to express my appreciation for his confidence and friendship.

Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, it was not my pleasure to have known the late Congressman DICK T. MORGAN for a long time, but you did not have to know him long in order to realize that he was one who had a warm feeling and abundance of good fellowship for his fellowman.

He was ever sociable, genial, jovial, and with a smile of good cheer that radiated friendship and which quickly removed that reserve usually present with strangers. With him you quickly felt a close and friendly acquaintance. In his daily life he truly exemplified the thought of him who said:

Let me live in my house by the side of the road and be a friend of man.

To the new Members was he especially considerate and thoughtful. Notwithstanding his many duties, his active participation in committee work and the daily sessions of the House, Mr. MORGAN always found time to encourage and advise a new Member in the procedure of legislation. His was a kindly disposition. He not only sought success on his own behalf, but was always on the alert to be of help and service to a fellow Member whose experience and knowledge of legislation was not as broad as his own.

I had the pleasure to serve with him upon the Judiciary Committee of this House, and there had the opportunity to observe his work. You did not associate with him long until you realized that he was not only industrious and painstaking, but that he also showed a conscientious devotion to his public duties and service. In his work you readily realized that he was guided not by that which was politic or expedient, but that he always tried to determine what was the right, just, and equitable side of any matter under discussion, and having determined that question Mr. MORGAN always supported that side fearlessly and with determination until the matter was finally settled.

Just after the close of the last session and before our departure for home I had a very pleasant visit with Mr. MORGAN. He was then talking enthusiastically about a trip that he contemplated taking, with his good wife, during the vacation. He was looking forward to a pleasant journey with all the hope and pleasure that one could anticipate from a vacation and a well-earned rest. But death is ever present, and the wisest knoweth not how soon, for even then the angel of death was near. In a few days he laid his cold hand upon the brow of our colleague, Mr. MORGAN, and he was asleep, and we realize to-day that his voice has been stilled forever. As we recall that he is with us no more we are again reminded how uncertain is our tenure of life, and there comes to mind the lines of the poet, who said:

What is life? 'Tis a beautiful shell
Thrown up by eternity's flow
On Time's bank of quicksand to dwell,
And a moment it's loveliness to show.

Gone back to its elements grand
Is the billow that washed it ashore;
See, another now washes the strand
And the beautiful shell is no more.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, when I first came to Congress, 10 years ago, I lived at the same hotel with Mr. MORGAN, and when I last met him, last summer, we were living at the same hotel. I knew him very well. He was a man of fine social qualities and upright character, and one who made warm friends. He represented that fine, young, aggressive State that is making such progress in the galaxy of the States of our Union, and he represented it with ability, energy, and intelligence. He was always loyal to its interests. He never missed an occasion when he could promote its welfare. He was active on the floor and was especially interested in the progress of agriculture. He was an authority upon the farm loan law, concerning which he wrote a volume, and he was an enthusiastic champion of that law.

Mr. MORGAN was a man of high qualities, noble purposes, sincere, and upright. He was an indefatigable worker. Our offices were on the same floor of the House Office Building. While some of us visited our offices on the Sabbath, his office was always locked on that day; but on every other day he was continually at work. No legislation escaped his attention. He ably represented the farmers and never seemed to tire of discussing matters relating to farm work. He was not averse to being told that his devotion to the progress of agriculture was producing good results, for the interests of the farmer were his interests.

We know not of the future, but we do know that our time comes. Mr. MORGAN frequently spoke of the future life, and I am sure all is well with him. I have in mind the lines of Michigan's philosopher-poet, Edgar Guest, which seem to me to express the sentiment that he so often voiced:

There is no death. I'm sure of that.
The thing that seems to be
Is but the touch of winter
That lays bare the spreading tree.

And as the roses bloom again
When all the snow has gone,
So do the souls of men arise
With brighter raiment on.

O weary heart, be strong, be brave,
Nor wince beneath the sting.
Beyond the gates of death there lies
The sweet, eternal spring.

This was the belief of our friend and worthy colleague, now deceased, whose voice is stilled for all time to come. We can only say, "Farewell, beloved colleague."

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the Congress, the House of Representatives is convened to-day in extraordinary session to pay honor and a last mark of respect to our late colleague, DICK T. MORGAN, of Oklahoma. His life and character eminently entitle him to be thus honored.

How often we have sat at the bier of a departed friend and heard virtues extolled that the deceased did not possess—how different with MORGAN. No one would or could challenge one step in his spotless life. No one could or would detract from his brilliant record of devotion to duty and usefulness in life. In citizenship, religion, law, politics, and statesmanship he was a man every day.

How often we have observed lives marked with success that do not square with our sense of morals, justice, or right living—how different with MORGAN. His high ideals, his exalted sense of justice between man and man; his fine moral fiber; his rare judgment of things and men; his devotion to duty, are all milestones pointing the way to the successful life he led.

Differ with him in politics, yes; but they were honest differences. No man of stature loses respect for his fellow men who have honest differences with him; only those of small stature and inferior mentality would ever exact a less high circumscribed rule.

Death always comes too soon. Few of us, yea, are any of us in health or in full possession of our faculties ever quite ready to embrace it; it is that thought that we must leave behind the known and the explored for the unknown and unexplored. This thought that death always comes too soon is even made more marked and conspicuous when a life full of usefulness and devotion to duty is cut down in the midday of hope, achievement, and success.

Who is there among us that has not pondered over the perplexity of a human life? Who is there here or elsewhere who has not sought to fathom the problem of why it is that to-day we are full of hope, joy, life, and activity, while to-morrow we are but the poorest clay? Looking backward through 6,000 years of recorded history, the problem of the human life is as perplexing to-day as it was in the beginning.

The gifted Ingersoll proceeds to say:

I do not say there is no life beyond the grave; I simply say I do not know.

The Book of Books, that has stood the test of time and reason for more than nineteen hundred years, tells us that there is life and hope and joy beyond the grave. It affords all men the blessed assurance that the grave is not the end.

I pause and ask who of us here to-day or elsewhere is willing to trade the words of hope and life laid down in the Book of Books for that bleak, dismal, and erring doctine, "I do not know"?

Everything about us breathes the blessed assurance of a life other than this one; a life beyond the grave. The flowers, the plants, the foliage is cut down by the frost of winter simply to return to us in springtime more glorious, beautiful, and gorgeous than before.

If matter, mute and inanimate, can be molded into a multitude of forms, can never die, can we not be again reassured and made certain of the fact that there is a future for the soul of the man made in the image of his Creator?

No; I feel as certain as that I live that the soul of the late DICK T. MORGAN is safe and secure in the arms of his Maker, in that land where the din and smoke of battle never goes; in that land that is fairer than day; in that beautiful isle of somewhere where there is no death, no sorrow, remorse, waiting, and disappointment, but where all is peace, hope, joy, and rest.

His mantle of love, charity, and regard for the humble toiler and producer of the country has fallen on no one man or small group of men, but it is the golden heritage of State and Nation. So sympathetic with the weak, still so able to discern injustice and grapple with the strong. He is the sweetest memory that has yet graced the pages of Oklahoma's fleeting vestibule of time. The somber poverty of his youth, the rapid rise to fame in both State and Nation, must of necessity shatter the skepticism of the skeptic, inspire new faith in the faithless. His was a life well worthy of emulation. He was an honorable man every day. His place in history is secure. He belongs to the ages. Peace to his ashes.

Mr. HARRELD. Mr. Speaker, in 1907 the great State of Oklahoma was born. It was the offspring of the wedlock between what was known as Oklahoma Territory and Indian Territory. Into that State came the heterogeneous population of both of those Territories. Immediately there came up the necessity of that great State choosing its officials to represent it in the Congress of the United States as well as in the halls of the legislature and in the executive offices of the State. The best people of that State, because of this heterogeneous population that had accumulated from various parts of the Nation were rather uneasy in their selection of these public officials. Among its population were men of ability and distinction that had migrated there from other States. There was also among its population adventurers and men who had made failures and even been convicted of crime in other States who had migrated to that State to take another trial at life and its problems. These last were aggressive aspirants for political preferment, and so the people of that great State were put to it in choosing their officials. They were obliged in many cases to choose between men whose reputations were not established, with whom they were not acquainted, and in some instances, perhaps, mistakes were made in the selection of officers. I am glad to say that that day is gone, and the people know each other and have come in touch with each other and understand each other.

There was one man about whose integrity there was never any doubt. That man offered himself as a candidate for Congress. That man was DICK T. MORGAN, not unknown to the people of the State, because he had served the public in that State for years in various capacities. He was a man in whom the people had confidence, and he soon came to the front as one of the citizens of that State upon whom dependence and reliance could be had. The people delighted to honor him and did honor him, and, though he was no longer young at the time of his death, he was commonly known in that country as "DICK." People did not think of him as other than a young man at all. Some people did call him "Uncle DICK," but he was one man in whom the people of that State had absolute and entire confidence, and it was more a term of affection than otherwise.

There were a few traits of character that DICK possessed that I want to talk about. One has been touched upon by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. SMITH], and that was his piety and his devotion to the cause of Christianity. He was the strictest observer of the Sabbath that I have ever known. I think that fact was mentioned by the gentleman from Michigan. I remember an incident that illustrated this phase of his character. During the last session of this Congress one of the high officials of this House gave a reception on Sunday afternoon. That was because there was no other time, perhaps, for a reception on account of the press of business in the House. On the morning of that reception I said to Uncle DICK, "I am going to the reception, and if you and your wife would like a seat in our car I would be glad to have you go." He said, "I thank you very much, but Mrs. Morgan and I have decided not to go." I said, "That is rather strange; this is the only reception this officer has given this year. I should think you ought to make a special effort to go." Then he said, in a modest way, "Mrs. Morgan and I do not attend public receptions on Sunday."

It illustrated the character of the man. When he believed in a thing he was firm in that belief and had the courage to make known his conviction when pressed for a reason.

He was apparently a modest man, but he had the inherent firmness to stand by his convictions. He was very much interested in the World War veterans' welfare. He gave a great deal of time and consideration to a plan by which he expected to provide a method by which the veterans could procure homes on the farms. As the gentleman from Michigan said, he was an authority on the question of rural credits and farm-loan banks and the laws relating thereto. He had sought to work out along the same line a system by which the World War veterans could purchase homes on long-time credits. He had spent a great deal of time and energy in perfecting that system. When the time came to consider the soldiers' bonus bill he was an earnest advocate of that bill and sought to have incorporated in the adjusted compensation bill his system of credits to ex-service men purchasing homes. It was through his efforts it was adopted as one of the five optional plans in a modified form, and to-day it is one of the most popular of all the proposed optional plans embraced in the bonus bill which passed the House last session.

During the last year it was my pleasure to come in direct contact with the constituents of his district. It is remarkable how he had ingratiated himself into the affections of his constituency. I have never seen a people who were so fond of their Representative as the people of his district were of him. There, after all, is the test of a man's success. What do the people whom he served think of him. Measured by that standard DICK MORGAN was a success as a Congressman because people knew and appreciated his work. When he died he was brought to Oklahoma City, my home city, and there the funeral was held, and there he was interred. While his home for many years had been at Woodward, Okla., he had formerly lived in Oklahoma City, and Oklahoma City had formerly been in his district which he represented in Congress, although not in his district at the time of his death. His son lives there and is an honored practitioner at the bar. I presume at the request of his son he was buried there. It was my good fortune to be present and to witness the homage that was paid him then and there.

Men came from every county in his district to attend the funeral, men came from all over the State of Oklahoma to attend the funeral, and the long line of those who came there to testify to their reverence for him was another evidence of the esteem in which DICK T. MORGAN was held. The people of Oklahoma appreciate the loss they have sustained. They also appreciate the nice things that are said of him to-day by his colleagues in this House, and they feel that the standards of official life are greatly enhanced and greatly improved by having had as their distinguished citizen and public servant DICK T. MORGAN.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, a certain poet has said of a man more celebrated than any of us—

> The color of the ground was in him, the red earth;
> The smack and tang of elemental things;
> The rectitude and patience of the cliff;
> The good-will of the rain that loves all leaves;
> The friendly welcome of the wayside well.

And further along in the same poem are these words—

> He held his place—
> Held the long purpose like a growing tree—
> Held on through blame and faltered not at praise.
> And when he fell in whirlwind he went down
> As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
> Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,
> And leaves a lonesome place against the sky.

Of course I did not come here this afternoon in order that you might hear me talk, and you did not come here to hear me. I simply came to pay respect to one who is entitled to our respect. A man very near to me said that he had served four years as governor of his State, eight years in the legislature, six years in the Senate, and four years in this House, and that the ideal public service for an American was the American House of Commons, the House of Representatives. I believe that. This is a great place, this House of Representatives. If these walls could speak to-day, they could tell a tale of eloquence unsurpassed in all the world, and I often feel as if there are looking down upon us memories, characters, and personalities not to be surpassed in all history. It is a significant thing that the House pauses to do honor to those who have striven, and striven hard, to be worthy of this place.

The House of Representatives is in session, the distinguished Speaker has delegated and appointed a distinguished citizen of the State of Oklahoma to preside over this session; the officers of the House are in their place, the mace—the symbol of authority of the House—is in its place; and I feel that it is a remarkable thing that in a most busy time, in the most busy period of the session, men should come here from the committee to which this man belonged and from the State in which he lived and from both the great parties of the House, to pay their little, simple, informal, and sincere tribute. The clash and clatter and clamor which only last night lasted almost to midnight are stilled when we contemplate the place in which one stood who tried to do his duty, and after all that is the greatest thing that any of us can do or hope to do.

I did not know Mr. MORGAN at all, you might say, until I became acquainted with him all at once, and in a long conversation about many things I got from him a conception of his character exemplified by these words in the verse which I have already quoted—

> The friendly welcome of the wayside well.

He was friendly, and he gave a friendly welcome. He was friendly to me and told me the thing that I wanted to know when I felt lonesome and homesick and out of place and thought I never would fit, and I am grateful to him for that. Upon inquiry I find that he was friendly to others, and if you or I were in his place and this meeting were called here to do honor to you or to me he would want to pay his little tribute as we are trying to do to-day. I am very glad, without any formality, as a member of the great Committee on the Judiciary, of which he was the highest member except the chairman, to testify in a modest way to the fact that he always did his duty, and in a personal way I want to give my thanks to him for his friendliness to me.

Mr. MCKEOWN. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, it was at the close of a long, hot day in August, 1901, nearly 20 years ago, that I first saw DICK MORGAN. It was in southwestern Oklahoma, just before the opening of that wonderful country. I, in company with others, had driven in a covered wagon into that country seeking an opportunity to file on a homestead at the opening. One of the things which I deemed essential to success was a copy of MORGAN'S land laws. At that time Mr. MORGAN was a striking figure; he had a long, black, flowing beard, which attracted one's attention to his attractive personality. The one thing that distinguished him from his fellow citizens of that day was his wonderful Christian character. His display of culture was quite noticeable in that western country at the day. DICK T. MORGAN was a highly educated man.

He is a living example of what education will do for a man. Back in Indiana he was graduated in 1876 from the Union Christian College with the degree of bachelor of science. Later he taught in that school as a professor of mathematics. Afterwards he attended the Central Law School, at Indianapolis, where he graduated with the degree of bachelor of laws in 1880, and afterwards, as an appreciation of his ability, there was conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws by Bethany College, of Bethany, W. Va. He was a man of good ability, peculiar in many respects, but one who displayed a strong friendship for his fellow man. I never saw him again, although I read frequently of him, until I met him in the halls of Congress. Being of a different political faith than myself, I wondered how he would treat a new Democratic Member from Oklahoma. I was agreeably surprised at the welcome I received at his hands, so much so that I could not realize for a few minutes that he was of a different political faith.

I want to add my testimony to that of my colleague from Oklahoma, Mr. HASTINGS, in emphasizing the fact that in DICK T. MORGAN there was a colleague, though differing in political faith, in whom you could put absolute confidence. The Democratic members of the delegation from Oklahoma welcomed him in conference upon the many difficult questions that came before them for solution during the terrible days of the war. We had no hesitation in unburdening ourselves in his presence and to him, because we had implicit confidence in his honor and his integrity, and likewise he had a similar confidence in the Democratic membership from Oklahoma. The one striking feature of DICK T. MORGAN was his high personal character. It marked him as a man of distinction, and it was a pleasure to know him, because of his wonderful Christian character.

His legislative career here in the Congress from the time he entered this House in the Sixty-first Congress is to be found in the record of the Congress, down to and including the second session of the Sixty-sixth Congress. The record is replete with many things accomplished in behalf of the people of Oklahoma and of the Nation as a whole.

He had a wonderful hold upon his people, which was due partly to the fact that he was one of the ablest organizers I have ever seen in politics. He knew the people in every school district. He could communicate with the people of his district and send information to every part of it within a few hours, because he had a live organization in every school district. He had the confidence of his fellow men, of his constituents, and of his colleagues in Congress. He paid special attention to those things that affected rural communities and those engaged in the tilling of the soil. It is a sad thing to have taken from us a man so useful when the Nation needs such men so badly. But I have an abiding faith that he is happy in the living presence of the Savior of men, who will say to DICK MORGAN, "Thou good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Mr. MORGAN was a kind, indulgent husband, a loving father, and an affectionate grandfather. The last conversation I had with him was about his grandchildren. He had just purchased some little things that he wished to send to them as an evidence of how much he thought of them, just before he started on his journey to the Canadian Provinces. His sudden death came as a great shock to those who had learned to love him. But his time had come, and—

> He folded his tent like the Arabs,
> And silently stole away.

Mr. TINCHER. Mr. Speaker, I am reminded to-day of the closing hours of the special session of this Congress. Hon. DICK T. MORGAN had the floor practically up to the hour set for the falling of the gavel which closed that Congress. He was making an appeal to his colleagues on a subject dear to his heart, and that was the subject of rural credits. No better testimony of the statesmanship and farsightedness of Mr. MORGAN can there be than the speech which he then made, as we think of the existing condition pertaining to the subject concerning which he spoke, that of agriculture.

A few days before his death the news was flashed over the wires, which subsequently proved to be untrue, of the defeat of the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee. To those of us who were familiar with the parliamentary situation in the American Congress and interested in the great Southwest it immediately became apparent how important was the place that Mr. MORGAN had in this House. I wrote him a letter, which I am sure he never received, congratulating him upon the fact that he would be the next chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

DICK MORGAN'S district will always remember him as a mild mannered, kindly gentleman. I doubt if it would be possible for the constituency that he so ably represented ever to fully understand that by reason of seniority and his ability as a fighter he was in the best position to represent the great Southwest of any man in the American Congress. His death causes a vacancy in the representation of that section of the country on this important committee which it takes a man to fill. He had gained that position by reason of long and faithful service.

Mr. MORGAN advocated some bills which some did not entirely agree with. His activity in behalf of the plan for rural credits to the soldiers was known to every Member of Congress and was, perhaps, the best-advertised piece of legislation in behalf of ex-service men that any Congressman has championed; and the most severe criticism I ever heard of that bill was expressed by a colleague who said to him, "DICK, that bill is based for success upon the absolute honesty of every man who has a transaction with the Government under that law." Mr. MORGAN said, "Yes, I always assume that toward my fellow man."

I have known Mr. MORGAN a long time. He lived in our district and practiced law at Garden City. Our districts adjoined for 200 miles. I am proud of the fact that he was my friend; he got pleasure out of assisting a new Member of Congress. The great Southwest lost in his death on able, industrious statesman, who was thoroughly acquainted with our needs and in sympathy with his people. On behalf of the neighbor State of Kansas I can only say we were proud of him as a neighbor and a statesman.

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, on two occasions the flag of our Nation has been draped at half mast because of the death of two distinguished Oklahoma citizens who were serving as Members of the House of Representatives. The first Member of this body from the State of Oklahoma to be called by the Divine Creator was the late Joe B. Thompson, of Pauls Valley, Okla., and to-day we are here to pay the last sad tribute to the memory of our distinguished colleague and friend, the late Representative DICK T. MORGAN, of Woodward, Okla. No Member of Congress, regardless of his political affiliations, ever rendered more patriotic service to his State and to his people than the one whom we honor to-day.

For a number of years Mr. MORGAN was the only Republican member of the Oklahoma congressional delegation, and while serving in this capacity it can be said that he always cooperated with the Democratic members by doing all in his power to promote the welfare of the Nation and the State of Oklahoma. During the war with Germany it was a most noticeable fact that he stood by the President in the advocacy of every measure which was presented in the interest of the Nation, and his public utterances on legislation for the interest of all the people show that he was conscientious in the performance of all his duties.

Congressman MORGAN came to Oklahoma soon after the Territory was opened for settlement and was appointed registrar of the United States land office at Woodward, Okla. He always took an active interest in every matter pertaining to the welfare of his party, and his counsel and advice was always sought by his party leaders. He was probably more interested in matters relating to agriculture than in any other subject. During the consideration of the different measures which were in the interest of the farmers he always championed their cause, and in addition to introducing a number of bills for the purpose of legislating additional benefits to the agricultural class, he was the author of a most excellent publication, entitled "Land Credits—a Plea for the American Farmer."

Congressman MORGAN was a native of the State of Indiana. He served one term as a member of the Indiana Legislature. He became a Member of the Sixty-first Congress and was elected to each succeeding Congress until his death. His service in the House of Representatives was such as to cause him to be held in high esteem by all of the Members, and by his death the State of Oklahoma has lost one of its most faithful public servants and a Member who was held in high esteem by all who knew him.

Congressman MORGAN was a member of the Christian Church and was one of the trustees of the Phillip Christian University, which is located at Enid, Okla. His entire life was filled with devotion to his home, his State, and his Nation. He has left behind him an example which will always stand out as a milepost of faithfulness, and his record is commendable from every standpoint.

He was a true Christian in every sense of the word. His death will be mourned by his thousands of friends and colleagues, and in departing this life he has truly left his footprints on the sands of time.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, for several years I knew DICK MORGAN quite well. We lived in the same hotel here at Washington and served on the same committees in the House of Representatives. When I last saw him there was nothing to suggest that I was bidding him farewell for the last time. He looked hale and hearty; his appearance indicated that he had years of useful work ahead of him.

Members of Congress are, as a rule, pretty good judges of the character of their associates. The membership of the House, with very few, if any, exceptions, entertained for Mr. MORGAN the kindliest feelings and a genuine regard for his splendid personal qualities. Everyone had the utmost confidence in his entire honesty and in his untiring devotion to his duties, both private and public. His faithfulness reminds me of some passages from Lord Lytton's Lucile. I quote:

It is not the deed
A man does, but the way that he does it, should plead
For the man's compensation in doing it.

Here,
My next neighbor's a man with twelve thousand a year,
Who deems that life has not a pastime more pleasant
Than to follow a fox or to slaughter a pheasant.
Yet this fellow goes through a contested election,
Lives in London, and sits, like the soul of dejection,
All the day through upon a committee, and late
To the last, every night, through the dreary debate.
One asks himself why, without murmur or question,
He foregoes all his tastes, and destroys his digestion,
For a labor of which the result seems so small.
"The man is ambitious," you say. Not at all.

Then, I ask,
What inspires and consoles such a self-imposed task
As the life of this man, but the sense of its duty?
And I swear that the eyes of the haughtiest beauty
Have never inspired in my soul that intense,
Reverential, and loving, and absolute sense
Of heartfelt admiration I feel for this man,
As I see him beside me, there, wearing the wan
London daylight away, on his humdrum committee;
So unconscious of all that awakens my pity,
And wonder—and worship, I might say.

To me
There seems something nobler than genius to be
In that dull, patient labor no genius relieves,
That absence of all joy which yet never grieves;
The humility of it! the grandeur withal!
The sublimity of it!
His work is the duty to which he was born;
He accepts it, without ostentation or scorn;
And this man is no uncommon type (I thank Heaven!)
Of this land's common men.

Mr. MORGAN was not only honest and industrious, he was a man of ideas and convictions and he always had the courage to defend his views and to stand to his guns to the last.

Representing a farming community, he made a special study of their needs and could always be found on the firing line when any legislation in the interest of the farmers was under consideration. He gave much attention to personal farm credit, and wrote a book and introduced bills dealing with that subject. As a pioneer in that line he deserves much credit. No doubt some day legislation to secure what he sought will be written on our statute books and the name of DICK MORGAN will then be remembered as one of its chief promoters. I shall not attempt to enumerate the measures in which during his busy years here he was interested. Suffice it to say that during all of the time that I have known him he strove honestly, faithfully, and efficiently to perform his full duty. He performed those duties well and won and deserved the esteem and love of his associates and those he represented. We are glad to honor his memory. His career is one to be emulated.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ. Mr. Speaker, when death came to Mr. MORGAN he was holding the position of ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary—the lawyers' committee—of the House, consisting of 21 members, a miniature legislative body within itself. Upon entering Congress I was assigned to that committee, and in that way was placed in right close contact with Mr. MORGAN.

My associations with Mr. MORGAN on the great committee I have mentioned, as also in this Chamber, were very pleasant.

Mr. MORGAN zealously guarded the interests of farmers and of soldiers and lost no opportunity of defending the just rights of these worthy members of society. Mr. MORGAN was a live wire. Active rather than static—a potential force in formulating policies and shaping legislation.

Mr. MORGAN was a gentleman of culture and great erudition and walked uprightly before God and man. What may be said of him here to-day are not the words of flattery, for such can not "soothe the dull cold ear of death"; but they are the testimony of associates and friends, to be recorded as a memorial to a worthy fellow Member, in order that history may teach to all the lesson of his excellent life.

It is to be regretted that Mr. MORGAN could not have lived longer to serve his great State, for he was yet in his prime, but concerning this we will have to accept the philosophy of Cicero. In Friendship and Old Age, Cicero tells us that we should not mourn for the dead; that to his mind—> nothing whatever seems of long duration in which there is any end. For when that time arrives, then the time which has passed has flowed away; that only remains which you have secured by virtue and right conduct. Hours, indeed, depart from us, and days and months and years; nor does past time ever return * * *. Whatever time is assigned to each to live, with that he ought to be content.

Cicero believed that the souls of men were immortal, and therefore it mattered not how long a man should dwell upon the earth.

Judge MORGAN was of a deeply religious nature, and when the time came for him to begin his journey and as he entered the valley leading to the undiscovered land, united with Bryant in saying:

> He who, from zone to zone,
> Guides through the bountless sky thy certain flight
> In the long way that I must tread alone,
> Will lead my steps aright.

Mr. SWINDALL. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I consider it an honor to pay my tribute to the high character, integrity, and public service of the late DICK T. MORGAN, as well as his service to humanity in the rôle of a private citizen.

He served the people of his native State of Indiana as a member of the lower house of the legislature in the session of 1880–81. He was appointed registrar of the United States land office at Woodward, Okla., by President Roosevelt, in 1904. It was at the last date I became personally acquainted with him. At the time of his appointment there was a large amount of business being transacted at the United States land office at Woodward, Okla. Testimony had been taken in a number of contest cases in which the former registrar and receiver had not had time to render opinions. Mr. MORGAN immediately got busy and decided these cases. His service was so efficient in this work that when the Alva and Woodward land offices were consolidated in 1908, and by reason thereof Mr. MORGAN lost his position as registrar of the Woodward land office, the members of his party decided he should be a candidate for Congress from the second district of the State of Oklahoma. He consented to enter the primary and was nominated and elected and has served the people of the State as Representative in Congress from the second and eighth congressional districts since that time to the date of his death. He would have been the nominee of his party in 1920 and would have been elected by the largest majority he ever received had it not been for his untimely death. Had he lived to fill his term he would have honestly and faithfully served his district, State, and Nation for a period of 12 years.

During his residence in Woodward he and I lived within two blocks of each other and were warm personal and political friends. In 1912 it was the view of the Democrats and Republicans that the member of the Republican State committee must be nominated at the primary election. I was induced by Mr. MORGAN and a number of his friends to become a candidate for State committeeman and was selected at the primary election. Since that time I have taken an active part in each of his congressional campaigns and became well acquainted with his work as a Member of Congress and his private life as a citizen of our State. Politically he was a Republican, but after his election he was truly a representative of the people of his district, State, and Nation. He did not carry politics into his high office as a Member of Congress, but at all times honestly, faithfully, and fearlessly endeavored to represent the citizens of the Nation to the best of his knowledge, skill, and understanding. I feel that this is the highest compliment that may be paid to my good friend and late fellow-townsman. I appreciate very much the kind remarks of his many friends expressed upon the floor of this House to-day, and I may say that the kind eulogies in memory of his efficient service will be appreciated by every citizen of his district, as well as the citizens of the State and the Nation who informed themselves upon his public career.

In politics, as in private life, he believed in dealing fairly and justly with every citizen. He would respond as promptly to the call of the most humble citizen of his State as he would to the most powerful and influential member of his own party. During the World War he advocated such measures as were proposed by the President to make the American Army the most efficient army engaged in the great struggle for the rights of humanity. After the armistice was signed, he worked diligently to secure the discharge of all soldiers engaged in the agricultural enterprise in order that they might return to their homes and carry on their former avocations. He was also a strong advocate of the soldiers' land bill, which, in substance, later became one of the component parts of the bill for the relief of American soldiers engaged in the World War. He did this purely from the standpoint of an American citizen and statesman and in justice to our noble soldiers who so valiantly stood by the American Government in the greatest struggle ever known to the world.

Mr. MORGAN was a Christian gentleman. He was a member of the Christian Church and led a truly pure and Christian life. We believe that from what we know of him, and from what his many friends have said concerning him, that his life, public and private, may be expressed in the beautiful lines of the poet who said:

> Do your work as well,
> Both the unseen and the seen,
> Make the house where God may dwell
> Beautiful, entire, and clean.

It was his wish that he might be buried at Oklahoma City, the home of his only son, Porter H. Morgan; so in accordance with his wishes, at Oklahoma City on July 10, 1920, we consigned his dust to dust, and commended his spirit to God who gave it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In accordance with the resolution previously adopted the House stands adjourned.

Accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until to-morrow, Monday, February 28, 1921, at 11 o'clock a. m.

SENATE.

MONDAY, February 28, 1921.

(Legislative day of Thursday, February 24, 1921.)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I make the point of no quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	McLean	Smith, Md.
Ball	Gore	McNary	Smith, S. C.
Beckham	Gronna	Moses	Smoot
Borah	Hale	Myers	Spencer
Brandegee	Harris	Nelson	Stanley
Calder	Harrison	New	Sterling
Capper	Heflin	Norris	Sutherland
Chamberlain	Henderson	Overman	Swanson
Colt	Hitchcock	Owen	Thomas
Culberson	Jones, N. Mex.	Page	Townsend
Cummins	Jones, Wash.	Phelan	Trammell
Curtis	Kellogg	Phipps	Underwood
Dial	Kendrick	Pittman	Wadsworth
Dillingham	Kenyon	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Edge	Keyes	Pomerene	Walsh, Mont.
Elkins	King	Ransdell	Warren
Fernald	Kirby	Reed	Watson
Fletcher	Knox	Robinson	Williams
France	La Follette	Sheppard	Willis
Frelinghuysen	Lenroot	Shields	Wolcott
Gay	Lodge	Simmons
Gerry	McCumber	Smith, Ariz.
Glass	McKellar	Smith, Ga.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Eighty-nine Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

GIFT OF SILVER VASE TO VICE PRESIDENT.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, the Sixty-sixth Congress is drawing to its close. For eight years, sir, you have presided over the deliberations of the Senate. By the passage of time and the processes of election you will leave the chair on the 4th of March.

It is the desire of the Senate to manifest in something more than a formal resolution the personal regret which all of us feel at the fact that we are about to separate. Separation in the brief life allotted to us here always has an element of sadness. But I desire—and I am sure I am speaking in behalf of all the Senators—to express to you the affection that we feel for you, our sense of your unvarying kindness to each one of us, the thoroughly human way in which you have always dealt with us individually, and we wish that you should take with you a symbol of our feelings. We know that you are not going to forget us, any more than we shall forget you and all our many pleasant relations over a period of great strain and great events; but we have felt that some gift, an inanimate object, might serve from time to time, when your eye rested upon it, to remind you of the feeling that we all have and the regret that we all feel personally that the hour of parting is so close at hand.

In behalf of the Senate—and I know that the leader on the other side will express the same feeling—we all desire to give you every good wish in the future, and that you should know that you take with you our affection, our hopes for your happiness and prosperity, and, although I need not express a hope on this, that you will not forget the many days we have spent together in the service of our common and beloved country.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, the fates called you to preside over the Senate of the United States in the most tumultuous and dangerous era of the world's affairs, and I may say, I think, without contradiction, in a time when matters of moment before the Senate were as great, if not greater, than those that ever came before the Senate previously in the history of the country.

You served your country well in this trying era. You leave here with the respect and confidence of your colleagues who have served with you in the Senate. The gift that your friends here ask you to take home with you is not presented to you for its intrinsic value; we ask you to take this token home with you as a reminder always of the love and the friendship and the confidence of the men who served with you during this great era embracing your incumbency of the office of Vice President of the United States.

May happiness, success, and good fortune be with you always is the wish of the friends you leave behind you.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators, I can hardly be expected to voice the emotions of this moment. I do not forget the day when I came to you, when, as a tumultous Indiana politician I looked askance upon the Senate of the United States, and when, I fear, the Senate of the United States wondered what the American people meant in such a choice as they had made.

This has been a great school for me; a school of my old age. It has taught me that there is not a man in this body who is not a double man; a man who has a brain that he devotes exclusively to the determination of the great problems which from time to time confront the deliberations of this body; but underneath that man of brain there is another man, a man of heart; and I have found in the eight years of deliberations with the United States Senate that—

> The heart is wiser than the intellect
> And works with swifter hands and surer feet
> Toward wise conclusions.

There was a time in my life when I thought I would like to be a great man; when I hoped that in some mysterious way I could listen to the plaudits of the multitudes and plume myself upon the accomplishment of some great purpose for mankind. I have learned here to long for that no longer; to have but one supreme desire; that as the days are coming closer and closer when I shall put aside the purple curtains of twilight and go out I know not whither; but I hope without fear I can so live the days to come as to keep what I think I have—the friendship of the Senators of the United States. Others may have what they will, but for me—may I call you brethren?—but for me, brethren, I shall not forget your generosity, your patience, your overlooking of the faults and foibles of a too often ill-tempered man. I shall not forget the friendly handclasp nor the generous elbow touch of humanity. I shall go remembering all these generous years and be content in the thought that if I can not have greatness I may yet retain friendship.

I shall take this, your generous gift, with me out to Indiana. The people of Indiana will think it is a loving cup. They will imagine that it has been presented to me as a memorial of the eighteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States. [Laughter.] If it be such, it will meet with the approval of most of the people of Indiana, but it will be a source of sincere regret to some, I know, that you did not fill it up. [Laughter.]

Senators, as all evil comes to an end, so all good times cease. Ours has ended. May the man who takes my place learn to know that beneath the bitterness of partisan controversy in the United States Senate there is a warm, human, loving heart that seeks, after all, only friendship and good will. I thank you. [Prolonged applause on the floor and in the galleries, Senators rising in their places.]

REFERENCE OF INDIAN CLAIMS TO THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of Order of Business 781, being the bill (H. R. 10105) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, consider, and adjudicate claims which the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Cherokee, Creek, and Seminole Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes. The bill is a local one relating to Oklahoma, and I do not think it will take over two minutes to pass it. If it leads to any debate, I will withdraw the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, if it is understood that an amendment which I intend to propose shall be agreed to—and I understand the amendment is agreeable to those who are interested in the proposed legislation—I shall have no objection.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs with amendments.

The first amendment was, on page 1, line 6, after the words "with the," to strike out "Choctaw, Chickasaw"; and, in line 9, after the word "said," to strike out "Choctaw, Chickasaw," so as to read:

That jurisdiction be, and is hereby, conferred upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, consider, and adjudicate any and all claims arising under or growing out of any treaty stipulation or agreement of the United States with the Cherokee, Creek, or Seminole Indian Nations or Tribes, or any act of Congress, in relation to Indian affairs, which said Cherokee, Creek, or Seminole Indian Nations or Tribes may have against the United States, and which claims have not heretofore been determined or adjudicated.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, in view of an agreement which has been reached amongst Senators concerning the matter, I ask the Senate to disagree to the amendment striking out the words "Choctaw, Chickasaw."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment reported by the committee.

The amendment was rejected.

The next amendment of the Committee on Indian Affairs was, on page 2, line 7, after the words "United States," to insert the following proviso:

Provided further, however, That the provisions of this act shall not be construed to confer jurisdiction upon the court to hear, examine, consider, and adjudicate any balance claimed to be due on the so-called Loyal Creek claim, or any amount claimed to be due to equalize allotments among members of the Five Civilized Tribes.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HARRISON. I desire to offer an amendment, which I understand is agreeable to the parties interested.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Mississippi will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 2, after line 17, it is proposed to insert a new paragraph, as follows:

Mississippi Choctaws, so called, composed of all those certified Choctaw Indians and their descendants heretofore enrolled, a roll thereof to be made up under the direction of the court, to whom privileges were granted and guaranteed under any provision of the treaty of 1830, east or west of the Mississippi River as the case may be, acting together or separately as one or two bodies as they may be advised, shall have the status of a nation or tribe for all purposes under this act, judgment in such case to be rendered in favor of the individual claimant to whom same equitably belongs, in whole or part: Provided, That the petition or petitions on their part shall be verified by the attorney or attorneys employed by them.

Mr. GORE. I shall offer no objection to the amendment, but will allow it to go to conference.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

The amendment reported by the committee to amend the title was rejected.

PANAMA RAILROAD CO.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Interoceanic Canals:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the Seventy-first Annual Report of the Board of Directors of the Panama Railroad Co. for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
28 February, 1921.

CREDENTIALS.

Mr. MCNARY presented a certificate of the governor of Oregon certifying to the election of ROBERT N. STANFIELD as a United States Senator for the term beginning March 4, 1921, which was read and ordered to be filed, as follows:

STATE OF OREGON,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

(Certificate of election.)

To all to whom these presents shall come, greeting:

Know ye that it appearing from the official canvass of the vote cast at the general election held within and for the State of Oregon on Tuesday, the 2d day of November, A. D. 1920, that ROBERT N. STANFIELD, of Multnomah County, State of Oregon, received the highest number of votes cast for the office of United States Senator in Congress at said general election: Now, therefore,

I, W. T. Vinton, governor of the State of Oregon, by virtue of the authority vested in me under the laws of the State of Oregon, do hereby grant this certificate of election and declare said ROBERT N. STANFIELD, of Multnomah County, State of Oregon, to be duly elected to the office of United States Senator in Congress of the State of Oregon for the term of six years, beginning March 4, A. D. 1921.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the State of Oregon to be hereunto affixed.

Done at the capitol, at Salem, Oreg., this 29th day of November, A. D. 1920.

W. T. VINTON, Governor.

By the governor:
[SEAL.]

SAM R. KOZER,
Secretary of State.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hemstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15943) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, agreed to the conference asked for by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. ANTHONY, Mr. CRAMTON, and Mr. SISSON were appointed managers of the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

H. R. 13944. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war; and

H. R. 14063. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15543) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes; that it had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 29, 30, 34, 37, 38, 46, 59, 63, 76, 80, 95, 98, 99, and 114 to the bill; that it had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 82, 112, and 113, and had agreed to each thereof with an amendment; and that it insisted on its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 58.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had appointed, additional to those previously appointed, Mr. SLEMP and Mr. DENT as managers of the conference on the part of the House on the bill (H. R. 15943) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 7775. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 9281. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 10515. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 11554. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 14461. An act to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. TOWNSEND (for Mr. NEWBERRY) presented memorials of sundry citizens of Highland Park, Milan, Detroit, Pontiac, Grand Rapids, Royal Oak, Houghton, Benton Harbor, Owosso, Otsego, Plymouth, Vassar, and Marquette, all in the State of Michigan, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation creating a department of education, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also (for Mr. NEWBERRY) presented telegrams in the nature of petitions of sundry American Legion Posts of Pontiac, Port Huron, Houghton, Saginaw, Escanaba, Adrian, Grand Rapids, Ortonville, St. Clair, Royal Oak, Stanton, Alpena, Lapeer, Wakefield, Jackson, Ishpeming, Frankenmuth, Boyne City, Lake Linden, Capac, Ludington, St. Louis, Jackson, Mackinaw City, Lake Odessa, Battle Creek, Portland, Ypsilanti, Grand Haven, Ann Arbor, Sault Ste. Marie, Tecumseh, and Marcellus, all in the State of Michigan, favoring the passage of the so-called adjusted compensation bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also (for Mr. NEWBERRY) presented a resolution of Phillips-Elliot-Hodges Post, No. 22, American Legion, of Saginaw, Mich., protesting against remission of the war debts of France and the Allies, and also a loan of $2,000,000,000 to Germany for the reestablishment of trade relations, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also (for Mr. NEWBERRY) presented a petition of the pastor and trustees of Zions Evangelical Church, of Mount Clemens, Mich., protesting against the presence and action of French colonial troops in the occupied zone of the Rhine, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also (for Mr. NEWBERRY) presented a petition of sundry members of Frenchtown Grange, No. 749, of Monroe, Mich., favoring the passage of the truth-in-fabric bill, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. BALL presented memorials of Anna G. Walsh and Mrs. William Green, of Wilmington, Del., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation creating a department of education, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. CAPPER presented a telegram in the nature of a petition of the Southern Association of Dyers and Cleaners, of Birmingham, Ala., favoring the passage of the truth-in-fabric bill, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a petition of Somerset County Pomono Grange, No. 39, of the State of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit gambling in grain products, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. MYERS presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Park County, Mont., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation increasing the tariff duty on wrapper tobacco, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. MOSES presented a resolution of the Retail Jewelers' Association of Manchester, N. H., favoring a turnover sales tax of 1 per cent, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. PHIPPS presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Colorado, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs, as follows:

Senate Joint Memorial 1, by Senators Fairfield, King, and Bashor.

To the Hon. Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America; the Hon. Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War; the Congress of the United States, and more particularly to the Members of Congress from Colorado, the General Assembly of the State of Colorado respectfully represents:

Whereas we are informed that one Frank Zimmer, a citizen of this State, together with a companion in arms, both of whom are veterans of the American Expeditionary Forces in the World War, and who reenlisted for service in Germany, are now under arrest by German authorities at Eberbach, Germany, charged with assault as the result of their attempt to arrest Grover C. Bergdoll, the wealthy draft evader and slacker; and

Whereas the flagrant manner in which said Bergdoll has used his money and influence to flaunt his disrespect of American authority and military regulations before the world has focused the attention of our citizens and all the civilized world upon his case, making his recapture and punishment a test of our sovereign powers and our efficiency in law enforcement; and

Whereas said Bergdoll is a criminal and a fugitive from justice, and efforts to bring him to justice should be applauded and rewarded rather than disapproved and punished: Now, therefore,

Your memorialists, the senate and house of representatives of the Twenty-third General Assembly of the State of Colorado, do respectfully request and urge that the United States Government take such action as may be found necessary to secure the release of those veterans and patriots who are now detained by German authority upon German soil and to secure their safe return to American authority.

It is directed that this memorial be entered in the records of the general assembly, and that copies hereof be forwarded by the secretary of state to the President of the United States, the Secretary of War, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and each of the Members of Congress from Colorado.

EARL COOLEY,
President of the Senate.
N. N. MCLEAN,
Secretary of the Senate.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS.

Bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. FLETCHER:

A bill (S. 5041) to amend section 206 (C) of an act entitled "An act to provide for the termination of Federal control of railroads and systems of transportation; to provide for the settlement of disputes between carriers and their employees; to further amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, as amended; and for other purposes," approved February 28, 1920; to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

By Mr. DIAL:

A bill (S. 5042) to require judges appointed under authority of the United States to devote their entire time to the duties of a judge; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. PITTMAN:

A bill (S. 5043) to aid in the reclamation of lands in the bed of Winnemucca Lake, in the State of Nevada, to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. SMITH of South Carolina:

A bill (S. 5044) granting the consent of Congress for the construction of a bridge across the Savannah River near Haileys Ferry, and between the counties of Anderson, S. C., and Hart, Ga.; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mr. McLEAN:

A joint resolutuion (S. J. Res. 263) authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to designate depositaries of public moneys in foreign countries and in the Territories and insular possessions of the United States; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

STREET RAILWAYS IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. POMERENE, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 4973) to amend the provisions of an act relating to certain railway corporations owning or operating street railways in the District of Columbia, approved June 5, 1905, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 822) thereon.

HEARINGS BY COMMITTEE ON STANDARDS, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES.

Mr. REED submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 467), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-sixth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer at a cost not exceeding $1.25 per printed page to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on February 27, 1921, approved and signed bills and a joint resolution of the following titles:

S. 4436. An act to amend the act approved December 23, 1913, known as the Federal reserve act;

S. 4682. An act to amend section 74 of the Judicial Code, as amended;

S. 4683. An act to amend section 11 (m) of the act approved December 23, 1913, known as the Federal reserve act, as amended by the acts approved September 7, 1916, and March 3, 1919;

S. 4897. An act to amend section 9 of an act entitled "An act to define, regulate, and punish trading with the enemy, and for other purposes," approved October 6, 1917, as amended; and

S. J. Res. 161. Joint resolution to exempt the New York State Barge Canal from the provisions of the transportation act, 1920, and for other purposes.

EMERGENCY TARIFF—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report on the emergency tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to consider the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15275) imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

The reading clerk read the conference report, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15275) imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 10, 23, and 24.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 19, 20, and 21, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 1: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert "35"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert a comma and the following: "except rice cleaned for use in the manufacture of canned foods, on which the rate of duty shall be 1 cent per pound"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 5: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 5, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert a semicolon and the following: "olive, 40 cents per gallon in bulk, 50 cents per gallon in containers of less than 5 gallons"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 17: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 17, and agree to the same with an amedment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"19. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75°, one and sixteen one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscopic test, four one-hundredths of 1 cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing not above 40°, 24 per cent ad valorem; testing above 40° and not above 56°, 3½ cents per gallon; testing above 56°, 7 cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to polariscopic test."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"20. Butter, and substitutes therefor, 6 cents per pound."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 22: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 22, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"24. Wrapper tobacco, and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per cent of wrapper tobacco, and all leaf tobacco the product of two or more countries or dependencies when mixed or packed together, if unstemmed, $2.35 per pound; if stemmed, $3 per pound; filler tobacco not specially provided for in this section, if unstemmed, 35 cents per pound; if stemmed, 50 cents per pound.

"The term wrapper tobacco as used in this section means that quality of leaf tobacco which has the requisite color, texture, and burn, and is of sufficient size for cigar wrappers, and the term filler tobacco means all other leaf tobacco."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 25: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 25, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"25. Apples, 30 cents per bushel."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 26: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 26, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"26. Cherries in a raw state, preserved in brine or otherwise, 3 cents per pound."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 27: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"27. Olives, in solution, 25 cents per gallon; olives not in solution, 3 cents per pound."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 28: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 28, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the Senate amendment insert the following: "16 and 18"; and the Senate agree to the same.

BOIES PENROSE,
P. J. MCCUMBER,
REED SMOOT,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

J. W. FORDNEY,
WM. R. GREEN,
NICHOLAS LONGWORTH,
Managers on the part of the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, a very few changes have been made in the bill under the conference report. The first amendment is in relation to wheat, on which as the bill passed the Senate a duty of 40 cents a bushel was imposed. That has been reduced to 35 cents.

The proposed duty on olive oil has been reduced from 50 cents to 40 cents per gallon in bulk, and from 70 to 50 cents per gallon in containers of less than 5 gallons.

The duty on frozen meat has been made 2 cents.

On sugar the duty has been reduced to bring the rate down to not to exceed 2 cents per pound. I think that will make the rate $1.60 per hundred on Cuban sugar.

The duty on butter has been reduced from 8 cents to 6 cents a pound, and the duty on apples has been changed so as to read "30 cents a bushel," the provision of the bill as passed by the Senate proposing a duty in reference to apples from Canada of 30 cents a box. All reference to Canada has been stricken out, so that the duty is 30 cents a bushel from any country.

As the bill passed the Senate a duty of 4 cents a pound was imposed on cherries. That has been reduced to 3 cents a pound.

The items I have mentioned substantially cover the changes made by the conference report.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I have not had an opportunity to examine the report, but, as I understand, there was some change made in the proposed tariff on sugar as the bill passed the Senate. Will the Senator kindly explain what the reduction is now under the conference report?

Mr. McCUMBER. The rate on sugar is reduced so that Cuban sugar now will be taxed about $1.60 a hundred, instead of 2 cents, and the reduction brings it down to 2 cents as the maximum amount per pound.

Mr. POMERENE. How much is that above the tariff under the present law?

Mr. McCUMBER. The tariff under the present law, I believe, is about 1 cent.

Mr. FLETCHER. May I ask the Senator whether it is true, according to his understanding, that sugar has gone up within the past week 2 cents a pound?

Mr. McCUMBER. I have not kept track of the market reports.

Mr. FLETCHER. I understand that is the case; that the market has already advanced 2 cents in contemplation of this proposed act.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. McCUMBER. I yield the floor.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I do not desire to detain the Senate long in a discussion of the conference report upon the emergency tariff bill; but I think it would be dereliction in duty if this side of the Chamber should permit that report to come to a vote without further discussion.

The conference report makes some slight reductions in the duties imposed in the bill as it passed the Senate; but these reductions are only slight, and, in the main, the bill is just what it was when the Senate passed it. Practically all of the Senate amendments were retained. There was, however, one very striking and very significant exception. The conferees struck out bodily the Senate amendment imposing a duty of 15 per cent upon hides. This, I believe, is the only Senate amendment that was stricken from the bill altogether.

The duty of 15 per cent on hides is one of the few duties imposed in this bill as it passed the Senate which might have been of considerable help to the stock raisers of this country, provided always the packers had not seen fit to rob them of such benefits as otherwise would have accrued from that duty. I say this duty might have been of considerable value to the stock raisers of the country because the importations of hides in the past few months—I might say during the past six months—have been far greater, relatively speaking, than the importations of any of the other commodities upon which duties are imposed in this measure.

It is well understood that the value of a duty upon any product depends upon whether or not there are importations of that product and upon the volume of those importations. Therefore, I say that this duty which was stricken out by the conferees because of the large importations of the commodity affected might have been of real value to the farmers.

Why under these circumstances was it stricken out? I have been unable to ascertain, except for the reason, as I understand it, that the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] desired a duty upon manufactured leather to compensate its producers for the increased cost of their raw material, and in drawing his amendment, which was adopted by the Senate, he made a mistake, in that while he intended to increase the present duty upon manufactured leather, which is 30 per cent under existing law, to the extent of 10 per cent, thereby making that duty 40 per cent, he so drafted the amendment that it reduced the present duty from 30 per cent to 10 per cent. Because of that situation the conferees struck out both the Senate amendment and the House provision imposing a duty of 15 per cent on hides, which duty, as I say, might have been of material value to the stock raisers of the country.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, if I may ask the Senator a question, he does not desire the Senate to understand that this which he has mentioned was the only thing upon which the conferees acted in striking out this amendment?

Mr. SIMMONS. No; of course I would not go quite that far. There may have been some opposition to the duty on hides per se.

Mr. McCUMBER. May I give the reason, if the Senator was not there all the time? The principal reason urged by the House members was that the packers, who are also tanners, always bought their hides with the cattle, and of course there was no duty therefore upon the home hides, while the independent tanners must always buy their hides and import them, and that this would give an advantage to the packers in the matter of tanning their own hides. That was the principal reason insisted upon by the House members. I am not going into the argument as to the pros and cons of it, but I want the Senate to have a clear understanding of the two propositions that the House insisted upon as reasons for their objecting to the Senate amendment.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield to the Senator. I yield because I think this is a very important matter.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I certainly agree with the Senator from North Carolina. It is a very important matter, and I should like to have anyone who is able to do so explain the difference between this duty upon hides, in its operation along the lines which have just been suggested by the Senator from North Dakota, and the duty upon wool.

When sheep are sold in the market, and bought by the packers, there is quite a recognition of the difference in value between the price of the pelt without the wool and with the wool, whether the fleece has been shorn or not. It seems to me that the principle in the one case is precisely the same as in the other. Everyone recognizes that the price of hides has much to do with the price of cattle, and especially that class of cattle which is known as tanners and which constitutes a very large proportion of the cattle which find their way into the general markets of the country.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. That was practically the position taken by the Senate conferees. They insisted that when the packer bought cattle he bought hide and all, and if hides were more valuable because of this protection he paid more for the cattle and paid more for the hide; therefore their reasons for rejecting it upon the ground that it placed an extra tax upon those who import it did not seem to us to be sound. Nevertheless they insisted, and with that insistence upon this proposition and their insistence upon the other proposition, just mentioned by the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS], it was necessary, in order to get an agreement, for a short period at least, that we leave out the hide proposition entirely.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. THOMAS. It seems to me, from a very cursory examination of the conference report, that in regard to leather the compensatory duty is going to the manufacturer, while in respect to hides that duty was not granted.

Mr. McCUMBER. There was much more insistence upon the other feature by the House conferees.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, this duty of 15 per cent on hides is practically everything this bill conceded to the cattle raisers of the country, some Senators, on this side of the Chamber, being allured by that provision of the bill probably more than by any other in it, voted for the measure. The Senate understood and the Senate conferees understood, as well as the House understood and the House conferees understood, the effect of the duty upon hides. We knew, when we fixed this duty, whether we were imposing the duty for the benefit of the packers or for the benefit of the cattle raiser. Of course it is possible always for these trusts to cheat the people out of what they are entitled to; that has to be taken into consideration. But we had taken all those matters into consideration when we passed the bill, and the Senate had deliberately decided that if this emergency tariff bill was to be passed, this one provision in favor of the cattle raisers of the country should be an integral part of it.

I, as well as the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER], heard the discussion in conference. I heard some talk there about the packers robbing the cattle raisers of the benefit of this duty. I take it that if that had been the only objection made by the conferees on the part of the House, the conferees on the part of the Senate would never have yielded on this provision of the bill.

The truth is, Mr. President, in the conferences there was far more discussion of the effect upon the measure of the mistake which has been made by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] in introducing his amendment for a 10 per cent additional compensatory duty for the manufacturers by leaving out the very important word "additional." The Senator from Massachusetts asked that the duty be raised to a point where it would have been nearly three times the duty upon the raw material. He made a mistake. The conferees said, "We can not correct that mistake without injustice to the manufacturer of the raw product." But the conferees were wrong, Mr. President. The conferees had the power to strike out the amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts, and that would have left the duty of 30 per cent given under existing law upon the manufactures of leather, or twice as high a duty as that imposed upon the raw material in the Senate amendment.

Here we have a conference committee slaughtering one of the most important provisions of a bill, because they are unable, by reason of a mistake, to grant to the manufacturers of that raw material a compensatory duty of 300 per cent instead of 200 per cent. That is the secret of the whole business, and nothing illustrates better the principle which runs through this bill, and all "protective" tariff bills, of giving to the manufacturer by way of a "compensatory" duty an additional protective rate greater than is given to the producer of his raw material.

I undertake to say, Mr. President, that if you give this bill, as it passed the Senate and House and as it was acted upon by the conferees, a close scrutiny and analysis, you will find that it contains that vicious discrimination to be found in all of our "protective" tariff legislation in favor of the manufacturers, and that even in passing a bill ostensibly for the purpose of helping the farmer the farmer's interest as well as that of the consumer is made secondary to that of the manufacturers.

Mr. President, I do not recall, since I have been connected with tariff legislation, a more flagrant miscarriage of justice than was perpetuated by the conferees in the slaughter of this Senate amendment with reference to hides, especially when you consider the chief purpose and reason for that slaughter.

I have no doubt, after hearing the discussions in the conference, that if the matter could have been so adjusted under the rules that the manufacturers of these hides could have secured 300 per cent compensatory duty instead of 200 per cent, the duty on hides would have remained in the bill. But I do not wish to devote any more time to that.

The conferees somewhat reduced the Senate increase in the duty on Sumatra wrapper tobacco, grown principally in Connecticut and Massachusetts, I believe, and grown there under cover. They reduced the additional duty on Sumatra tobacco from $1 a pound to 50 cents a pound, still leaving a duty of $3 a pound upon unstemmed Sumatra wrapper tobacco. They retained 50 cents per pound of the proposed increase in this duty in the face of the fact that one of the conferees on the part of the House had in his possession information, and communicated that fact to the conferees, that on that very day unstemmed Sumatra tobacco was selling at the rate of $5 a pound in the markets of this country.

An emergency tariff, indeed! A tariff ostensively to help the farmer against an abnormal depreciation in the prices of his product; a tariff intended and calculated, it is claimed, to lift up the prices of agricultural products to a fairly remunerative price level! Instead of striking out that additional duty proposed, when it was brought to the attention of the conferees that the price of this agricultural product had advanced to the unheard of figures of $5 a pound, they retained one-half of it, and thereby added 50 cents per pound to the already existing duty of $2.50 a pound to help out the distressed producers of this Connecticut product.

Now, a word upon sugar. As I said before, there are not many provisions in this bill which can be of any benefit to the farmer or producer, because there are either no importations, or the importations are so negligible that the duty upon them will not affect the price of the domestic product, notably so in the case of corn; notably so in the case of the ordinary type of tobacco grown in this country; notably the case with the growers of the 12,000,000 bales of short-staple cotton in this country. It can not be of any help to the men raising these products, not only because imports are negligible but because of our large excess production and heavy exports placing prices upon an export basis.

The duties that are imposed on these products in the bill for the benefit of the farmer in most instances are fake duties. They are such transparent frauds that they deceive no one except the overcredulous. There are some of them, however, not many of them, that are not fake duties. There are a few of the duties imposed in the bill that will increase the domestic price of the commodity. Sugar is one of those items. No one can question the fact that on account of the vast importations of sugar into the country, on account of the fact that we do not raise all the sugar we consume, but only about half as much, that any duty imposed on sugar will immediately raise the price of all the sugar produced in the United States as well as the price of the imported sugar at the port of entry to the extent of the duty.

On the Finance Committee are some of the strongest friends of the sugar industry in this body, possessed of full information, and yet deliberately that committee added sugar to the items contained in the bill and fixed the duty at 3 cents a pound. When the bill came to the Senate there was no suggestion or intimation that the duty be changed, that it was excessive, that it should be reduced to a reasonable figure, until the rapid-fire assaults of this side of the Chamber against the iniquity of imposing this additional tax upon this product in the interest of the cane and beet producers and sugar refiners of the country, thereby placing a tax of $300,000,000 every year upon the breakfast table of the poor and the rich alike. When that situation was fully developed, when the shocking wrongs of this increased protection to this product were exposed an amendment was proposed by the committee reducing the annual burden to be placed upon the breakfast table from $300,000,000 a year to $100,000,000 a year.

Then the matter went to conference, and when it got into conference the duty on sugar was a little bit further reduced, but only a little bit. Cuban sugar under the bill would have paid 2 cents additional, but was reduced in conference to 1.60 cents, though the rate remains at 2 cents per pound on all other sugar. Why was that reduction made in conference? Here is one of the most significant things about the whole business, a fact that I desire to impress upon the minds of Senators. I will tell why this sugar duty was reduced. It was not because there was any change of heart on the part of the protectionists of the Republican Party represented on that conference committee, either on the part of the House or the Senate, but because the Republican conferees on the part of the House said, "The Members of the House are getting restless—alarmed—over the thought of increasing duties much beyond the Payne-Aldrich rates," and expressed doubt if the Senate amendment rates much in excess of those fixed by the Payne-Aldrich Act were adopted by the conferees whether the bill could be put through the House.

Not only in the case of sugar, but also in the case of other commodities added by the Senate, was this suggestion made by the House conferees, spokesmen as they were of a body that only a few weeks ago wrote into this bill duties ranging from 20 to 300 per cent higher than those fixed by the Payne-Aldrich bill. My fellow Senators, think of the House conferees under these circumstances, when these Senate amendments were under consideration, with uplifted hands, appealing to the Senate conferees to pull down their rates nearer to the basis of the Payne-Aldrich enactment.

But one inference can be drawn from this ludicrous spectacle, and that is that since the House passed the bill fixing the rates from 20 to 300 per cent in excess of the Payne-Aldrich bill, they have heard from home—heard from the people, heard from an indignant press speaking in behalf of the millions of consumers of these products.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. SIMMONS. In just a moment. Let me complete this thought.

Now they are asking for a reduction of the Senate rates, which were no higher than, in fact not as high as, the House rates, down to the level of the Payne-Aldrich bill. Oh, Senators, when I sat there and listened to those appeals I could not help smiling when the thought came to me, "If you could only get hold of the House rates"—they were beyond their reach because they were not in conference—"if you could only get hold of the House rates! Now that the fear of the people has been put into your hearts, how you would slash those rates!" It is a mighty good thing to hear from the people occasionally, and the people have been heard from in this matter. And in response we have the House conferees trying to reduce those Senate rates in excess of those of the Payne-Aldrich bill.

I now yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator said no friend of the amendment made a protest against it until it was discussed upon the Democratic side of the Chamber. I think I told the Senator the day the bill was reported that I would not support the amendment. I know I told the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] that I would not support the amendment as it was reported to the Senate, referring to the sugar schedule.

Mr. THOMAS. That is correct.

Mr. SMOOT. I thought all Senators understood it. I have not heard from the people, I have not heard from the press, and I think the Senator ought to be perfectly fair.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am anxious to be fair to the Senator. I have no recollection of the Senator saying anything of that kind to me, but I will say I think the Senator from Utah takes a very much saner view of these matters than a good many of his Republican colleagues. I wish to say that I have not found the Senator, in connection with the tariff levies, ready to go to the extreme limit that others have gone.

Mr. President, there was some little reduction in conference of the duty on butter, cheese and cheese substitutes, and condensed milk. I do not think these reductions amount to very much, in view of the fact that we export several hundred times more of those products, speaking of them as an aggregate quantity, than we import.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I interrupt in connection with the Senator's argument with reference to the operations of the bill? It seems to me somewhat irritated by the condition as to milk, and not only as to sugar, which, as I understand, has advanced 2 cents a pound in the last week in contemplation of the passage of the pending measure. Whereas the farmer, the dairyman, is getting no increase in the price of his milk, my information is, and it is quite reliable, that condensed milk has advanced over 2 cents a pound within the last week or 10 days. That is quite an item to the consumers of the country, and it is done merely in contemplation of what this measure provides.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am not at all surprised at the feeling of the Senator. I was told this morning that sugar had, as the Senator says, advanced 2 cents a pound, and I am not surprised to hear of the other advances the Senator mentions.

Mr. SMOOT. Two cents a pound?

Mr. SIMMONS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. FLETCHER. That is in the retail market.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not know what the retail market is. The sugar market on Saturday disclosed that Cuban sugar had advanced about one-quarter of a cent a pound from its price when the bill was introduced to the figure at which it sold last Saturday. Of course, when you talk about the retailer, you can not touch him. The retailer has too many votes and the retailer is the one who has been profiteering upon the people of the United States.

Mr. THOMAS. We can not touch the retailer, but the retailer will touch the consumer all right.

Mr. SMOOT. Undoubtedly.

Mr. FLETCHER. The trouble is that the consumer has nothing to do with what goes on in Cuba or what goes on with the refiners and that sort of thing. He does not know about that. He can not keep up with that. But he does know when he goes to market and the groceryman charges him 2 more cents to-day than he charged him on yesterday; he not only understands that but he begins to feel it after a while. The same is true in reference to condensed milk.

Mr. SMOOT. I have not bought any sugar at retail, so I do not know what the price is, but I do know when we began to discuss the question there were places retailing sugar for 8 cents a pound; I mean the Piggly-Wigglies or whatever they call them. Their advertisements were in the paper. The regular grocers were selling sugar at 8½ cents a pound. I do not know what it is to-day, but I can find out in a few moments; but if anyone is selling sugar at a 2 cent per pound increase, it is not because the price of sugar has been advanced by the refiner or by those who produce beet sugar in the West.

Mr. FLETCHER. I find in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of Saturday, in the discussion in the House, that Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY had this to say:

> Some of them have just phoned me this morning stating that, although sugar was selling at the Piggly-Wiggly stores in this city, which are large distributors of sugar, three days ago for $7.35 a hundred, this morning, with this report pending and the certainty of its passage, the price of sugar has been increased to $9 per hundred pounds.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course, it was not selling at the Piggly-Wiggly stores at $7.35 at any time. It did sell there for a while at 8 cents a pound, when they were making the run on sugar. The regular price of sugar was 8½ cents anywhere else. In fact, I bought a sack of it, and had to pay $8.75. If they are selling it at 2 cents a pound more, there is no excuse other than profiteering on the part of the man who sells the sugar.

Mr. SIMMONS. As I have said, most of the duties imposed in this bill will not increase the price of the products upon which they are to be levied, supposedly in behalf of the producer, and with a view of raising those prices to a point where production would be profitable.

But there are many of them, as I have said heretofore, which will have the undoubted effect of increasing the cost of these products, in some instances to an unreasonable extent, to the consumer without material, or, at least, to anything like the same extent benefiting the producer.

Mr. President, the Republican Party came into power on a distinct promise to the people, namely, that it would immediately, without delay, by every instrumentality in its power reduce the high cost of living that had grown to be one of the greatest evils that confronted and oppressed the people. There was a crying demand when the World War was over that such legislation be enacted and such administrative measures be pursued as were intended and calculated to bring about that result. If the Republican Party has passed one single act since it came into power in Congress which is intended or calculated to reduce the high cost of living in this country, I have never heard of it, and I would be glad to be advised if it is claimed that there has been any such legislation.

On the contrary, Mr. President, the very first piece of positive affirmative legislation offered by the Republican Party that could affect and would affect the prices of products, especially the necessaries of life, the very first measure of that kind which is presented here is a measure not by implication intended to raise prices, but by express admission and proud avowal upon the floor of the Senate is proclaimed as a measure intended to increase and advance the prices, not only of a number of necessary staple food products but of the clothing which the people wear.

A striking and astonishing thing about this bill, Mr. President, is that most of the duties it levies for this ostensible purpose which will or can be effective in raising prices are duties granting additional protection to industries that really need no additional protection, giving protection to industries that are either controlled by a trust or whose product is now selling higher than it sold for before the war. Take sugar, for instance. It is deliberately proposed in this bill to increase the duty on sugar—in the interest of the cane and beet sugar producers and the sugar refiners, in order to add to the producers' profits in the sale of this essential of life—and sugar is an essential of life, already artificially enhanced in price by what has always been regarded as a high protective rate. It is deliberately proposed that this necessity of life, now selling far beyond what it sold for in prewar times, be further artificially increased in the interest of the refiners as well as producers of the cane and beet, thereby, as I said, laying by legislation an additional burden of $100,000,000 a year upon the breakfast tables of 25,000,000 American households.

But the Republican majority have not stopped there. The Senate put in this bill an amendment which the conferees have not touched, imposing a duty of 2 cents a pound on fresh and frozen meats imported into this country. It is admitted that large quantities of frozen meat were imported last year from Argentina. This duty will undoubtedly be effective; if it is not effective in helping the cattle growers and the meat raisers, it will be effective in helping the meat packers; it will furnish them an excuse and that is all they want for raising their prices. Under any and all conditions it is absolutely certain, I say to the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES], that if this duty remains in the bill, as it will if the conference report is agreed to, the packers will make it the excuse for adding that much at least to the price of their products. Every Senator here knows that the packers have it in their power to fix the price of meats at any figure they see fit. Nothing restrains them except public opinion, and they brush that aside if they can find a plausible excuse, or pretense of excuse, and the majority have written in this bill all the excuse that the packers want.

There are consumed in this country, I believe, according to the statistics, about 24,000,000,000 pounds of meat every year. Two cents a pound upon that—meat products we annually consume—will amount to between four hundred and five hundred million dollars. What does the Republican Party, pledged to reducing the cost of living, have to say to this provision imposing between four hundred and five hundred million dollars a year upon the food of the poor and the rich alike in this country? That meat duty remains in the conference report. I felt after the exposure of this item of the bill upon the floor of the Senate that the Republican conferees would at least have enough consideration for the people of this country to strike it out, but they did not do so.

Now, the Senator from North Dakota says that the duty we are imposing by this bill upon wheat of 35 cents a bushel, which means $2.10 a barrel on flour, will be effective, and that it will raise the price of wheat very nearly, if not quite, to the limit of this protective duty. If it does, Mr. President, then what will we have? It is estimated that every man, woman, and child consumes annually on an average a barrel and a half of flour. The conferees did cut the duty 5 cents. They cut it down upon the same plea that was, as I stated, made by the House conferees with reference to sugar, namely, that the country would not stand for duties much in excess of the Payne-Aldrich rates. Upon that plea, made in the conference committee when this item came up, as a matter of compromise 5 cents a bushel was cut off, and the duty was reduced from 40 cents to 35 cents.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, the Senator's statement reminds me of something I saw in the papers a day or two ago. A man was held up by a footpad and robbed of all he had except 5 cents, which were left him to get home on the street car.

Mr. SIMMONS. That is about the way it is going to be in this case, Mr. President. But let me finish. What will be the effect of this duty? If it is effective in the way and to the extent stated and claimed by the Senator from North Dakota, in charge of this bill and who represents on this floor one of the chief wheat-growing sections of this country and who is a member of the Finance Committee and a very able and a very fair-minded member, too—if it has that effect, that provision of the bill will levy an additional $200,000,000 upon the dining table of the poor and rich alike.

There is another provision in the bill which I had hoped would be stricken out. Its iniquities were so transparent and were so conclusively demonstrated in the argument in the Senate, that I did hope it would be stricken out. I refer to the compensatory duty upon manufactures of cotton.

An utterly worthless duty of 7 cents a pound was imposed on raw cotton—a duty that will help none of the producers of the 12,000,000 bales of short-staple cotton in this country, not a whit, not worth the snap of my finger. I am a cotton farmer, and I know what I am talking about; but because of this utterly useless duty imposed upon the raw material, the friends of the textile manufacturers of the country insisted upon putting in this bill a provision that will allow a compensatory duty of 7 cents a pound upon the manufactured products brought in from abroad.

Of course, as all of these fine goods that we get from Europe are made in part of Egyptian cotton, that means, as I explained when this item was up in the Senate, that we will have to pay a duty of 7 cents a pound on nearly all the cotton materials, including clothing, that we import, and of course the domestic manufacturer will take advantage of that, as they will have a right to do, and advance their price accordingly; and so the people of this country would have to pay a duty of 7 cents a pound upon practically all the cotton goods they would buy.

I have no means of estimating—in fact, I have not tried to estimate—the extent of the burden this item would impose upon the consuming public, but I think it would not fall far below $100,000,000. Add it all together—$100,000,000 on account of sugar; four hundred millions or more on account of meat, frozen and fresh; two hundred millions on account of wheat; one hundred millions on accounts of clothes—and this bill, in four of its provisions, would add to the cost of living something like one billion dollars a year. That is the way in which the Republican Party proposes to reduce the cost of living!

Help the farmer? Why, Mr. President, the farmer will soon realize, if this bill is passed and should receive presidential approval, that its benefits to him will be small compared to the additional amount he will have to pay by reason of it for such of these necessities as he does not produce.

A more transparent, unblushing fraud was never attempted to be perpetrated upon a people than the Republican politicians who are responsible and sponsors for this legislation are now seeking to fasten upon the American people, not because they believe in it—no, no! They do not believe in it any more than I do. They are led to do this thing, this wicked thing, for supposed partisan advantage, as a vehicle for the propagation of their protective tariff theories, to lure the farmer into the acceptance of that scheme of taxation, and by placating him with this miserable sop to make his resistance less formidable to highly protective rates to be laid in the projected scheme of general tariff revision upon the things the farmer buys. It is a conspiracy of deceit contrived and perpetrated in name and guise of friendship.

Mr. President, the members of the party in power have had abundant opportunity during their 2-year term here to help the farmer if they wanted to in ways that would be unquestionable and in measures that would be of great benefit and value to him. Have they availed themselves of a single proffered opportunity, however inviting it has been? On the contrary, they have passed these opportunities and importunities by in silence, if not with contempt.

Here a few days ago we had up a bill, and an amendment was offered to it which provided for an appropriation of $200,000,000 to be advanced to the Federal farm loan bank to enable that institution to advance money to the farmer upon his land, and relieve him to some extent from the distressed situation in which he finds himself to-day. You will remember what happened. What was the response of the other side of the Chamber, now pretending to be the friends of the farmer, to that proposition? It passed, it got through; but, Senators, you know that it received the sanction of this body only by and through the votes of Democratic Senators, aided by a few progressive Republicans on the other side. You know that that measure, fraught with so much benefit to the farmer—a measure that it was so apparent would have brought much needed relief to him in his present condition—received no sympathy from the other side of the Chamber, except in isolated instances.

I think my good friend the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING], who sits over there, offered an amendment to one of the appropriation bills a few days ago proposing to utilize the $100,000,000 that the Federal reserve banks have accumulated by way of profits, not to be invested in farm-land mortgages, as the measure I have just spoken about provided, but to be lent to him upon his agricultural products, and thus to reach and relieve another aspect of the farmer's troubles. Coupled with the measure providing $200,000,000 for farm-loan banks I can conceive of no two measures that this Congress could pass that would afford as much immediate relief to the farmers in their present situation as those two measures. I want to ask the Senator from South Dakota what sort of a reception his amendment met with from the committee in charge of the bill to which he offered it as an amendment, as I understand?

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from North Carolina that he is familiar with the reception that the bill had at the hands of the committee.

Mr. SIMMONS. That reception was a point of order against it?

Mr. STERLING. A point of order.

Mr. SIMMONS. They incontinently kicked it out on a technicality.

Mr. STERLING. But I will say to the Senator from North Carolina that that point of order was finally waived. After I had given notice that I should move to suspend the rules, the chairman of the committee waived the point of order, and a vote was taken upon the proposition here in the Senate.

Mr. SIMMONS. Upon the proposition to suspend the rules?

Mr. STERLING. No; a vote was taken on the proposition directly in the Senate. The chairman of the committee finally waived the point of order, and a vote was taken. That was the status. I want to say, further, that I should have pressed the matter further, and should have introduced it as an amendment to another bill, but for the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury had taken the net earnings for the year 1920, under very doubtful authority, and applied them to the payment of the debts of the Government.

Mr. SIMMONS. The fact remains that the Senator's amendment was presented and voted down.

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. The other side of the Chamber, of course, is responsible for legislation. They have a majority here, and it was defeated—on a viva voce vote, I presume.

Again, Mr. President, only a few days ago—I believe it has not quite come to a final determination yet—we had a battle royal here in the Senate over a matter in which the farmers of the country are profoundly interested. It was a measure intended largely, and advocated for that purpose, to enable the farmer to get his fertilizers, which in many parts of the country constitute a very essential part of the cost of production, at a lower price than fertilizers are now being offered to him for. I refer to the Muscle Shoals proposition. Senators will remember what sort of a reception this measure—advocated by such friends of the farmer as the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] as a sure means of reducing the cost of the farmer's fertilizer—received from the other side of this Chamber.

Never since I have been here has the other side of the Chamber made so persistent, so determined, and such a resolute fight against a proposition of this importance, asked for in behalf of such a large part of the people, and that part so greatly in need of help, as the fight made upon this measure. That fight has been carried to conference. The Republican Party in both Houses have set themselves against it.

Mr. President, there is another measure in which the farmers are more deeply interested than any other class of our people which has had hard sledding, the good-roads proposition. Senators know how earnestly the friends of the farmers on this side of the Chamber have pressed the good-roads matter, how earnestly we advocated putting in one of the appropriation bills an amendment appropriating $100,000,000 to carry on the good work of improving the rural highways of the country—highways which are used by the city folks largely for pleasure, but highways which are used by the farmer as a means of getting his products to the market. The farmers ask for good roads, hard-surfaced roads, in order that they might, by the use of automobiles and motor trucks, protect themselves, in part at least, against the high freight and passenger rates charged, and permitted under the law to be charged, by the railroads. They were appealing to Congress for a little help, that they may get their products, which are selling now below the cost of production, to market at less cost. Here was an opportunity to help that vast army who follow that occupation which in best conditions is surrounded and fraught with so many discomforts, inconveniences, hardships, and sacrifices, but so essential to the well-being of all the people, and to mitigate to some degree the trials, tribulations, and difficulties of those who follow it.

In answer to that proposition, the committee in charge of the bill to which it was sought to apply this amendment, through its chairman and his lieutenants, supported by the Republican side of the Chamber, defeated a motion to suspend the rules of the Senate in order to make this amendment in favor of farmers in order. I challenge them here and now, speaking here as a farmer myself and in behalf of the farmers—and I have a right to speak for them, for practically every dollar I have in the world, except that invested in my home, is invested in farm property—I challenge the majority side of this Chamber to show me one single measure it has proposed, or has permitted to pass the Senate, in favor of the farmer, except this measly, niggardly, fraudulent, deceptive, and iniquitous bill, drawn, in the last analysis, so that it will help, not the farmer, but certain great, powerful trusts, notably the packers' trust, the sugar refining trust, and so forth. Where there are any benefits of any consequence in this bill for anybody, they, and not the farmers, are going to be the beneficiaries.

Mr. President, the time for argument has passed, and I will not pursue that any longer. I think I give expression to what is known and understood here, and on the outside as well, understood and talked about by practically everybody. I believe I give expression to what is known as a fact when I say that while there are those who are supporting this measure in a laudable desire to help a helpless class of overburdened toilers, there are those who are supporting it, not because they believe in it, for they are opposed to it; not because they want it to become law, for they do not, but because they believe it will never become a law; supporting it for partisan advantage; supporting it as a vehicle of propaganda in favor of the protective tariff theory; supporting it in the interest of partisan politics and not because they wish its enactment for the benefit and relief of the distressed farmers of the country.

These enemies of the bill, these men on the other side of the Chamber who are as much opposed to this bill as I am opposed to it, who believe that its enactment into law would be a calamity, nevertheless, have voted for it, and will vote for the conference report. But they voted for it only because they felt certain that the President would veto it, and I now say to these Republican supporters of the bill, if Mr. Harding were in the White House instead of Mr. Wilson, you would not adopt this conference report; if Mr. Harding had been in the White House instead of Mr. Wilson the day you voted on this bill in the Senate, it would have been overwhelmingly defeated here—and with your votes.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CALDER in the chair). Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield.

Mr. MOSES. Can the Senator from North Carolina give us any assurance that this hope of a presidential veto will be gratified?

Mr. SIMMONS. The Senator from New Hampshire was the one shining exception. The Senator had the courage to vote against the bill, notwithstanding the arguments that were urged upon him in the interest of the partisan advantage. I will say to the Senator I sincerely hope and confidently believe it will be vetoed.

Mr. MOSES. I did vote against it, Mr. President, and I purpose to vote against this conference report, if it ever comes to a vote. I resent the imputation, Mr. President, that this is a Republican measure. It is neither a Republican measure nor a Democratic measure. It is class legislation of the most vicious kind, as I regard it. If it is to have any party appellation at all, Mr. President, it is to be described as soviet legislation.

Mr. SIMMONS. I invite the Senator to continue in his characterization. I was very much interested in his speech the other day. It was the finest characterization of the iniquities and the fraudulency of the measure, if I may be permitted to coin a word, that I ever heard.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I am deeply grateful to the Senator from North Carolina for his complimentary allusion to my feeble remarks of the other day. I regret that I can not accept his invitation to continue, because the one thing I have taken away from such classical study as I pursued in the days of my youth is to fear the Greeks when bearing gifts.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SIMMONS. I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. I am pleased to find the Senator from North Carolina and the Senator from New Hampshire in such wonderful agreement upon this bill. I have just heard the Senator from North Carolina condemning earnestly the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, which the Senator from New Hampshire offered as an amendment to this bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. No; I have not had much to say about the Payne-Aldrich law. I only referred to the little unpleasantness in the conference over the rates of that repudiated measure.

Mr. McCUMBER. I hope the Senator will pardon me for interrupting him, but when it went over on Saturday I understood that the Senator wanted about 10 minutes to discuss this conference report. I know that his address has been elongated somewhat by interruptions, but——

Mr. SIMMONS. I confess, Mr. President, I did not expect to occupy much time. But this bill is a subject which causes one, when he wakes up to its iniquities, to enthuse in his opposition and denunciation of it and leads him into paths of thought and discussion he did not intend to travel.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, it is perfectly true that the Senator from North Carolina and the Senator from New Hampshire are in accord with reference to this measure. It is also true that those two Senators are probably as far apart as the poles upon the general subject of tariff legislation.

As I said in the remarks which the Senator from North Carolina has been so good as to compliment, I am an all-around protectionist. I believe that if wool is to be protected manufactures of wool should be equally protected. It is for that reason, Mr. President, that I voted for the compensatory duties contained in the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. It is for that reason that I offered my amendment to the bill—to give us relief in every section of American industry.

This emergency, if an emergency exists, is not confined merely to the agricultural portions of the community; it is widespread in every part of the land. It was produced in the first instance, as I believe, by the consumers' strike, to which the Senator from Connecticut so graphically alluded in the course of the debate upon the bill, and owing to that consumers' strike mills and factories have been compelled to shut down, because there was no market for their wares. But people have had to continue to buy the things which they must eat. The bill to my mind puts an absolutely unjust burden upon the portion of the community which could not raise but had to buy the things which they eat.

Because of the one-sided, unnatural arrangement of the schedules of the bill I could not vote for it. I have never felt that the emergency was by any means as acute as the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] has sought to make us believe. I have felt that the bill was designed to benefit a particular class in the country who, as everyone knows, received high prices for their products during the swollen days of the war, and if they spent those profits in the purchase of limousines and in trips to Miami and Palm Beach the country should not now be penalized.

Their crisis, if any exists, is by no means absolute. It is comparative, and it is comparative only with the high prices of the days of the war. If they were to compact the sum total of their distress into a motto, it could be expressed no better than by the advertisement "Used car for sale."

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, the measure is such a wretched farce that the sooner the curtain is rung down the better. I am not going to continue my discussion. In a few hours, or it may be in less than an hour, the seal of approval by the Congress will be placed upon this iniquity. In the meantime I sympathize somewhat with the members of that contingent upon the other side of the aisle to whom I referred a little while ago when I said that while they were uproariously for the bill, they were for it provided it was vetoed. I sympathize with them. As the time draws near I have noticed various evidences of impatience on their part, impatience for speed and action, accompanied with nervousness and apprehension.

I can understand it, Mr. President. They feel reasonably certain that the President is going to veto the measure. They almost feel that his action in that behalf is beyond doubt, and yet there is just a lingering fear on their part that, perchance, by some turn of the wheel of fortune he might approve it. They are not uneasy about the result of the vote on the conference report. They know what that is going to be, but they are uneasy, just slightly nervous, about the fate of the bill at the other end of the Avenue. However strongly and confidently they may believe that it is going to be vetoed, they are not quite certain about it. Their impatience in this regard will not be abated, their nerves will not be steadied, their apprehensions will not be quieted, and they will not be altogether happy and serene until they hear for a certainty from the White House that the deed has been done and that this misshapen creature which they have brought into the world is dead. That is the only apprehension in the Republican mind now.

What a panic would be precipitated upon the other side of the Chamber if to-morrow morning they should wake up and find that the bill had not been vetoed, that the child they have brought into existence is not dead. Oh, they want the child to be born, and born alive, because they think in the birth there will come to them and their party advantage, but, above all things, they hope and pray that that child will be speedily put to death at the other end of the Avenue. I have no doubt it will be duly dispatched when the bill arrives there. I, for one, am content that it should be so; content that this legislative monstrosity, this bastard of legislation, should meet its death at the hands of a great Democratic President, at the hands of the man known of all men as one who has won his high place in office by reason of the public confidence in his devotion and consecration to the cause of the people. However, I wish to say now, and I say it to my Republican colleagues and offer it as a prediction, and I am willing that the prediction be recorded, that if President Wilson vetoes this measure, as he will, the Republican Party in Congress will never give President-to-be Harding, after he reaches the White House, an opportunity to sign it or one of similar import.

Mr. PAGE. Mr. President, I have listened with a great deal of interest to the remarks of the Senator from North Carolina on the question of hide duties. This morning I received a letter from a customer of mine in Germany, a tanner, at Weinheim, in Baden, perhaps the largest tanner of calfskins in the world, certainly one of the largest. Up to the time of the war he was among my very best customers for raw calfskins. Of late I have had no trade with him until this month, when I received an order for some hides. I must confess my surprise. I do not know what it means, unless it is that the price of hides has receded to such an extent here that there is a temptation to come from Germany to Vermont to replenish their stock of raw material.

Mr. SIMMONS. I hope the Senator will recall the statement I made that the importations of hides had been more excessive than the importations of any other article upon which a duty is provided in the bill, and therefore, if there was anything in the bill that might be benefited by the tariff, hides are one item; and yet the duty on hides was stricken out.

Mr. PAGE. As the Senator will remember, in the olden times of the Payne-Aldrich bill I was in favor of free hides. I do not know that I have changed my views now. It is not because I am not a good protectionist, but rather because I think the conditions that affect the hide trade are so peculiar that I am rather inclined to be a believer in nondutiable hides. Without taking the time of the Senate, I should like permission to insert in the RECORD, without reading, the letter to which I have referred.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no objection, permission is granted.

The letter referred to is as follows:

The president of the German tanners' association writes about the effect of the treaty of Versailles on the German leather industry as follows:

"In order to come to a clear understanding of the effect of the Versailles treaty and the corresponding agreements of Spa and Paris on the German leather industry, there must be distinguished between the general and special effects both treaties are impressing on this industry. All the difficulties on 'change and the checking of the production, existing in all other German industries, have come about the leather industry, too. This industry is dependent with regard to three-fourths of its raw material on foreign countries. The financial disorder of our country in consequence of the severe conditions of the Versailles treaty and the following agreements, the complete disorganization of our traffic, the continual fluctuations of the change of the 'mark,' do not permit the entering of any risked business on a larger scale abroad. Therefore we are deficient of raw material. The exchange of goods from one country to another is almost impossible, as nearly all financially strong countries are suffering from overproduction, viz, they are closing themselves by prohibition and hindrance of import and export. The increase of production, the only possible means for our recovery, has been prevented till now by the terribly heavy terms of the Versailles treaty, setting at defiance any attempt of restoration.

"The general want of coal, another consequence of the Spa arrangements, deprived the leather industry of this most important material. The industry tried to supply coal by consuming bark and by the use of brown coal, wood, and turf, after altering the boilers. A lot of firms do not know whether there will be to-morrow at their disposal a sufficient quantity of fuel. There can be no doubt that steam engines can not be kept going on by the use of bark. At any rate under such circumstances the wanted degree of heat will not be obtained to dry the leather in bad weather. Thus the tanning industry, one of the largest German industries has been forced in consequence of the agreement of Spa to reduce its working capacity considerably.

"In particular the effect of the Versailles treaty makes itself felt by section 68, which provides that Germany must import free of duty from Alsace-Lorraine the same quantities of goods she used to buy there before the war. Exact figures about the production of the Alastian firms during the war are known, and these figures are built up upon the controlled self-estimates of their production in the last year of peace.

"Well known are furthermore the figures of distribution of hides and skins on basis of the productivity of these firms during the war.

"There is further before us an estimate of home consumption in that country and another with regard to the export of leather before the war. On basis of these calculations Alsace-Lorraine ought to export to Germany not more than 4,300 tons of sole leather, beltings, harness, and russet leather, and 220 tons of chrome upper leather.

"France has fixed the quantity of the products enjoying exemption from duty in virtue of the article 68 of the treaty of peace at 12,500 tons for leather for the year of 1920–21. The war production of the old and larger Germany amounted to 3,000 to 4,000 tons of leather monthly, viz, about 50,000 tons a year, including the occupied countries. Alsace-Lorraine shall now be allowed to import free of duty one-fourth of the whole war production. This is naturally a heavy burden on the German industry and certainly against the sense of the treaty that three times as much leather is imported this way than would correspond with the production of these Provinces. For the larger part, the leather imported on this section 68 is not homemade, but of French, Spanish, and Italian origin.

"What is the use of a tariff on leather which anyway forms a very small compensation for the surplus of cost, caused by the duty on tanning extracts, if such quantities of leather are imported free of duty through the Alsatian hole from all countries of the world, partly of inferior quality and even heavily and fraudulently charged?

"There is no need to comment on such facts; they speak for themselves. The world expects from Germany reparations and indemnities; how shall she pay, when the last Paris agreements make export impossible by charging on one side export taxes and forbidding on the other side free entrance of German goods and German merchants in foreign countries?

"And who is going to pay that tax? Certainly not Germany. The consequence would be that the German exporting industry, which must pay the imports of food and raw material for the whole nation, gets ruined. The effect on the foreign markets of raw material is clear. Who would buy in Germany under such conditions the Egyptian or American cotton; who could buy East Indian or American hides and skins or foreign leather for making shoes unless so much cheaper as amounts the charge of the new tribute? And the consumers in all countries certainly had to pay higher prices and get poorer quality if a large factor of international competition is knocked dead.

"Conditions caused by the diplomats at Versailles and the following negotiations are not encouraging for the German industry; nevertheless we are convinced that the sound sense of the merchants all over the world finally gets away with all these barriers to human welfare, unless bolshevism shall rule over the world."

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I desire to record a last word of protest to the bill before it receives sanction of the Senate. I shall try to be very brief.

I opposed the measure when it was before the Senate. Hence I will content myself with a summary of the objections which I then recorded against it. I knew it would receive the final sanction of both Houses and go to conference, and I was equally certain that virtually every amendment which the Senate placed upon it would be accepted, as would have been any other amendments which this body in its wisdom or in the interest of localities might have seen fit to insert. It is now here in its last stages, and we shall accept the conference report, as a foregone fact.

The bill is entitled "An act to impose temporary duties upon certain agricultural products, to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes." That title is entirely misleading. It should be called "An act to impose temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet emergency political obligations." If not, it otherwise would have been reported without any consideration at all from the Ways and Means Committee of the House and but very little at the hands of the Finance Committee of the Senate. The Payne-Aldrich bill was called a bill of abominations, and truly so. Public opinion of America denounced that bill as the limit of high protection, but this goes so far beyond that measure as to make it appear more than equitable by comparison. If that was a bill of abominations, this is a bill of damnations, and in my judgment the most infamous measure that has ever received the approval of an American Congress; for it is a fraud, a deception, and an inquity from its inception to its close.

While those who advocate it may be perfectly sincere in their convictions of its needs, they will discover, if the bill becomes a law, that its only effect will be to increase, and measurably increase, the high cost of living, while bringing benefit to none.

During the discussion here to-day it has been disclosed that two essential necessities of life have already risen in price to the consumer, sugar being quoted to-day and Saturday to the consumer at 2 cents a pound in advance of the previously prevailing price. That means the levy of a tax upon the American consumers of sugar of $100,000 a day. Whether this bill be approved or vetoed, it is even now at work upon the pocketbook of the consumer and will so continue until it has been disposed of. The newspaper dispatches of last week, Mr. President, carried accounts of several enormous and sensational robberies, principally directed against the Post Office Department, and in each instance the bandits made away with the loot. I can have some respect for that sort of robbery, because a man who perpetrates it takes the law in his hands and also takes some chances with his life; but a robbery which is coolly, carefully, and craftily designed, as a legislative act deliberately conferring upon one class of our people the power to levy toll upon all the rest, and to do so safely, securely, and reputably, presents a contrast between the man of action and the man who sneaks into the back door and levies his tribute during the absence of the family from home to the advantage of the former.

Personally I do not know whether the President will veto this bill or not; I have never presumed to speak for him since I have been a Member of the Senate, and I certainly have no authority to do so now; but if I wished the Harding administration ill, which I do not, if I entertained any personal animosity toward the Republican Party, which I do not, and if the prayers of the wicked availed anything, which they never do, I should pray for his approval of this bill, for in the event it becomes a law, or anything approaching it is ever enacted into law, then I say to my Republican brethren woe unto your coming administration. You defied public sentiment upon this subject, ignored your platform in 1909, and enacted a bill which caused your undoing, split your party asunder, and placed the Democratic Party in power. If you think the people have changed their convictions since that time, if you think by increasing the extent of your tariff robberies, and including within their pale every producer of agricultural products, it will add to your prestige and overcome this former disadvantage, then you certainly reckon against all my experience of the operations of human nature.

If this bill is good for anything, it must levy an enormous toll upon all of the consumers of the country. I defy any man to contradict that statement. If you levy that toll upon the consumers of the country, think you that they will bear it with equanimity, or be comforted with the notion that else this bill shall operate some industry or industries will be ruined? Oh, no, Mr. President; I know that protection is running to-day like a mad dog, with foam on its lips, throughout every community in the United States, and the poison of its virus is dividing people into classes everywhere. Every class has its organization, with its Washington lobby bent upon securing class legislation. Mr. Gompers the other day announced what he pleased to call a new declaration of independence for labor, the substance of which is the demand by organized labor of exemption for its membership from the operation of our general laws. It has just as much right to demand such exemption as the wool grower or the stock grower or the farmer or the manufacturer or any other protected industry has to demand and secure the unequal operations of the law. You can not grant one and withhold the other.

The secretary of the American Protective Tariff League in 1911, in a circular letter, declared that once the farmer found out that protection was not for him there would be an end to the system. He therefore urged everybody to besiege and beseech Representatives and Senators to vote against the reciprocity treaty, lest they discover the fact through its operation. He knows, that great organization knows, every man who has deliberately studied the subject must know, that a high protective tariff upon agricultural products means nothing at all to the producer, but everything to the manufacturer, who is entitled in consequence of the imposition to his compensatory duty; in other words, the right to ask and to receive twice the tariff protection that he otherwise would enjoy. That has cropped out in this bill. The compensatory duty appears here for the manufacturer of woolen goods and for the manufacturer of cotton goods; and they are to-day quietly rubbing their hands in satisfaction and hoping for the passage of this bill, since theirs will be the victory and not the farmers and the woolgrowers, who seem to think—and it is a very natural thought, for they have been so taught—that if the Government will only go into partnership with them to the full the whole country will prosper in general while they will flourish in particular.

Mr. President, the legislative history of the United States has disclosed a constant succession of tariff agitation and antitariff agitation. These have succeeded each other like the tides of the ocean, and I presume will continue so to do as long as this great economic question is involved in politics and forms a line of division between political parties.

If we can use the power of taxation to this extent we can use it whenever a class is strong enough to insist upon the imposition of a tax of any kind upon the property holders of the United States for their benefit. That will be tested out successfully in the next Congress, when the bonus bill, which will increase the national debt to the extent of at least three and a half billion dollars, will be enacted and taxes will be levied upon one class of people solely, openly, and unblushingly for the benefit of another class of people, and that in a country which pretends at least to be one of liberty, equality, and justice. The time is coming—and it is the only bright ray I see in this line of economic legislation—when everybody will be protected against everybody else, and protection will thus defeat itself, because there will be no longer any class to be robbed for the benefit of some other class.

The Republican Party has won the greatest political victory in the history of the country. Flushed with success and power, in absolute control of all the departments of the Government, it proposes—and properly so from its standpoint—to rectify all the evils of commercial conditions by the enactment of a general tariff law, doubtless going far beyond the standards of the Payne-Aldrich law, which, instead of tempting prosperity, will only increase the burdens now weighing business and industry and enterprise to the very earth.

These things, Mr. President, can not be done with impunity. The history of the United States demonstrates that no political party is in so much danger as when it seems to be absolutely supreme. From the good days when Franklin Pierce, in 1852, was by an overwhelming vote elected President of the United States, down to the close of this administration, which carried three-fourths of all the States in 1916, and is now about to expire, the unbroken course of history reveals that each of the great parties so coming into power has incurred the resentment of the populace, which have in turn passed them into the oblivion of the immediate future. That was a profound reflection of Anne of Austria to Cardinal Mazarin many years ago, when in the course of a controversy she said, "My Lord Cardinal, God does not pay every week or month, but He always pays some time." We can not outrage economic laws by artificial and disturbing legislation without sooner or later confronting the consequences and paying their penalties.

This conference report will soon be adopted. It will then go to the President for his approval or, at this late hour in the session, for his pocket veto.

I know, Mr. President, and I betray no confidences in so declaring, that a very large proportion of the Members of the House and the Senate who support this bill will look upon the President's disapproval with almost as much satisfaction and with a deeper sigh of relief than will be expressed by anybody on this side of the Chamber. The fate of the bill will be in his hands; and he can not better crown his eight years of splendid public service, for which, in due time, posterity will give him credit, than by sending this bill back to the House of Representatives bearing the stamp of his disapproval.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I have never attempted to suggest to the Senate what the action of President Wilson would be upon this bill. A great many Senators on the other side, and possibly some few on this side, have assumed that because he belongs to the Democratic Party he will necessarily veto any bill that smacks of protection; but I can not forget, and I doubt very much if the President will forget, that he is not the President of the Democratic Party alone. So long as he holds his position, he is the President of the United States—President of the States of North Dakota and Minnesota and the entire Northwest, just as much as he is the President of New York or New Hampshire or South Carolina.

That being the case, I have confidence that whatever the President does he will do according to his best judgment as the President of the United States. I do not know what his information may be with reference to the conditions in the Northwest at this time. If he is as uninformed of the conditions of that section as is the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES], he may veto this bill without any further consideration. But assuming that he understands the situation where in a single purely agricultural State 35 banks have gone to the wall in the last month, and assuming that he understands the critical situation in those States, I still have hope that he will look at this bill as an emergency measure, and that just before we begin to get ready for the planting of the next crop he will, by signing this bill, give an encouragement to the entire Northwestern section, that they may have some hope for the future of their industries that will justify them in continuing.

I hope before the President signs or disapproves this bill some one will bring to his attention, if it has not already been brought to his attention, the actual condition of the Northwest and the farming section of my State and eastern Montana and Idaho and other sections of the Northwest, and of those sections that have been engaged in raising sheep. If he understands that situation, I will trust to his heart and his conscience to approve this bill.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, as a Democrat I have a good deal of respect for the legitimate Republican doctrine of protection. Something can be said in its favor. It presents an issue which fairly divides honest opinion in this country. In my judgment, however, this bill does not represent an honest effort at protection.

I sympathize with what the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] says concerning the hardships of the wheat raisers in his State. I sympathize with them because I know from the evils that wheat raisers in Nebraska contend with that there are serious conditions, but I know absolutely that no wheat raiser in his State and no wheat raiser or corn raiser in my State is suffering from any condition which by any possible stretch of the imagination can be cured by erecting a tariff barrier against imports or by imposing a tariff on the products which the producers of my State and of his State raise.

I can not look upon this bill as anything less than an attempt to pass off a gold brick on a class of agriculturists in the West and the South who are suffering from hard times. It is an attempt, apparently purely political, to make propaganda at this session, not to enact a tariff bill for the benefit of the farmers, because no one supposes for an instant that this bill is to be enacted. It is an attempt by congressional action to suggest an argument to the agricultural classes that a protective tariff would be good for them in order that at the next session they may look with complacence upon an attempt which is to be made to impose high or prohibitory duties upon manufactured goods which they must purchase.

Mr. President, the farmers of my State can not be deceived by any such effort. The farmers of my State who raise wheat know that this country raises every year much more wheat than it can consume, and that it is a steady exporter of wheat to other countries. They know that the small quantity which comes into this country from Canada comes here only on its way to the markets of the world, and that it has absolutely no effect upon the American price for wheat. If the wheat that is raised in Canada does not come to the American markets on its way to the European markets, it will go directly to Liverpool and our American wheat will meet it in Liverpool.

The farmers of my State know that last year this country raised a crop of wheat amounting to something like 800,000,000 bushels, and that approximately a third of that crop has been or is being exported to Europe. They are not alarmed by the fact that some 35,000,000 bushels of wheat have come here from Canada, because they know that we have exported already up to the first of this year something like 220,000,000 bushels of wheat. They know that the price of wheat in the United States is regulated by the supply and price of wheat in Liverpool and in other foreign markets, and they are not alarmed over the 35,000,000 bushels of wheat which comes here, which pass through our mills or pass over our railroads to the ports of export in this country on their way to the great markets abroad.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. Assuming the argument of the Senator from Nebraska to be sound, there are, nevertheless, a great many farmers in the West who entertain a different view. The question which I desire to ask the Senator, however, is this:

If it be true that this bill will not in any way affect the price of wheat, it can not, as suggested by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] a few moments ago, have the effect of raising the price of breadstuffs so far as that particular feature of the bill is concerned, can it?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. A tariff upon the small amount of wheat that is imported here?

Mr. BORAH. Yes. I say, if as the Senator says it does not change the price of wheat, if it does not give any protection to the American wheat grower because his market is controlled by the markets of the world, then the mere fact of laying this duty on it would not raise the price of breadstuffs?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I think not. I think it is a farcical attempt. It is simply an attempt to lead the wheat raiser to believe that there is a virtue in protection of which he can get the benefit. There is not any. The American wheat raiser can not by any means secure any benefit from protection. The American manufacturer can, and in order to make the American wheat raiser content when the Republican program is adopted for a protective tariff on manufactures this attempt is now being made in Congress to win over the American wheat raiser to the idea of a protective tariff for manufacturers by giving the farmer a gold brick.

What is true of wheat is true of corn. Our production of corn is something like 2,500,000,000 bushels a year, and the exports during last year were something like 33,000,000 bushels. The export of last year's crop is still going on, but there were 33,000,000 bushels exported last year, and yet because 3,000,000 bushels were imported into this country the corn producer is offered the gold brick of a protective tariff of 15 cents a bushel upon imported corn.

Now, I do not know how it is with the corn producer in other States, but the corn raiser in Nebraska is too intelligent a man to be deceived by that argument. You are not going to convert the corn producer of Nebraska to accept the protective tariff by offering him a protective duty on the little bit of corn that dribbles into the United States from other countries. He knows that we produce all the corn we need and consume. He knows that we have an exportable surplus, and do export it, and he is not afraid of the few bushels of corn coming from any other country to the United States.

So I repeat, Mr. President, this is not an attempt to enact legislation, because no one believes that this bill is to pass, and no one has believed at any time that it was to pass. You have simply been taking up the time of the House and the Senate for the sake of seducing the agricultural sentiment of the country into an acquiescence later on of a protective tariff for the benefit of the industries of the country at the expense of the agricultural classes.

Mr. President, there is a side to this to which I think people in this country should give some attention. For two years now the United States has been confronted with a very serious situation. We have a great surplus of exportable products from our mines and our fields and our manufacturing interests. The difficulty we have found and the difficulty we will find, in exporting that surplus, is the difficulty of securing pay for it. During the last two years our exports to Europe have amounted to something like eight thousand million dollars per year, and our imports to five thousand million dollars per year. In other words, Europe, anxious as her people are to secure our raw materials and to secure some of our manufactured goods, has not been able to send to us the products of her making to pay for what she needs. She has only been able to send us five thousand million dollars' worth a year, although she has taken from us eight thousand million dollars' worth a year.

Europe would take a great deal more than eight thousand million dollars a year of our products if she could pay for them. She has not been able to pay for them with her own products, she can not pay for them in gold, and the result has been that something like three thousand million dollars a year difference has been made up by buying from us on time.

Mr. President, the time is approaching when Europe can not buy from us on credit. The time is approaching when Europe, if she can not pay for our products in products of her own, will be compelled to reduce her purchase of our products. It is here already. Already we are suffering in this country from the fact that Europe is not able to take over the products of ours which we are desirous of selling. We have a great depression in cotton, a great depression in copper, a great depression in our manufacturing industries, a depression in agricultural products, and a depression in cattle, because we can not sell the surplus.

Now, it is proposed seriously, and at the next session of Congress it will be proposed practically, to erect tariff barriers against Europe, and make it more difficult than ever for Europe to send us her products. Do Senators realize that that means a restriction on our exports, a greater depression in our industries, a protracted depression in our agricultural products? Mr. President, instead of erecting tariff barriers against Europe, we ought to be devising ways and means to permit Europe to pay for the surpluses we have in this country with the things she can sell to us.

The credit on exports has been stretched to the limit. Three thousand million dollars of credit we gave Europe last year, the difference between what we sold to her and what we bought from her. Three thousand million dollars of credit we gave to Europe the year before, the difference between what we sold to her and what we bought from her. That credit has resulted in stretching the credit in our banks. That expanded credit has made interest rates high to borrowers in this country. The credit of our banking institutions and of our financial institutions generally has been stretched in order that Americans might sell to Europe on credit because there is a shortage of imports. How long can that continue?

So I say, Mr. President, instead of proposing to erect barriers against imports from Europe, we should be promoting imports from abroad in order that we may export abroad, and that issue is one of the issues which will come before Congress at the next session.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. By the argument the Senator is making I am reminded that we find ourselves building an expensive merchant marine to bring products into this country and erecting a tariff wall to keep them out.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Very true. That is the inconsistent attitude we are in—taxing the American people to build ships in order that commerce of this country may be carried and proposing to cut down that commerce. At this very moment the commerce of the United States is on the decline from lack of imports.

In January of this year our imports were smaller than for any month during the last three years. Our imports last month were $209,000,000. For January a year ago they were $470,000,000. Our exports also, in consequence, inevitably, declined nearly a hundred million dollars, and we are confronted at the present time with the inevitable decline in the foreign commerce of the United States, because Europe is not able to buy our products and pay for them, either in her own products or in gold, because she has no gold, and she has been borrowing of us about to the limit; and yet it is seriously proposed now to erect a tariff barrier against the products of Europe which might otherwise come here to pay for the products which we sell to Europe.

Mr. President, it is worth while noting the condition of our neighbor on the north—Canada. It is solemnly proposed in this bill to erect a tariff barrier against the small quantity of wheat which comes from Canada to the United States. The fact is that the Canadiam commerce is a highly valuable commerce to the people of the United States. We sell to Canada every year something like $800,000,000 of our products. We buy from Canada only about one-half that quantity, and now it is proposed, by a barrier on Canadian wheat, to prevent that wheat coming in, and I suppose there will be presented at the next session of Congress tariffs on others of the products of Canada, so as to make trade with Canada difficult for the United States.

I simply want to voice my protest against this bill in the hour of its final passage, and in closing to condemn it, as I did at the beginning, as a gold brick—not a serious attempt to pass legislation but as an attempt to gold brick the agriculturists of the West into the false impression that they will derive some benefit from the protective-tariff scheme.

Mr. President, it is too late. The West opened its eyes a number of years ago, and one of the important influences in bringing about that era during which the western agricultural States voted the Democratic ticket and put Democrats in office was the fact that the West became convinced that its interest did not lie in the direction of a protective tariff.

MILITARY NOMINATIONS.

Mr. WADSWORTH. Mr. President, the President of the United States has sent in additional nominations affecting the Army of the United States, and I therefore ask unanimous consent, as in open executive session, that there be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs all nominations for original appointments in the Army, all nominations for transfer from one branch of the service to another, and all nominations for confirmation, below the grade of brigadier general. This is the class of nominations which the Senate upon prior occasions has unanimously permitted to be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JONES of Washington in the chair). Is there any objection to the request of the Senator from New York?

Mr. McKELLAR. Those are not the same nominations we were discussing on Friday?

Mr. WADSWORTH. These are additional names sent to the Senate, and I am simply asking that they be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. McKELLAR. I have no objection to their going to the committee, but I want to say that so far as the captains, first lieutenants, and second lieutenants who are to be promoted are concerned I have objection, and I think this is just as good a time as any to state to the Senate my objection.

But I will stop long enough to let the nominations indicated by the Senator from New York go to the committee, and then I want to make a statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New York? The Chair hears none, and the nominations will be referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. McKELLAR. Mr. President, in reference to the nominations for promotion from the grades of second lieutenant, first lieutenant, and captain, I wish to call the attention of the Senate to the present law in reference to promotions.

Under the construction of the Army reorganization act by the War Department men appointed from the emergency forces in the ranks of colonel, lieutenant colonel, and major are appointed with regard to their respective grades, but under another provision of the act captains and lieutenants are thrown in hodgepodge and are appointed indiscriminately, without respect to their grades. I read from page 16 of the act as to captains and lieutenants:

> Third, captains and lieutenants of the Regular Army and Philippine Scouts, originally appointed since April 6, 1917, shall be arranged among themselves according to commissioned service rendered prior to November 11, 1918, and shall be placed at the foot of the list as prepared to this point.

The effect of the holding of the department as to this provision is that all captains, first lieutenants, and second lieutenants are placed in one body, when it comes to promotions on the single list, and the captain, first lieutenant, or second lieutenant who has the longest commissioned service is held to be entitled to promotion ahead of the higher officer who has not had so long a service. Results of test examinations held with such care last summer are without force or effect. If a second lieutenant had one day's longer service than a captain, he is promoted over the captain.

To illustrate what I mean, suppose two men in the emergency forces have applied for commissions in the Regular Army. One was appointed a captain on the 2d of July, 1917, and the other a second lieutenant on the 1st of July, 1917. The one who was appointed a captain, let us assume, was promoted to major, then to lieutenant colonel, and then to colonel, if you please, in the emergency forces, all because of distinguished service. The man who was appointed on the 1st of July as a second lieutenant remained a second lieutenant all the way through the emergency.

He did not go up; he was not promoted. He did nothing to deserve promotion. After the war was over the colonel in the emergency forces and the second lieutenant in the emergency forces both appeared before one of the boards constituted under this act in order to receive appointments in the Regular Army. The four boards who examined this colonel and this lieutenant, after a careful examination, determined that the colonel was entitled to a captaincy and that the lieutenant was entitled to a second lieutenancy. In that state of affairs those appointments were made and have been heretofore confirmed by the Senate. Now it is proposed to appoint the second lieutenant to a captaincy.

Under the holding of the department this second lieutenant, who has already received his commission, is promoted over the captain on the single list and will receive his majority before the previously appointed captain. I do not think that is fair. It is not fair to the men who have stood the examinations. They were asked to stand examinations for these appointments. Four boards passed upon their qualifications—education, fitness, ability, and moral character—and under this ruling of the department the man who was appointed a captain will find himself below the man who was appointed a second lieutenant. There is nothing fair about that. It means a demoralization of the forces.

I find this peculiar condition of affairs in regard to these appointments. I do not know whether this last batch of nominations will complete the list or not, but the Army will have a general and, I hope, two lieutenant generals, a great many major generals, a great many brigadier generals, a great many colonels, a great many lieutenant colonels, a great many majors, and a great number of captains, but it will not have any lieutenants. We will have a lieutenantless Army. There are now practically no lieutenants in the Army. Second lieutenants under this ruling are being appointed to captaincies without any examination, except the physical examination. They are promoted right over the first lieutenants, provided the second lieutenants have had longer commissioned service. Such action is intolerable. It is not fair or just to the men who have stood the examination and it is not in my judgment in accordance with what was intended by Congress.

Mr. President, in order to correct the injustice, I introduced some time ago an amendment which would require the appointments or promotions to be made within the respective grades of captain, of first lieutenant, and of second lieutenant. I tried to get the amendment agreed to in committee when the Army bill was up for consideration and I was unable to do it. In that situation there is only one thing I can do and that is, when the nominations come in promoting second and first lieutenants over captains in the way I have stated, to object to their promotion. As I understand, it now requires unanimous consent for officers to be promoted, and I propose to withhold my consent to their promotion, believing that it is right. Ordinarily I would not do this, but I can not bring myself to agree to the great injustice thus proposed to be done to many officers and the Army itself.

I make this statement about it for the purpose of calling the attention of the Senate to the rule of promotion as announced by the department and to the injustice of the situation and the injustice of the interpretation of the Army reorganization bill.

Before I close I wish to call attention to the method by which it can be corrected. I have offered an amendment which proposes to strike out the third clause of paragraph (d) of section 24a, and insert in lieu thereof the following paragraph that I read a little while ago:

> Third. Captains and lieutenants of the Regular Army and Philippine Scouts originally appointed since April 6, 1917, shall be arranged among themselves in their respective grades according to commissioned service rendered prior to November 11, 1918, and shall be placed at the foot of the list as prepared to this point.

Mr. President, the emergency officers who stood these examinations were not told by the department that if or when they were appointed captains they would be subject to have all first and second lieutenants promoted over them who had a longer commissioned service. If this rule was going to be made by the department, it ought to have been made known to them. Many officers who accepted captaincies did so, of course, on the theory that when promotions came they would be entitled to them and that those who had won only first or second lieutenancies would not be promoted over them. I have no doubt that many of these men accepted captaincies who would not have accepted them if they had known that first and second lieutenants having longer service would be promoted over them. Senator CAPPER the other day told of a captain that would have 1,100 other captains, first, and second lieutenants promoted over him under this holding of the department. Further, Mr. President, there should not be one rule of promotions applied to colonels, lieutenant colonels, and majors, and another and different rule applied to the promotions of captains, first lieutenants, and second lieutenants.

If promotions were thus to be made, due notice ought to have been given to that effect when the examinations were held. There should have been no separate examinations for captains or first and second lieutenants. I have no doubt many men were selected as second lieutenants who would not have been appointed to captaincies at all. Indeed, I know of such cases. And yet under this ruling of the department all first and second lieutenants were in substance made captains and their commissions are proposed to be dated back to July 1, 1920. The result is that we have, as I stated before, practically no lieutenants in the Army. We had better save a few of these first and second lieutenants for emergencies. My distinguished and esteemed friend from Minnesota, Mr. NELSON, stated when the Army reorganization bill was up last spring that it provided for a top-heavy Army. I do not know what he would have said about it if he had known that under it, in less than a year, we were to have no lieutenants in the Army at all. In the late war with Germany the lieutenants of the Army did wonderful fighting, and yet our present Army will have no lieutenants if these promotions are permitted. The result is, Mr. President, I shall object to the promotions of these first and second lieutenants to captaincies, and let the matter go over to another session, when we can remedy this defect. It should be remedied before we indorse it by confirmation of these promotions.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

Mr. McKELLAR. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. McCUMBER. Inasmuch as we are discussing something that is not before the Senate at present, and inasmuch as there will be ample opportunity later to discuss that matter, and as we have been expecting a vote upon the conference report on the tariff measure for some little time, may I ask the Senator if he will not permit us to proceed and get a vote upon the conference report at this time?

Mr. McKELLAR. I am going to take only a few moments more. I wish to say to the Senator from North Dakota that there is a difference between the emergency tariff bill and the question of the promotion of these officers. Some of the second lieutenants are going to be promoted 1,100 numbers ahead of those who made a better showing and stood a better examination than the lieutenants and who have become captains through examinations. The Senator's tariff bill, which I know is important to him, is a matter of no concern to the country, because the country knows it is not going to become the law. In going through the form of passing his tariff bill we are dealing with something that is not important practically, because everybody knows that as soon as it is passed—and it is going to be passed—the President is going to veto it, to the great gratification of a large number of our Republican friends. We are talking about a vain and idle thing when we discuss the emergency tariff bill, and the session is drawing to a close. We are simply wasting the time of the Senate in considering it. Many Senators on that side are holding their nose when they vote for it. I have postponed making this statement to the Senate about these promotions in the Army for a number of days, hoping to have an opportune time; but it seemed that it did not come, and I thought the matter ought to be submitted to the Senate. It is a live, active question and ought to have consideration, while the Senator's bill is dead before it is passed.

Mr. President, I do not believe the Senate will agree to the confirmation of second lieutenants who have been promoted over first lieutenants in the first place and captains in the second place. It is wrong in principle and policy. I am sure the Senate will not do it.

For the reasons which I have called to the attention of the Senate I have taken a little of the valuable time of the Senator from North Dakota in making the statement to the Senate, because it is important.

I apologize to him for interrupting the consideration of his bill, and would not have done it if I had not considered it under the circumstances of much more importance.

PROPOSED REFERENCE OF POST-OFFICE NOMINATIONS.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I desire just a moment to ask unanimous consent for the reference of certain appointments that have been made by the President. I refer to the list of former service men and widows of former service men who have been appointed as postmasters and whose names are now before the Senate, and which list appears in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 5. I ask unanimous consent, as in open executive session, that the nominations be referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. McCUMBER. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

EMERGENCY TARIFF—CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15275) imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I stated some days ago why I had supported the bill which is now before the Senate of the United States as an emergency tariff bill, and I do not intend to make any remarks upon the merits of the bill as a whole; I think it would be a consumption of time to no purpose; but I do wish to express my disappointment at the action of the conference committee to which the bill was referred. I of course do not intend to express any doubt that the conferees on the part of the Senate performed their duty as conscientiously as they could have done, but the result is that the report which is now before the Senate has eliminated the provision for a modest tariff upon hides.

The bill as originally framed by the House and which came to the Finance Committee of the Senate made no provision for a duty upon meats or upon hides. There was no attempt made to take care of the great cattle industry of the country, an industry to which we look for the principal meat products of the country. We all realized that the industry had suffered greatly by reason of the great depression in the price of cattle and of meat products; so when the matter came to the Senate Committee on Finance an amendment was proposed placing a duty of 2 cents per pound upon the importation of fresh meats. A very modest duty of 15 per cent ad valorem was likewise suggested upon hides, with the hope that if any of the industries were to be benefited by the passage of the bill that industry would at least receive some slight benefit from the measure.

When the matter came into the Senate an amendment was proposed placing a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem upon advanced hide products. That amendment, as I understand, was offered by the senior Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE]. It was agreed to by the Senate, but apparently the Senator from Massachusetts misjudged the situation and found that there was already a tariff of 30 per cent ad valorem upon manufactured leather products and that his amendment would be in the nature of a reduction. Therefore when the matter came before the conferees it was thought that the way to handle it, rather than to do anything that might at all mitigate against the interest of the manufacturers of hides, was to strike out the duty on hides altogether, as well as the 10 per cent ad valorem duty upon manufactured products.

The result is that the action of the conference committee takes away any duty upon hides and leaves the situation as it is at the present time, with an ad valorem of 30 per cent upon the manufactured product. It has been stated on the floor of the Senate this morning that that duty upon hides was stricken out in conference because it was alleged that the packers of the country practically controlled the hide industry; that they purchased practically all of the hides that went into the market of the country; that they purchased the cattle which carried the hides, and the price of which would enter into the sale of the animal at the packers' market.

But I desire to call attention to the fact that that can not be so, because there is left in the bill, according to the conference report, the duty of 2 cents a pound upon fresh meat, and if the packers controlled the hide industry of the country they controlled the meat industry, and whereas the importation of hides is a comparatively small matter, yet the control of the meat products of the country affects vitally every household in the land, and they have left in the bill the tariff of 2 cents a pound upon meats. If the packers control the one industry they control the other. I submit that there is absolutely no reason why there should be retained in the bill the provision of 2 cents a pound upon meat and the provision of 15 per cent ad valorem upon hides stricken out, because if the argument of the packers applies to the hides it applies to the meats.

A member of the conference committee has stated on the floor this morning that the reason why the tariff upon hides was stricken out was because under the rule the conference committee could not increase the compensatory duty upon the manufactured product. It is true that striking out the 10 per cent ad valorem amendment upon manufactured products would have left the tariff upon the manufactured products still 30 per cent, notwithstanding the fact that the manufacturers of hides had such a controlling influence, at least with the House conferees, that they were able to strike out absolutely any provision for a tariff upon hides. They wanted to get the hides free and yet retain the 30 per cent ad valorem duty upon the manufactured products.

I wish to say to those Senators who have been influential in this respect that the time has come when the people of the country are not going to permit this high tariff for the benefit of any particular section of the country. They are not going to levy a high tariff upon the manufactured products and leave out a tariff upon the raw materials. I wish the people of the western country to understand that cattlemen all over the country, the man who takes the hides to the markets from any section of the country, under the provisions of the conference report will be deprived of the benefit of any kind of a tariff, because under the rule the conferees could not increase the compensatory duty upon the manufactured product, although the manufacturers are now reaping the benefit of a duty of 30 per cent ad valorem. I think the people of the country should understand this fact.

I am going to vote for the conference report because I believe there is a great emergency in the country. I can not say that this bill will do the many good things that have been predicted for it, but if it will do any good I believe it ought to be passed in order to help relieve the very depressing situation which prevails throughout the country. I express the hope that when the bill shall pass, as I believe it will, the President of the United States will approve of it, so that the country may at least psychologically reap some benefit from this legislation, which, at least, is proposed in the attempt to relieve a very deplorable situation.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me at this point?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. If I correctly understand the Senator's able speech, the conferees have in their report eliminated the duty upon hides?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That is quite true.

Mr. ASHURST. And have not made a corresponding reduction in the duty on the manufactured article?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Under the existing law there is a duty of 30 per cent upon the manufactured article. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] proposed an amendment to the bill when it was previously in the Senate placing a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem upon the manufactured products. That amendment was agreed to by the Senate, but, apparently, he later found that that would put the manufacturers in a less advantageous position than they now are, so the conferees eliminated the amendment.

Mr. SIMMONS. In other words, the Senator from Massachusetts evidently intended that the 10 per cent duty should be in addition to the present 30 per cent duty, but he left out "in addition," thereby reducing the duty, contrary to his expectation, from 40 per cent to 10 per cent.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, those on both sides of the Senate and the House of Representatives who have voted for this bill, in my judgment, have voted for it upon the hypothesis solely and only that it was a farmers' emergency tariff bill. I am sure that most of the Members of the House and of the Senate who have voted for the bill believe that its psychological effect might be considerable in stimulating the agricultural industries of our country which already have been too much discriminated against. The bill still contains some value, but I regret and deplore—I will not characterize it as bad faith, for that would be unparliamentary—the circumstance if in this, which is supposed to be a farmers' bill, a bill solely and only to encourage and stimulate agriculture, they have done that which for 100 years has disgraced the annals of our legislative halls, to wit, kept a protective tariff on the manufactured article and retained the products of the farm, the field, and the ranch on the free list.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona yield to me?

Mr. ASHURST. I want first to finish my statement.

Those Senators who have voted for the bill may be justified in now voting for the conference report, but I wish it understood, so far as my vote is concerned, that I regret the alteration by the conferees. The bill yet has some effect for good in stimulating and encouraging our agricultural industries, but discriminations must not continue. If this be a sample of what Senators on the other side are going to give us in the tariff bill yet to come, if in the future they are going to give us a tariff bill which puts the manufactured article under a high protective tariff and places the products of the farm, the field, and the ranch on the free list, then again will their party be hurled from a towering eminence to the place where it was hurled in 1912.

I thought the time had come in America when the Republican Party, or at least the Democratic Party, had learned that a country can not subsist with such a gross discrimination written into its laws as the placing of manufactured leather which goes into boots and shoes under a high protective tariff and the raw material, which the farmer and the ranchman produces, on the free list.

Mr. McCUMBER. Will the Senator from New Mexico yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator from Arizona is not contending, is he, that the conference committee has done anything with reference to the Underwood-Simmons tariff law?

Mr. ASHURST. I contend that the conferees took the duty off hides.

Mr. McCUMBER. We have not interfered with that. The emergency tariff bill as it passed the other House contained nothing with reference to hides. The Senate put a compensatory duty on hides, but the House Members would not agree to it, and we thought it was better to put the bill through even with that left out, keeping the law unchanged as provided in the Underwood-Simmons tariff law, than to have the bill fail of passing the two Houses. That is practically all there was to it. I am as strongly in favor as is either the Senator from New Mexico or the Senator from Arizona of a duty on hides, because they are the farmer's finished product; they are not raw material to him; but we have not time to further consider that matter now in the closing days of the session. When, however, we frame our next tariff law, Senators will find that I shall stand pretty firmly for a protection on hides as well as on meat.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator from New Mexico will further yield to me, all I want to ask of any Senator is this: "Are you for protection?" "Very well; then your foot may be upon the unriven rock as a philosophy of government, providing you extend the burdens and benefits to all alike." "Sir, are you for tariff for revenue only?" "You may plant your foot on the unriven rock as a philosophy of government if you raise revenue from the products of the farm, the field, and the ranch just as you raise revenue from the products of the factory." "Sir, are you for that absurd, hazy, nebulous thing which exists in the imagination only of theorists—free trade?" "You may even make a fair argument for that absurd doctrine if you believe in free trade in all things"; but how, in the name of fairness, how in the name of conscientious legislation, any Congress, now or hereafter, could put the manufactured article under the protection of a high tariff duty and then say to the farmer and the ranchman, "Sir, you must compete with the cheap foreign markets in order that our home factories may obtain their raw material cheaper."

When I first came to the Senate I was not much of a compromiser; I demanded the whole loaf or none; but I have learned a vast deal of legislation; I have learned that legislation is not logical; 2 and 2 make 4, that is logical; but it is impossible to legislate logically; there must be give and take if you ever expect to get anywhere. You must be able to negotiate compromises; you must sometimes accredit the other fellow with at least a grain of wisdom or a small particle of information. So, deploring that the duty on hides has been eliminated, or that the Senate conferees yielded on that item, I expect to vote for the report.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, may I call the attention of the Senator from Arizona to what the conferees did, both as to hides and manufactures of hides?

Mr. ASHURST. So far as I am concerned, I will be glad to have the Senator do so, although the Senator from New Mexico has the floor.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have no objection to the Senator from Texas making the statement.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, the conference report not only struck out the duty on hides but also the duty which the Senate added on hides in the various processes of manufacture, thereby not leaving any discrimination, so far as the conference report is concerned, in this particular measure.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That is quite true, and I made a statement to that effect in the early part of my remarks; but it seems to me, in view of the peculiar conditions, that, when the manufacturer already has an ad valorem tariff of 30 per cent upon the manufactured product in any process of manufacture, including the cost of hides, labor, and everything else, if he found himself in this predicament, at least he might have compromised with his conscience by permitting the cattleman to have a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem on hides.

Mr. REED. Compromised his profits, not his conscience.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The suggestion has been made that the compromise should refer to profits only and not to conscience. I imagine that some manufacturers still have consciences, and they might reach some compromise of their conscience, but they have not done that; the duty on hides has been stricken out. I wish to say now that when we come to frame the regular tariff bill, if the manufacturers are going to be so insistent upon the preservation of their own profits, without regard to anybody else, they may meet with considerable trouble in framing tariff legislation at the next session of Congress.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment before he takes his seat?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. SIMMONS. The matter could have been adjusted in conference so that the manufacturers of leather would have a compensatory duty of 200 per cent, but it could not be adjusted so that they would get a compensatory duty of 300 per cent. That was what they wanted, and because they could not get that the duty on hides was stricken out.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am very glad the Senator, who is a member of the conference committee, has made that statement.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I wish to say further a word of protest before this bill comes to a final vote. The bill is a repudiation of a great fundamental Democratic doctrine. Those Democrats who have given it their support now find, even before it has become a law, that their desertion of the Democratic faith has already placed them in a defenseless position.

The bill as reported by the conferees comes stripped of some of the important advantages they hoped to obtain for their constituents, while it retains all of the advantages the protected manufacturers had been granted. Thus early Democrats who have abandoned the faith find how dangerous it is to tamper with a principle and begin to realize the helplessness of their position.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. Just a moment, the Democrats who have abandoned the old party faith for a temporary expedient are now driven into a corner by the representatives of the great manufacturers who have always profited by tariff legislation. Does the Senator from Arizona wish to ask me a question?

Mr. ASHURST. It will be so long that possibly I should not interrupt the Senator, but he has intimated that Senators who are supporting this bill are departing from the straight and narrow path of Democracy. Now, let us see in what respect——

Mr. REED. Does the Senator wish to ask me a question or does he desire to make a speech?

Mr. ASHURST. I want to engage the Senator in a colloquy, if he will permit, for two or three minutes.

Those of us on this side who are supporting the bill insist that it can not be democratic to grant favors to one set of citizens and deny them to others; that it can not be democracy to enact laws for the benefit of one citizen that do not apply equally to all citizens; in other words, we insist that the burdens and benefits of government must be distributed equally and alike to all.

Following that philosophy, we say if you be for free trade, should your mind be captivated by that impossible vagary, if you are honest, you will extend free trade to everything; if you be for protection, you will protect everything; if you seek revenue, sir, you will seek revenue from everything. What right have you as a Democrat to say we will replenish our Treasury by a duty upon this article, but not upon that? What right has a Republican to say, "We will protect this article, but not that?" What right has a wild-eyed free trader to say, "We will have free trade on this, but not on that?"

James Madison, a Democrat, who wrote the first tariff bill, who for eight years was President, and who during the eight years preceding that time was Secretary of State under Thomas Jefferson, was for a tariff on raw material; Jefferson, the father of the Democratic Party, was for a tariff on raw material; Andrew Jackson, who not only won with his sword the liberties of the people but sustained them as well with his pen, likewise was for a tariff on raw material.

Tariff duties on manufactured articles and free raw material that goes into the finished product is a heresy that has crept into the Democratic Party within the past 30 years. Call the roll of those who built up the Democratic Party; call the roll of those Democrats who for 50 years occupied the Presidency, and it will be found that they were for a tariff on raw material if there were imposed a tariff on the manufactured articles. Call the roll of the immortal Senators and Representatives who have served their country and enriched the annals of the Democratic Party, and it will be found they were all for free trade for the finished product if there was to be free trade for the raw material. Protection for none or protection for all. Equal rights to all, special privileges to none. It is unjust and undemocratic to say to the farmer, "Sir, produce, produce, in a free trade unprotected market," and then say to the manufacturer, "You may sell in a protected market."

Mr. President, I thank the Senator for permitting this interruption. The Senator's Democracy is so unquestioned and his record as a Democrat is so unblemished that I fear his charge that we have departed from the faith may injure some of us, because when he announces the doctrine of Democracy all Democrats listen, knowing his splendid record in the past as a Democrat.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, in answering "the question" just asked permit me to say that I have never achieved anything so satisfactory as to have inspired the remarkable specimen of eloquence with which the Senator from Arizona has just entertained, delighted the Senate, and enlightened the country.

I do not intend to review the history of the tariff question nor to engage in any discussion about what Mr. Madison or Mr. Jefferson may have said a hundred years ago. I should be quite willing to do so if the time of the Senate were not just now so precious.

If I know anything about Democratic doctrine, it is that the levying of a tax not to raise revenue but raise the profits of a favored class is wrong in principle and opposed to the fundamentals of the Democratic Party. Against that heresy Democracy has steadfastly stood since before the distinguished Senator from Arizona was born.

If I know anything about the philosophy of government as maintained by my party, it is that a law which takes the property of one citizen and gives it to another without compensation is an unjust law. That robbery is still robbery, although perpetrated under the form of law.

The Republican Party have held to the theory that it is justifiable to tax one citizen for the benefit of another. The Democratic Party have denied that doctrine in every platform, on every stump, in every forum, for the past 50 years. Any attempt by a Democrat, by verbal gymnastics, to avoid the consequences of a vote in favor of this Republican protective measure will not for a moment deceive the American people.

We have now a tariff which was levied for revenue purposes. Without claiming that it is perfect, its purpose was to raise revenue for the Government, and not to raise profits for the manufacturers. We have steadfastly so declared, and thus justified that law. It is proposed now to pass this bill, not for the purpose of raising revenue, but for the purpose of tariff protection. The argument that has been made in favor of the bill is that the farmer needs protection; that the bill is to shut out competition and raise the price of the farmer's product to him. We all know that it is not intended the bill will raise revenue for the Government.

What is the justification offered by Democrats who vote in favor of this bill? Is it not that we already have a tariff law upon the statute books; that it affords protection to certain manufacturers, and that therefore a vote in favor of this bill can be excused?

It merely equalizes the situation by extending protection to the farmer. The fallacy in this argument is that we are not now operating under a protective tariff. The law upon the statute books is not a protective measure but a revenue measure.

When the Democrats enacted it they distinctly disclaimed the doctrine of protection. Accordingly, those who now vote in favor of this bill, which is purely protective, can not justify themselves, for they are endeavoring to graft on a Democratic revenue law the Republican doctrine of protection.

The purpose is boldly declared to be to raise the price upon those commodities which are raised by the constituents of Senators who support this measure. Thus these gentlemen place themselves in the position of sanctioning protection.

How, then, can they be heard to object to a bill which will be speedily reported by the new Republican Congress and which will place high protective duties upon manufactured products?

Our friends on this side who support the present bill will be confronted by their own arguments, and, having voted for a protective tariff upon farm products, can not be heard to object to a tariff upon manufactured products.

The present law—which, as I have shown, is a revenue law—is wicked and unjust. The Senator assumes it to be a protective tariff law. "Therefore," says the Senator, "I insist on extending the robbery to cover my own people."

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. REED. I will yield to the Senator for a question.

Mr. MYERS. Has the Senator never believed in emergency legislation to meet emergency conditions?

Mr. REED. I shall discuss the emergency question in a moment.

Mr. MYERS. I will ask the Senator in that connection this question, the two together:

When the farmers of the West, who have for years combated droughts and high prices of all farm machinery and labor, last year made extraordinary efforts to put in a large wheat crop in response to the appeal to have America help feed the world, and produced that crop under enormous costs of labor and high-priced machinery, and have a part of it left over, does the Senator think it is right for them to be compelled to sell what wheat they have left at less than it cost them to produce it?

Mr. REED. I shall answer both of those questions in a moment. I prefer to wait a moment, until I arrive at that topic.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me at that point?

Mr. REED. I can not answer three questions at once. I will yield to the Senator, though. I can not help but do that.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator is undoubtedly one of the ablest men in debate in this country. I know him well enough to know that he wants to be fair. That is his impulse of heart and mind. I am only solicitous at this point that he state my position accurately, and I know the Senator did not intend to state it with inaccuracy a moment ago.

My position is simply this: If it be the policy of our Government to have protection, then I simply insist that protection must be extended to the products of the fields, farms, and ranches alike with the products of the factories. If the policy of our Government be simply a tariff for revenue only, then I insist again that the revenue must be raised from the products of the ranch and the fields just as it is raised from the products of the factories.

I repeat that if theorists again obtain control of the executive branch of the Government and they conclude to have free trade, then I shall insist, as I do in the case of protection and as I do in the case of tariff for revenue, that you must treat all alike—free trade for all if you desire free trade, protection for all if you have it for one; raise the revenue from all if you raise it from one. I simply wish to make my position clear.

Mr. REED. I think the Senator made his position clear. I think he made it clear in the first instance. I do not think I misrepresented him. I certainly did not intend to do so.

Mr. ASHURST. I know that.

Mr. REED. I repeat the Senator's position is that we now have a protective tariff, and that therefore we ought to extend it to include the farmer; but it happens that we have not a protective tariff, but a tariff that the Democrats passed and that they declared to be a revenue tariff; and on to that revenue tariff, which we have always declared to be honest, the Senator proposes to graft a thing that we have always declared to be dishonest and robbery under the form of law; namely, a tariff for protective purposes alone.

That is the trouble with the Senator's logic. Now, if the Republicans bring in at the next session a high protective tariff bill, and leave out the products of the Senator's State, he may then protest, as he now protests, that he has a right to put farm products in; but, living under a tariff for revenue, enacted by Democratic Congresses, signed by a Democratic President, which we have defended on the ground that it is a tariff for revenue only and not a protective tariff, he proposes to graft onto it as gross a piece of bald protectionism, baldly announced, as has ever been conceived. That is the fault in the Senator's logic. All of which leads me to the observation that poor Hancock was about right when he said that in his judgment the tariff was a local issue; in other words, that many men were in favor of a tariff when there was some benefit flowing to them or to their immediate constituencies.

Mr. ASHURST. I think I can improve on Gen. Hancock's epigram. Every man is a free trader after he gets his own interest protected.

Mr. REED. Very well; you can turn it around, and after all what have you said, except that every man is in favor of robbing if he is permitted to divide the loot. Such a man sits here not for the purpose of enacting legislation for the benefit of all the country. He regards legislation as a pork-barrel proposition. Out of that barrel he proposes to grab with both hands everything that will be of particular benefit to his own community. He pursues his nefarious business in utter disregard of the interests of the rest of the country and of his high duties as a public servant. That is about as sordid and about as contemptible a position as a man can take. It is on the level with what was formerly claimed to be the case with reference to appropriation bills. As to them it was claimed that votes were mustered by giving to each Congressman some particular thing he wanted. In order to get that thing, it was asserted, he would vote for a thousand things he knew were unjust. He voted for a lot of loot because he could get some pork.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator does not apply that to me?

Mr. REED. No; I am merely replying to the Senator's argument. I am trying to show him where his enthusiasm leads him. Suppose the Senate and the House were to adopt that sort of philosophy, and were to boldly declare that they have proposed to have regard only to the interests of their own communities, which, being interpreted, is to have regard for their own political interests, so that they may continue to hold their seats—suppose all Members were to adopt that policy. Then every man in the Congress would be nothing but a public thief in a high place, engaged in the business of picking the pockets of the taxpayers through the agency of the Government of the United States. That is a fine philosophy to be announced as a rule of conduct.

I think I can answer, in my poor way, the question of the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS]. He inquired whether I believed there ever existed such a thing as an emergency, and whether we might not meet an emergency by proper legislation. Mr. President, of course emergencies arise, and when a real emergency does exist which can be met by proper legislation which will do justice to the rest of the country, we are all ready to provide the remedy.

What is this emergency, and how will any benefits accrue to the farmer? The whole world was upon a level of very high prices. Farmers, in common with others, were receiving high prices. Now the values of farm products all over the world have dropped. The farmer is suffering from that depression of prices. It is an economic situation existing not in the United States alone but in every country of the world.

Mr. MYERS. I call the Senator's attention to the fact that the price of the farmer's wheat was fixed during the war, and he did not reap the enormous prices that people engaged in business or commerce did.

Mr. REED. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. MYERS. Certainly.

Mr. REED. I ask the Senator if he did not vote to give Mr. Hoover the powers under which he regulated the price of the farmer's wheat?

Mr. MYERS. I did——

Mr. REED. I ask him also if I did not stand here in the Senate within 3 feet of the Senator from Montana, hour after hour, and declare that Mr. Hoover would employ his powers to license grain dealers and millers to cut down the farmer's prices, and if, nothwithstanding my warnings and my prophecies, the Senator did not vote to give Hoover those powers?

Mr. MYERS. I did; because I do not believe in profiteering by farmers or anybody else, and I voted to fix a price on the farmer's wheat, and I now vote to give the farmer justice and enable him to get a little more for his wheat than what it costs to produce it. I do not believe any producer of a necessity of life ought to be expected or compelled to receive less than what it costs to produce the article.

Mr. REED. In other words, the Senator is now ready to make restitution for his previous wrong.

Mr. MYERS. To give equality. I believe in equality.

Mr. REED. No; you can not give equality. Mr. President, as suggested by a Senator near me, cost is never the basis of market price; it is an incident. But let us see how you are going to give back to the farmer the thing which you took from him. When you denied him the markets of the world in which to sell——

Mr. MYERS. I want to remove from the Senator's mind a wrong impression of Mr. Hoover. I do not want the Senator to have any more wrong impressions than necessary, and I want him to know that Congress fixed the price of wheat and not Mr. Hoover.

Mr. REED. Congress never fixed the price of a bushel of wheat on earth.

Mr. MYERS. It passed an act fixing the price of wheat.

Mr. REED. No, it did not. Congress passed an act declaring that the Government would guarantee that wheat should not go below a certain price. This it did to encourage the farmer to plant heavily. But it never fixed the price at which the farmer should sell his wheat. Congress also gave Mr. Hoover the power to license grain dealers and millers and to organize the Export Grain Corporation. The latter concern was organized and always completely dominated by Mr. Hoover. Not a bushel of wheat could be shipped abroad except it was sold to the grain corporation. Thus the export trade was placed completely under Mr. Hoover's control. Having the power to license the grain dealer and miller, Mr. Hoover, in cold and deliberate abuse of his authority to license, fixed absolutely the price he would permit the miller and grain dealer to pay for wheat. This price he fixed at the minimum price guaranteed by the Government.

The miller and grain dealer, together with the export corporation, controlled by Mr. Hoover, constituted the entire market in which grains could be sold. Over them all Hoover had the power of life and death. He could condemn them to ruin by the simple process of revoking their license to do business. Thus he deprived the farmer of any market for his wheat at any price except that which Mr. Hoover arbitrarily fixed.

It was a willful abuse of the licensing power granted by Congress, for that power was given solely to stop the cornering of the grain market and the hoarding of necessities. It was intended to punish those who were violating the laws of good morals and honest trade. It was intended to prevent a cornering of the market. Mr. Hoover employed it to corner the market and to arbitrarily fix prices. It was one of the baldest misuses of power ever known in the history of this or any other country.

I repeat that Congress never intended that Hoover should fix the price of wheat or the price of the other necessities of life. The debates in the Senate show this beyond peradventure or dispute. The whole course of the legislation and the public discussion at the time demonstrates the truth of what I have said.

But because Congress gave Hoover the right to license a miller in order to prevent profiteering, or over a grain dealer in order to prevent profiteering, he exercised that power of life and death for an entirely different purpose, namely, to regulate the price of wheat, and said to his licensees, "If you pay more than a certain amount for wheat, viz, the minimum price fixed by Congress, I will destroy your business." That is how the farmer's market was taken from him and the price of his wheat fixed.

Mr. MYERS. I suggest that it was the evident intention of Congress to give the farmer enough for his wheat to give him a reasonable profit, and no more.

Mr. REED. So long as the law was on the statute books, the farmers did receive the guaranteed price Congress had fixed. But during all that time Hoover deprived him of the higher price he could have obtained in the market. I deny the statement that Congress meant to fix the maximum price.

Mr. President, I do not want to stand here and engage in continued colloquies, although they are very interesting, because I do not want to hold the Senate away from the business which it has before it. I could talk this bill to death; two or three of us, at least, could talk it to death. But I am not disposed to take that course. I want, however, to finish my reply to the Senator from Montana. He proposes now that we shall make restitution to the farmer for what he says Hoover, or as he mistakenly puts it, Congress took from him during the war. He now declares that the farmer ought to have had the benefit of the open market of the world during the war, and that market having been denied him, we ought now make restitution. How is that to be done?

Mr. MYERS. If the Senator will permit, I do not say that. I say that the farmer should not have the privilege of profiteering, and that he should not now have imposed upon him starvation.

Mr. REED. The Senator's statement was that the farmer was not allowed to enjoy the profits of the war as others were, and that now he is entitled to this protection by way of compensation.

Let us analyze that. We speak about the farmer as though he were one man, and as though, having taken from this aggregate man the advantage of an open market and deprived him, let us say, of a billion dollars, we can now, by passing this law, put back the billion into this pocket. But it happens that the farmer is not one man; he is many millions of men. Some farmers raised wheat during the war, and some of them did not.

Many of those who did not raise wheat during the war are raising it now, and many of those who raised wheat during the war are raising something else, or they have quit farming. Many, in fact, are dead. You can not, therefore, by this bill restore the money to the pockets from which it was taken. You do not know how much any man has lost, nor who has lost it. The benefits of this bill will not flow to the man who lost the money but to anybody who happens just now to be raising wheat. So that there is nothing in that argument. You can not carry it out. You do me no good, if I have been wronged by a law, by passing a law which may put something in the pockets of John Smith or William Jones, who were, perhaps, not even farmers during the war.

But, Mr. President, the real and substantial objection to this bill, outside of the great question of principle, is, as I started to say when I was interrupted, that when you undertake to play the game of protection with the manufacturers of this country, when you admit the principle of protection, you have put your head in the lion's mouth. There never has been a time when the New England manufacturer did not know how to take care of himself. I said the other day, and I employ the same expression, a New England manufacturer can go around one of our western statesmen just like a cooper around a barrel. He can "head him in" and close up the bung hole before the poor fellow knows what is being done to him.

The eastern manufacturer makes a scientific study of the tariff. He knows the markets. He understands the effect of competition. He carefully devises laws which will prevent competition and which will enable him to extort unnatural and unjust profits from the American people. He knows just how to frame the laws and the influence necessary to secure their enactment.

Some western and southern Democrats now propose to join these eastern protectionists. You are now asking exactly what they ask, namely, a law to shut out competition.

The difference between these Democrats and the eastern manufacturer is this: The eastern manufacturer contends for a law which he knows actually will shut out a vigorous and effective competition. The proponents of this bill are contending for a law which will not shut out competition, because the competition does not exist.

The eastern manufacturer contends for something substantial which will benefit him. You are contending for something unsubstantial and which will bring no benefit to the farmers you so valiantly profess to champion.

The American woolen manufacturer knows that if you take down the tariff wall he will be met immediately by large shipments of goods from abroad which will compel him to cut his prices to the American purchaser. But he also knows—and we ought to have sense enough to know—when we raise more wheat than can be consumed at home, and must therefore ship hundreds of millions of bushels abroad every year, that a law which proposes to tax wheat coming into this country can not materially advance the price of wheat.

We ought to have sense enough to know that when we accept a doctrine of protection on farm products which we do not import we at the same time commit ourselves to the doctrine of protection on manufactured products which we can import and ought to import. We ought to recognize the fact that a high tariff on manufactured goods will enrich the manufacturer and impoverish all the people, including the farmer. We ought to know that we can not raise the price of a farm product by prohibiting its importation when all the time we are producing a surplus which we are obliged to export.

Mr. MYERS. Whom will it hurt, as far as wheat is concerned?

Mr. REED. Very well, if the bill is not going to hurt anybody, then it is not going to help anybody. If it does not raise the price of wheat, then you are offering your farmer a paper resolution, written in fraud, conceived in chicanery, and put forth for the purpose of deception.

Mr. OVERMAN. A gold brick.

Mr. REED. Yes; a gold brick, a term that out West even we are beginning to understand, and incidentally they are beginning to understand the legislative gold brick quite as well as they do one made of metal.

Will some one tell me, when the farmer of this country is obliged to find a market abroad for 218,000,000 bushels of his wheat is he to be benefited by this bill? If the farmer does not sell this surplus abroad it will rot in his bin. How is he going to be materially benefited by a law that proposes to tax grain coming into this country?

Oh, but some one says "Grain does come in."

This last year there were some 30,000,000 bushels of grain, in round numbers, that came in, and that wheat competes with our wheat. It does not require much thought to discern the fallacy in that assertion. The Dominion of Canada and the United States of America are all on the same piece of land. There is nothing that divides them during a good part of the way but a red line drawn on the map. The same kind of land lies immediately to the north that lies immediately to the south of that line. The same kind of people live in both countries. The wages upon the Canadian farm are higher to-day than they are upon the American farm. Canada is an exporter of wheat, and the United States is an exporter of wheat. The wheat raised just north of the Minnesota line or the Dakota line competes with the wheat raised just south of it—where? Wherever they meet in the general markets of the world. Bushel for bushel, they compete with each other. There in that market they reach exactly the same level of price.

But Canadian wheat comes into our country notwithstanding that fact, and why? Simply because of two circumstances. First, railroad lines are so built that a part of the country of Canada is tributary to the immediate markets of this country. Just as wheat will flow from the State of Minnesota naturally to the great mills of Minnesota, just as it will flow from Dakota to the great mills of Minnesota, because that milling center is on the shortest and most direct route, so some of the wheat raised in Canada flowing along the natural lines of commerce comes to those great mills to be ground into flour.

There is another reason which I can illustrate. I happen to live, as Senators all know, in Kansas City, where we have the great wheat belt of Kansas and the great wheat belt of Missouri to draw from. We have at Kansas City a market which I think is the third or fourth of the entire country.

A vast volume of wheat is grown right around us, and yet while that is true we bring wheat from northern Minnesota and from Dakota, of and for what reason? Because they raise certain varieties of wheat that are slightly different from the wheat raised in Kansas and Missouri. The mixing of the different grades of wheat produces a better flour than the wheats will produce if ground alone. The same principle applies to the great mills of Minnesota. They have the wheat hauled to them from the South and they have wheat hauled from the North. Being a great center of production and milling, a large quantity of Canadian wheat has come in there purely for the economic reasons to which I have referred.

But what happens to that wheat? What is the result? The first result is a better grade of flour. The second result is that we do the milling in this country and we make the profit. The third result is that our people have whatever economic benefits flow from the highly sensible transaction.

But while we have brought in 30,000,000 bushels more of wheat than there was in this country, at the same time we had to send out 225,000,000 bushels. But what of it? It simply means that a little more of the wheat that is down near the seaboard will be shipped abroad, and in the long run the farmer's price will be fixed by the wheat that is sent abroad, just as it would have been had no wheat been imported.

If the Canadian wheat had not come here, we would have had to meet it in the foreign market and sold our grain there in competition with it.

The price of the surplus we send abroad will be affected by this competition, and the price of the surplus will fix the price in the domestic market.

Is any Democrat going to deny that? Must I stand and argue that to Democrats? There is not a Democrat here who has not stood on the platforms of his State and declared to the people that protection upon farm products is of no value, because we have a surplus to ship abroad, and that the price of the surplus fixes the price in the home market.

There is one thing we may accomplish. We may stop that wheat flowing naturally into our mills. We may make those mills bring wheat a little farther to their hoppers, and then when we get through with all of it we will find the price over in Europe has fixed the price here.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And has increased the price of flour here.

Mr. REED. Yes; and we will probably have increased the price of flour here, because we will have interfered with the natural flow of the wheat along the most economical lines.

Mr. President, will some of the learned gentlemen take a pencil and figure out how they are going to sell 218,000,000 bushels of wheat over in Liverpool and then arbitrarily raise the price here 30 or 40 cents beyond the price received in Liverpool? Imagine yourself in the wheat business with a million bushels of wheat on hand, demanding, upon the passage of this bill, an arbitrary raise above the market price of 40 or 50 cents a bushel. Imagine everyone else in the country that has any wheat to ship abroad making the same demand. Of course, you would not send the wheat abroad, for you could not sell it there for a cent more than you can now. Then what would you do with it?

You would keep your wheat and after you had kept it awhile you would conclude you would rather have the foreign price than nothing and so you would sell at that price. If you were buying wheat, would you buy and pay 40 or 50 cents more than the price abroad with full knowledge that there was a surplus of 225,000,000 bushels in the country that had to go abroad and be sold at the foreign price? You would know that if you bought and paid in excess of what you could get abroad, at the end of the season you would find yourself bankrupt because you would eventually be compelled to sell your wheat at the foreign level. That is all there is in the question.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, will the Senator let me make a suggestion?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from North Carolina?

Mr. REED. With pleasure.

Mr. SIMMONS. If the 25,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had not been exported to this country and sold here in competition with our wheat, it would have been exported to Europe and there would have been sold in competition with our exported wheat.

Mr. REED. I tried to express the same idea, but I did not do so in so clear a way as the Senator has.

The fact is there are not enough mouths in this country to eat our wheat. There are mouths abroad that want it, but our wheat raisers have to sell their wheat over there in competition, so what are we offering the farmer? I do not wish to use harsh terms. I believe I will not say what I had in mind because it might sound cruel, but this I will say: This bill is an apple of Sodom, which will turn to ashes upon the lips of the American farmer.

Now, I am coming to the second point. I said that you were conceding the Republican doctrine and that you were going to pay the price. Before the bill got out of the committee the manufacturing protectionist had written his doctrine into it. He had assured himself of real swag in exchange for the farmers' imaginary swag. He is, in fact, the man who gets all the swag, because, as I have said, he is in competition with foreign manufacturers in this market. Observe when you put your little tariff here on wool and at the same time tell us that there is so much wool in this country that we can not use it for years—and if that is true no other wool can be shipped in here to amount to anything—how the manufacturer proceeded to take care of himself. He at once insisted upon a compensatory duty.

I read from the bill:

> Manufactures of wool or hair of the kind provided for in paragraph 17 is the component material of chief value, 45 cents a pound in addition to the rates of duty imposed thereon by existing law.

It works in this way: A tariff of 10 cents a pound is placed upon raw wool. Does the manufacturer get a compensating tariff of 45 cents only on the manufactured wool? Not at all. He gets a tariff of "45 cents a pound on any article in which wool is the chief component of value." Accordingly he puts a small amount of wool in shoddy goods, 90 per cent of which in weight and material may have been made out of rags from the hospitals and pesthouses of the world. Of course, the 10 per cent of wool that he puts in to hold the stuff together until he can sell it to the unsuspecting citizen is the chief component in value, whereupon he collects 45 per cent not only on the wool that he has put into that garment but 45 per cent on the shoddy as well. With a countenance as impassive as the Sphinx, apparently as innocent as a babe, this gentleman puts this over. I will venture the assertion that the committee that wrote this "farmers' bill" did not know that it was providing the shoddy and the cotton that goes into goods are protected 45 per cent along with the wool.

The cotton raiser is here also seeking a duty on the only kind of cotton the production of which is monopolized—for the one grade of cotton that can be raised on only a few patches of ground in the United States. The great bulk of that cotton must be imported. That gentleman wants to be protected on his cotton. What is the price the American people must pay? A compensatory duty on cotton goods is to be paid by every man who wears a shirt, by every woman who wears a cotton dress. Every time we use any cotton for any purpose there will be some of this particular variety of cotton shown to be in the article, and we shall pay a tariff duty on all the manufactured cotton goods.

Also we are going to protect lemons. There are a few lemons imported into this country. I wish there were many more. I am getting a little tired of the Fruit Growers' Association of California, which has grown into a huge monopoly, fixing the price of lemons for the country. The duty on lemons, however, will not do any good out in Montana; it will not do any good out in Missouri.

The only place that is to be benefited by that duty is a little ground out in California. Everybody who drinks a glass of lemonade will have to pay that tax.

Now, Mr. President, just a final word. Where does this new doctrine bring us? The steel manufacturer claims he can not manufacture steel without protection; the copper manufacturer claims he can not manufacture without protection; the lead and zinc concerns cry for protection; the woolen and cotton goods men demand protection; the glass and queens ware men insist upon protection. Nobody can compete with foreign industry; everybody will be destroyed unless he is protected.

At last comes the American farmer—not the American farmer, but a few gentlemen who, I think, are mistaken in the idea that they represent him—and it is said he can not compete with the foreign producer. Yet we must sell something abroad.

Are we to erect a wall around our country and get rich by trading with each other? Why are we building vast argosies to ply between our ports and the ports of other countries if they are to carry nothing in their bottoms? The tariff advocate says, "You must bring nothing here, because it will destroy our industries." He further says, "We can not compete with foreign goods and products at home." Well, if we can not compete with them at home, how can we compete with them abroad? So the doctrine denies our ability to maintain ourselves in the world; to trade with anybody for anything under any circumstances. Is it proposed that we shall create a condition in this country where we shall have high prices here for American goods and those goods be sold at a low price to foreigners? Is the result of all our legislation to be that we shall fatten American concerns with high prices paid by the American people and let foreigners have the benefit of low prices?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Missouri yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. REED. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. THOMAS. Of course, the Senator from Missouri recalls that the decadence of our old merchant marine began and continued with the operation of the protective tariff?

Mr. REED. Yes; I remember that; but the fact seems to have been forgotten by many.

Mr. President, I have taken too much time, but I want to express this thought in conclusion: I venture to make the prediction that the American protectionist will speedily undergo a change of heart. The time when we can talk about infant industries has passed. The infant of 50 years ago is the giant to-day standing astride the world. There is not in any country under the bending sky to be found such vast and invincible combinations of talent and of money and of energy and of labor as are possessed in the United States of America. Those who recently sought to build great fleets of vessels did it upon the theory that we were to extend our foreign trade; of gathering in other lands their dollars and bringing them here to add to our wealth. They were right.

The day has come when America must enter the markets of the world; when she must send her flag into every port; when American-branded goods must be found on the counters of every civilized people and even among savage tribes. The day has come when America must cease the policy of isolation, so far as our trade and commerce are concerned. We must be prepared to compete with the world; we must be prepared and we are prepared to go into the markets of the world and meet foreign competition.

We hear a reference to the old question of pauper labor. That is a theory that has been exploded in every Democratic platform. I feel this afternoon as though I were making a speech 15 years ago; then we had a party and a flag that we followed, and on that flag was branded, if not free trade, at least "tariff for revenue only."

We heard then about pauper labor. It was a cry that was not raised by labor but by the capitalists who wanted to profit from labor, and who in those days ground the face of labor with a cruelty that was indescribable. Even while they were talking about pauper labor at the same time they were importing under contract the cheapest labor they could get in all the world and putting it in their mills to take the place of the higher class of labor that existed in this country.

These were the men who raised the cry of pauper labor. Sir, we have all gone over the old beaten path of this argument until I hesitate to repeat it; but it seems that memories are short and it is being forgotten.

The fact is that it is clearly demonstrable that with modern machinery, backed by the brains of intelligent labor, the cost of labor in any given article is less in the first-class mills of the country than it is when the article is produced by the so-called pauper labor of foreign lands.

The only real competitor the United States has to-day is not the pauper labor of the world, but is the labor of the most intelligent and highly civilized countries of the world. Before we had our disagreement with Germany it was German competition and English competition and French competition and Norwegian and Swedish competition and Dutch competition that our merchants and manufacturers had to fear; we never had to fear the competition of India. The lazzaroni of the earth produced with their fingers in the dull way their ancestors had produced a thousand years ago. Chinese manufacturers never came into competition with American manufacturers except as to a few choice silks, or something of that kind, which we could not produce in this country as skillfully as they could. Production to-day is not a question of labor so much as it is of machinery.

Between the day when our grandmothers sat at the spinning wheel and spun the flax and twisted the yarn and wove with their little hand looms the clothing for the backs of themselves and their children, when every hand had to be busy late into day and this, when a mighty factory is run by steam, and when a garment represented almost nothing but labor—between that day and this, when a mighty factory is run by steam, and when one employee can watch 10 or 12 machines that with numberless fingers and with the skill of magic do the work that a hundred or two hundred people formerly did—between these two extremes there is no comparison. There is no more comparison between the pauper laborer of the world, as a competitive factor, and our labor than there is between the uncivilized barbarian with his bow and arrow and the modern soldier with his deadly cannon and other instruments of destruction.

Just as the backward races can not barehanded charge in the mouths of our guns, just as they fall as the autumn leaves before the advance of our men equipped with modern arms, so economically they must give way. They are not and can not be our competitors.

Mr. President, I would not have spoken for more than five minutes if I had not been asked questions and led aside. This bill, Democrats, is a repudiation of our old doctrines. Sugar coat it as you may, it is the same old pill. I regret to see some of my brethren take a position in favor of it, because I know that their action will come home to plague us. I know that no man who votes for this measure can with consistency oppose the bill that I suspect is now being incubated in the offices of the great factories of the East—a bill that will be put over in the next Congress by the immense Republican majority that will assemble here after the 4th of March. But I am not going to stand and try to defeat the bill by a filibuster, although I am sorely tempted to do so. If it is to pass, let it pass, and perhaps our people will all the sooner find out how shallow is the pretense and how hollow the mockery of this so-called farmers' emergency tariff bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD obtained the floor.

Mr. HARRISON. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gronna	McLean	Smith, S. C.
Ball	Hale	McNary	Smoot
Beckham	Harris	Moses	Spencer
Borah	Harrison	Myers	Stanley
Brandegee	Heflin	Nelson	Sterling
Calder	Henderson	New	Sutherland
Capper	Hitchcock	Norris	Swanson
Chamberlain	Jones, N. Mex.	Overman	Thomas
Colt	Jones, Wash.	Phelan	Trammell
Culberson	Kellogg	Phipps	Underwood
Curtis	Kendrick	Pittman	Wadsworth
Dial	Kenyon	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Dillingham	Keyes	Pomerene	Walsh, Mont.
Edge	King	Ransdell	Warren
Elkins	Kirby	Reed	Watson
Fernald	Knox	Sheppard	Williams
Fletcher	La Follette	Shields	Willis
Gay	Lenroot	Simmons	Wolcott
Gerry	Lodge	Smith, Ariz.
Glass	McCumber	Smith, Ga.
Gooding	McKellar	Smith, Md.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eighty-one Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I do not intend to detain the Senate at any length in the discussion of the pending bill, nor do I intend to discuss the details of the measure; but this bill is of too great importance, too vital to the people of the United States, to go through and go to the President unless a serious protest is made against its passage on the fundamental principles of government and taxation, every one of which it violates within the folds of the bill.

I think it is conceded, and no man disputes these facts, that most, if not all, of the duties levied in this bill provide for a higher rate of taxation than any legislation that has been levied on similar articles at any time heretofore in the history of this Government. I think it is conceded and not disputed that the real purpose of the bill is not to raise revenue for the benefit of the Treasury of the United States, but to establish an embargo on the importation of certain classes of foreign goods coming into this country by erecting a tax wall at the customhouse so high that it will cut off entirely the inward flow of commerce so far as most of the items named in the bill are concerned.

If that be true—and, so far as I know, it is admitted—then, Mr. President, the passage of this bill establishes a new era in the problem not only of levying taxes but of carrying on our foreign commerce so far as this Nation is concerned.

It establishes a most serious and dangerous precedent. It is true that one or two items in the bill will be revenue producers, such as sugar; but practically all the items have erected this wall so high that with the tax levied at the customhouse nothing can come in, it being the intention of the proponents of the measure to establish an embargo against foreign competition in order to pyramid prices at home. Of course as to how far the measure will be effective is dependent on many factors that can not be controlled by the bill. Some of the commodities in this bill have their prices fixed in the markets of the world, and others have their values fixed in the home market. On the one hand, for instance, is wheat, a world product, whose final market is established by the prices fixed on the Liverpool exchange; and on the other hand, within the folds of this bill, is corn, a domestic product, whose prices are fixed entirely within the domestic market. So, under those circumstances, no man can predict with safety whether the effect of this bill is going to be to stimulate prices all along the line or whether its effect will be otherwise; but we do know this: No matter what may be the ultimate effect of the bill, we do know the purpose for which it is proposed, and that is the establishment of an embargo on commerce by the hand of taxation—something that even the Republican Party never had the face to propose in the palmiest days of Republican protection.

Then, on the other hand, we have a new problem that is confronting the country—the problem of continuing our foreign trade, developing foreign markets for our excess production, and the collection of the debts due us by nations abroad.

For a quarter of a century or more after the close of the Civil War, during the period when a high protective tariff was maintained in this country, we were a debtor Nation; and notwithstanding the fact that that tariff had a tendency to keep out of this country foreign goods, yet it could be maintained without destroying the business life of the nations with which we dealt, because we were a debtor Nation. If they did not have the gold to pay us for our commodities, when they could not barter or exchange, they held vast amounts of American securities, and could pay us for our goods in the return of American securities, or with the interest on the debts that we owed in Europe, and the dividends.

But to-day no such condition confronts us. We are the one great creditor Nation of the world. The surplus gold of the world is locked in our vaults. American securities which are owned abroad have long since come home. There is no way by which the purchasers of American goods can pay the American people for the price of trade except through barter and exchange. If we have reached the period in the history of the country where the dominant party in control of this Nation for the next four years is about to launch a policy of government that stands for exclusion of foreign trade, the country should know it. If we are about to enter upon a policy that is to close the doors to importations from abroad, and give no chance to exchange our commodities for our neighbor's commodities, and thereby exclude foreign trade, we destroy the export business of the United States.

But not only that, the people of the world owe this Government and the people of America in the neighborhood of $20,000,000,000, Government debts and private debts, and when you continue this policy and say, now that they have no gold to pay you with, and have no American securities to pay you with, that you propose to erect an embargo at the customhouse so that they can not pay your debts by selling you the products of their land and their factories and their mills, then you force repudiation upon them, and must let the burden of that indebtedness go back on your own people, and they become the sufferers in the end.

I take it that the party in power in this Chamber, the Republican Party, would not have proposed this measure if they had not determined on a policy for the future. I know and you know that you can not propose this measure now and repudiate it a few months from now. If this measure is adopted and becomes a law, the man who does not believe it means disaster and ruin to the country is a man without vision and without foresight, in my judgment.

Mr. President, I have said what I wished to say in opposition to this conference report. An extended argument on my part would accomplish nothing. I know that the vote is already prepared for delivery. But it will not end here, and when the hour comes when the American people realize the folly of this legislation there will be a day of reckoning yet to come.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I have listened with my usual pleasure to the Senator from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. I listened but a moment before with renewed pleasure to the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], between whom and me of recent months there has been very little concordance of opinion. But I think that a moment ago he made one of the most brilliant and one of the most profound analyses of the falsity of the whole protective system that I have ever listened to in this Chamber.

I never had an intellect which permitted my momentary unfriendship for a man to interfere with my appreciation of his intellectual ability. I especially listened to his analysis of the bête noire of all the economists for a long time and the "scarecrow" that the Republican Party has held out as a fright to the view of the people in the shape of an image of "pauper labor."

I just want to say that I wish the Senator from Missouri had gone one step farther while he was disclosing the fact that pauper labor was powerless, and had shown the real cause of its powerlessness, because there are two weapons which it does not possess nor ever can possess. One weapon is machinery and the other is intelligence. It needs intelligence even to operate the clumsiest machinery.

The fact is that pauper labor is always helpless, no matter how cheap its per diem purchase, as compared with intelligent labor, whose value is measured in its per product purchase, because pauper labor has not the machinery and has not the intelligence.

Then, I would wish that he had gone one step farther and had said two other things which are always true. Those two other things are these: Machinery is capitalized intellect and intelligence is capitalized labor. The two together spell accumulation, and accumulation of invention and intelligence spells civilization. I just wanted to add those words to the debate, and shall rest content with the final judgment of the people.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I hope we can now have the vote on the emergency tariff bill.

Mr. SMOOT and Mr. SIMMONS called for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FERNALD (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON]. I understand that if he were present he would vote as I am about to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. HENDERSON. I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK], who would vote on this question as I shall vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. KENDRICK (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL]. I am informed that he is in favor of this bill, so I am free to vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MCCUMBER (when Mr. PENROSE's name was called). The senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] is necessarily absent from the Senate, having been called away. If he were present and not paired he would vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], who has not been able to be present, and I have not been able to secure a transfer of my pair. If that Senator were present and I were entitled to vote, I should take infinite pleasure in voting "nay"; but as it is, I must withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. GLASS. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN], which I transfer to the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON], and vote "nay."

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have secured a transfer of my pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH]. I vote "nay."

Mr. GERRY. I desire to announce the absence of the senior Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] on official business.

The result was announced—yeas 49, nays 36, as follows:

YEAS—49.

Ashurst	Dillingham	Jones, N. Mex.	McCumber
Ball	Elkins	Jones, Wash.	McLean
Borah	Fernald	Kellogg	McNary
Brandegee	Frelinghuysen	Kendrick	Myers
Calder	Gay	Kenyon	Nelson
Capper	Gooding	Knox	New
Chamberlain	Gronna	La Follette	Norris
Cummins	Hale	Lenroot	Phelan
Curtis	Henderson	Lodge	Phipps
Pittman	Smoot	Townsend	Willis
Poindexter	Spencer	Wadsworth
Ransdell	Sterling	Warren
Sheppard	Sutherland	Watson

NAYS—36.

Beckham	Harris	Overman	Stanley
Colt	Harrison	Owen	Swanson
Culberson	Heflin	Pomerene	Thomas
Dial	Hitchcock	Reed	Trammell
Edge	Keyes	Shields	Underwood
Fletcher	King	Simmons	Walsh, Mass.
Gerry	Kirby	Smith, Ga.	Walsh, Mont.
Glass	McKellar	Smith, Md.	Williams
Gore	Moses	Smith, S. C.	Wolcott

NOT VOTING—11.

Fall	Johnson, S. Dak.	Page	Sherman
France	McCormick	Penrose	Smith, Ariz.
Johnson, Calif.	Newberry	Robinson

So the conference report was agreed to.

BONUS FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

Mr. MCCUMBER. Mr. President, I am instructed by the Committee on Finance to report back favorably with certain amendments the bill (H. R. 14157) to provide adjusted compensation for veterans of the World War, to provide revenues therefor, and for other purposes, and I submit a report (No. 821) thereon.

I am instructed also to state that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] will file a minority report.

I have been requested also in making the report to present a short statement of the action of the committee thereon. I hope that Senators will allow me this opportunity without interruption so that I may present the matter clearly in 5 or 10 minutes to the end that we may all understand it without going through the more voluminous report.

The bill, known as the soldiers' bonus bill, passed the House in the very closing days of the last session. It contained five different schemes of remuneration, all except the cash plan, in their details, being complex and exceedingly difficult of cost estimate.

As it was apparent even at that time that the Treasury could not meet the added obligation created by the proposed law under our present revenue system, these several bonus proposals were accompanied by a tax scheme which gave little heed to what the business on which it was levied could stand.

Of course, it was not expected and it was not possible that the bill should be considered by the Congress until the assembling of the short winter session; and it is apparent to anyone acquainted with the work of Congress that during the short session, with all the supply bills and other legislation necessary for the conduct of the Government, no such revision of our tax laws as contemplated could be accomplished.

It has been asserted on the floor and elsewhere that the Finance Committee has had this bill since the last of May, 1920. Of course, Senators and Members of Congress know this is not true. They know that Congress adjourned June 5 and did not meet until the month of December. So the committee has had the bill only during part of December, all of January, and part of February.

Hearings were given by the committee early in the session. At the same time hearings were given on the emergency tariff bill. It is needless to say that there are members of the committee who are intensely opposed to this legislation at this time, and that the Secretary of the Treasury considers it most unwise to either add to the taxes or to issue bonds for this purpose.

The exact time at which the bill shall become a law is not so important, provided it is passed a sufficient time prior to the beginning of payments thereunder to enable the veterans to make their selection. The bill, both as it passed the House and as recommended by the Committee on Finance of the Senate, fixes a time in the future for the beginning of the payments thereunder. Therefore, the question whether it becomes a law at the close of this session or early in the next session is not at all important.

The one important thing to the veteran is that its enactment is certain. The important thing to the country is that the payments to be made under it shall begin at such a period as will enable the country to tide over present deficits, and that its obligation, whatever it may be, shall be established to the end that the revenue bill to be taken up in April may be framed with that obligation in view. I hope we can pass it this session. But I appreciate that with the supply bills knocking loudly at our doors, any Senator or number of Senators, however small, could delay final action until the April session.

The committee decided a few days ago to report the bill favorably with such amendments as would postpone the beginning of the payments under it until a period 18 months later than that fixed by the House bill, and would leave the method of meeting the obligation to be determined by the Congress at the April session. I was instructed to present to the committee as accurate a statement as possible as to what this legislation would cost the country, and how that cost would be distributed throughout the ensuing years.

I immediately began my work and have continued it every day, including Sunday, and with the aid of the Actuary from the Treasury Department have just completed the necessary tables to present the matter intelligently to the Congress and to the country.

The Treasury reports show that for the fiscal years 1921 and 1922 there will be an aggregate deficit of nearly $3,500,000,000. If this bill is to go into effect July 1, 1921, as it passed the House, we must issue bonds to meet its requirements. The Secretary of the Treasury deems it most unwise to force a loan at this time, under the depressed conditions of the country and with a sure falling off of revenues. I think we may assume that the Secretary of the Treasury is in accord with the Executive, and therefore the enactment of the bill without such extension of the time of payments thereunder as will pass its obligations over these deficit years might meet with Executive disapproval. The committee, considering all these matters, fixed January 1, 1923, as the date for the beginning of payments thereunder. I think the bill should be passed in that form, leaving the conference committee of the two Houses to get together on some exact date which would not be earlier than July 1, 1921, nor later than January 1, 1923. Or, if the Senate believe that a date earlier than January 1, 1923, should be fixed, it can voice its judgment by an appropriate amendment. I believe that greater progress and better results could be obtained by passing the bill as presented by the Senate committee.

In order to arrive at anything definite we must determine as nearly as may be the number who will avail themselves of each provision of the bill. And, as we may differ in the matter of our estimates of this number, it will necessitate several tables, taking several different estimates as their basis. And with all of them before us, showing the absolute minimum and the possible maximum, we can arrive at a conclusion that will be approximately correct as to the cost and how much must be appropriated each year to cover it.

In making these computations it was necessary to ascertain the number having overseas service, the number having home service, the man days at home and the man days abroad, the average days' service at home, and the average days' service abroad. The 60 days must first be deducted from the home service, and if less than 60 days of such service, then the balance must be deducted from the overseas service. We must estimate for the number who will in all probability apply for each plan, and we must submit several tables based upon different estimates of these proportionate numbers. In each case we must make use of mortuary tables to determine the number of deaths, and must make allowance therefor.

In the certificate plan we must, in addition, estimate the number of borrowers and the percentage of borrowings. We must again make allowance for deaths each year, and the amounts that will become immediately due by reason of such deaths. We must make allowances in each table for yearly repayments of borrowings.

A brief statement of the general plan of the bill, the merits of the bill, the precedents for like legislation, what other countries are doing for their soldiers, the reasons guiding us in making our estimates for the proportionate number applying under each plan, and the tables presenting these estimates are all set forth in full in the report.

Table I shows the cost to the country if every veteran should accept the cash plan, together with the amount to be paid each year. This cash plan involves the minimum expenditure.

Table II shows the total cost if every veteran should accept the certificate plan, with no borrowings, together with the estimated amount to be paid each year due to deaths.

The only purpose of this table, No. II, is to show the greatest possible cost to the country. The two together present the two extremes. The cash plan would require nearly all of the entire debt to be paid in the first two years, a small balance running into the third year. The certificate plan, though involving a much larger sum, would distribute the payments over 20 years.

Table III shows the total cost if 80 per cent of the veterans should accept the certificate plan and 20 per cent the cash plan, together with the cost each year, making allowance for an estimate of 33⅓ per cent of borrowings and payment of full amounts assured on account of deaths. It is my opinion that this table will be the most accurate one presented.

Under the 20-year endowment plan employed by the principal insurance companies, about 15 per cent of the total insurance is represented in borrowings. We have a little more than doubled that amount in our estimate.

Table IV shows the cost if 66⅔ per cent should apply for the certificate plan and 33⅓ per cent for the cash plan, making allowance for deaths and estimating the borrowings at 33⅓ per cent.

The experience tables of the large insurance companies carrying 20-year endowment insurance policies show about 15 per cent of the total insurance loaned out to the policyholders. To be conservative, we have more than doubled this amount.

Table V shows the total cost if 50 per cent should apply for the certificate plan and 50 per cent for the cash plan, making the same allowance for deaths and borrowings.

All three of these last-mentioned tables must, of course, allow for the installment repayments.

Following the concluding pages of the report we have—

Total number in service in Army		4,262,105
Total man days' service from Apr. 5, 1917, to July 1, 1919		1,427,325,000
Average days' service per man		334.89
Total number overseas force in Army		2,022,635
Total man days' service overseas from Apr. 5, 1917, to July 1, 1919		709,740,000
Average days' service per man overseas		350.90
Total number exclusively in home service force		2,239,470
Total man days' home service from Apr. 5, 1917, to July 1, 1919		717,585,000
Average days' service per man home service, less 60 days to be deducted first from home service		260.42
Number of deaths in service overseas		80,635
Number of deaths home service		34,617
Total deaths in service		115,282
Number of officers above rank of captain in overseas force (estimated)		7,000
Number of officers above rank of captain in home service (estimated)		7,500
Total number of officers above rank of captain		14,500
Number of deaths in Army from July 1, 1919, to Jan. 1, 1923 (estimated)		117,586
Number in Army entitled to benefits Jan. 1, 1923		4,014,767
Total number in service in Navy		551,736
Deaths in service	2,341
Officers above rank of lieutenant (estimated)	1,895
		4,236
Number entitled to benefits of this bill July 1, 1919		547,500
Deaths between July 1, 1919, and Jan. 1, 1923		15,579
Number entitled to benefits Jan. 1, 1923		531,921
Overseas force (estimated)		500,000
Home force (estimated		47,500
Average length of service	days	325
Less 60 days deducted	do	265
Total number Army and Navy entitled to benefits Jan. 1, 1923		4,546,688

The cost tables show as follows:

1. On the basis that every veteran should accept the cash plan—

Total cost	$1,547,904,395
To be appropriated for in 1923	909,337,600
To be appropriated for in 1924	600,014,102
To be appropriated for in 1925	38,552,693

2. On the basis that every veteran should accept the certificate plan, with no borrowings, and making allowance for annual payments on account of deaths—

Total amount in 1943 would aggregate	$5,251,364,907
To be appropriated for in 1923	44,256,180

This sum increases yearly up to 1942, when—

The amount required would be	56,962,190
Leaving all the balance to be paid in a single payment due in 1943 of	4,290,280,031

But as suggested, these two tables do not indicate what, in fact, will be the operation of the law, but are given to show possible minimum and maximum costs and place a limit upon extreme calculations.

3. On the basis that 20 per cent of the veterans should accept the cash-payment plan and 80 per cent the certificate plan, and assuming that one-third of those entitled borrow on their certificates the full amount they are entitled to borrow, and making allowance for repayments, and also for deaths, the total amount in 1943 would aggregate $4,356,338,615.

The yearly payments, however, would be—

1923	$217,302,544
1924	155,456,774
1925	94,108,665
1926	70,228,416
1927	59,441,691

After 1927 the annual payments would decrease on account of repayment of borrowings until 1936, when the repayments on account of loans would be more than sufficient to meet the payments on account of deaths and loans. This would continue until 1940, when the excess of payments on account of deaths would amount to $2,543,321. These payments would increase until in 1942 they would amount to $19,325,219. The final payment on account of maturity in 1943 would amount to $3,383,692,496.

4. On the basis that one-third of the veterans should accept the cash-payment plan and two-thirds the certificate plan, making the same allowance as in previous tables, the entire cost up to and including 1943 would be $3,888,282,142.

The yearly payments would be as follows:

1923	$332,641,720
1924	229,566,161
1925	84,348,649

From 1925 the amounts would decrease until 1935, when there would be no cost until 1939, four years, during which period the repayments would exceed the amounts necessary to meet the obligation. There would be a balance due at the maturity of the certificates in 1943 of $2,819,743,747.

5. On the basis that 50 per cent of the veterans take the cash-payment plan and 50 per cent the certificate plan, making the same allowance as in the previous tables, the entire cost up to and including 1943 would be $3,303,153,231.

The yearly payments would be as follows:

1923	$476,796,890
1924	322,165,772
1925	72,146,424

These yearly amounts then decrease each year to 1936. Then there would be an excess of repayments of loans over payments on account of loans and deaths for the four years, 1936, 1937, 1938, and 1939, of over $20,000,000. A final payment upon the matured certificates would be due in 1943 of $2,114,807,810.

It will thus be seen that while this bill provides for a very large sum, when distributed over the 20 years, under any reasonable estimate of the proportionate number that will apply for each plan, the yearly cost will not be burdensome. And if, as suggested in the report, the debts due this country from our war associates should be funded into long-time, interest-bearing bonds the interest thereon will far more than take care of the obligations created by the bill without any increase whatever in our taxes.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I understand the motion is debatable.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is.

Mr. BORAH. I desire to submit some observations.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment to enable me to submit a proposed amendment to the pending bill?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. POMERENE. I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by me to House bill 15975, the naval appropriation bill, which I ask may be printed, lie on the table, and be incorporated in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to be printed, to lie on the table, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Provided, That the President is hereby authorized in his discretion to delay in whole or in part the building program herein provided for, for a period of six months, in order to enable him to arrange for a conference with the Governments of Great Britain, Japan, and such other powers as to him may seem proper, with the view of reducing substantially the naval building program of the several Governments so participating in said conference; and if they agree upon such plan of reduction the President is hereby further authorized to suspend, in whole or in part, the said building program in order to enable him to carry out any agreement thus made.

Mr. THOMAS. On behalf of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK] I submit an amendment intended to be proposed by him to House bill 15975, the naval appropriation bill.

There being no objection, the amendment was ordered to lie on the table and be printed, as follows:

On page 6, after line 3, insert the following:
"Historical pictorial record of the American fleet in foreign waters: To enable the Secretary of the Navy, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, to authorize and employ Burnell Poole to continue his work on an historical pictorial record of the operation of the American fleet in foreign waters, $25,000."

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I should like to bring before the Senate the joint resolution repealing war time legislation.

Mr. BORAH. What was the request?

Mr. STERLING. The request is that I may bring before the Senate the joint resolution declaring that certain war time acts of Congress—joint resolutions and proclamations—shall be construed as if the war had terminated.

Mr. BORAH. At the present time there is a motion before the Senate. If I may have the attention of the Senator from Washington, I desire to say that there are some remarks upon the naval bill that I should like to make before the motion is finally put. I understand, of course, that the Senator will ultimately get his bill before the Senate, but I do desire to say something in regard to it before the motion to take it up is voted upon. If, however, the Senator from Washington will delay his request so that the Senator from South Dakota may prefer his, of course I have no objection. I simply do not want to lose my opportunity to say what seems to me to be relevant before the bill is taken up.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Rule IX is not perfectly clear to me. I notice that preference is given to a motion to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation bill, and certain other motions are in order, and the rule provides that—

Each of the foregoing motions shall be decided without debate and shall have precedence in the order above named.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is after the consideration of bills not objected to, and not later than 2 o'clock. This is after 2 o'clock, and the motion is debatable.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The rule is not particularly clear, and that is why I asked the Chair.

I will say to the Senator from Idaho, so far as I am concerned and in accordance with conversations I have had with the Senator from South Dakota, that when the naval bill is taken up for consideration I shall give consent, so far as I am concerned, to proceeding for a brief time to the consideration of the matter of which the Senator from South Dakota has spoken; but I desire to get the naval bill up first.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, what I said to the Senator from Washington was that there are some observations upon this measure which I feel, in justice to the committee and myself, too, that I should make before the motion to take it up is voted upon, and I do not want to lose the opportunity to do so. If the Senator from Washington will permit the Senator from South Dakota to proceed without my losing my right to speak before the motion is voted upon, I have no objection to the agreement which they have made being carried out. In fact, I am anxious to have the agreement carried out.

Mr. STERLING. I so understood; and, furthermore, I do not think it will take a long time to dispose of the joint resolution.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. A proposal to take up an appropriation bill after 2 o'clock is debatable; is it not?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If that be the case, and the Chair so rules, the Senator can get his opportunity to discuss it before the bill is taken up.

The VICE PRESIDENT. This is the exact parliamentary situation: The Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] has moved to proceed to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] has the floor for the purpose of discussing the question as to whether it shall or shall not be taken up, or saying anything else he wants to say. The Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING] interrupts by asking to take up another measure. He can take it up only by unanimous consent. He can not displace the motion of the Senator from Washington, but he can take it up by unanimous consent.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I object to the displacement of the motion which I made. I will state, however, that in conversation with the Senator from South Dakota I told him that, so far as I was concerned, I should allow him to take up his matter for a brief time after the naval bill is laid before the Senate.

Mr. STERLING. I will state that it is not my desire at all to displace the naval appropriation bill; and I will ask unanimous consent, if permitted, if the Senator from Idaho will yield for that purpose, to take up this joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington has already objected to that.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I understood that the request of the Senator from South Dakota for unanimous consent was before the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington said he would object; that he wanted a vote on the question as to whether or not the naval bill should be taken up; so that disposes of the request for the present.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I should like to inquire of the Senator if he would be willing for me to offer at this time some amendments that I have prepared to the soldiers' bonus bill and make a short explanation of those amendments? I should like to have my amendments and the statement I desire to make in regard to them get in the RECORD along with the statement made awhile ago by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER].

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I should be pleased to accommodate the Senator from New Mexico if it were not for the fact that I might lose an opportunity, in view of the rapidity with which things move in these days, to make the observations which I desire to make. Of course, on the question of time, nothing would be gained one way or the other whether I speak now or after the bill is up; but there are some suggestions which I desire to make which I think ought to be made before the bill comes up, and it is not a question of time; it is a question of the propriety of the occasion when they should be made. I do not want to yield to the Senator from New Mexico unless it is satisfactory to the Senator from Washington, for I rather suspect that the Senator from Washington is under the impression that I am trying to kill time, which I am not.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I am very glad to be reassured by the Senator from Idaho. I shall be compelled to object to the interruption of the remarks of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I understand that it is out of order, and that the Senator from Washington has a right to object, but I want to state to the Senator from Washington now that I am going to oppose the taking up of the naval bill until the bonus bill is disposed of.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I was not entirely oblivious to the remark which the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] made, that he was glad to be reassured that I was not here for the purpose of occupying time. There are a great many dilatory motions which might have been made in regard to this bill which have not been made, and so far as I am concerned there will not be any dilatory motions made. I simply desire to discuss the bill upon what I believe to be its merits, and I do not desire to be hurried, although it is in the closing hours of the session, but I promise the Senator in good faith that I shall not talk against time.

Mr. President, there is a great deal of discussion just now, in the press and elsewhere, about having an adequate Navy. I am myself for an adequate Navy, if I understand what the term means. One of the first important votes which I cast in this body after I came here was a vote in approval of what was known as President Roosevelt's naval building program. I think it was for four or five battleships, and I voted in favor of that program. I also voted for the great naval program of 1916, and supported it, and I am still unconscious of any modification of views in regard to this subject. I certainly desire a sufficient, adequate Navy; and it is not my purpose, now or at any other time, to change my position in regard to that important matter. Of course, in saying that the adequacy of a Navy must be measured by the conditions and circumstances of the particular occasion when it is being built, and also the circumstances and conditions under which it is being built. If we should be so successful as to secure an agreement among the great naval powers of the world, that which would constitute an adequate Navy under such an agreement would be one thing, while if we should fail to secure any such agreement, of course, what would constitute an adequate Navy would be an entirely different thing. I have no desire, however, to throw any vote of mine or any limited influence which I may have in favor of a weak Navy or an insufficient Navy or an inadequate Navy. I have in no sense modified my views as to the necessity of an adequate Navy.

So much for a matter which is not really relevant to the point which I rose to discuss. If I understand the parliamentary situation with reference to the naval bill, to take it up at this time is really to waste time. This bill at the present time carries something over $500,000,000 of appropriations. If it were a question of appropriations alone, a mere question of getting the money out of the Treasury, it would be a comparatively simple matter, and it would not necessarily involve any considerable discussion.

We might be opposed to the amount appropriated or we might be in favor of it, but there would be only one question involved. But this naval bill involves not only the question of a stupendous appropriation of five hundred and odd million dollars, but it involves a number of other matters—the size of the Navy, the kind of a Navy, the building program, and certain other propositions which have been attached, as for establishing a naval base upon the Pacific coast, a matter which is bound to lead to long discussion. If we were considering this bill other than in the closing days of the session, we would not expect to close the discussion of it under three or four days' time, and the time could very well be occupied, and very legitimately occupied, to the illumination not only of the Senate, I have no doubt, but of the country, if that discussion should go on. So, if we should consider this bill with any degree of care at all, it would be practically impossible to get it into conference before 48 hours prior to the time when adjournment would take place.

The House appropriated $400,000,000, in round figures, for a navy. No such sum for a navy was ever before contemplated in time of peace in the history of the world. The House appropriation alone, with nothing added to it, exceeds any appropriation or any provision of any program that any country ever made in time of peace in the history of the world for its navy. But, notwithstanding the fact that so large a sum was appropriated in the House, the Senate committee has seen fit, in its wisdom or unwisdom, to add one hundred and odd million more.

So we have the judgment of the House as to the sufficiency of the appropriation of four hundred millions, then we have the other sum of a hundred million added by the Senate committee, all of which involves, as you will see as we proceed, not only the question of the appropriation but it involves the other question of the kind of program we shall have with reference to construction.

The House bill met with a great deal of opposition in the House, and, if I may be permitted to say so—and I do not think I am trespassing upon the rules—it passed the House after the assurance of the leader of the majority that not one dollar would be accepted in the way of increase when it came back to the House, and that is a part of the record of the debate. In order to allay the very strong and persistent opposition, it was practically a part of the program in the House that there should be no increase made by this body that they would accept.

We have, therefore, this parliamentary situation, that $100,000,000 has been added, with three days, at the outside, to consider this bill in this body, in conference, and in the House, with the program understood to be in the House that no additions should be made to the bill. I repeat, therefore, that, judging the parliamentary situation as we see it and as it appears to be a matter of record, there is no possible chance to pass this bill at this session and to give it any consideration such as it deserves at all.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CURTIS in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. Can the Senator cite us to the day and the page of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD where that debate took place? Has he the RECORD before him?

Mr. BORAH. I have not it here, but it was on the 14th of this month, the debate beginning on page 3144 of the RECORD. The Senator will find it under the naval debate.

As I looked at the House bill, Mr. President, it seemed to me a very liberal bill, indeed, even from the standpoint of those who are in favor of a very large and strong Navy. It provided a personnel of 100,000, about twenty-odd thousand greater than that of Japan and within 5,000 of being equal to that of Great Britain.

There was considerable discussion over the point in the House, and they finally agreed upon that number, as I have said. The Senate has added to the personnel, making it 120,000, thereby adding an expenditure of something over $37,000,000.

In addition to that, the House bill provided for the entire building program of 1916. It did not limit it or curtail it or suspend it or modify it in any sense whatever. So the House bill would be considered, under all ordinary circumstances, as a very reasonable bill, even by those who are in favor of a large Navy. To my mind, while I am in favor of a strong Navy, it seems to me an extravagant bill.

If we will recur to the expenditures which have been made at other times, we will find by comparison how very liberal the House was in regard to this matter. Let us take the appropriations for the Navy from 1910 to 1912. In 1910 we appropriated $133,216,693 for the Navy. That was at the time of the beginning of the building program, under President Taft's administration, at a time characterized as very extraordinary and very extravagant. In 1911 we appropriated $127,818,681. In 1912 we appropriated $120,739,055. In 1913 we appropriated $142,550,000.

The House, in other words, in a time of peace, as against the prior appropriations, appropriated close to two and a half or three times the amount which we were appropriating prior to the war, and the House bill would seem to be a very liberal bill.

Take another comparison, Mr. President. The building program of Great Britain in 1912, at a time when Germany and Great Britain were really in competition in naval building, was only $80,662,790, and Germany, which, we are advised continuously, was in 1912 preparing for the Great War, in anticipation of the conflict appropriated for new construction that year $59,455,935; France appropriated $35,574,380; Russia appropriated $34,487,900.

The total appropriations for the naval construction of these four great powers in 1912 were $210,181,005, and we can grasp something of the liberality of the bill which passed the House when we contemplate that it provides for more than a hundred million dollars in excess of the entire building program of those four great powers in 1912.

In 1913 Great Britain appropriated $93,380,400; Germany, $55,054,415; Russia, $60,412,580; and France, $44,465,320.

The total combined appropriations for the building programs of those four powers in 1913 were only $253,312,715.

Can it be said, Mr. President, that in a time of peace a bill which provides for $400,000,000 is not sufficiently liberal to satisfy the demands for an adequate Navy, when we contemplate that upon the eve of the Great War, when it is said that some of them were knowingly and all of them unconsciously preparing for the great conflict, those nations appropriated a little over that amount combined?

I touch upon another subject here, although very briefly, because I propose to refer to it later, that these great building programs did not prevent war. At the time the Great War began the combined navy of the Entente was very much greater than the combined navy of the Triple Alliance. They had been building against one another from 1900 on, adding year by year, and I simply pause here to say to those who now seem to anticipate some trouble in some direction, and that by this stupendous program we will overawe some power, that it did not so operate in the great contest between Germany and Great Britain. However, that is aside from the question which I now desire to present.

The total naval expenditure of Great Britain for all purposes in 1912 was $228,082,700. The total naval expenditures of Germany were only $113,047,700 in 1913.

The entire outlay by Great Britain in that year was a little over half of what the House has already provided for in this bill, and the entire outlay for naval appropriations in 1913 for Germany were $113,000,000, a little over a third of what the House has provided for in this bill.

It is one thing, Mr. President, to be for an adequate Navy and for reasonable preparation for unexpected or expected difficulties; but does the Senate want to enter upon the consideration of this bill under the whip and lash to get through when we have $400,000,000 appropriated by the House and a hundred and six odd millions added by the Senate of the United States? With all due respect to those who framed the bill, it seems to me that they ought to permit the bill to go over, so that it can be considered under circumstances and conditions which will enable us to deal with it as should be done.

Now, the personnel of Great Britain in 1912 was 134,000 men. It is at this time 105,000. The personnel of the German Navy in 1912 was 60,805; of France, 58,649 men; of Russia, 46,655 men; and of Austria-Hungary, 17,277 men. The Triple Entente all combined had a personnel of 238,294 men and the Triple Alliance 108,669 men.

The House bill gives us a Navy, if it is completed, it has been estimated, 31 per cent stronger and greater than that of the navy of Great Britain. Is it not sufficient? Have we become intoxicated? Has the psychology of war not departed at all?

The program of the House bill, if it is completed, will give us a Navy two and one-fourth times greater than that of Japan. What possible reason can there be for our adding $100,000,000?

Of course, if the bill comes before the Senate at this time, under these circumstances, anyone who has any convictions upon the subject must necessarily insist upon adjusting the bill to what he believes to be a reasonable appropriation.

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PHIPPS in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Minnesota?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. KELLOGG. I dislike to interrupt the Senator, but what did I understand the Senator to say the House bill would furnish in proportion to the British Navy?

Mr. BORAH. A Navy 31 per cent stronger than the British Navy and two and one-fourth times stronger than that of Japan. If there is any doubt about that, I shall be glad to have some one say so.

Mr. BALL. Mr. President, I should like to ask in what manner the figures show it is 31 per cent greater? Is it in personnel or in armament, or how?

Mr. BORAH. I will tell the Senator how I figure. I figure upon the expert testimony of members of the Navy, both in this country and abroad. I do not as a layman undertake to say, of course, what it would be, but that has been stated by men who have served their lifetime in the Navy, and I do not believe it can be successfully disputed. What strength does the Senator from Delaware think we will have compared to their navy?

Mr. BALL. We will still be very much inferior to Great Britain's Navy when we complete the present program, according to all the testimony given before the committee.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, no; not according to all the testimony, as I shall read it as the debate proceeds.

Mr. BALL. Before the Senate committee?

Mr. BORAH. Yes; before the Senate committee, for reasons which I shall discuss later, but not before the House committee, and not all before the Senate committee, either. That may be a matter which we shall wish to debate a little later. I do not desire at this time to take up time in the discussion of it, but I think I shall be able to show that that is the conclusion of men who, I believe, know.

Mr. BALL. I merely desired thoroughly to understand the statement of the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. That was the statement.

Mr. BALL. It is so at variance with all the testimony that we had before the committee that I thought possibly the Senator was misstating his own proposition.

Mr. BORAH. No. I beg leave to say to the Senator that I have read the testimony, and I do not think my statement is at variance with the testimony. I am quite aware that it is at variance with the testimony of Admiral Coontz and some gentlemen who take a different view of it, but it is not at variance with the testimony of men who have earned the right to state their view in regard to it and by reason of their service and experience are entitled to consideration when that view is expressed. It may be a matter of debate which is correct.

Mr. BALL. It is scarcely a matter of debate. It is a matter of fact. So far as the personnel of the two countries is concerned, it can be ascertained. So far as the armament of the two countries is concerned, that can be ascertained. It is a matter of fact; it is not a matter of debate.

Mr. BORAH. If it is a matter of fact, there will be some testimony somewhere to establish the fact, and that is what I refer to.

I think it worth while to inquire at this time what is the state of the Treasury. What is the condition that confronts us with reference to these appropriations?

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. POMERENE. Before the Senator goes into that branch of the matter, can he give to the Senate a statement of the relative appropriations which are being made by Great Britain and Japan and the United States?

Mr. BORAH. I did not clearly understand the Senator's question.

Mr. POMERENE. What appropriations are being made or contemplated by Great Britain and Japan for navy purposes?

Mr. BORAH. I have been unable to get the exact appropriations for this year. I have seen statements in the public press in regard to it, but I do not know, as I did not undertake to get figures, whether they are correct or not.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Idaho whether it is not a fact that the large building program upon which Japan has now entered was the direct result of our very large building program announced a few years ago? Are we not directly responsible for the great building program upon which Japan has entered in her effort to maintain her position on the Pacific?

Mr. BORAH. That statement has been made by Japanese statesmen. Of course, I do not know what the facts are, but they have made that contention.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. KING. If I may trespass upon the time of the Senator, I should like to reply to the Senator from Nebraska. I think there is a great deal of misapprehension as to the size of the naval program upon which it is alleged Japan has entered. As a matter of fact, Japan appropriated last year for her entire naval program approximately 230,000,000 yen. That would be approximately $115,000,000. The national legislature was unable to agree as to her naval appropriation for the following year. Under the rule which prevails in Japan, as I am advised, if there is no agreement in the Diet with respect to appropriations for the following year, then the amount of the appropriation for the preceding year governs—that is to say, the same appropriation is carried—so that for the current year the appropriation of Japan for her entire naval budget is about $115,000,000,

There is a great deal of talk by jingoists in the United States, who desire to force a war between the United States and Japan, or between the United States and England, in regard to the enormous appropriations for war which Japan is making. There is a great deal of nonsense concerning this subject.

Mr. BORAH. I have not the figures as to how much Japan is appropriating this year. I have seen statements of what she was to have as compared with our Navy, but I do not state it, because I do not know how much Japan is appropriating for this year. I am only stating figures thus far which are official and matters of record.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I was not seeking to develop what Japan was appropriating this year, but I think the Senator is aware that it is pretty well understood that Japan has entered upon a large building program to be carried out during the next few years. What I desired to ask him was whether we ourselves are not responsible for that effort of Japan, and whether we are not by our enormous building program stimulating the Japanese in their great building program in the Pacific?

Mr. BORAH. Count Ishii stated at Geneva, after France had objected to the disarmament program, that Japan was building by reason of the United States building, and that Japan would be very glad to enter into an understanding or agreement with the United States by which the building program should be reduced, changed, or modified. It was by reason of that interview of Count Ishii that I was led immediately to introduce a resolution in this body providing for Japan, Great Britain, and the United States sitting down together to enter upon such an agreement. If those who favor the resolution are successful, it need not be very long until we have Japan, the United States, and Great Britain in close conference to determine the sincerity of each of those powers with reference to the oft-insinuated proposition that one is building because the other is building.

I know of no way by which to test the sincerity of the three great powers except to bring them directly into contact with each other in conference. If it be true that Japan is building because the United States is building such a large Navy, that matter can soon be determined, because I think the people of the United States—I do not know whether all individuals in it, but the people of the United States as a whole—would insist upon the United States curtailing her program provided Japan would be willing to do so.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS. The present program was instituted by the naval act of 1916, and one of the arguments in support of the bill was that Japan was then engaged in the construction of a very formidable navy. On the 27th of June of that year I addressed the Senate in opposition to the bill and made the assertion that if the program were adopted it would inevitably lead to increased building, and necessarily so, by such nations as Japan and Great Britain, both of which would attribute our sudden activity and the enormous plan for a Navy which was then outlined to some aggressive policy, either then secretly existing or thereafter to be developed, against which they should prepare.

That program was also stimulated by a phantom expedition from Japan to lower California, and the press, to say nothing of some of the addresses upon the floor of the Senate, called attention to that sinister action, which afterwards turned out to be the arrival of, I think, two boats engaged in a duty and ordered to extricate some small boat from quicksands or from a condition which it had gotten into and which needed this additional help in order that it might get back to Japan.

I have no doubt that within the next two or three months some other expedition equally substantial and equally formidable will be heralded over the country as the reason why this enormous expenditure of money at this time should continue.

Mr. BORAH. In reply to the Senator from Nebraska, and also the Senator from Colorado, of course we can only judge the situation at this distance by the statements of the representative men of Japan and the reliance which we are willing to place upon those statements. The two Governments have never been brought together, and we shall never know the real situation, the real sincerity behind the professed willingness to curtail naval building until they are brought together.

Germany started her naval program in 1900; immediately England added to her program; the next year Germany added to hers, and Great Britain did likewise. They were never willing to bring themselves to the conference table. The result was that that went on just as the discussion is now going on between the United States and Japan. The public prints conveyed the impression to the effect that one nation was building by reason of the fact that the other was building and that both were willing to stop if one would stop, but they never did come in contact with one another. The result was that their building program finally ended in the deluge of 1914. That is precisely, in my judgment, where the controversy will end between the United States and Japan unless we can come into friendly conference and reach an agreement.

I believe that this trouble spoken of can be avoided. I am sure it is our solemn duty to try.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MOSES in the chair). Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. While it is true that the navies of the allied and associated powers did not prevent war, is it not equally true that those large navies did prevent a victory by our enemies?

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Idaho has not proposed that we disarm in case Japan does not disarm. But is it not equally true that if Germany and England, say in 1905, when Germany proposed her second naval program, had entered into an agreement to stop all naval building beyond a very moderate degree, at least, in all probability there would not have been any war at all?

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I am not opposing the resolution of the Senator from Idaho; I am heartily in favor of it; but there have been some statements here on the floor that would seem to cast a reflection upon the war preparations made by our own country and by our allies just prior to the breaking out of the war and during the war. I think those preparations were all necessary, as has been demonstrated by the history of the war.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, it may be they were necessary from the viewpoint of the Senator, but I think they were wholly unnecessary from the standpoint of reason or of sound statesmanship.

Mr. PITTMAN. I agree with the Senator from Idaho; but we have made one great effort since the war to get on a basis of sound reasoning and to settle disputes by arbitration and adjudication by peaceful means; and so far that has been a failure. What success the efforts of the Senator from Idaho will have is as problematical as the former; in fact, there is every reason to believe that it will be a failure. Nevertheless, we should try it. I am with the Senator in his effort to accomplish it; but I do not believe in stopping preparations for self-defense while we are seeking to avoid an offensive means of settling disputes.

Mr. BORAH. I do not know that the Senator from Nevada and the Senator from Idaho are in disagreement; but I do not like to have so distinguished a Senator advise the other nations of the world while we are urging this proposition that it is going to be a failure, because there is where the difficulty arose with reference to the proposed agreement between Germany and Great Britain. All the governmental agencies, all the governmental powers, and all the governmental influences were constantly advising to the effect that by reason of the treachery and deceit and deception of the other power they could never hope to arrive at any agreement.

Mr. President, I am perfectly willing to have what I consider a reasonable navy, an adequate navy, until we reach that agreement; but I disagree with the Senator entirely upon the proposition that there is no reasonable basis for a hope of any such agreement being made. I firmly believe that there is such reason and that we should proceed upon the theory that an agreement can be reached.

The situation is a little different now from what it was before the World War. The people now are very much more interested in the question. The masses in Japan are discussing the question practically as fully as are the masses in this country or in Great Britain. We have about reached the point where the people can not longer endure the burden which is being imposed upon them by their Governments in their preparation for war.

Now, just a word with reference to another matter which the Senator suggested. I hope he will not suggest it again, because it would lead to a long debate.

Mr. PITTMAN. Then I shall not do so.

Mr. BORAH. I refer to the proposition that there was an effort made to adjust matters by arbitration, and so forth. I suppose the Senator has reference to the League of Nations. The Senator from Nevada knows that the Senator from Idaho thinks that that league was a league for war; that it was built for war, and was intended for war, and could not accomplish anything but war.

Mr. PITTMAN. I shall not revert to that any more, because I do not desire a long debate under the circumstances. However, I desire to say that I hope the Senator from Idaho is right in regard to the feeling of the populace of Japan. We were informed with regard to the people of Germany that they had a pacifist feeling and were opposed to the militaristic party in Germany, but it did not turn out that way. I am not at all sure that it will turn out that way in the case of Japan. In my opinion, the greatest hope of success for the plan formulated by the Senator from Idaho is to call attention to the fact that, just as Germany could not outbuild Great Britain and that her attempt to outbuild Great Britain was an utter failure, so Japan can not outbuild this country, nor can any other country in the world outbuild it; that while we are anxious to adopt disarmament, we are going to be prepared and to have as strong as, if not a stronger, fighting force on the waters and on the land, if necessary, than any nation that may attack us. I think that would be the strongest argument for the pacifists.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BORAH. In just a moment I will yield to the Senator from Montana. I want to read a quotation of the actual words used by one of the great English leaders in 1905 or 1906, at a time when they were discussing the probability of Germany and England getting together. He says:

> A fleet of British line of battleships are the best negotiators in Europe.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, Germany was the nation that was responsible for the failure of the naval holiday between those countries, and she has paid for her responsibility by almost practical annihilation.

Mr. BORAH. Well, as to the responsibility, I am going to discuss that a little later.

I now yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I desire to recur to the view expressed by the Senator from Idaho to the effect that if an agreement had been entered into by Germany and Great Britain limiting the naval building program of each the war would not have occurred. Of course, an agreement of that character, having no wider scope than that, would allow Germany to develop her great army without let or hindrance; and I apprehend that if the naval building program of these two countries were limited and Germany were permitted to expand her army without limit, not only would the war have occurred but in all probability it would have occurred earlier than it did.

While I am in entire accord with all of the views expressed by the Senator from Idaho as to the necessity, so far as the interests of the world are concerned, that the building program of these naval nations should be limited, wars will not be pervented until we also accomplish a reduction of the land forces. I think that the Senator upon reflection will agree that Germany might be quite willing to limit her naval building program if she were at the same time at liberty to expand at will her great army, because by that she would be able practically to accomplish her purpose without regard to her navy.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho did not make the suggestion he did in regard to that without reflection. The Senator from Montana will recall that from the time of Frederick the Great until the year 1900, when Germany was unifying the German States and building up the greatest military force in the world, England and Germany were upon the best of terms, cordial in every respect, assisting one another, and that there was never any estrangement of the slightest nature between Gremany and England until Germany began to build her navy.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I will yield in a moment. After the naval building program commenced the two countries immediately began to look upon one another with disfavor; bitterness grew apace; the newspapers began the discussion of war in both countries, saying that if either nation was going to defend its commercial interest it must fight for it. So that by the time the other difficulties arose in 1914 the old friendship of Germany and England which had been able to control the situation was entirely dissipated and gone, and there was no one to negotiate peace or to hold the balance in favor of peace when the turmoil came in 1914. Had these two nations been friendly, had bitterness and suspicion and jealousy not been engendered because of naval competition they could have in all probability reached a settlement in August, 1914.

I say again, upon reflection, that I have no doubt at all that when the future historian comes to analyze the facts and to uncover the real situation it will not be the assassination at Sarajevo, in Bosnia, to which will be attributed the Great War, but the naval competition between Germany and Great Britain which went on from 1900 to 1914.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I am perfectly satisfied that the historian will not overlook the powerful influence of the development of Germany's great army as a determining factor as well as the expansion of her navy; but the influences that bring about great historical events are many, complicated, and complex. Of course, from the time of Frederick the Great down to very modern times France was the enemy of both Great Britain and Germany, threatening to dominate the world through her great military power. She never had a formidable navy; it was through her army that she expected to dominate the world. That was the circumstance which made friends of Germany and Great Britain. Subsequently, however, Germany was the great power which threatened to dominate the world through her powerful army, not through her navy at all. So I do not agree with the Senator that we can dismiss from all consideration the likelihood of Germany dominating all Europe not through her navy but through her army as the great factor in the precipitation of the conflict of 1914.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. OWEN. The army of Germany has been practically dissipated; the Allies are agreed upon the plan of disarmament of their armies; it only remains that the competition of navies may endanger the future peace of the world. So, the Senator from Idaho, in my judgment, is entirely right in making an earnest and resolute effort to bring about an end of this rivalry of competitive naval armaments. I hope that he will succeed; I believe that he ought to succeed; and I think the Senate ought to help him in the effort.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I trust that nothing that I said will be considered as in opposition to the views expressed by the Senator from Oklahoma. I fully agree that the necessity of the case requires such an agreement, but I insist that it does not go far enough. With respect to that feature, however, I will have something more to say before we get through.

Mr. BORAH. I shall not pursue that digression longer, because it comes up more properly upon another phase of this matter, at which time, if we have time, we can discuss it more at length.

At the time that we digressed to take up the particular subject now being discussed, I had recurred to the condition of the United States Treasury, to the situation which confronts us at the time we are making these appropriations.

We all know that the distress throughout the business region of the country, and more particularly throughout the agricultural region of the country, is very serious. So far as the conditions throughout the Middle West and the West are concerned, they have practically reached the point of paralysis. There is really nothing doing. The banks have reached their limit. The farmers and the live-stock men can not pay their taxes, and they are not prepared to go into the work of raising another crop. They can not even get the means ordinarily given them at the beginning of each year from the banks to assist them; and one of the things which is most discouraging to them of all others, according to the communications which I have and the press which I read in that region of the country, is the fact that when they look toward the city of Washington they see nothing but additional appropriations and additional taxes. There is no encouragement that there will be relief at any time at the rate at which we are now going.

I could read a multitude of letters, but I want to read a single paragraph from a letter of one of the great bankers of the West, written to another business man, not to me, but I had permission to take a paragraph from his letter. He says:

> The situation throughout our part of the United States is full of peril. A kind of paralysis is upon this part of the country. Nothing moves. The farmers and stockmen are discouraged and ugly. The banks have reached their limit. Some of them are in a dangerous condition, and when we look toward Congress in the hope of encouragement, at least, we see appropriations piling up as never before in the history of our country.
>
> I realize there is not a great deal that Congress could do in the way of actual legislation to affirmatively assist us. Perhaps our situation is not such as to be reached by legislation; but it would seem, if Congress knows the condition of the country, the distress of business, that it would restrain within reason our expenditures before we are literally buried in taxes.

I have an idea that that portrays a situation which is almost universal in the agricultural and live-stock regions of the United States, and we know, according to reports which are reliable, that there are some three and a quarter million men out of employment. Under those conditions, we are not only justified in looking to the question of appropriations, but we are justified, when we are called upon to make an appropriation, in taking into consideration the financial and economic condition of the country.

I would not advocate here leaving our defense inadequate or our Navy inadequate, even if it did increase a burden already seemingly unbearable; but when the House has already appropriated $400,000,000 for the Navy, which gives us a personnel of 100,000 men and a Navy, when the program is completed, equal to if not greater than any other Navy in the world, can we not, out of deference to those who see no light ahead upon this question of our economic condition, defer adding $106,000,000 to the bill in the Senate of the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Has the Senator given the Senate a chance to vote upon taking up his resolution with reference to this conference?

Mr. BORAH. No.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The Senator has not made a direct motion that it be taken up?

Mr. BORAH. No; I have not. I have it pending.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I hope the Senator will make it. I shall certainly support it.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; I shall.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. And I am ready to take it up and dispose of it before we go on with any other measure.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, these remarks, as I say, were preliminary to voting on this motion. I realize, of course, that the Senator from Washington and the Naval Affairs Committee are likely to insist upon going ahead; but I have said this much in order that you may know that some of us feel very sincerely about this matter, and that we feel that there ought not to be any additions made to this bill without the most convincing reasons. Almost every important item in the bill has been increased, and we shall have to know the reasons for it, and those reasons ought to be, it seems to me, very controlling at this time.

I want to say just one word again before I sit down in regard to my position with regard to the Navy.

If we are wholly unable to reach an agreement with regard to the Navy and naval building, I am perfectly willing to go along with any reasonable program with reference to this matter; but there are two things which we ought to have in view which seems to me possible. The first is reaching an agreement, and the second is determining what is an adequate Navy and what is a modern Navy before we proceed to expend money as we are now doing. Let us strive in every possible way to come to an agreement to disarm. We can afford to lead in an effort to get this agreement. If it can not be secured, let us be sure that we are not wasting money in building an obsolete Navy and then wake up to the fact that we have to spend billions in order to get a modern Navy.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, at the request of the junior Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK] I offer an amendment to the pending bill, and ask that it be printed and lie on the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by W. H. Overhue, its assistant enrolling clerk, communicated to the Senate the resolutions of the House unanimously adopted as a tribute to the memory of Hon. DICK T. MORGAN, late a Representative from the State of Oklahoma.

The message also communicated to the Senate the resolutions of the House unanimously adopted as a tribute to the memory of Hon. CHARLES A. NICHOLS, late a Representative from the State of Michigan.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

H. R. 13944. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war; and

H. R. 14063. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and to certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors.

BONUS FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I feel that the Senate, for the few remaining days of this session of Congress, may well devote its efforts to something that will be of more material and immediate benefit to the country, or to certain interests of the country, than the naval appropriation bill.

It is known that we are to have a special session of Congress beginning early in the month of April. I remember very well the efforts that were made upon the floor of this body in 1919 to defer the so-called supply bills, and it was frequently stated upon the other side of the Chamber that no harm could come from such action, that we would have to have a special session of Congress, and in fact the postponement of the supply bills was used as a means for forcing the calling of a special session of Congress. No such purpose is necessary at this time. It is openly announced that we are to have a special session of Congress beginning the 1st of April. This bill for the Navy can only begin to operate after the 1st of next July.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MOSES in the chair). Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Wisconsin?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I should like to remind the Senator that the defeat of the appropriation bills in 1919, eight or nine of them, resulted very beneficially to the country. Those bills were brought in here at a very late hour. The appropriations which they carried were very large. I, for one, was convinced that opportunity for reasonable discussion was not possible in the few hours of the life of that Congress then remaining, and I believed that if the bills were defeated at that time and could be considered in an extra session with time for deliberation the excessive appropriations would be very greatly reduced; and I remember definitely that as those bills were enacted at the extra session they carried an aggregate of almost $1,000,000,000 less than the amount which they carried at the time they were proposed in the last hours of the final session of the Sixty-fifth Congress.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I agree with the Senator from Wisconsin that the appropriation bills as finally enacted in that year were for a very much less sum than had previously been estimated, because when the estimates for those bills were prepared the armistice had not yet been signed, and it was not known that the war was to end so soon, and it could not have been known what amount of money would be required for the necessities of the Government. It is true that the previous estimates were modified, and as time went on, when the special session did come around, there was a very marked reduction in the amount of the appropriations as compared with the estimates, and even the final estimates that had been furnished by the various departments.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. If the Senator will pardon me further——

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am glad to yield.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. I did not refer to the estimates, which were made, of course, months before the appropriation bills were reported. I was not instituting a comparison between the amount of the estimates and the appropriations that were made at the extra session, but between the amounts which the appropriation bills carried and which they would have carried had they been passed in the last days of February and the first days of March two years ago and the amounts which they carried when they were passed in May, three months following, when there was time for deliberation and a full discussion of the items of the bill.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The Senator is unquestionably accurate as to the facts; but it must not be overlooked that those bills were prepared and presented to the Senate by the various committees on the basis of the official estimates which had been previously made.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Those estimates were made after the armistice.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That, however, does not concern the real point which I wanted to bring to the attention of the Senate. I merely wanted to observe and have the Senate realize that it is not absolutely essential to pass the naval appropriation bill at this session of Congress; that we are going to have a special session, and this appropriation bill will not go into force or effect until the 1st of next July; and that if there is business of the Government which ought to be done which is of an emergency nature we ought to devote our time to those things rather than put in our time during these last few hours in passing an appropriation bill which will not go into effect for some months to come.

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] this afternoon, in presenting the report of the Finance Committee on the so-called soldiers' bonus bill, rather intimated that it was not expected to pass that bill through the Senate at this session of Congress. He did not make that statement, but, to my great surprise, after he had presented the report of the committee he made no effort to bring the bill before the Congress for its consideration.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. McCUMBER. The Senator would hardly expect me to do that before the report, which gives all the information, is printed. I assume it will be printed to-morrow. So far as the expectation of passing the bill is concerned, that is entirely with the Senate, of course. I think the Senator could not have heard me correctly, because I expressed the hope that we would pass the bill at the present session.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS. At the time the Senator from North Dakota presented the report of the committee I announced that I reserved the right to file a minority report. I have not yet had time to prepare that report. I shall do it as soon as possible. I should certainly object to the consideration of the bill before that report is prepared.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I did not know the Senator from Colorado had not as yet prepared his minority report. I am glad to be advised that the Senator from North Dakota has not given up hope that the bill may be considered by the Senate at the present session of Congress. But, from remarks which he made and from the general course of the bill through the House and through the Congress as a whole, I had rather inferred that hope had gone. However, I am glad now to be advised to the contrary.

That being the case, it is important at this time that the Senate should understand some of the features of this bill and realize the importance of its consideration at this session of Congress, and what may be accomplished if the bill should become a law at this time, and yet not bankrupt the country from a financial point of view.

The Senator from North Dakota, if I was able to understand the purport of his presentation, wanted the Senate to believe that it was important to pass this bill only that the ex-service men might know what they may hope for some time in the future. No intimation was made that the bill might be changed so as to bring about any immediate relief, or to do anything in the immediate future which would carry out to any extent the purposes of this bill, and I want to observe that that position has undoubtedly been the position of this Congress, both in the House and in the Senate.

This is a bill heralded as being for the benefit of the ex-service man. In it are provisions for the payment of a cash bonus, so called.

In it are provisions for an indebtedness certificate. In it are provisions for vocational training, a land-settlement plan, and a home loaning plan. Yet, Mr. President, not a dollar is appropriated by this bill for any purpose, which clearly demonstrates, it seems to me, that the framers of the bill which passed the House did not have it in mind that they were seriously dealing with the situation. After providing for these various plans, what follows? The very last section of the bill reads:

> There is hereby authorized to be appropriated such amount as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

"There is hereby authorized to be appropriated!" Why could they not have made the appropriation then and there to carry out the provisions of the bill if they wanted to confer any immediate benefit, or give any immediate relief, or provide for the adjustment of compensation due to these ex-service men? But not a dollar of appropriation is provided in that measure, and I may add that the bill which comes to the Senate now from the Finance Committee likewise does not appropriate a single dollar for the purpose of carrying the provisions of the bill into effect, and the purpose in passing such legislation as is proposed here now must be other than to afford the relief which most of us feel the ex-service men are entitled to.

Further, the bill passed the House on the 20th of last May. From that time to this not a committee of the House has undertaken by any other bill to provide a dollar to bring about the relief suggested in the bill. This bill came over to the Senate, was referred to the Finance Committee along in January, and the Finance Committee for one or two days held some so-called hearings; but from that time until last Thursday the Finance Committee did not move in regard to this bill at all, and on last Thursday, when the committee was called in session, we were met with the information that the Treasury Department was still behind in some of the desired statistics.

On Friday we were met with the same information, and only on Saturday afternoon did the subcommittee which had had this matter under consideration finally submit to the whole committee a report, and that report then was not printed, and not a single copy of that report has been available to any member of the committee, so far as I know, except the one member who drafted it. In that situation, the bill is brought in at this time, on the 28th day of February, 1921, less than four days before the adjournment of this Congress.

What is the country to understand from this situation? Do you believe that the ex-service men, those who sustained this country in its hour of stress, are going to feel that this is a bona fide attempt to relieve them in any way whatsoever?

I know, Mr. President, that much has been said in the press of the country and much has been said upon the floor of the Senate, about the situation of the Treasury of the United States, and it has been suggested that if this bill should become a law, there would be an immediate charge upon the Treasury of about $2,000,000,000. Of course, if that should be the result, if we might reasonably anticipate such a result, I agree that we could not afford to pass this bill until some provision was made to reimburse the Treasury.

But my judgment is that there is no occasion to bring about a situation which would result in that disaster to the Treasury. There are several of the features suggested by this bill which might be put into operation, which might perform a very wholesome service, and yet not be of sufficient burden to bend the Treasury, or to even tend to bankrupt it, as has been suggested upon the floor of the Senate.

We all have heard something of what has been going on in regard to the finances of this country. We have read with pride how the floating indebtedness of the Government has been reduced during the last year and more, and we have had, through the report of the Secretary of the Treasury, a statement that if $4,000,000,000 can be raised annually, in the course of the next two or three years we shall be able to retire several billion dollars which the Treasury is anticipating as floating indebtedness of the country, or which will become such.

I make the suggestion that if there is a real necessity, if there is any kind of an obligation which this Government owes to the ex-service men, which can be met, even in part, by the Treasury, without another bond issue, will it not be better to do that than to simply take a pride in reducing the other indebtedness of this country? I think I can show how, through this bill, if properly amended, we can perform a very great service to these men, and that it will not cost the Government in the immediate future anything like what has been suggested or what has been anticipated.

It must be recalled that there are several provisions in the bill. The first provision is the payment of a cash sum of money to the various ex-soldiers, and it is anticipated that if that is to be done, if they would all take the cash at once, it would amount probably to a little less than a billion and a half dollars. Even if we had to pay that, it would be distributed over a period of more than two years. The average would be less than three-quarters of a billion dollars, and if I recall the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury, it is expected the floating indebtedness of the country will be reduced by about that amount each year during the next three or four years.

But even if we should defer the cash bonus feature of this bill there is much good that can be accomplished, and to my mind the greatest good that could be accomplished, and with the appropriation of a very small sum of money, relatively speaking. The next item of the bill provides for the issuance of adjusted service certificates. By putting into operation that part of the bill, not a dollar would be necessary to meet any of those certificates under at least two years.

There is no reason, so far as I know, why we should not go ahead and put into operation the provisions of Title III, providing for the adjusted service certificates. Those, in effect, as stated by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota who presents the bill, are endowment insurance policies, with a loan feature. They can not borrow any money on them for two years, but they are insurance policies. Some of the soldiers will die within the next two years, and unless the bill be passed and that feature be put into operation there will have been made no provision for the ex-service men or their families or the dependents of those who may die during the next two or three years or before the bill goes into operation.

It does seem to me that this is a provision of the bill which ought to receive the immediate favorable action of the Senate. I do not see how the House can oppose it. They have already passed a bill with that provision in it. If Senators mean what they say, why not put it into operation and let the ex-service men begin to get the benefit of it, when the money part of the bill to any measurable extent will be deferred for several years to come?

The next title of the bill, Title IV, is the one which relates to vocational training aid. It does seem to me, if the Congress owes to these people anything in the nature of vocational training aid, that we ought to provide for it immediately. The statement has been made to the committee that the average age of the ex-service men at the time of their discharge from the Army was 25 years. Their average age next year will be 28. If we are going to provide vocational training aid for a man, should we not provide it before he is 30 years of age? If he is going to prepare himself to follow a vocation in life, when are we going to prepare him? Are we going to wait until he is 30 years of age or more and then offer him something in the way of vocational training? It does seem to me that that provision of the bill ought to be put into operation now if we mean to offer any assistance to those for whom the provision was intended. Is vocational training aid to be deferred until the ex-service men average 30 years of age? I do not believe the Congress intends that.

I do not believe there is any reason why there should not be an appropriation which will carry that feature of the bill into effect. Just recently in the Senate we have authorized the Treasurer of the United States to purchase $200,000,000 of bonds of the farm land banks. Fortunately the Supreme Court of the United States to-day has decided that the bonds issued by that bank are constitutional, and the country will now take those bonds and it will not be necessary for the Treasury of the United States to buy them. So, may I not ask that we should at least provide $100,000,000 of that sum for the purpose of instituting vocational training aid provisions of the bill—just $100,000,000?

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] just a little while ago pointed out where we could save $106,000,000 in a reduction of the naval appropriations. Why not apply that to furnishing vocational aid for the ex-service men if we ever expect to do it at all? Of course, if Senators desire to camouflage the situation, if they desire to make some one believe something without any substance behind it, it is not necessary to do this thing. But if they really intend to let these young men have vocational training which will fit them for the walks of life, let us do it now when they are entering life, when they are seeking their vocation, when they are entering upon their business careers. Let us do it now. I submit that an appropriation of $100,000,000 for the purpose of carrying into effect Title IV of the bill would not be any great burden upon the Treasury at this time, certainly not a burden as compared to the benefits which the men would derive from it. If they are ever entitled to any such provision, let us give it to them now, give it to them while it will do them good, and start them out in life at a much earlier period.

The next title of the bill, Title VI, is called the land-settlement provision. To my mind that is a most wholesome provision of the bill. It was stated that a large number of ex-service men had already expressed their desire for farms. The land-settlement plan does not provide alone for the irrigation of lands in the West, but provides for drainage of lands, for putting into proper condition the cut-over lands of the country, millions of acres, and for doing something in each State in the Union, if possible, to provide homes and farms for the ex-service men. I heartily approve of the plan. It passed the House and has been reported out to the Senate by the Committee on Finance. No one particularly objected to that feature of the bill, but unfortunately at the conclusion of Title VI we find this provision:

> The board shall for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and annually thereafter, submit to Congress estimates of the amount necessary to be expended by it in executing the provisions of this title.

Then follows this remarkable provision:

> There is hereby authorized to be appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the aggregate sum of $250,000,000, to be available for expenditure by the board, in accordance with the provisions of this title, during a period not to exceed 10 years after the passage of this act.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. NORRIS. The report not yet having been printed, I am unable to ascertain without inquiry what the report shows. I wish to ask the Senator whether in the action of the committee on the bill they have stricken out the land-settlement provision?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. No; that provision is not stricken out; but there is no provision made for carrying it into effect.

Mr. NORRIS. I remember an hour or two ago listening to the very interesting explanation of the bill by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER], but I do not believe there was any estimate made in that explanatory statement with regard to the land-settlement part of the bill. I should like to inquire whether the committee considered that feature?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I must say to the Senator that I do not recall that there was any mention made in the report of the committee about that feature of the bill. I do not recall any, but that feature of the bill was left in the bill to be reported to the Senate.

Mr. NORRIS. I heard the Senator make the statement just a few moments ago that he regarded that as an important feature of the bill. I gave some attention to the bill at the time it came over from the House, and I myself thought that the part of the bill which would result in the greatest benefit to the country and to the men was the land-settlement part of it. I was always in doubt as to just how many or what proportion of men would choose it, but in talking with a great many of the former soldiers I have found that almost without exception they regard that as the best part of the bill, some of them going so far as to say that perhaps there ought to be something put in the bill to make it more likely that more of them would choose that provision.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I am very glad the Senator from Nebraska has made the suggestion and that he realizes the importance of that provision of the bill. I certainly agree with the view he has expressed. I see no reason why there should not now be made an appropriation sufficient to start this great work. The bill provides for $250,000,000 in 10 years. Why not let us provide $25,000,000 of it right now?

Let us consider for a moment that provision of the bill. When do we expect to furnish homes for the ex-service men? If we start upon that work immediately, it will be months before a single one of them can avail himself of the benefits of that provision. If we believe that is a thing which should come to them and be done, why not begin now and appropriate $25,000,000 to begin the work? We have got to organize a force, we have to select the projects, we have got to find the lands which we wish to reclaim, whether by irrigation, drainage, or otherwise, and under the terms of the bill we should find land, if feasible, in every State in the Union. If this is to be done, why not start now? It does seem to me that unless the Congress desires to camouflage the situation it will make an appropriation at least to carry this feature of the bill into effect.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. PITTMAN. The Senator is a member of the committee which had the bill in charge. While I listened as carefully as I could when the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] was describing the report, there were times when by reason of confusion in the Chamber I could not follow him. I wish to ask the Senator if I have reached a correct understanding of the report. I understand that as far as the adjusted service pay is concerned the committee have changed the bill as it came from the House by substituting January, 1923, for July 1, 1921, as the date of the commencement of the quarterly payments. Is that correct?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That is true.

Mr. PITTMAN. In addition to that, I understand the bill makes no appropriation looking to the carrying out of those payments, and that it makes no appropriation for the organization of the various commissions provided for in the bill?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The bill does not appropriate a single dollar for any purpose.

Mr. PITTMAN. And all of the provisions of the House bill under Title VII, entitled "Victory taxes," providing for an additional surtax on incomes, stock and bond taxes, produce-exchange taxes, and so forth, which was the method provided by the House for raising sufficient funds to meet the requirements of the bill, have been stricken out?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Every provision in the bill as it came from the House for the purpose of providing the means for raising revenue has been stricken from the bill.

Mr. PITTMAN. As I interpret that state of facts, so far as adjusted service pay is concerned, that is practically indefinitely postponed; in other words, the Senate committee promises the ex-service men that in 1923 it is their intention to proceed along the lines stated in the bill so far as adjusting service pay is concerned, but is it not a fact——

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If the Senator will pardon me, I believe the proposition might be stated in this way: The bill as now reported to the Senate amounts in effect to a mere statement by this Congress that this Congress is willing that some future Congress may provide some means of paying these men an adjusted service pay.

Mr. PITTMAN. What I was going to state is this: As I understand, the promise by one Congress that another Congress shall do a certain thing is not binding in any way; that it is not even considered morally binding, is it, on subsequent Congresses?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Not in the slightest degree. This bill only provides that these things shall be done provided some future Congress shall make an appropriation for that purpose.

Mr. PITTMAN. Then the ex-service men are in no better position than if they should bring the matter to the attention of the Congress which will be in session on January, 1923?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I can not see how they can receive any material benefit from the bill. Of course, there is one thing it will do: It will provide legislation, so that when we come to the consideration of some general appropriation bill, if the Appropriations Committee desires so to do, it may put an appropriation on a general appropriation bill providing for the execution of this measure. That, to my mind, is the only real effect the passage of this bill will have—to enable an appropriating committee in the future, in some general appropriation bill, to make provision for the purpose contemplated, because it would then be authorized by law.

Mr. PITTMAN. The reason I have asked the questions is this: I am receiving telegrams to-day suggesting that there has been a favorable report upon this bill by the committee and urging me to support the report. I know that those who are wiring me do not understand what the report is, because some of the telegrams state that the committee have reported favorably on the bill as prepared and suggested by the legion. I want it definitely understood that I shall not vote for the committee amendment changing the date as it is provided in the House bill from January, 1921, to January, 1923; but notwithstanding that——

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If the Senator will pardon me, I might make this suggestion: To my mind it is wholly immaterial whether the Senator votes for that amendment or not, because even if that amendment is not made this bill could not furnish a single dollar to any one of the ex-service men. So it is immaterial whether the amendment is put in or not, according to my view of the matter.

Mr. PITTMAN. Do not the ex-service men, so far as the Senator from New Mexico knows, expect some benefit from this proposed act?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I will say to the Senator from Nevada that all of the opposition in the press that I have read which has been directed toward this bill is based on the ground that if it should become a law there would be an immediate drain upon the Treasury which it could not stand, but when the bill is analyzed it is found that it can not drain a single dollar out of the Treasury.

Mr. PITTMAN. I wish to say, Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me—and I do not want to take up any time with further speeches on the matter—that I am deeply interested in this question. I do not believe our soldiers since their return have received the consideration to which they are entitled. I think we have forgotten the sacrifices that they made for those who stayed at home; I think we have forgotten the suffering which they endured; I imagine we are thinking more of the reduction in our incomes than we are of doing justice to these men whom we can never repay. We have caused them to wait now for two years. They have been waiting not for a bill to be passed which provides that some day we shall put in force and effect legislation in their behalf, but they have been waiting to have such legislation put into effect now; yet we are proposing to put them off longer and longer. Senators may feel that the tax situation of the country requires delay; and yet the other House provided a method of taxation that would raise the necessary funds, as I understand.

Mr. McCUMBER. I want to deny that, Mr. President. The House provided nothing of the kind. The bill that was sent over here would not raise the necessary funds. I have heard a good deal of demagogic utterances on this whole subject. While I am not the chairman of the Committee on Finance, that committee have reported the bill, and Senators can make the bill what they wish in the Senate. They will have an opportunity to do so. The time that is taken up in discussing it in connection with another bill, a motion to consider which is now pending, is time lost. I will join with the Senators to-morrow, if they wish to vote the necesstary funds, to make a cash payment or anything else they may see fit, but the criticisms that are attempted to be made are unfounded.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] is a member of the Committee on Finance. I have heard none of these criticisms urged before that committee. I have heard of no great assistance being rendered or any particular effort to get the bill hurried through the committee by the Senator.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. I have been ready to take up the matter with him at any time, being friendly to this proposition. The Senator knows as well as I do that we have got to represent both the interests of the soldier and the interests of the taxpaying public. The Senator knows that there are those upon the committee who are desperately opposed to this bill being passed at all at this session. The Senator knows as well as I do that in April we will have Congress in session and that any appropriation bill necessary to carry out what shall be agreed upon to be the law can be put through the proper appropriating committee. That is what the committee has had in view. The Senator from Nevada knows that the Committee on Finance is not an appropriating committee; it simply provides the machinery, and the Committee on Appropriations provides the money to take care of the measure under proper estimates.

The committee which has reported this bill have acted in the best of faith. I would fix a little earlier time than the last of December, 1922; but that is for the Senate to determine when the bill comes before it. If we get the pending bill out of the way we will have the other one before us very quickly for disposition.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I trust that the Senator from North Dakota may be willing to withdraw one expression which he used in his recent remarks, to the effect that he had heard enough demagogy on this bill. I want to say to the Senator that that is a word which I have not yet used, but if we consider the history of this bill from the time that it started in the House of Representatives until this good hour it seems to me that somebody else has the right to use the word which the Senator from North Dakota has employed. He certainly does not intend to apply that word to me, because he knows that the Finance Committee did not have the bill under consideration until Thursday of last week. Where was the opportunity to study the bill?

The Senator from North Dakota also knows that I have been asking him for a copy of his report. The Senator from North Dakota further knows that on last Saturday, when the Committee on Finance decided to report the bill, we then only had a report, which he read to the committee. We had no opportunity to suggest amendments; and on that occasion I specifically reserved the right to propose amendments in the Senate. A statement or inference as to dereliction in working with the committee is wholly unwarranted by the facts.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. PITTMAN. I was just about to finish a sentence when interrupted. I merely wish to say that while the House did not provide, as has been stated, the means or funds through taxation to raise this amount to cover the full period of years, they did provide, as I understand—and I am not a member of the Finance Committee, but base my statement on a hasty examination of the bill as it comes from the committee—for the raising of large sums of money through increasing taxes on large incomes and also upon stock sales and transactions of that kind on stock exchanges which would take care of the immediate needs. I do not know why the money can not be raised if it is desired to tax those who have the incomes with which to pay it.

Of course, I understand that when you attempt to raise the taxes much higher a great many more people will complain, but that does not concern me at all; and if it is demagoguery to be willing to take part of the profits—not the principal but a part more of the profits—away from those who have made enormous profits out of the war, and pay it to those men who sacrificed and suffered for us, that our liberties might endure and that we might live in peace and prosperity, then I welcome the charge of demagoguery.

And so it seems to appear from arguments that to save the incomes is statesmanship and to attempt to do justice to our soldiers is demagoguery.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I am very much in sympathy with what the Senator has been saying. This bill having passed the House, there might be a possibility of taking some action in the Senate and getting an agreement; but, of course, we can not consider two bills at the same time, and if the Senator will allow us to proceed with the naval appropriation bill and get it out of the way, I will join with him in an effort to accomplish the object that he has so well stated.

I hope, therefore, the Senator will allow us to go ahead with the naval bill.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I am always glad to accommodate my cordial friend from Washington when I think it can be done without detriment to the public interest; but from the remarks which I listened to this afternoon from the Senator from Idaho I am quite convinced that it would be a useless waste of time to take up the naval bill now, in the closing days of this session. The Senator from Idaho did not say that he was determined that that bill should not pass; but when a Senator, loquacious, eloquent, well informed, announces to the Senate that certain features of such a bill should be considered deliberately and at length I think we all understand just what that means. So I believe that it would be a waste of time to take up that bill, and, if I were unkind enough, it seems to me the observation would be justified that when this bill is brought upon the floor of the Senate and presented to it—this bill which I deem to be an emergency measure, a bill which promises some result—when I see this bill presented to the Senate without any effort to bring it up for consideration, and upon the other side of the Chamber a motion is made to take up the naval bill when we all know what the ultimate result probably will be, it would seem to indicate that there was some plan somewhere to prevent this bill from becoming a law at this session of Congress.

Mr. GERRY. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from Rhode Island?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. GERRY. Is it not true that when the bill was before the committee a vote was had on the question whether the date should be made January 1, 1923, or whether the date in the House bill of July 1, 1921, should be retained? I know that the Senator from New Mexico and the Senator from Rhode Island voted for the 1921 date.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That is correct.

Mr. GERRY. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER] was opposed to this, and I am very glad to see that apparently from his statement on the floor he has rather changed his mind about it and thinks that an earlier date than January 1, 1923, may be set.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, the truth of the situation is, as I understand—and I do not blame the Senator from North Dakota for that situation, either—that this matter has been deferred until the closing hours of this Congress, and the conclusion has been finally reached that this Senate must do something, must take some action, or must meet with the resentment which will necessarily come from these ex-service men and their friends and the other patriotic citizens of this country who believe that they should receive some kind of compensation for the services which they have contributed to the country.

I do not blame the Senator from North Dakota. If I recall correctly, he was appointed chairman of the subcommittee only a short time ago, and I believe I have heard him make the statement in committee that from that time to the present he has been hard at work on the bill. So I acquit him of any intention to delay this bill or of any intention to take any teeth out of it, if it ever had any teeth in it, but this is the situation which confronts us and the country now, and it does seem to me that it devolves upon us to take this situation in hand and deal with it so as to bring about some affirmative result and to do something to show that we mean what we pretend to mean.

Mr. President, there are three things which it seems to me can be done here without the employment of very much money.

The Senate Finance Committee proposes to strike out the provisions of this bill for raising the funds by taxation. No consideration really has been given by the committee to that feature, except in the most perfunctory way. It may be that the provisions in this bill for raising funds are not what they should be, that we can raise this money in some other way, the large amount, if it should ever be necessary, but I want to refer to another feature of this bill which in all probability will make it unnecessary at any time to raise any very large sum of money, as has been suggested in the report of the chairman of the committee.

To my mind, there is a very unwise provision on page 3 of this bill. For instance, it provides:

> Applications for adjusted-service pay shall be made within six months after the passage of this act.
>
> Applications for adjusted-service certificates shall be made within one year after the passage of this act.
>
> Applications for vocational training aid or for farm or home aid shall be made within one year after the passage of this act * * *.
>
> Applications for land-settlement aid shall be made within one year after the passage of this act * * *.

And then it says:

> Any application not made within the time provided therefor shall be held void.

I can not for the life of me conceive any reason for putting such a provision as that into this bill. I have heard it said by many ex-service men that they do not want anything from this Government of ours at this time; that they do not need it; that they do not want anything, and would not accept the provisions of this bill if they were entitled to them. Now, then, why limit the time within which the application may be filed? That same ex-service man through his patriotism might decline to accept any adjustment of pay at this time, but in the mutations of time circumstances may change, and then he would be confronted with this provision:

> Any application not made within the time provided therefor shall be held void.

Do we want to make any such provision as that? Moreover, do we want to force the ex-service man within the next six months to say whether he wants to take the adjusted pay, or whether he wants to take a certificate, or whether he wants to take a home settlement or vocational training? Do you want to force him to do that within the next six months?

Fellow Senators, how can the ex-service man decide in six months whether he wants to take a home-settlement benefit or not? No selection of the homes has been made. We do not know where the projects are going to be; and to force him to make his selection within six months, or be forever barred, is doing him an absolute injustice, and the effect of it will be to force practically all of them to choose the bonus or cash payment plan. That, indeed, might and would make a great burden upon the Treasury; but if you defer the time or have the time unlimited within which the selection may be made, I imagine that thousands and hundreds of thousands of these men will not make their selection now. They will want to wait and see what the home-settlement plan is going to amount to. They will want to wait and see whether they desire to take an adjusted-service certificate. They might want to wait and determine to borrow the money for the purchase of a home or a farm as provided in this bill; but if you force them to make a decision now you force them to select the payment of this sum in cash, and to my mind they ought to be discouraged from accepting cash just as much as we can possibly do it.

Another provision that we might put in this bill is this: We passed a few years ago what is known as a stock-grazing homestead law. We propose to give to a settler upon the public domain 640 acres of land if he will go there and improve it. He does not have to live on it, but we give it to him if he will simply go there and improve it. Now, the reason why those lands have not been improved and taken up under that law is this: Six hundred and forty acres of those lands is not enough to enable a man to go and establish a little stock ranch and make a living on the land. So I have prepared an amendment to this bill, providing that an ex-service man may purchase of those lands 1,280 acres at $1.25 an acre, and have his adjusted-service pay applied to the purchase price.

I have the amendment prepared here, and I submit that there can be no valid reason suggested why this plan should not be adopted; and if it is adopted it will afford homes, it will afford aid to hundreds and thousands of these ex-service men, and will not cost this Government a dollar. Why should not that be done?

I provide that those lands which have been classified under the stock-grazing homestead law may be purchased at $1.25 an acre, or that other lands of less value, which have been classified as of less value and are put outside the stock-grazing homestead law because they are not of sufficient value, may be purchased. So the amendment is limited to that. I propose that we appropriate $100,000,000 for the purpose of furnishing vocational training if the ex-service men want it, $25,000,000 for the purpose of starting the home-settlement feature of this bill, and then I propose to put in this amendment allowing the soldiers to purchase these lands upon the public domain and get them into private ownership, private use, and have them become subject to taxation for State purposes. I provide that the cash proceeds derived therefrom shall be divided, one half going to the State where the land is found, and the other half going to the Reclamation Fund, the half going to the State to be appropriated as the legislature may provide for either common public schools or the building of roads.

So, Mr. President, I offer the three amendments which I have had prepared, and ask that they may be printed as proposed amendments to the bill. I will state also that while I have prepared no amendment I shall, on consideration of the bill, move to strike out, on page 3, lines 5 to 24, inclusive, being all of those provisions requiring the ex-service man to make his selection within a limited time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendments offered by the Senator from New Mexco [Mr. JONES] to House bill 14157 will be printed and lie on the table.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, it does seem to me that in this late hour of this Congress it would be a waste of time to take up the naval appropriation bill, which is now sought to be brought up, and instead of doing that I hope the Senate will take up this adjusted-compensation bill and consider it. Let us put it in shape. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] very properly suggested that if the bill is not in shape the Senate could take hold of it and put it in shape. Let us do it. Let us not waste our time in considering a bill which can accomplish no result and which can as well be considered at the special session of the next Congress.

Mr. MCCUMBER. Mr. President, the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] is a member of the Committee on Finance. I have been a member of that committee for some years. In all my experience I have never known of a time when the committee would not at any time suggested by any Member call up any bill before the committee for amendment or for suggestion. I know that it was in the power of the Senator from New Mexico to request a meeting to consider any part of any bill at any time, and that a meeting would have been called especially at his request. I do not think it lies in the mouth of anyone to say that that committee, of which he is a member, has not acted expeditiously upon any bill, when the power was in his hands, as well as in those of other members of the committee, to bring about action at any time if he thought there was any delay.

But, Mr. President, there has been a great deal of work not only before that committee but before every committee of the Senate in the present short session.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. MCCUMBER. I yield to the Senator with pleasure.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I desire to make this statement in response to what the Senator has just said: I have not been a member of this body as long as the Senator from North Dakota, but if any such rule prevails as he has just announced I must say I have never heard of it before.

If it was within the power of a single member of the committee to bring together a meeting of the committee this is the first time that information has come to my ears. The Senator, it does seem to me, in his great spirit of fairness, ought to observe, what seems to be the prevailing opinion in this body as well as throughout the country, that the chairman of the committee and a few on the majority side of the committee control absolutely the proceedings of the committee.

Mr. MCCUMBER. Mr. President, the chairman of the committee is not the whole committee in any one of the committees of the Senate, and he is not in the Finance Committee. The chairman of the Finance Committee has been absent a great part of the time on account of sickness. There has never been a time in which any member of that committee has asked for a meeting when the member next below the chairman has not immediately proceeded to ask the committee to meet in response to the request of that member, and it would not make any difference whether that member was on the minority or the majority side.

Mr. President, let us deal honestly with the subject. Let us not try to play upon anybody or for any purpose. Let us deal fairly by the country, and deal fairly by the committee, and fairly by the people who have to pay the taxes. We are confronted with an enormous deficit. The people of the country are tax burdened. The American people are generous, generous even to a fault, and more than generous at all times toward those who fight their battles. The man who goes into the Army or Navy has never had just cause to complain of the impulse of the American people to do the right thing by him at all times.

But, Mr. President, we know we are confronted with conditions that are not at all agreeable. The country at the present time, so far as business is concerned, is almost prostrated. We have to raise by taxation very large sums to meet our liabilities. I believe we can meet this added liability in the way I have suggested, without any additional taxation whatever.

The Senator from New Mexico criticizes the Senate committee, or seems to criticize it, because of some provisions in the bill as it passed the House. We had hearings, and most of those hearings were given over to those who were ex-service men, who represented the American Legion, and other organizations of those men. Their testimony uniformly was that they were entirely satisfied with the bill as it passed the House. They were not desirous of having any amendments, and preferred that there should be none.

When it came to the question as to the time when it should go into effect we were assured that they would have confidence that the Congress would make it applicable as soon as the conditions of the country would warrant it, and that whatever the Congress did they would be satisfied with it; and I am certain that that is their sentiment.

I admit that a difference of 18 months, between July 1, 1921, and December, 1922, measures quite an extent in the lives of those who desire to take advantage of two provisions; that is, the land provision and that providing for industrial education. But that can be fixed in the Senate to whatever time the Senate thinks would be the proper time. I am satisfied that 95 per cent of the men, at least, will choose either the cash or the insurance or certificate proposition, and those are the provisions which will cost the greatest sum of money to the American people.

Therefore in making this report I was careful to cover the minimum and also the possible maximum cost, and then gave tables showing the figures all the way between those two extremes, to show what would be the probable cost to the American people, and even independent of the action of the committee, I made an additional suggestion, which I thought proper, as to how the money might be raised without any additional taxation whatever. I believe it can be done, and I believe we could probably begin at a little earlier date if the Senate thought proper. But I do not think we should select July 1, 1921, because we are too near that date at the present time to raise the necessary revenue to provide the bills for it and to put in action the machinery which will be necessary. I want to give the ex-soldier sufficient time to be educated as to just exactly what these provisions mean to him before he is called upon even to exercise his judgment at all, and I think six months should be the least number of months that should be allowed for this purpose before he is even required to make any selection whatever.

The committee is acting in the best of faith. I stated in my presentation this morning that, whatever date we fix, I thought we ought to put it right through now, so that when we meet in April we can immediately prepare our revenue and our appropriation bills to meet the estimated requirements of the bill.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator a question bearing upon the remarks which he has just made. As I understood the Senator, he said that the bill was satisfactory to the ex-service men.

Mr. MCCUMBER. I stated that, according to the testimony, as the bill passed the House it was satisfactory to the ex-service men, and I stated, as to those who were before us, just what the testimony showed.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I should like to ask the Senator, in this connection, if he does not understand that the ex-service men, in expressing such approval of the bill, understood that the bill made provision for the payment of money?

Mr. MCCUMBER. Of course.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Does the bill make any such provision?

Mr. MCCUMBER. The bill as it passed the House makes provision for the payment of the money, and of course so does the bill that we have reported. The only difference is the time when the payments shall begin, and the Senate will fix the exact date, when it passes upon this bill, I assume. Inasmuch as there is so much difference between those who take an extreme view and those who wish to take a moderate view, as to the proper time, I for one thought it was best to determine that matter in the Senate itself, and gave the two dates. The Senator knows that it was voted in the committee to put the date off to a still further time, even a year later, which of course was voted down.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Will the Senator permit another question?

Mr. MCCUMBER. Certainly.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Does the Senator want us to understand that if the bill were to become a law as it passed the House, or as reported to the Senate, the ex-service man would get a dollar under it, without further legislation by Congress?

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I do not care what kind of a law we pass that is necessary to fix a monetary obligation upon the country, we have to depend upon Congress to make appropriations for the payments. Does any officer in the Army or Navy know that he is going to be paid two years from now? Yes; he knows that, his salary being fixed, that Congress will make the necessary appropriation. Do the soldiers know that they are going to be paid if we pass a law which provides that they shall be paid? Certainly, they know that Congress will make appropriate provision in the appropriation bills for the payments.

We do not know to-day exactly how much money will be paid each year. We can not know until the applications begin to come in.

If we pass the bill to-day, we can make a fair estimate. Even if we fix on July 1, 1921, as the date for the beginning of payments, we can make a fair estimate as to how much will be required before the end of the next fiscal year, and between April 4 and June 30 of 1921 we can pass an appropriation bill to cover the estimate. It is not necessary, it not only is not necessary but it is not proper that the bill should carry the appropriation to make the payments that will be made during all of the next 20 years.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, the bill passed the House on the 20th of last May. It provided for the operation of the adjusted service pay beginning on the 1st of July, 1921, just a few months from the present time. Even if the Senator from North Dakota believes that the Appropriations Committee will make appropriations for carrying out the provisions of such a bill as this, has there been any attempt on the part of the Committee on Appropriations of the House even to consider any legislation looking toward the actual appropriation of money for the purpose, and should the ex-service men be satisfied with this legislation which alone would not provide the payment of a single dollar?

Mr. McCUMBER. The time to make an appropriation for any law is when we know what the law will be. When a bill is passed which provides for many and devious ways through which we are to determine the amount which will be necessary, we have got to wait until we see what the law is and then trust the proper Appropriations Committee to make the appropriation. I will guarantee to the Senator that if we pass the bill at this session there will be an appropriation made, even though it takes effect July 1, 1921, and I could add a like guaranty that if it passes at any time before July 1, 1921, the necessary appropriation will be made to carry it into effect. I would rather have it passed now. I think it ought to pass before we begin the consideration of our revenue bill, because the revenue bill should be framed in accordance with the requirements of the Government, and we should know the additional requirements just as soon as possible.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. TOWNSEND in the chair). The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER], that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 15975, the naval appropriation bill.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the reading clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KNOX (when his name was called). May I inquire if the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN] has voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. KNOX. I withhold my vote, being paired with that Senator.

Mr. MOSES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GAY]. I transfer my pair to the junior Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] and vote "yea."

Mr. WOLCOTT (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON] to the junior Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS] and vote "yea."

Mr. FERNALD. Making the same announcement as before, I transfer my pair to the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] and vote "yea."

Mr. KNOX. I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN] to the junior Senator from Oregon [Mr. MCNARY] and vote "yea."

Mr. McCUMBER (after having voted in the affirmative). I transfer my pair with the senior Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] to the junior Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE] and allow my vote to stand.

Mr. GERRY. I was requested to announce that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. HARRIS] and the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] are necessarily absent.

Mr. CURTIS. I desire to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK];

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK] with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. HENDERSON];

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS];

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] with the Senator from Virginia [Mr. GLASS];

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM] with the Senator from Maryland [Mr. SMITH];

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] with the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN];

The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN] with the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]; and

The Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] with the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS].

The result was announced—yeas 43, nays 7, as follows:

YEAS—43.

Ball	Gooding	Moses	Stanley
Brandegee	Hale	New	Sterling
Calder	Heflin	Overman	Sutherland
Capper	Jones, Wash.	Phipps	Townsend
Curtis	Kellogg	Poindexter	Trammell
Dial	Keyes	Pomerene	Underwood
Elkins	Knox	Sheppard	Wadsworth
Fernald	Lenroot	Simmons	Warren
Fletcher	Lodge	Smith, Ga.	Willis
France	McCumber	Smoot	Wolcott
Gerry	McKellar	Spencer

NAYS—7.

Borah	Kenyon	La Follette	Smith, S. C.
Jones, N. Mex.	King	Norris

NOT VOTING—46.

Ashurst	Gore	McNary	Sherman
Beckham	Gronna	Myers	Shields
Chamberlain	Harris	Nelson	Smith, Ariz.
Colt	Harrison	Newberry	Smith, Md.
Culberson	Henderson	Owen	Swanson
Cummins	Hitchcock	Page	Thomas
Dillingham	Johnson, Calif.	Penrose	Walsh, Mass.
Edge	Johnson, S. Dak.	Phelan	Walsh, Mont.
Fall	Kendrick	Pittman	Watson
Frelinghuysen	Kirby	Ransdell	Williams
Gay	McCormick	Reed
Glass	McLean	Robinson

So Mr. POINDEXTER's motion was agreed to; and the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill (H. R. 15975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, which had been reported from the Committee on Naval Affairs with amendments.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the formal reading of the bill, that the bill be read for amendments, and that the committee amendments be first considered.

Mr. BORAH. May I ask the Senator from Washington if it is the intention to-night, after he has held the Senate as long as he desires, to take a recess or adjourn?

Mr. POINDEXTER. To take a recess. I ask unanimous consent that when we conclude the sitting to-night, the Senate shall take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. BORAH. Just a moment. That is a point concerning which I desire to be informed. I gave notice a day or two ago, under Rule XL, of a motion to suspend the rules, and since that time we have been taking a recess and have had no adjournment. Do I understand that my notice would be available notwithstanding the fact we have had no adjournment?

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is my understanding.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The opinion of the Chair is that the rule which has been followed is that a calendar day must elapse. Inasmuch as that rule has been followed, the Chair thinks the motion of the Senator would be in order, and that the rule would apply to the notice given by the Senator from Idaho.

The Senator from Washington has submitted a request for unanimous consent to dispense with the formal reading of the bill, and that the bill be read for amendments, and that committee amendments be first considered.

Mr. KING. Mr. President. I do not wish to object, but I desire to call the attention of the Senator to the fact that to-morrow at 10.30 and 11 o'clock a number of committees are to meet. I have two such meetings—I think the purpose is to conclude a number of pending and important matters—and perhaps they will be the last meetings of the committees, and doubtless a large number of other committees are meeting. If the Senator could make it 12 o'clock, it would give us a chance to get rid of those important matters.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I will say to the Senator from Utah, so far as his committee meetings are concerned, that if he will allow us to proceed at 11 o'clock, if any matter in which he is interested should come up during his committee meeting I shall be very glad to have it go over until he can be here.

Mr. KING. I do not want to object, but I thought my suggestion might be in the interest of economy of time and the expedition of business.

Mr. LODGE. If the Senator will allow me, I desire to say I hope the Senator from Utah will not object to making it 11 o'clock, because it is better to meet at 11 o'clock than to add an hour at night, and that is what would have to be done.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Washington is granted.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The second request which I desire to make is that when the Senate concludes its sitting to-day it take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate has heard the request of the Senator from Washington. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

REFERENCE OF NOMINATIONS.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have referred to the Committee on Commerce, as in open executive session, certain nominations—1 in the Steamboat-Inspection Service, 11 in the Coast Guard, and 17 in the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Mr. SMOOT. Those were the nominations asked to be referred to which I objected the other day, but I find, upon examination, that they are regular promotions, just the same as the regular promotions in the Army or Navy. Therefore I have no objection to the course suggested by the Senator from Washington.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the request of the Senator from Washington is granted.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

The reading clerk proceeded to read the bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I have asked that the formal reading of the bill be dispensed with and that it be read for amendments, the committee amendments to be first considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary is following the usual procedure in such cases.

Mr. BORAH. I do not understand that by granting the request of the Senator from Washington the Secretary is relieved from reading the bill. The bill is now being read for committee amendments, but the bill has to be read.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Of course, if the Senator from Idaho desires the entire bill to be read, that is all right.

Mr. BORAH. I understood that the Senator from Washington had simply asked to dispense with the formal reading of the bill and to have it read for committee amendments. That is what the Secretary is now doing. I repeat, the bill has to be read.

Mr. POINDEXTER. If the Senator desires it, of course, that is all right; but I thought it would save time simply to read the amendments.

Mr. KING. I should like to have the bill read.

The reading of the bill was resumed.

The first amendment of the Committee on Naval Affairs was, on page 2, line 14, after the word "employees," to insert "and for mileage, at 5 cents per mile, to midshipmen entering the Naval Academy while proceeding from their homes to the Naval Academy for examination and appointment as midshipmen," so as to read:

PAY, MISCELLANEOUS.

For commissions and interest; transportation of funds; exchange; mileage to officers of the Navy and Naval Reserve Force while traveling under orders in the United States, and for actual personal expenses of officers of the Navy and Naval Reserve Force while traveling abroad under orders, and for traveling expenses of civilian employees; and for mileage, at 5 cents per mile, to midshipmen entering the Naval Academy while proceeding from their homes to the Naval Academy for examination and appointment as midshipmen.

The amendment was agreed to.

The next amendment was, on page 3, line 14, under the heading, "Pay, miscellaneous," to increase the appropriation "for telephone rentals and tolls, telegrams and cablegrams, postage," etc., from "$250,000" to "$400,000."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the first item which we encounter in the consideration of the pending bill calling for an appropriation is an increase over that carried by the House bill. The House appropriation with reference to this item called for $250,000, while the bill, as reported by the Senate committee, carries $400,000. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] a few moments ago called attention to the fact that the bill increases the appropriations carried by the House bill by more than $105,000,000.

Mr. President, an examination of the testimony and the bill, in my opinion, fails to justify these tremendous increases. I do not recall at this moment the various estimates which constitute this aggregate sum of $400,000; but the House committee examined into these items—and I say it with all due respect to the Senate committee—with far more particularity than did the Senate committee. Yet, Mr. President, an examination of the House hearings discloses how pitifully imperfect is the information which is furnished. I have not the time to take up the specific items concerning which testimony was given in the House; but an examination of almost any one of them selected at random will show that substantially all the testimony was given by interested naval officers or persons representing the Navy Department. Of course, it would be unparliamentary, and perhaps improper, upon my part to comment upon the procedure employed by the other branch of the legislative body in obtaining data as the basis of projected legislation, and particularly appropriation bills; but I aver—and I do not think the statement can be successfully controverted—that the testimony adduced before the House Naval Committee with respect to the items carried in the House naval appropriation bill was wholly inadequate to enable legislators intelligently to act.

Some representative of the Navy Department interested in the appropriation appears before the House committee. Already the House has been advised from estimates which have been furnished by the Navy Department that the Navy wants appropriations of given sums for specific or general purposes. Senators will keep in mind the fact that the estimates which were submitted by the Navy Department exceeded the House bill and the Senate bill by several hundred million dollars, as I now recall. In support of those estimates representatives of various bureaus or executive agencies of the Navy Department appear before the House committee, which considers the estimates, and reference is made to some estimate of $100,000 or $1,000,000 or $40,000,000, and then in a perfunctory manner statements are submitted with respect to the estimates which have been furnished. The testimony which has been adduced for the guidance of Senators is, in my opinion, insufficient to enable them to reach an intelligent and rational conclusion with respect to the various items for which appropriations are sought. Mr. President, the hearings are practically ex parte; interested witnesses appear, while the taxpayer is not represented. Others who might throw additional light upon the various items and who are not interested or who are seeking the welfare of the taxpayers are not before the committee; countervailing evidence is not submitted, and the record is made up on the ex parte statements of interested witnesses.

I do not want to speak in disparagement of the honor, the integrity, of the high character of the personnel of the Navy. I believe that the naval officers of the United States in all of the essentials embraced within the terms, character and manhood, measure up to a very high standard; yet human nature manifests itself even in naval officers as it exhibits itself in all persons in every walk of life. We are governed more or less by self-interest; persons are influenced more or less by the question of benefits and advantages which may flow directly or indirectly either to them or to a cause in which they are deeply interested. So, Mr. President, unconsciously, by reason of that natural trait of human character, we are oftentimes led to support measures which do not deserve success, and we earnestly and jealously push to a successful issue policies which careful scrutiny and dispassionate consideration would convince us are improper or at least imprudent and improvident.

The very fact that the estimates which are submitted by the Navy Department and by other executive agencies of the Government exceed by hundreds of millions, and, indeed, by billions of dollars the revenues of the Government, is conclusive evidence that the estimates which are submitted should receive the most careful scrutiny at the hands of both the House and Senate; and, indeed, is evidence that those preparing the estimates are not always guided by a desire for the public welfare.

Moreover, Mr. President, as a corollary to that observation it is evident that the testimony which they give before these committees in support of the estimates—and the testimony, of course, is absolutely in line with the estimates—must be taken with caution, if not distrust, and ought to be weighed by the legislative branches of the Government with the utmost care, and judgment should not be reached unless the testimony and the facts clearly point the way.

Mr. President, I have been astounded and indeed grieved at the estimates which have been furnished from time to time by executive departments of the Government since I have been a Member of this body. There seems to be a rivalry between departments as to which can submit the largest estimates and obtain the largest appropriations from the Treasury of the United States. The distinguished Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER], if I understood his statement correctly, made the observation a few moments ago, when he was discussing the bonus bill, that there was a deficit now, or would be a deficit with the appropriation bills now before the Senate, of considerably more than $2,000,000,000; and he stated, as I remember his figures, that in the event that certain legislation were enacted the deficit would be three billion four hundred or five hundred millions of dollars.

Mr. President, such sums as those mentioned by the Senator would silence even my distinguished friend who is championing this bill in the Senate—a deficit of $2,000,000,000 confronting the Republican Party after it has been in power in the legislative branch of the Government but two years! The revenues which are being derived under existing law have wrung from the people billions of dollars. As I recall, we will obtain from the various revenue bills now in force approximately $5,000,000,000 for the current year. There was a time, not very far in the past, when our appropriations scarcely exceeded a billion dollars. The appropriations for the first two years of Republican control of the legislative branch of the Government will exceed $5,000,000,000 per annum, and the two years of their control of the House and the Senate will find them, notwithstanding these stupendous taxes collected from the people, with a deficit of more than $2,000,000,000.

I think that that statement is modest. I think the deficit will exceed that amount, because the revenue for the current year, because of the decrease in the business of the country, will be materially reduced; and with the reduction in the revenue there will, of course, be an increase in the deficit which is being incurred as a result of these tremendous expenditures.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] just read an excerpt from a letter written by a business man in the West, speaking about the demoralized condition of business, the despair that has taken possession of the cattle and sheep men, and the general paralysis that exists in the industrial life of the people. From the high tide of a splendid and beneficent prosperity which resulted from Democratic ascendancy, we are now confronted with business paralysis in all parts of the land, despair in business circles, stagnation in the economic life of the Republic, and industrial unrest, indeed almost turbulence, in many portions of the United States.

Mr. President, it was announced following the great victory of the Republican Party that stocks would rise, that there would be increased activity in all branches of business and that the prosperity of this country would be the greatest in its history. Republicans foresaw, so they said, an emergence from the twilight of business depression into the splendid sunlight of prosperity. But, Mr. President, Mr. Harding was elected in November. A number of months have passed since the Republican victory—a victory so overwhelming that it amazed the Republicans, and I must confess that it stupefied the Democrats—but I have looked in vain to find the evidences of this prophesied prosperity that was to come like a majestic flood and sweep over the entire country. Republicans won the election two years ago and obtained control of this body, as also the House of Representatives. It was then said by the majority party, "We are going to have good times," and that prosperity would increase because of the Republican victory, but business refused to respond to Republican victory or Republican promises.

Mr. President, I do not want to be partisan. I want to say that the business and industrial conditions of the country have resulted, not because of Republican successes; they were absolutely inevitable. I would not be unfair enough to charge that the present economic conditions and the industrial disaster which have come to the American people are to be attributed to Republican success. The trouble is fundamentally not superficial and goes deeper than mere election results. But there are too many people who look to the Government as the fountain of prosperity or as the cause of adversity. We have been taught, unfortunately, by many of the false political prophets in our midst, that our prosperity depends upon the Government rather than upon the people themselves. There are too many false teachers in the land who insist that the power that gives us beneficent things rests with the Government, rather than with the people themselves.

Mr. President, the power for weal or for woe, politically or industrially, rests with the people, not with the Government. It is time that men and women in this Republic began to realize the fact that they are the arbiters of their own economic as well as their political destiny, and that there are tides surging throughout the world affecting the political and the economic conditions of humanity that are beyond the control of political organizations and beyond the omnipotent power of the most paternalistic of governments. There are certain laws that are operative in the economic world, and if we by legislation seek to nullify them we only add to our misfortune and contribute to our woes.

Mr. President, it is a profound discovery of the German philosophers that we find exemplified in sociological conditions, in the social organism, those principles of evolution and growth and progress and development which find expression in the biological world. There is universality of law, and its violation in the economic world is attended with serious consequences. The progress of the government depends upon the individual units within the government. A bold, courageous, industrious, enterprising people will compel success, and will bring prosperity, regardless of adverse conditions by which they may be surrounded. Prosperity is a plant that grows through the individualism and industry and thrift and courage and manhood and self-reliance of the people. There may be exotic growths, superficial in character, the product of unwise law, and legislation which flies in the face of the inexorable laws governing the world; but in the end the natural laws of progress will assert themselves, and the exotic plants will wither and die, and the hardy plants which have grown in the sunlight and in the shadow and in the storm of opposition and of rivalry will survive.

The letter which the Senator from Idaho read contained a statement which is pertinent. The writer said: "I do not know that Congress can do anything to relieve the situation." I know one thing that Congress can do. Congress can let the people alone. It can reduce taxes and limit appropriations.

Adam Smith refers to the conditions essential to progress and happiness. They call for light taxes and a "tolerable" degree of justice. If there were more independence, I mean personal independence, more self-reliance, a greater faith in local self-government, it would make for the welfare and advancement of the people.

The people want an opportunity to work out their own destiny, untrammeled and unhampered by the powerful and omnipotent hand of a paternalistic government. Mr. President, the Government of the United States unfortunately for a number of years has been drifting away from what I regard as sound political principles. It is adopting a policy which more and more develops a spirit of paternalism and more and more enervates and atrophies the individuals and the States.

The people come from every part of our land to Congress for relief, instead of appealing to and relying upon themselves, and if it is a matter for governmental interposition, to their own States, which have to do with their local and domestic affairs. The Federal Government has certain functions to perform. They are determined by the Constitution of the United States. This is a Government of enumerated powers, and the Federal Government may not project itself beyond the limits established by the Constitution of the United States.

But I say we are drifting from those conceptions which our fathers had, and which obtained for many years in this Republic, and the struggle now is for the individuals and for the States to maintain themselves against this rising, omnipotent tide of federalism which seeks their destruction.

So people come to Congress and ask for greater appropriations, and Congress, responding to the importunities of the people, increases the appropriations from year to year, until, as has been stated by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER], the appropriations will be so great that we will have a deficit of from two to three billion dollars for the current year.

We are considering now the Naval appropriation bill. Saturday we passed the Army bill. I shall not trespass upon the time of the Senate to read the statistics showing the appropriations made in Great Britain, Germany, France, and other nations of Europe, and Japan, for their armies from 1912, indeed from earlier periods, down to the breaking out of the Great War. I have them here and they are very instructive. Mr. President, without turning to the page showing the appropriations made by Germany, my recollection is that we are appropriating for the coming year for the Army of the United States more than Germany ever appropriated for her army, except during the period of the great World War. We appropriated on Saturday more than $400,000,000 for an Army of 175,000 men. Germany, the greatest military power of Europe, when she had an army of some half a million to a million men, did not expend in a single year the amount which we appropriated for the next fiscal year for an Army of 175,000 men; and we are at peace and more than two years removed from the war.

Mr. President, whatever the Federal Government does it does in an extravagant, wasteful manner. It costs the Federal Government more than any civilized Government in the world to execute a given program, and it is wasteful, measured by the activities of private business. We have developed a spirit of extravagance and wastefulness upon the part of the Federal Government and its officials, so our expenses mount and increase in the War Department and in the Navy Department, and have attained heights never before reached, except during the period of war. The end of the war brings no relief from taxation and promises no economies.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] called attention to the expenditures made by our Government for naval purposes for a number of years last past, and showed that the appropriation asked for now, over $500,000,000, was two or three times greater than it ever was prior to the breaking out of the war.

What is the reason for these tremendous expenses, Mr. President? Is it impossible for the Federal Government to function along business lines, along the paths of economy and efficiency? Shall we confess that democracy is a failure, and that we can not, in the administration of a democratic Government, practice those virtues of economy and efficiency which we must allege characterize autocratic governments? This much must be said for Germany, that notwithstanding she was a military power and was autocratic, and, indeed, in many respects despotic, she enforced economy and efficiency, and in the army and in the navy for every mark which was expended she got a corresponding benefit.

The item under consideration now, Mr. President, is increased, as I have stated, from that which is found in the bill as it passed the House. So it is with nearly every other item in the bill. If this were the only increase, it would not excite any particular attention. We turn to the very next item, on page 4, line 10, and find an increase there of half a million dollars. On the following page, page 5, as it passed the House, the bill carried $440,000, under that particular paragraph, for aviation, and the Senate committee recommended an increase to $1,440,000; and, indeed, on the following line the amount seems to be increased to $6,125,750, showing an increase of more than five millions and a half above that which was carried in the bill as it passed the House.

In lines 18 and 19 the bill, as it passed the House, carried an appropriation of $1,615,000 "for continuing experiments and development work on all types of aircraft." That has been increased to $3,000,000.

On lines 20 and 22, the item for "new construction, buildings, and improvements at air stations at a total cost not to exceed $1,339,000," seems to be an entirely new item. The aggregate increase there is the amount which I last mentioned.

On the following page the item of $6,913,431 is increased, so that the Senate committee bill carries $18,729,000.

On page 7 there seems to be a new item of $2,500,000. When I say new, I mean an item that was not found in the bill as it passed the House.

On page 9, under the head of "Bureau of Navigation," the amount appropriated by the House was $3,500,000. The Senate committee bill carries $4,500,000.

On line 9 of the same page, there is an item of $100,000 which is entirely new, no corresponding item being found in the bill as it passed the House.

Page 10 carries an amendment of $100,000. I am not sure but what that, however, is the same amount carried by an item which was stricken out.

Page 11 increases the appropriation for miscellaneous items, under the head of "Instruments and Supplies," from $750,000 to $850,000.

Page 12 increases the amount, under the head of "Naval Training Station, California," from $125,000 to $150,000.

On line 23 there is an increase in the item from $185,000 to $300,000, under the head of "Naval Training Station, Rhode Island."

On page 13, under the head of "Naval Training Station, Great Lakes," the item has been increased from $400,000 to $500,000.

On pages 15 and 16, under the head of "Summer Schools for Boys," is a new item, $200,000.

Under the head of "Naval Reserve Force Board," page 17, the item has been increased from $50,000 to $100,000, and under the head of "Receiving Barracks," lines 12 and 13, the item has been increased from $50,000 to $100,000.

On page 20, under the head of "Bureau of Ordnance," there has been an increase of $1,000,000, so that the item stands $15,000,000, as provided in the Senate committee bill.

On page 22, under the head of "Bureau of Yards and Docks," there is an increase of from $7,500,000 to $9,000,000.

On page 22, lines 23, 24, and 25, there are increases of $140,000.

On page 23, Mr. President, there are two new items, $1,150,000 and $40,000, under the head of "Navy Yard, Charleston, S. C."

On lines 15 and 16 is a new item, carrying $800,000, for a naval station at Key West, Fla.

On page 24 there is an item of $500,000, which is new, for Pier 4, 700-foot extension, and a corresponding increase in the aggregate amount carried in that paragraph.

On page 25 there is a new item of $1,000,000, but there is a continuing appropriation, or, rather, obligation assumed by the appropriation, of $1,975,000.

The next item, submarine base at New London, carries $50,000, which is a new item.

On lines 23 to 25, on page 25, is a new item, $1,499,000, for a submarine and destroyer base upon the island of Guam.

On page 26 is an item to continue the development of a permanent training station, $1,000,000.

The House appropriated $1,000,000 to complete it, but evidently the Senate committee felt that the amount allowed by the House for the completion was inadequate, and they are appropriating $1,000,000 to continue development. Apparently there is no limitation upon the amount which may be expended in the prosecution of that work.

In lines 4, 5, 6, and 7 on the same page is carried an appropriation of $800,000 for a new naval air station at Sand Point, Wash. That is a new item not carried in the bill as it passed the House.

It is worthy of comment at this point that there seems to be a determination upon the part of the Navy Department to diffuse rather than to concentrate, and to increase the number of naval bases, aviation fields, submarine bases, and various plants and agencies of the Government. It would be economy if we would concentrate our naval activities, our construction plants, our naval bases. I think it was Admiral Sims who testified in one of the hearings that it would be better if there were fewer naval bases and naval plants, arsenals, and yards. We have a large establishment at Portsmouth, N. H., a still larger one at Boston, a large navy yard at Brooklyn, a great establishment at Philadelphia, a large plant at Norfolk. We have expended a large sum of money at Charleston, S. C. Various amounts have been appropriated for ports along the coast of Florida. The pending bill, in addition to appropriations for those particular points, carries great appropriations for additional bases and plants and establishments, not only upon the Atlantic but upon the Pacific coast.

There is one item which occurs to me at this point, and which will provoke some discussion, I fancy, before we get through with it, providing more than a million dollars to begin the construction of a plant at Alameda, Calif. The Government of the United States has expended about $32,000,000 at Mare Island, and has developed, perhaps, the most efficient naval construction plant in the world.

The record which the Mare Island plant had during the war was unequaled in this country or in any other country. Notwithstanding the appropriation of $32,000,000 for that plant in San Francisco Bay, there is a project now which, before it is completed, will cost at least $100,000,000 for a plant in the same bay. Of course, it means the ultimate scrapping of Mare Island and the loss of the $32,000,000 which has been expended there. I know Senators will say that we will continue the Mare Island plant, and that we will build a large naval base at Alameda. The time will come when the overhead of two bases or plants will not be maintained. One or the other plant, if we construct the one at Alameda, will be dismantled, and, of course, it will be the one which will perhaps cost the lesser amount. So the appropriations made for Mare Island will be lost, and the pending bill commits us to a policy of expending $100,000,000 more in San Francisco Bay.

I have here reports and data which I shall read if the chairman of the committee insists upon that item, and which will take several hours to present. It is a great mistake, in my opinion, now to make an appropriation of a single dollar for the Alameda base. Of course, the bill does not come out boldly, as it ought to do, and declare for an ultimate appropriation of what the proposed base will cost, namely, $100,000,000; but there is in the bill an insinuating item of only a million five hundred dollars; but when we appropriate this amount, then we have permitted the camel to put its nose into the tent, and it will not be content until it takes possession of the tent. In the next session of Congress we will be called upon to appropriate $10,000,000 or more, and at the next session $20,000,000, and so on, until $100,000,000 will be expended. In my opinion this project should not be undertaken. It is a mistake, and we should refuse to agree to the committee's amendment.

Mr. HALE rose.

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. HALE. The question of the appropriation for Alameda will come before the Senate in due order, and the same is true of the other matters to which the Senator has referred. The particular amendment before the Senate at the present time——

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I yielded to the Senator to ask a question if he desires. The Senator can not enlighten me as to the item which is before us.

Mr. HALE. I wish to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the particular item is on page 3 of the bill, $400,000 for telephone rental and tolls, telegrams, and cablegrams. The committee would be very glad to answer any questions on the other matters as they come up in the due course of the consideration of the bill.

Mr. KING. I am very much obliged to the Senator from Maine for suggesting that the committee will be glad to answer questions as they arise during the course of the consideration of the bill.

Mr. HALE. The chairman of the subcommittee who has charge of the bill is at present away from the floor of the Senate, and in his absence I shall be glad to answer any questions that I can.

Mr. KING. I have no doubt the Senator from Maine, who is one of the most valuable members upon the Committee on Naval Affairs, can furnish a great deal of information to myself as well as to other Senators upon the naval affairs of the Government and upon the modus operandi of the Navy Department and upon the method by which the estimates are obtained. I have no doubt the Senator can furnish us a great deal of information, and I can assure my distinguished friend that he will be called upon to furnish a great deal before the bill gets through the Senate. I can assure him further that unless the information is satisfactory the bill will not get through the Senate during this session of Congress.

I was commenting very briefly, because I shall consider the Alameda item a little later when in due course we reach it, upon the proposition involved in the Alameda proposal. It is merely illustrative of the method of the Government in the way in which it does business. It is illustrative of the devious ways, I may say, of the Army and the Navy in securing appropriations, the extravagant methods employed in the Army and in the Navy of the United States. As has been suggested by the distinguished Senator at my right [Mr. OWEN], they do not pay the bills, and they do not care how the bills are paid. For every dollar that we take out of the United States Treasury we have to send a taxgatherer to the homes of the people of the United States. The money that comes from the Treasury to meet these extravagant demands of officials of the Government comes from the sweat and the toil of labor and from the earnings and savings of the people.

Money does not flow into the Treasury from the sunbeams or the smiles of Federal officials. It is obtained as a result of the enactment of burdensome laws, enforced by the strong arm of Federal officials and, if necessary, by the gun and the bayonet of the military of the United States. The American people seem to forget where the money comes from that we appropriate out of the Treasury of the United States. I received a letter only yesterday, which I read this morning, calling upon the Government of the United States to appropriate at once $500,000,000 for the purpose of impounding the waters of some of the streams and rivers of the United States for use in reclaiming arid and semiarid lands. The gentleman who wrote the letter did not seem to appreciate the fact that before we could get $500,000,000 we would have to increase the taxes, and he, in common with other Americans, would be compelled to pay his share of that amount.

We have been so indiscriminate in our appropriations, so lavish, so prodigal, and so wasteful that many of the American people have become so voracious and demand still more and rely upon the Government to appropriate for local and State concerns. If we appropriate $1,000,000,000, they want $2,000,000,000. If we appropriate $2,000,000,000, they demand $3,000,000,000. And all the time the Liberty bonds go down and the taxes are increased and the burdens resting upon business are intensified until difficulty is experienced in meeting the exactions of the Government and economic conditions which threaten paralysis to our industrial life.

I have said that the item of $1,250,000 for Alameda is one of the illustrations of the method by which the Federal Government is induced to make lavish appropriations in the end. A small amount is asked. It seems unimportant, and the Government is committed to a policy which in the end calls for millions and tens of millions of dollars. It is claimed that this Government is the most extravagant Government on the face of the earth to-day; that the expenses of the Federal Government exceed the expenses of any other Government, notwithstanding the dual form of our Government and the fact that States are expending hundreds of millions annually for the maintenance of the State governments.

And all these Federal, State, county, and municipal burdens rest upon the people and are increasing at a ratio entirely disproportionate to the increase in wealth and population of the country.

I shall not at this time further examine these items, but I venture the assertion, Mr. President, that at least 90 per cent of the items have been increased by the Senate committee. The House bill carried an aggregate of $400,000,000; the Senate committee has increased the amount by $105,000,000; and this, Mr. President, at a time when we are at peace with the world; when we are not menaced by a single foe; when we have no foreign entanglements and no foreign relations that are provocative of war.

It has been said during the debate this afternoon, in a colloquy with the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], as I understood the situation, that if we should build the most powerful Navy in the world it would enable us more effectually to negotiate for disarmament. I deny the premises, Mr. President. I believe the argument is fallacious. I believe when we aver that we shall have the biggest Navy in the world now, at the conclusion of the World War, and at the same time profess a desire for peace, that the nations of the world may view with suspicion and skepticism the professions in which we indulge. If we want to impress the nations of the earth with the thought that we desire peace let us set an example of peace; if we want the nations to emulate us, let us set an example that is worthy of emulation. The braggart, the thug, the armed man on the streets brandishing his weapons and breathing out threats against his fellows may not impress those with whom he comes in contact with the idea that he is a lover of peace, no matter how eloquently he may affirm that he is.

Mr. President, it is not sacrilegious upon this occasion to refer to the noble beatitudes by which we should be inspired. We want to be peacemakers, and it is the peacemakers who are "blessed" and "shall be called the children of God," and the meek who "shall inherit the earth." This Nation stands upon the glittering heights of the New World. Its example should illumine the world. In the darkness and in the light the radiance of this Nation gleams out upon the tempestuous seas for the guidance of those nations which are tossed upon the billows and the stormy seas of national existence. If this Nation desires other nations to pursue the paths of peace, let the American Nation set an example for peace; if it wants disarmament, let it set the example that will press an eloquent plea for disarmament; if it desires the day to come when men shall not learn the arts of war and when the lion and the lamb shall lie down together, let this great Nation that fears no nation or all nations set an example. It will thus become potential in moving forward the standard of justice and righteousness and will lead all nations into the paths of amity and peace.

Mr. STERLING and Mr. OWEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHURST in the chair). The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator from Utah has concluded?

Mr. KING. Oh, no.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair begs pardon of the Senator.

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from South Dakota, if he desires.

REPEAL OF WAR LEGISLATION.

Mr. STERLING. I wish to ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside and that the Senate proceed with the further consideration of House joint resolution 382, being No. 662 on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from Utah yield for that purpose?

Mr. KING. I am very happy to yield to my friend from South Dakota.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HALE. Can the Senator from South Dakota inform us how long it will take to dispose of the joint resolution for which he asks consideration?

Mr. STERLING. I think it will take a very short time, I will say to the Senator from Maine.

Mr. OVERMAN. I think there ought to be more Senators here, though I do not know that I have any objection——

Mr. STERLING. I know of no Senator who is opposed to the joint resolution, and I hope that the Senator will not call for a quorum. I may say to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] that I have conferred with Senators who made some question about this joint resolution when it was previously before the Senate on Saturday last.

Mr. OVERMAN. I do not desire to make any opposition to the joint resolution, but I merely think there should be more Senators present.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The responsibility, of course, for passing the supply bills rests with the majority party, and if Senators on the other side of the Chamber desire to lay aside a supply bill to take up the joint resolution in charge of the Senator from South Dakota, I shall not object. I am heartily in favor of the repeal of the war-time legislation, but I think the important bills that should be disposed of now are the supply bills which have got to go to conference. However, I am not in charge of the legislation, and neither is this side of the House responsible for the passage of the supply bills.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Alabama realizes that the joint resolution to repeal the war legislation is an important measure.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly; but it is legislation which may be passed without going to conference.

Mr. HALE. Mr. President, I think what the Senator from Alabama says——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Maine?

Mr. KING. I yield for a question.

Mr. HALE. I think what the Senator from Alabama says is entirely right; that the appropriation bill ought to have the right of way. If, however, the Senator from South Dakota can assure the Senate that it will not take over half an hour to dispose of the joint resolution which he has in charge, I should be entirely willing to yield for that purpose.

Mr. STERLING. I should not like to give an absolute assurance that it would not take more than half an hour, but I think it will take less time than that.

Mr. HALE. Will the Senator agree at the expiration of a half hour's time to return to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill now pending, provided he can not by that time secure action on the joint resolution?

Mr. STERLING. Yes; I will agree to that.

Mr. HALE. Very well.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, there were Senators on the floor when the joint resolution was under consideration on Saturday who objected to it. I do not see them on the floor at the present time and I do not know what their feelings now are in regard to the matter; but I do not think that action should be taken in their absence, if they are opposed to it. So far as I am concerned, I have no objection.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] was the Senator who made objection when the joint resolution went over on Saturday. The Senator from Colorado told me this morning, however, that he had no further objection to the measure.

Mr. OVERMAN. I understood the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. ROBINSON] also had some objection.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from Arkansas also told me the day when the joint resolution was last under consideration, after the discussion which then occurred, that he had no further objection to it.

Mr. OVERMAN. I have, I repeat, no objection to the joint resolution being considered if those Senators are satisfied—and the Senator assures me they are—but I did not want advantage taken of them in their absence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection made to the request of the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, was there a limitation on the time to be devoted to the consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. HALE. Half an hour.

Mr. STERLING. Half an hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request being amended to include a limitation of half an hour?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I have no objection to the limitation, but a number of Senators are not here who are interested in the measure, and if there is to be a limitation of time on its consideration I will be compelled to ask for a quorum in order that the absent Senators may have an opportunity to be heard. If they come in here and there is no objection, I will raise none; but I am not willing at this time of night to have a joint resolution of this importance brought up and have a limitation as to time placed on its consideration. As a matter of fact, I do not think under the rules the Senator can make such an agreement without a quorum being called.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Assistant Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	McKellar	Smoot
Ball	Gronna	Moses	Spencer
Borah	Hale	New	Stanley
Brandegee	Heflin	Norris	Sterling
Calder	Hitchcock	Overman	Sutherland
Cummins	Jones, N. Mex.	Owen	Townsend
Curtis	Jones, Wash	Phipps	Trammell
Dial	Kenyon	Poindexter	Underwood
Dillingham	Keyes	Pomerene	Wadsworth
Elkins	King	Reed	Walsh, Mont.
Fletcher	Kirby	Sheppard	Warren
Frelinghuysen	Knox	Simmons	Willis
Gerry	Lenroot	Smith, Ga.	Wolcott
Glass	McCumber	Smith, S. C

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-five Senators having answered to their names, a quorum of the Senate is present.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H. R. 14157, an act to provide adjusted compensation for veterans of the World War; to provide revenue therefor; and for other purposes.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, a point of order. Unanimous consent has been given, as I understand, for the consideration of this House joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is informed by the Secretaries at the desk that while unanimous consent was asked it was not given, as a matter of record.

Mr. FLETCHER. That is the question that is pending.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota asked unanimous consent to lay aside the unfinished business for half an hour, and the Chair was about to put that question when the absence of a quorum was suggested.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Will the Senator from South Dakota state the purpose of his request for unanimous consent?

Mr. STERLING. The purpose is the consideration of House joint resolution 382, being the joint resolution which, in effect, repeals war-time legislation.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I will withhold my motion until the Senator from South Dakota has preferred his request.

Mr. STERLING. I thank the Senator.

Mr. SMOOT. Has unanimous consent been granted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; not yet. Is there objection to the request made by the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I understand that the request is that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside for one-half hour for the purpose of taking up the measure referred to by the Senator from South Dakota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And not to displace the unfinished business except for a half hour. That is the understanding of the Chair. Is there objection? There being none, it is so ordered.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 382) declaring that certain acts of Congress, joint resolutions, and proclamations shall be construed as if the war had ended and the present or existing emergency expired.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, the joint resolution has been read. I wish to offer the following amendment:

On lines 15 and 16, on page 3 of the joint resolution, strike out the words "between the Governments and people aforesaid" and insert the same language after the word "war," in line 18, so that it shall read:

> During the existence of a state of war or during such state of war and a limited period of time thereafter shall be construed and administered as if such war between the Governments and people aforesaid terminated on the date when this resolution becomes effective.

I also desire to offer one other amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from South Dakota kindly suspend at this point until the first amendment is disposed of, unless he wishes to present them as a whole—as one amendment?

Mr. STERLING. Certainly.

Mr. KING. I suggest that the bill be read and the amendment indicated to the particular clause to be amended.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 3, lines 15 and 16, it is proposed to strike out the words "between the Governments and people aforesaid" and to insert the same words after the word "war," in line 18.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from South Dakota to the amendment of the committee.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. STERLING. The second amendment I propose is as follows:

On page 4, lines 1 and 2, strike out the words "the amendment thereto" and insert in lieu thereof the words and numerals "Title 2 of the act," so that it will read:

Title 2 of the act entitled "The food control and District of Columbia rents act.

The effect of this will be to leave excepted from the provisions of this joint resolution the food control act, but not to leave excepted from the provisions of the joint resolution section 4 of the food control act, which was amended by a later act of Congress, and which, as I am informed, was to-day declared unconstitutional in the decision of the Supreme Court.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment will be stated.

The READING CLERK. On page 4, lines 1 and 2, it is proposed to strike out the words "the amendment thereto" and insert "Title 2 of the act," so that if amended it will read:

(40 Stats., p. 276), Title 2 of the act entitled "The food control and District of Columbia rents act."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, will the Senator advise us now what effect that has on the so-called Lever Act?

Mr. STERLING. The Lever Act will be excepted from the provisions of this joint resolution, which, in effect, of course, repeals the war-time legislation. It excepts the Lever Act, the food-control act, with the exception, of course, of the amendment to section 4 of the act, which was passed, as the Senator will recall, in connection with the rent commission act.

Mr. BORAH. It leaves the Lever Act the law of the land, except that part which the Supreme Court to-day said was unconstitutional?

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. That was the criminal feature of the act; was it not?

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. The unfortunate part is that the court did not hold it all unconstitutional.

Mr. STERLING. Section 4 of the original act would stand, I suppose.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I think the Senator from South Dakota ought to give to the Senate some reasons why the food control act should be continued, if there are any. I confess that at the present time I do not know why it should not be repealed.

Let me remark in this connection that this joint resolution repeals a whole lot of legislation most of which is entirely inoperative now. Much ado has been made about the delay in repealing this legislation, and perhaps it ought to have been repealed a long time ago; but those features of the war legislation which really have any virility whatever to them yet remain unrepealed by the measure that is before us. I have not been able to understand why the food control act should not be entirely repealed. Something was said about the necessity of keeping it in force in order to control the coal profiteers; but we have not been able to utilize it to any appreciable extent to correct evils of that character, if the report of the committee investigating that subject is to be relied upon.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, will the Senator allow me to ask him a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am not familiar with this joint resolution. I am not on the committee, nor have I read the decision of to-day of the Supreme Court; but my understanding is that the Supreme Court of the United States to-day held that the penalty clauses of the food control act, the so-called Lever Act, were unconstitutional. Does that leave any vitality at all to the Lever Act?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Practically none.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Is there any reason, then, why we should continue to keep it on the statute books?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. That, I am able to say to the Senator, was the consideration which induced the committee, after such consideration as it gave it, to except it from the operation of this repealing measure, namely, that it might be available for the purpose of punishing profiteers, and particularly profiteers in coal; but if the effect of the decision rendered to-day is as the Senator from Alabama understands it to be, that is an additional reason why the whole thing should go.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator what effect this has upon the Alien Property Custodian trust?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The alien property act is retained in force, that being one of the acts which still has some function to perform, and we do not undertake to repeal that. The fact is that the repealing act of which so much has been heard repeals only the things that are innocuous now; and therefore I am a little surprised that the Senate should take up any time, when time is so precious, to consider the measure.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I think it quite proper, if not urgent, that these various acts passed as war-time legislation, and the effect of which, anyhow, should be terminated at the end of the war, should be formerly repealed or construed, anyhow, the construction being in effect a repeal of these acts. That is what the House joint resolution provides, and there is an insistent demand that they be repealed.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an inquiry?

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. KING. I suggest to the Senator for his consideration—and I ask the Senator from Montana to give me his attention while I make this observation—that there have been a number of convictions under a provision of the act in regard to hoarding. I am inclined to think that those convictions would be quite compatible with the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, and it seems to me that those cases would stand upon an entirely different footing from those that were brought under section 4, and it might not be proper to repeal this act, because I know a number of convictions are pending now, either in the Circuit Court of Appeals or in the Supreme Court of the United States. There was no question about the offense of hoarding as defined by the statute. Now, do we want to repeal this law and leave those convictions to go by the board?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. My understanding is that the bill expressly preserves the right to prosecute offenses already committed.

Mr. KING. If that be true, then the point I suggested has no merit.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I inquire of the Senator from South Dakota whether my understanding is not correct?

Mr. STERLING. I did not understand the Senator.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. My recollection is that there is a provision in this joint resolution to the effect that offenses heretofore committed in violation of the acts repealed may be prosecuted as though they were in force.

Mr. STERLING. I will say to the Senator from Montana that I do not think there is any such distinct provision in the joint resolution.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from South Dakota yield to the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. STERLING. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. As I understand the decision of the Supreme Court, it does not reach all of the provisions of the Lever Act. It only reaches that provision which undertakes to make a crime out of charging unreasonable profits, the court holding that the term "unreasonable profits" is so uncertain that it does not put a defendant upon notice of what would or would not be a crime, and that therefore an indictment for making an unreasonable profit could not be sustained. What was an unreasonable profit the act did not say, and the defendant would not know, when he was making a charge, whether the profit was or was not unreasonable. In that particular case parties sold sugar at 20 cents a pound which had been bought at 12 cents a pound, when at the time they could not buy sugar on the market at 22 cents a pound. The court held that that provision in the act was unconstitutional, but the balance of the Lever Act was left in force, both that provision which applied to coal and that which applied to hoarding.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from Georgia is correct in his interpretation of the opinion of the Supreme Court, as I understand it, which was that the act was unconstitutional because of uncertainty and vagueness in section 4 of the food control act as amended.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator from South Dakota what effect this joint resolution will have, if it becomes a law, on the act familiarly known as the Overman Act?

Mr. STERLING. It will make it ineffective. The effect of the joint resolution is to repeal the Overman Act.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Doubtless that act should be repealed; but, as I recall the act, it provided that after the lapse of a certain length of time, upon the termination of the war, the changes that had been made by authority of the act, in the way of transferring one office over to another or the duties of one office to another should no longer prevail, and the departmental situation should revert to what it was before the passage of the act.

Mr. OVERMAN. Six months was the time fixed.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Six months, I recall, was the time. I would like to make this suggestion for the Senator's consideration: If there were any transfers of authority from one office to another or the abolishment of any particular office or bureau under the authority of that act, it might require a little time for the civil establishment to reform itself in that particular. Therefore, would it be wise summarily to repeal that act and allow no lapse of a little time for the retransfer of functions to take place? It might create confusion.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The six months provided in the Overman Act will run from the passage of this joint resolution.

Mr. WOLCOTT. No; I think the Senator is in error.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Oh, yes; clearly that is the case. The Overman Act provided six months' time for the restoration of the departments, or the assignments, to their prior legal status, after the termination of the war. The joint resolution simply fixes the termination of the war with the passage of this act, and the six months provided by the Overman Act will run from the passage of the joint resolution.

Mr. WOLCOTT. May I ask the Senator from Georgia how he construes the language of the joint resolution which I shall read? I may say I have never read the measure before, and I am asking for information. It reads:

> And any act of Congress or any provision of any such act that by its terms is in force only during the existence of a state of war between the Governments and people aforesaid, or during such state of war and a limited period of time thereafter, shall be construed and administered as if such war terminated on the date when this resolution becomes effective, any provision of such law to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Precisely.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What is the idea of the insertion of the clause "and a limited period of time thereafter"?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. It means that the termination of the war shall be construed as taking place now, and "a limited period of time thereafter" shall apply still, just as though the act had not been passed; that the time for the enforcement of the acts shall continue, as contained in the acts, the same length of time after the passage of this act which it would have continued had the war been terminated by a proclamation of the President. That is what we meant by it in the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. WOLCOTT. If that be the intent, it seems to me it is rather inadequately expressed.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I think we are all embarrassed by the fact that we have not had an opportunity to read the text of the opinion of the Supreme Court rendered to-day. I was in attendance on the court, but was obliged to leave just before that opinion was rendered. But a very good lawyer who was present told me that the opinion was very sweeping, and that in his opinion it destroyed all those features of the Lever Act which had to do with the punishment of citizens for selling goods at unreasonable profits, and similar clauses, the main ground of the opinion being that the statute was utterly vague, and that it gave neither the defendant, the court, nor the jury the opportunity to know really what a man was being tried for.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. REED. I yield.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from Missouri admits, I suppose, that that simply relates to section 4, as amended by the act of October 22, 1919?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I can give the Senator some information in regard to that. I am familiar with the case that was primarily under consideration. It was an indictment against a wholesale firm for selling sugar at an unreasonable profit, at 20 cents a pound, when they paid 12 cents a pound, and it fell under section 4 of the act. I was told by one of the justices that the effect of the decision was to hold the language "an unreasonable profit" to be so indefinite that it did not place the public upon notice as to what would be a crime.

Mr. REED. I think that is correct, and I think the Senator in charge of the joint resolution is correct when he says that the particular case was based upon section 4.

I speak with great embarrassment, because I have not read the opinion, but if I am accurately informed with reference to it, the reasoning would seem to me to apply to many other features of the measure. I think it is worth taking a moment to try to get the situation with reference to it fairly before the Senate. [After a pause.] However, I have just been informed that under a unanimous-consent agreement the joint resolution will be voted upon in seven minutes. Is that correct?

Mr. STERLING. That is about right, I will say to the Senator.

Mr. REED. Then I will try to say what I have to say in a very short space of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are still 10 minutes left.

Mr. REED. The joint resolution now pending before us, as I understand, leaves intact the Lever Act, except section 4.

Mr. STERLING. Except section 4.

Mr. REED. The Lever Act with section 4 out still contains some of the most drastic of the war powers which were granted. Under it the coal mines of the country can be seized. Under it the President can declare emergencies and fix the price of coal. Under it certain businesses can be compelled to take out licenses, I notice as I glance over it hurriedly. Under it a man can be punished for being guilty of what they call hoarding, and I do not think there is a farmer in the United States who has been able to hold his wheat, or his cotton, who has not been guilty of a crime under that act, for he has been holding it for the purpose of increasing the price. Indeed that is one of the property rights which an American citizen has at any time, except in time of war; and no one would think of denying it to him.

I think the whole Lever Act was badly conceived, and that it ought to be taken off the statute books of this country. It was enacted as a war measure. I opposed it then because of its extreme provision, but other Senators voted for it because we had war times and they thought it was necessary to do anything and everything to put power in the hands of the Government so that the Government could act in a manner they regarded as more effective than it could follow under the law as it stood.

I ask the Senator from South Dakota to submit the question so that we can have a vote on striking out the Lever Act and its amendments, and if we can have that vote I shall not take any time in discussing it.

Mr. STERLING. Any Senator, I suppose, can move an amendment to strike out the provision that retains the Lever Act. I do not feel like doing it.

Mr. REED. I have not the joint resolution before me. Will the Senator call attention to that language, and I will move to strike it out?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Here is a copy of the joint resolution.

Mr. STERLING. Beginning on line 22, on page 3, it extends over to a part of line 1 on page 4.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I have given some consideration to this, I will say to the Senator from Missouri, and I concur with him in his view about the matter. His object will be accomplished by striking out so much of the amendment on pages 3 and 4 as begins with the word "the," in line 22, down to and including the numerals "297," in line 4 on page 4, namely:

> The act entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel," approved August 10, 1917 (40 Stat., p. 276), the amendment thereto entitled "The food control and District of Columbia rents act," approved October 22, 1919 (41 Stat., p. 297).

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I submit to the Senator from Montana that all that should not be stricken out, if we intend to retain the rent commission act. It has already been amended so as to include Title 2 of the act entitled "The food control and District of Columbia rents act." That strikes out the important part of the amendatory food control act.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I had that idea myself, Mr. President, and was going to conclude with the numerals "276," in line 1, on page 4, and then make a slight amendment in the language which followed it. But I had before me the so-called food control and District of Columbia rent act, approved October 22, 1919, and there is not a word in the joint resolution as to rents in the District of Columbia.

Mr. STERLING. If the Senator will read Title 2 of that act, he will find that all that title relates to that section.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Then the Senator wants to retain Title 2.

Mr. STERLING. Yes. If the Senator from Montana will excuse me, the Senator from Missouri would accomplish his purpose, I think, if he provides by his amendment that the language beginning on line 22, of page 3, after the words "to wit," and extending down to the figures "276," in line 1, on page 4, be stricken out, because an amendment has already prevailed which retains Title 2 of the act entitled "The food control and District of Columbia rents act." Title 2 relates to the rent commission.

Mr. REED. I was obliged, coming in as I did, to get my information in this way, and I am obliged to Senators who have been following the bill for their courtesy. I now move to amend by striking out the following language on pages 3 and 4:

The act entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products, and fuel," approved August 10, 1917 (40 Stat., p. 276).

I make that motion, but I wish also to make an inquiry. How does that cover the act of October 22, 1919?

Mr. STERLING. It covers it in this way, that no part of that act is retained under the provision of the joint resolution except Title 2.

Mr. REED. It is covered otherwise in the joint resolution?

Mr. STERLING. Yes.

Mr. REED. I move the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri has moved the following amendment, which will be stated by the Secretary.

The READING CLERK. On page 3, beginning at line 22, the Senator from Missouri moves to strike out the following language:

The act entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products, and fuel," approved August 10, 1917 (40 Stat., p. 276).

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution is still as in Committee of the Whole and open to amendment.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I wish to inquire of the Senator from North Dakota if it were not really intended to preserve the pending prosecutions under the act?

Mr. STERLING. I think so.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Then I offer for that purpose the amendment to the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana proposes the following amendment to the amendment, which will be read:

The READING CLERK. Insert at the end of the bill the following:

Nothing herein contained shall be held to exempt from prosecution or to relieve from punishment any offense heretofore committed in violation of any act hereby repealed or which may be committed while it remains in force as herein provided.

Mr. STERLING. I accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment to the amendment.

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

The amendment as amended was agreed to.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time and passed.

Mr. STERLING. I move that the Senate request a conference with the House of Representatives upon the joint resolution and amendment and that the Chair appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. STERLING, Mr. NELSON, and Mr. OVERMAN conferees on the part of the Senate.

LOANS ON AGRICULTURAL PAPER.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I have consulted with a number of Senators. We are all aware of the fact that the most distressing condition exists amongst the farmers of the country. We are about to adjourn and it seems to me that it is the duty of the Congress to bend every effort to take care, as far as it can be done legally, of the basic industry of the country which is now in perhaps the worst condition it has been in in the history of the country. We have under our control now the financial system of the country as we never have had it before. It is more amenable to the direct indications of Congress than ever before. I ask unanimous consent that there may be considered, while the pending bill is temporarily laid aside, without reference to the committee, a joint resolution which I am quite sure every Member of the Senate is willing to accord to those in distress. We are about to vote $10,000,000 to protect the country from a foreign foe, and this is simply extending aid to those who must support the country, no matter whether we have a foe or not.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I do not ask the Senator to yield. I understood that he was asking unanimous consent.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. All I am doing is this: I ask to have the joint resolution read, and then if there is objection I shall ask to have it referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I hope, however, that a reference will not be necessary, because the time is very short, to see if we can get a report and then have it considered later.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to having the joint resolution read at this time?

Mr. POINDEXTER. It is a brief resolution. While I shall have to object to its consideration, I have no objection to having it read.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I did not understand the Senator's proposition.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I have no objection to having the joint resolution read.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If it leads to any discussion, I shall ask that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is another question. If the Senator desires to have it read, I shall not object to that, but I am compelled to object to its consideration. I am familiar with the joint resolution.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. If the joint resolution can be taken up by unanimous consent and it leads to no discussion, would not the Senator be willing to have it passed? It will take only a minute if there is no objection.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I think the mere reading of it, if the Senator will allow the joint resolution to be read, will disclose at once the fact that it will lead to discussion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint resolution will be read.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 264) to authorize renewal of loans on agricultural paper was read the first time at length, as follows:

Whereas the present market conditions for farm products are entailing such losses as to threaten disaster to all those engaged in farming; and

Whereas the present demoralized state of this country, with certain foreign nations, is such as to promise little relief in the immediate future: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the Federal Reserve Board is hereby authorized and directed to allow and encourage member banks to renew loans secured by safe agricultural paper for such a length of time as in the judgment of the board may be necessary to enable farmers to tide over the present demoralized and disastrous condition of the markets.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

Mr. MOSES. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico obtained the floor.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I ask that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. I desire to state to the Senate that perhaps there will be a time when we will discuss the measure. Of course, it may not pass, but I rather suspect we will have a discussion of it.

Mr. HEFLIN. I would suggest to the Senator——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor. Does he yield to the Senator from Alabama?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield.

Mr. HEFLIN. If the Senator from New Mexico will permit, we can discuss it now quite at length. I should like to discuss it for an hour and a half or two hours. If the Senator from Washington thinks he will save time, we can proceed to a discussion of it now.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I am quite sure that unless it is passed it will take a day or a day and a half to discuss it. I rather think it will take that long. If the Senator from New Mexico will allow me, it is a joint resolution simply calling attention of the Federal Reserve Board to the fact that the purpose of the Congress was, as far as possible, to extend aid to that defenseless part of our industrial world which is not able to defend itself like other organizations and productive units of the Government.

Mr. NORRIS and Mr. HEFLIN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to suggest to the Senator from South Carolina that in substance—and I think in effect—the joint resolution which he introduces is the same as the joint resolution that was once reported by the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry at this session of Congress and passed by the Senate, and that went out in conference. Am I correct about that?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No.

Mr. NORRIS. It was connected up with a joint resolution reviving the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The difference between the resolution to which the Senator refers and the joint resolution which I have just introduced is that the resolution to which he refers was incorporated in section 2 of the measure rehabilitating the War Finance Corporation.

Mr. GLASS. It did not go out in conference, but the House Committee on Banking and Currency eliminated it and reported the joint resolution to the House.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It provided a limitation upon the interest to be charged.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes; that is true.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The joint resolution which I have just introduced simply provides for a renewal of loans on safe agricultural paper.

Mr. NORRIS. Of course, it is not a copy of the previous provision, and I do not contend that, but I think it would have the same effect that we intended the former resolution should have. After considerable debate in the Senate it was passed, but the House struck it out, and we concurred in the House amendment.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I think perhaps it went out in the House. I do not remember that it reached conference. However, it went out. If the Senator will permit me, I think every Senator is aware of the fact that something of this kind should be done in order to encourage those who are suffering to-day from a condition that has not been paralleled in the country.

Mr. NORRIS. I do not think the Senator understands the object I had in view, which was favorable to his joint resolution. On the ground that the Senate had already passed it, it did not seem to me it was necessary for it to go to the committee which had passed on it before.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MOSES. I wish to inquire the status of the joint resolution introduced by the Senator from South Carolina?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It has been referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

Mr. MOSES. It should be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency inasmuch as it is a banking question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina has twice asked that the joint resolution be referred, but before the Chair could take such action other Senators rose and were recognized. Without objection it will be referred——

Mr. POMERENE. Just one moment, please.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I ask that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection——

Mr. MOSES. I move that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency rather than to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield for that purpose?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I do not believe, Mr. President, that I will yield for that purpose. It seems to me that the joint resolution presented by the Senator from South Carolina ought to be referred to the Committee on Agriculture, as I understand it has been so referred; and I do not believe I will yield for a motion to refer to another committee.

Mr. POMERENE, Mr. CALDER, and Mr. MOSES addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield; and if so, to whom?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator from Ohio.

Mr. POMERENE. May I ask the Presiding Officer when the joint resolution was referred to the Committee on Agriculture?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Begging the Senator's pardon, the Chair will state that the Senator from South Carolina asked that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Agriculture, but before the Chair could make the statement that it was so referred another Senator secured recognition, and the joint resolution has not been referred.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President——

Mr. MOSES. I have moved that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is of the opinion that that motion is in order.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. It is evident——

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I decline to yield further.

Mr. MOSES. Then I rise to a point of order. I wish to know what has become of my motion?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I may say that the joint resolution presented by the Senator from South Carolina was presented out of order when another matter was before the Senate, and we have reached the present parliamentary stage.

Evidently it is going to provoke considerable discussion to dispose of the matters which Senators have in mind. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES] has moved that the joint resolution be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency. That will undoubtedly cause debate. I had obtained the floor for the purpose of making a motion which I deem to be of more importance than whether the joint resolution of the Senator from South Carolina shall be referred to the Committee on Agriculture or whether it shall go to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President, I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. MOSES. My point of order is that the joint resolution of the Senator from South Carolina has not been properly introduced, and, therefore, is not before the Senate at all.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will state that unanimous consent was granted for the reading of the resolution.

Mr. MOSES. But only for information.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution was introduced, but it has not been referred. The motion of the Senator from New Hampshire is in order; he can move to refer the resolution to the Committee on Banking and Currency. That will be the pending motion, but the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] has the floor.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President——

Mr. POINDEXTER. I make the point of order against the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire. I do not think that the consideration of that question is in order pending the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is some force in the point of order, but it does not now apply, because the Senator can not move the reference of the resolution while the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] has the floor. The motion of the Senator from New Hampshire will be in order when he secures the floor.

Mr. MOSES. Then, where is the joint resolution?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The joint solution is now on the table.

Mr. MOSES. I am content that the joint resolution shall stay there.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I rise to a question of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut will state his question of order?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The joint resolution of the Senator from South Carolina was not introduced in the Senate in the way the rule provides that it shall be introduced, and hence is not subject to being referred. The Senator from South Carolina rose in his place and asked unanimous consent to have a document read here. It was read for the purpose of information, as the Senator from New Hampshire has stated; it was not introduced. Objection was made to its consideration and to the granting of the unanimous consent requested by the Senator from South Carolina. The joint resolution has not been introduced, and, therefore, can not be referred.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, when objection was made by the Senator from Washington to the present consideration of the joint resolution I stated that I would ask if it was not considered that it be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry. The Senator from Washington said he would object to the present consideration of the resolution, but he did not object to the reading of it. Then I asked that the joint resolution be read and referred to the Committee on Agriculture, and I heard no objection to that request.

Mr. MOSES. Oh, Mr. President, I objected.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The joint resolution has been read, and the only question is the question of reference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will, without any discourtesy, settle the question by simply holding that the resolution has been introduced; it is on the table; and the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. MOSES] to refer to the Committee on Banking and Currency is the pending question. The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. JONES] has the floor.

Mr. REED and Mr. BORAH addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield, and if so, to whom?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. I wish to ask the author of the joint resolution what he means by this language:

Whereas the present demoralized state of this country with certain foreign nations is such as to promise little relief in the immediate future.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. What I mean by the words "little relief" is little relief to the farmers of the country. That is what I had in view.

Mr. REED. I inquire about the clause which refers to "the present demoralized state of this country with certain foreign nations."

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I had in mind the status in which we find ourselves with certain foreign nations. We are still technically at war with Germany; our markets are absolutely demoralized by that; and so I referred to the present demoralized condition in which we find ourselves in relation to foreign countries.

Mr. REED. I am obliged to the Senator. I think I understand what he has in mind.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico has the floor, but if he yields again he will lose the floor.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I have no objection to disposing of the pending matter which has been discussed at some length, provided I shall not lose the floor. I rose for the purpose of making a motion; then, on yielding in a courteous manner to a Senator, to have all this complication to arise is entirely beside what I thought I was bringing on myself. I decline to yield to the Senator from New Hampshire for the purpose of making a motion that the resolution be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency. So I am compelled to make a parliamentary inquiry. Is a motion now in order to proceed to the consideration of House bill 14157?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Do I understand the Senator to have made a motion to proceed to the consideration of the bill named by him?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That was the purpose for which I rose; and I now make a parliamentary inquiry, whether or not that motion is in order? If it is in order, I desire to make the motion.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I should like to be heard for a moment on that question.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. If the motion is in order, I desire to make some remarks upon it myself before yielding the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's motion is in order.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I should like to be heard before the Chair rules on that. I understand it is the so-called bonus bill to which the Senator from New Mexico refers?

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. The Senator is quite right.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Under Rule XXVI of the Senate, and also under Rule XXII, the motion is not in order. The bonus bill is here upon the report of a committee. Rule XXVI provides that reports of committees must lie over one day and be printed in order that the Senate may be informed. I will ask the attention of the Chair to the second paragraph of Rule XXVI, which provides:

All reports of committees and motions to discharge a committee from the consideration of the subject, and all subjects from which a committee shall be discharged, shall lie over one day for consideration, unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

This report was made to-day; I am informed that a member of the committee has given notice that he will submit a minority report; and, in order that the Senate may be informed as to the nature of the report, I invoke Rule XXVI, and make the point of order against the consideration of the motion at the present time. Also my own opinion is—I do not know that the question has heretofore been raised—that while a question is pending as it is now in the Senate upon an amendment of the committee to the naval appropriation bill, under Rule XXII the motion is not in order. That rule provides—

When a question is pending, no motion shall be received but—
To adjourn.
To adjourn to a day certain, or that when the Senate adjourn it shall be to a day certain.
To take a recess.
To proceed to the consideration of executive business.
To lay on the table.
To postpone indefinitely.
To postpone to a day certain.
To commit.
To amend.

Those are the only motions that are in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator enlighten the Chair as to what motion, then, is pending?

Mr. POINDETER. As I understand, the question is upon the amendment reported by the committee to the naval appropriation bill. Also, Mr. President, I will ask the Chair to consider Rule XXVI, which I have called to the Chair's attention.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The tendency of any bill is a question, but surely that does not prevent a motion to proceed to the consideration of some other bill. The suggestion of the Senator, however, that this report has only been made to-day and must lie over until to-morrow seems to be conclusive.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will settle, first, the point of order made by the Senator from Washington, if the Senator from South Carolina will pardon the Chair.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I should like to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The Chair ruled a moment ago that the question of the reference of the joint resolution was now the pending question. If that be true, I should like to have a vote taken on its reference, as to whether it shall be referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry or to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct in that the Chair held that; but the Chair meant—the Chair was unfortunate in expression—that when the question of reference properly came before the Senate and the Senator got unanimous consent, it would be in order at that time; but the Chair is impressed with the strength and force of the point of order made by the Senator from Washington under paragraph 2 of Rule XXVI——

Mr. KING. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just a moment. The Chair is informed that the bill which the Senator from New Mexico has moved to take up was reported to-day, and the rule requires all reports of committees to lie over one day for consideration.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I desire to say that I think the ruling of the Chair is correct; so I withhold my motion for to-night; but I give notice now that on to-morrow I shall make the motion to take up for consideration House bill No. 14157.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Now, Mr. President, the motion with reference to the joint resolution, I understand, is in order.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I make the point of order against taking up that question. The question before the Senate is the amendment to the naval appropriation bill, and it has not been displaced either by unanimous consent or by a motion.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The record will disclose better than the Chair's memory as to whether or not unanimous consent was granted for more than the reading of the joint resolution. Its introduction does not necessarily carry a reference. Unanimous consent, in the opinion of the Chair, was granted for its introduction, but that does not necessarily ipso facto carry with it a reference.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. KING. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will kindly state it.

Mr. KING. If a resolution has been offered of the character of that offered by the Senator from South Carolina and it has been read, assume that it lies on the table, may it not, when any Senator gets the floor, upon his motion, be referred?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Unquestionably, were it not for the way in which the unanimous consent was expressed.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, just to bring the matter to an issue, I will ask the Senator from Washington to allow a vote to be taken on the question of the reference. I think we will save time by it.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I understand, of course, the implication of the Senator's remarks; but, whatever the result may be, it is impossible for me to sacrifice the opportunity for the consideration of the appropriation bill upon any such intimation as that of the Senator from South Carolina. It is obvious that this motion will lead to debate; how much debate, no person can tell. If that motion can be considered, any other similar motion can be considered, and it will be impossible to proceed with the appropriation bill.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I do not think it will lead to any debate. I think the question could be voted upon in a few moments, because this is a matter that is simply one of reference. I understand the object of the Senator from New Hampshire, perhaps, in asking that it be referred to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Mr. MOSES. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I have introduced this joint resolution in good faith, and I have consulted Senators on the other side and on this side, and I have found not one that I had time to consult that was opposed to the general principle of the joint resolution.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, again I rise to a point of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senate is considering the naval appropriation bill. That bill can not be swept off the floor by motions made by Senators to refer to a committee some resolution unanimous consent for the consideration of which was refused. The whole naval appropriation bill can not be swept aside in that way. The regular order is to be proceeded with.

The Senator rose and interrupted the consideration of the naval appropriation bill by requesting unanimous consent to have a joint resolution read. Consent was granted to have it read. It was read. The word "introduction" was not mentioned by the Senator. He did not say, "I introduce a resolution," and he could not have said it, and he could have made no motion about it. He was not in order; but when he rose and asked unanimous consent, of course that interrupted the proceedings and his unanimous-consent request was denied, and that was the end of his joint resolution. It never was introduced, and there is no question on its reference.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will read, at the top of page 18, Rule XIV, clause 1:

> Whenever a bill or joint resolution shall be offered, its introduction shall, if objected to, be postponed for one day.

The Chair holds that the joint resolution is before the Senate, and has been introduced, but not referred, and may not be referred at this time, owing to the objection.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It was out of order to introduce it except by unanimous consent, and the Senator did not ask unanimous consent.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Just a moment, please. Possibly that is true; but the Senator, in the Chair's opinion, obtained unanimous consent to introduce it but not to have it referred.

Mr. HEFLIN. I submit that the Chair is correct. It was not necessary to say, "I am going to introduce a joint resolution." When the Senator said, "I want to consider it without reference," it means the same thing, and it has been read and is now the property of the Senate; but in order that we may go into the matter thoroughly and that everybody may understand it, I suggest the absence of a quorum, to save time.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama has suggested the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gore	McKellar	Smith, S. C.
Ball	Hale	McNary	Smoot
Borah	Heflin	Moses	Spencer
Brandegee	Hitchcock	New	Sterling
Calder	Jones, N. Mex.	Norris	Sutherland
Colt	Jones, Wash.	Overman	Townsend
Curtis	Kenyon	Owen	Trammell
Dial	Keyes	Phipps	Underwood
Dillingham	King	Poindexter	Wadsworth
Elkins	Kirby	Pomerene	Walsh, Mass.
Fletcher	Knox	Reed	Walsh, Mont.
Gerry	Lenroot	Sheppard	Warren
Glass	Lodge	Simmons	Willis
Gooding	McCumber	Smith, Ga.	Wolcott

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-six Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, this matter could have been very easily settled. If the Senate thinks that the condition in which the farmers of this country are is not sufficiently serious to extend to them some particle of relief, or at least take cognizance of it by the passage of such a joint resolution as I have introduced, they could have referred it to a committee.

It is hardly proper for a Senator to intimate that a committee such as the Agricultural Committee did not understand the principles of banking and currency, particularly as it related to the agricultural interests of the country; that they did not have sufficient knowledge of that intricate business to pass upon a joint resolution involving some instructions to the board of governors whom we have intrusted with the enforcement of a law passed by this and the other body.

Mr. President, all that the joint resolution I have introduced is intended to accomplish is to direct the Federal Reserve Board to encourage renewals of loans based on safe agricultural paper. The cry is coming from every section of the country that the banks are calling for these matured loans. The markets have gone down so that to-day the products held by the farmers, which cost them peak prices to produce, are now disastrously below the cost of production.

Suppose the banker, as good bankers are supposed to do—good from their viewpoint—forces the liquidation of the loans based on agricultural products—the farmers will not get enough to pay their fertilizer bills in the East, and not much more than enough to pay for the gathering of the crops in the Northwest and in the West. In that condition this joint resolution simply asks, instructs, and directs the Federal Reserve Board to allow the member banks and to encourage the member banks to renew these loans in order that the distressing conditions in which the farmers of the country find themselves may be relieved.

We have sent millions of dollars to the suffering ones of Europe. That was right and proper. I would have felt ashamed of my country had it not responded to the call of distress from abroad. But here we do not ask for an appropriation; we ask that special attention should be given to the basic industry of the country.

There is not a Senator here who does not recognize and realize, if he studies the problem at all, that the farmers of this country are not in a position to protect themselves against financial disaster. They have no reserve fund. They are not organized, as the great corporations are organized, so that from time to time during their prosperous years they can lay by a reserve fund for a season of disaster such as has now come upon them. They are unorganized, helpless, and defenseless before a storm such as this, and to-day they are standing with what little accumulations they have made swept away, and the Senate has gone on record to-night that it will not tolerate even a suggestion to the financial body we have created, and that we boasted was able to meet just this situation, to look into the terrible conditions now prevalent throughout the agricultural districts of the country, and direct them, not to extend a new loan, not to interfere with their rate of interest, but to allow and encourage a renewal of these loans, until the disastrous condition that is now confronting them, that was brought about by no act on the part of the farmers themselves, has passed. This body refuses even to allow the consideration of the joint resolution and its reference to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, but remains here and continues working on a bill that proposes to appropriate out of the Treasury of the United States $500,000,000 for the creation of battleships, and to put ourselves in a state of preparedness against some foreign foe.

I am not pretending to say that the provisions of the naval appropriation bill are not wise, but I do say that to-night there is a condition in this country fraught with more danger to us than the threatened encroachment of a foreign foe upon us.

Mr. President, I recognize the fact that a majority of the Senators in this body are not in sympathy with those who produce the food and the clothing of this Nation. I had hoped that the mere introduction of this joint resolution would have been a sufficient appeal to this body for its immediate passage. I was not surprised when the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] took occasion to object to the interference with the passage of the bill of which he has charge; but when the reference of this joint resolution to a committee where it might be strangled was seriously contemplated I was astonished. Is it possible that Senators to-night do not realize the condition in which this country now finds itself?

Planting time is here, and we have appropriated in the Agricultural appropriation bill $5,000,000 for the purpose of buying seed to help certain farmers of the Northwest to seed their lands and to take a lien on the products of their fields for its repayment. The price of live stock has gone down to where live-stock raisers are now sacrificing their product. It was reported to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry that they were actually destroying their cattle and feeding the carcasses to hogs and saving the hides. Sheep are being butchered and fed to hogs. Horses are being destroyed and fed to hogs. The price of corn has gone down to a point where those who produce it stand face to face with financial ruin. The price of wheat is dropping every day. The price of cotton in the South has gone down to a point where it is lower than in the years preceding the war.

All this is because credit has been refused and the banks are calling for a liquidation of the loans, leaving the farmers helpless and defenseless. Yet the Senate votes the largest appropriations ever voted in the history of the country, and has not passed one single piece of legislation looking to the relief of those upon whom the prosperity of the country depends.

It is idle to say that the farmer is in the same category with other business men and must take his medicine. Every man knows that he is disorganized and financially unable to cope with the panic that has him now in its grip. What farmer or set of farmers in the country has ever named the price of a single product produced of the staple crops? Who names the price of the farmer's wheat of the West? Who names the price of the farmer's cotton of the South? Who names the price of the farmer's cattle on the plains of the West? It is the men who sit about the tables in the stock and grain exchanges.

We have heard the emergency tariff bill discussed, and the question was whether we should put a tariff on the products of the farm. The Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] this afternoon called attention to the fact that we placed a tariff on manufactured products, and asked who was the first beneficiary of that protection. It was the owner of the plant, and it was left to his sweet will as to whether he would divide or give any of the benefits that accrued to him to the laborers about his plant.

The farmer to-day in the production of his crops has not the naming of the price of a pound of the staple crops or a bushel of any of the grain that he raises. We, in arranging our financial affairs, make it easy for the money changers and exchanges to get accommodation, and leave the great bulk of people, upon whom the prosperity of the country depends, at the mercy of those whose object it is to make a profit. But when we come to the toiling masses in the fields, those who produce the bread that we eat and the clothes that we wear, not a line nor a word has been written since we met in December until the present time that looks to any practical relief for that great body of our people who conduct the basic industry of the country.

There was actual opposition to the reinstatement of the War Finance Corporation. There was opposition to every measure that has been introduced here that looks to the direct and specific relief of those engaged in agriculture. We are appropriating millions upon millions of dollars for those things that are organized, for those who are in a position to help themselves, but not one line of legislation nor one dollar of appropriation to take care of those upon whom the welfare of the country rests.

When the Federal reserve act was passed it was the boast of the Democratic Party that we had created and brought into effect a law that would forever remove the possibility of a panic, and there are those who are going about the country now saying that we never were in a better position than we now find ourselves. If the condition in which the country now finds itself is not a panic, then I do not understand the meaning of the term.

Bankruptcy, ruin, failure, exist throughout the country, brought about by the restriction of credit and the unfortunate deflation of our currency. We have the report of the Comptroller of the Currency on the desks of Senators this morning making the showing that our gold reserve is above the requirement of the law; waiving certain requirements which are admissible by law, it is alleged that $2,000,000,000 in addition to that already outstanding might be issued. Yet the people are impoverished, driven into ruin, because they can not get sufficient loans to meet the pressing obligations that are upon them in the production of the crops, and their holdings of the year must be sacrificed.

Mr. President, I have introduced the joint resolution in good faith. A similar resolution passed the Senate once before, and yet, in spite of the fact that every Senator must know and realize the condition in which the country is to-day from an agricultural standpoint, we will not even say that we are willing to have all the loans that are now existent extended until there can be some legislation passed that may relieve the situation in which we find ourselves.

Mr. HEFLIN. If the Senator will pardon me, his joint resolution says good farm paper, and the banks are to be the judges as to whether it is good or not. It does not direct them to extend loans on paper that is not good, but only on paper that in the judgment of sound banking is good.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I drafted the joint resolution hurriedly this afternoon because there had come to me, not from my section of the country alone, but from every section of the country, letters and telegrams depicting a condition that is simply a reflection on the Senate and on the Congress. Men are forced into poverty, forced into ruin, while the banks of the country have on hand more money than ever before in the history of the country.

This condition is the natural and logical result of the unfortunate position taken by certain men in authority. I recognize the fact that during the war prices were inflated, but I also recognize the fact that whereas before the war we had less than a billion dollars of outstanding bonded indebtedness, after the war we had $26,000,000,000 of indebtedness. The Government has issued its obligations to its people and those who own the bonds to the extent of practically $26,000,000,000. That is one form of currency, or it was promised to be. It at least is the obligation that the Government must meet and liquidate.

The only way that we will deflate the real outstanding obligations and the currency of the country is in the liquidation of its obligations. How are we going to liquidate those vast obligations outstanding on the part of the Government except by taxation and the retirement of the bonds purchased in the open market or by the redemption of them at maturity?

We have gone at this thing from the wrong angle. Had there been encouragement of production, had prices been left to the law of supply and demand, the income taxes of the country would not have shrunk to the miserable proportions that they are to-day, with the excess profits practically swept out of existence, and yet the obligation of the Government remaining the same. Her ability through her people to meet it has been cut fourfold. How are we to meet the obligations of the Government through the form of taxation, the only way we may meet them, unless the people are able to meet the burden of taxation?

Are we going to meet them by impoverishing the cotton growers of the South, the wheat and cattle raisers of the West, to the point where they will quit the fields, and flock to the towns; or are we going to meet them by encouraging production in the great fields, forests, and mines of the country at a profit, and then out of the profit secure our taxes?

Land values and commodity values have shrunk to a fourth of the former figures, and not one dollar of our indebtedness has been liquidated. Our ability to meet the obligations of the Government in the form of bonds is $18,000,000,000 less, according to the statement of the Comptroller of the Currency, than it was a year ago. What is the proper attitude of those of us charged with the legislative affairs of the Government? It is to see to it that the sources of revenue shall be encouraged. Will we encourage it by breaking the markets of the country, making serfs and peons out of those who produce the raw material that goes into our factories, or will we do it by encouraging the production of an abundant supply and giving to the man who produces the raw material a profit and a hope in the future?

In less than three years from the cessation of the war we have come to the point of an indebtedness surpassing any the country ever dreamed of. I have already alluded to the great shrinkage in the Nation's resources. Cotton has shrunk, wheat has shrunk, cattle have shrunk, in value and in price, the farmers are demoralized, credit is demoralized, and yet the interest on bonds is going on. From whom are we going to get the money with which to meet these obligations? From what source are we going to get it? Our excess-profits tax will amount practically to nothing. Our income tax has shrunk more than half.

Then, the burden of taxation falls where? From what source are you to get it? With factories running half time, farmers demoralized, business at a standstill, and the people quaking with the fear that always comes when hope is deferred, here, when a joint resolution is introduced directing the financial power of the Government to grant relief to those who must of necessity be the very basis of our prosperity, the Senate takes it as a huge joke. Who is the farmer? Why should he be considered? Why should we accede to the desires of those who desire a big Army and a big Navy and grant instant relief to every conceivable business except the man upon whom in the ultimate analysis the whole welfare of the country rests?

Mr. President, I propose before I am through with this joint resolution to put the Senate on record, if it be possible, as to what their attitude is toward granting some relief to those who to-night know not what to do, with the planting time of their crop on hand. I am advised that less than 12 per cent of the fertilizer used on the Atlantic seaboard from Maine to Florida has been sold, and this is the 1st of March. I am further advised that there is, perhaps, but one-half of the land that has heretofore been tilled which will be tilled this year, because of the lack of credit to plant and cultivate it. That condition is not restricted to my section alone; the same cry comes from every section of the country.

I want to tell the Senate here to-night that we are not dealing with the same class on the farm that we dealt with 12 years ago. The facilities for communication and transportation and education are so perfect to-day as compared with the same conditions on the farm in former years that the man in the country is as well informed as the man in the city, and though he is unorganized and is unable to defend himself from a financial standpoint, he has sense enough not to grow food and clothing and himself go barefoot and naked. If the city offers him a better opportunity for temporary relief from financial stringency, he will rush to the city, and that is what is being done now. Yet the United States Senate obstinately refuses even to consider a measure which proposes to give direction to the body that we created that they shall allow and encourage the renewal of loans to those upon whom the destiny of the country depends.

RECESS.

Mr. POINDEXTER and Mr. HEFLIN addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I move that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I make a point of order that a motion to take a recess is not now in order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is overruled. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HEFLIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum, if that is a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; it is not. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Washington.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until to-morrow, Tuesday, March 1, 1921, at 11 o'clock a. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 28 (legislative day of February 24), 1921.

George Lawrence Bean, of New Hampshire, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Jack Senior, of New York, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Raymond Pugh Eyman, of Ohio, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Leo Cuthbert Dyke, of New York, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Chester Howard Ober, of Rhode Island, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

George Clay Jones, of Oregon, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Charles Shaw, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Carl Alexander Egner, of Indiana, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Leroy Preston Raynor, of New York, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Lyman Davis Graham, of Pennsylvania, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Max Orville Witherbee, of Colorado, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Payson Austin Perrin, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Roland Drew Horne, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Benjamin Haines Rigg, of New Jersey, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy.

Oliver Scott Reading, of Illinois, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy.

Charles Keith Green, of California, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Charles Justus Itter, jr., of Pennsylvania, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy.

SUPERVISING INSPECTOR STEAMBOAT-INSPECTION SERVICE.

William J. Macdonald, of Michigan, to be supervising inspector for the fourth district in the Steamboat-Inspection Service.

COAST GUARD.

Martin W. Rasmussen to be district superintendent in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from September 9, 1920, to fill an existing vacancy.

Ralph T. Crowley to be district superintendent in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from September 10, 1920, to fill an existing vacancy.

Cadet Noble G. Ricketts, to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 13, 1920.

Cadet Paul K. Perry to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 11, 1920.

Cadet Arthur G. Hall to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States to rank as such from October 11, 1920.

Cadet Irving W. Buckalew to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 7, 1920.

Cadet Harold G. Bradbury to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 12, 1920.

Cadet Ephraim Zoole to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 8, 1920.

Cadet Merlin O'Neil to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from date of oath.

Cadet Carleton T. Smith to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from date of oath.

Cadet Norman H. Leslie to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from date of oath.

APPOINTMENTS, BY TRANSFER, IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS.

Maj. Henry Holden Sheen, Coast Artillery Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1916.

Maj. Joseph Edward Barzynski, Infantry, July 30, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Maj. Laurance Oldham Mathews, Infantry, October 29, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Maj. Laurence Wilfred Redington, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Capt. Lee W. Card, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Capt. Harry Pforzheimer, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Capt. Louie Arnold Beard, Field Artillery, July 1, 1920, with rank from May 15, 1917.

First Lieut. Thomas Grafton Hanson, jr., Field Artillery, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 5, 1917.

First Lieut. Martin Owen Cahill, Field Artillery, October 15, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

First Lieut. Wilbur Storm Elliott, Infantry, with rank from August 9, 1917.

Second Lieut. Engmann August Andersen, Cavalry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Maj. Hermann Heinrich Zornig, Coast Artillery Corps, September 4, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Capt. John Adams Brooks, jr., Coast Artillery Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 25, 1917.

First Lieut. Charlie Edward Hart, Cavalry, with rank from August 20, 1919.

First Lieut. Forrest Clifford Shaffer, Coast Artillery Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from August 30, 1917.

First Lieut. Rudolph Francis Whitelegg, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from August 30, 1917.

First Lieut. John Will Coffey, Coast Artillery Corps, with rank from August 30, 1917.

First Lieut. Jesse Andrew Rogers, jr., Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

SIGNAL CORPS.

Lieut. Col. George Ernest Kumpe, Infantry, October 12, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Maj. Stanley Livingston James, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

CHEMICAL WARFARE SERVICE.

Maj. Adelno Gibson, Coast Artillery Corps, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Second Lieut. Patrick Francis Powers, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

Col. Charles Henry Hilton, Quartermaster Corps, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Maj. Stewart Oscar Elting, Cavalry, August 5, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Second Lieut. Joseph Honore Rousseau, jr., Infantry, August 27, 1920, with rank from July 2, 1920.

Second Lieut. Edward Carl Engelhart, Cavalry, September 11, 1920, with rank from July 2, 1920.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

Second Lieut. Henry Stehman Hostetter, Quartermaster Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 3, 1916.

Second Lieut. Emmet Crawford Morton, Quartermaster Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 3, 1916.

AIR SERVICE.

First Lieut. Edgar Peter Sorensen, Coast Artillery Corps, October 20, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

Second Lieut. William Joseph Flood, Infantry, October 30, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

FIELD ARTILLERY.

Capt. Alfred John Betcher, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from May 15, 1917.

Capt. Clifford Barrington King, Cavalry, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 24, 1917.

First Lieut. Hiram Wendell Tarkington, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from September 21, 1919.

First Lieut. Wesley Collins Dever, Infantry, with rank from June 4, 1920.

First Lieut. John Hamilton Wise, Infantry, with rank from July 1, 1920.

CAVALRY.

Second Lieut. John William Wofford, Infantry, September 10, 1920, with rank from July 2, 1920.

INFANTRY.

Capt. Leon Ewart Savage, Quartermaster Corps, with rank from July 1, 1920.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

To be colonel with rank from February 11, 1921.

Lieut. Col. John Lesesne DeWitt, Infantry.

To be lieutenant colonel with rank from February 8, 1921.

Maj. Leo Asa Dewey, Infantry.

To be captains with rank from July 1, 1920.

First Lieut. Charles Challice, jr., Quartermaster Corps.
First Lieut. Loyal Moyer Haynes, Field Artillery.
First Lieut. Cecil John Gridley, Infantry.
First Lieut. Clyde Lloyd Hyssong, Infantry.
First Lieut. Ernest Frederick Apeldorn, jr., Cavalry.
First Lieut. Donald Parker Spalding, Infantry.
First Lieut. William Donald Tabor, Cavalry.
First Lieut. Cornelius Edward Ryan, Infantry.
First Lieut. William Henry Crampton, Infantry.
First Lieut. Irvin Henry Zeliff, Cavalry.
First Lieut. John Henry Ringe, Infantry.
First Lieut. William H. Killian, Cavalry.

To be first lieutenants with rank from July 1, 1920.

Second Lieut. Samuel Wilber Stephens, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Richard Cohron Lowry, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Albert Edgar Billing, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Richard Thompson, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Jess Garnett Boykin, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Charles Moorman Hurt, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. James Dallace Bender Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ellis Bates, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Pryor Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clyde Virginius Finter, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Michael Cardon Shea, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles John Wynne, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Holland Spencer Chamness, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Julian Horace George, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Walter Cortland Wagner, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Anderson Hassell Norton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Hanford Nichols Lockwood, jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. John Markham Ferguson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Calvin Sandlin, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Leslie Eugene Bowman, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Horace Benjamin Smith, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Joseph Addison Dubois, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Barlow Winston, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Maurice Rose, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Chester Morse Willingham, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Gene Russell Mauger, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Frank L. Burns, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Burl Johnson, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Winfield Rose McKay, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Bernays Lowrey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Harrison Donahue, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Thomas Patrick Walsh, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Warren Benedict Scanlon, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Robert Hamby, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Buckner Miller Creel, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Ralph Andrew Eiler, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Theodore Ernest Voigt, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Douglas Johnston, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lawrence Pradere Hickey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Severn Teackle Wallis, jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles Murray Rees, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William May, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Chester Wright Gates, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harold Herbert Fisher, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Silas Warren Robertson, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Donald Van Niman Bonnett, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Henry Johnson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Wiley Hubbard O'Mohundro, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edmund Graham West, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Ranald Trevor Adams, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Roger Shaw McCullough, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Oliver White, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Charles William Dietz, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Samuel Howes Baker, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. John Parr Temple, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Timothy Sapia Bosch, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Juan Luis Oliver, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Eduardo Andino, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Joseph Flood, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lynn Packard Vane, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Lewis Rinehart Pfoutz Reese, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Philip Gilstrap Bruton, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lieut. Horace Leland Porter, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lieut. Carl Gilbert Holmes, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Edwin Forrest Carey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Elmer Warren Miller, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Guy Malcolm Kinman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Linton Yates Hartman, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Peter LeToney, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Louis Renth, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Joseph Cuthbert Dolan, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Abraham Lincoln Bullard, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. William Lincoln Hamilton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Oscar Norvell Barney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Florence McCarthy, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Roy Henry Speck, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Charles Augustus Reif, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Arthur Kay Ladd, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Stevenson Denny, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Otto Montrose Low, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Arthur Thomas, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Joseph Kenneth Creamer, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Leonard Eby Lilley, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Glenn Earl Carothers, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Frank Thomas Madigan, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Hilliard Healy, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. David Francis Finnerty, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edward Clay Atkinson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lloyd Nelson Winters, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Windom Dixon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Christian Stephen Andersen, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Clarence Beaver Lober, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Everett Dudley Yerby, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Ralph Jacob Mitchell, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Russell Raymond Louden, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Ferdinand Stutsman, jr., Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Frank Potter Albrook, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Arthur John Melanson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Theodore Joseph Koenig, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lemiel Lafayette Reece, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Willis Lamar Claxton, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Grandison Gardner, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Benners Brasfield Vail, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Walter Bingham Cochran, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Omer Osmer Niergarth, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Roy Alphonso Carter, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Pearne Clark Wilders, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles W. Fake, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Clifford Durward Overfelt, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Roderick Norman Ott, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Van Studdiford, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Byron Walters, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. John Blaney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Leland Fries Strader, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Percy Waldo Seymour, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Garland Thomas Rowland, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lee Caraway Bizzell, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Marion Milton Pharr, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Walter Lee Sherfey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Victor Gagne, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. James Courtney Browne, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. John Boardman Lord, Field Artillery.

Second Lieut. Polk Johnson Atkinson, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Frank Norman Mallory, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edmund Rucks Shugart, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ulmont William Holly, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Rex Henry Burger, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Clarence Turner Davis, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Frank Rate Williams, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harvey John Thornton, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Harold Joseph LaCroix, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Joseph Phillip Donnovin, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Andre Leonard Violante, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Leighton Nicol Smith, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Louis Urgel Labine, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Barmore Sharp, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Marcus Ellis Jones, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Harold Patrick Hennessy, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Victor Emerson Biehn, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Robinson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Aubrey Hornsby, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lawrence Lofton Cobb, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Havely McKee, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Garnett Hamilton Wilson, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Francis Xavier Oberst, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edwin Moore Burnett, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Richard Hawley Slider, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Andrew Edward Forsyth, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Justus Smith Davidson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Mark Histand Doty, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Peter Prime, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Otto Rudolph Stillinger, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Chauncey Whitney Sampsell, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Hugh Gibson Culton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Paul Allen Reichle, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Hubert Taylor Sutton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Gerald Bradford Devore, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Wallis Ammi Frederick, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Emerson Bush, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Edward Raymond Golden, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Herbert Joseph McChrystal, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Auby Casey Strickland, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Christopher Sinclair, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Harry Newberry, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Max Lentz, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. William Young McBurney, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Vincent Douglas Mee, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Weess Hanna, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Lawrence Kay, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Willard Harris, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Albert Edgar Cannon, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harry Marten Schwarze, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Philip Wallace Ricamore, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Kenney Erdman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Geoffrey Cooke Bunting, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Orin Lee Davidson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Patrick Boland, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Thomas Francis Hickey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Emmett Michael Connor, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Joseph Dunn, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Clyde Hurschale Phillips, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edward Albert Kimball, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Thomas James Chrisman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Harrison Graban, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Louis North Eller, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Stainback Deaderick, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ashley Chadbourne McKinley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Fred Charles Dierstein, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John William Irwin, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert LeRoy Nesbit, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lawrence Haley Caruthers, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Elmer Dane Pangburn, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Thomas John Carroll, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Beveridge, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Michael Everett McHugo, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edward Lewis Searl, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lloyd H. Duffin, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Vincent James Meloy, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Egbert Branshaw, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Leigh Wade, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Earle Hayden Tonkin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ivan Leon Foster, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Robert Hall, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph Ignatius Sullivan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edward Whiting Raley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Dache McClain Reeves, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Oliver Perry Gothlin, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Mark Henry Redman, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Wallace Marmaduke Allison, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Oscar George Fegan, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Thomas Jefferson Davis, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harvey William Prosser, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Eugene Robert Cowles, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Francis Aleure, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Robert Victor Ignico, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Rutledge Maurice Lawson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Jacob Marcellus Woodard, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harry George Rennagel, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Dudley Hamilton Woodin, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Leland Ross Hewitt, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frederick William Evans, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Oliver Edward Cound, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Frank La Rue, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Alfred Baxter Baker, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Fred Cyrus Nelson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Delbert Emerick Jones, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Douglas, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Hugh Albert Bivins, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clyde Antone Kuntz, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Elmer John Bowling, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Orin Jay Bushey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Shirley Clayton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. John William Beck, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Robert Strong Worthington, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Louis Philip Moriarty, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Washington Polk, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Norton Monteith, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Cleveland William McDermott, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Howell Burgess, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Vincent Hynes, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frederick William Niedermeyer, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Gradon Taylor, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Leland Wilbur Miller, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William De Voe Coney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Elbert Wiley Franklin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Raphael Baez, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Halbert Finley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clarence Herbert Welch, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Alfred Jefferson Lyon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Lyman Clark, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Montrose Graham Thomson Neely, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Sam Love Ellis, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Godfrey Lundberg, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Eugene Lowry Eubank, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Howard Dutton Norris, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frank Martyn Paul, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Samuel Martin Connell, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Edwin Upston, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Reuben Curtis Moffat, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Paul Langdon Williams, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Aloysius Hoy, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Theodore Julius Lindorff, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. William Alexander Marsh, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Thomas Barnes, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Samuel Custer Eaton, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph John Gutkowski, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Albert Welcker, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Joseph Francis Binford, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harry Wesley Bauer, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Joseph Horace Landrum, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. George Roland McElroy, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Garrett Bruce Shomber, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. John Redmond Thornton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Bayard Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Mortimer Francis Sullivan, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Eggleston Westley Peach, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Lawrence Potter, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Leslie Dillon Carter, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Don Riley, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Pembroke Augustine Brawner, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. Isaac Leonard Kitts, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Fred Charles Thomas, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Harold Lewis Turner, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Merrill Deitz Mann, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ezra Rice Frost, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Maurice Shefstad Hill, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edgar Andrew Liebhauser, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Lester Morse, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Albert Carl Foulk, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edward Vincent Harbeck, Air Service.

Second Lieut. Frank Walter Seifert, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Austin Murray Coates, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edward Ernest Hildreth, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Courtney Whitney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Phillips Melville, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Gordon Williams, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Kenneth Gatiss Fraser, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Colb Morris, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George William Pardy, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Bernard Scott Thompson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Willis Ratcliffe Taylor, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Duane Knapp, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Louis Braswell Knight, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Howard Bratton, jr., Cavalry.
Second Lieut. James Harold Doolittle, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Thomas Curry, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Burdette Mase Fitch, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. William Bettencourt Souza, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Marll James Plumb, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Alfred Lindeburg, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph Alexis Wilson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clements McMullen, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ames Scribner Albro, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Milo McCune, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles McKinley Robinson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Sanderson Crawford, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Yawkey Banfill, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Myron Ray Wood, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Isaac Jackson Williams, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clarence Edward Shankle, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Donald Lloyd Bruner, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Joseph Gainey, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Lloyd Chartley Blackburn, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Leslie Philip Arnold, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edward Jenkins, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Audrey Baxter Ballard, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Gerald Edward Grimes, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Henry Gardner, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Campbell Goldsborough, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Louis Ogden Davis, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. James Howard Smith, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Clarence Omer Bell, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Arthur Girard Hamilton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Mellis Myers, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Cyrus Quinton Shelton, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Edward Huffner Wood, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Emil Charles Kiel, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Silas Clearman Hyndshaw, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Lee George, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lewis Allego Dayton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Younger Arnold Pitts, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Howard Zabriskie Bogert, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Burnie Raymond Dallas, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Franklin Griffin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ward Fisk Robinson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harry Albert Fudge, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Lyle Meredon Shields, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harvey James Golightly, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Hale Dowman, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Hayden Davies, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lewis Andrus Day, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Solomon Bernard Ebert, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Claude Weaver Feagin, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harry Anton Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles William Walton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Barney McKinney Giles, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Roy Travis McLamore, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Bernard Joseph Tooher, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Albert Francis Hegenberger, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Norman Reuben Wood, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Wendell Holzworth Brookley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Stephen Fitzpatrick, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Max Frank Schneider, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Donald Gardner Stitt, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Eugene Walter Lewis, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. James Brian Edmunds, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Oscar William Koch, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Reis Joseph Ryland, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Harold Farnsworth Hubbell, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Glenn Charles Salisbury, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Ralph Wells, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Malcolm Stoney Lawton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Floyd Albert Lundell, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Jasper Kemper McDuffie, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ross Corbett Kirkpatrick, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Mark Rhey Woodward, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Howard Knox Ramey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Theodore Shafer Van Veghten, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lionel H. Dunlap, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Russell Ralph Fox, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stanley Smith, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Daniel Smith, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Albert Brill, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles Walter Hensey, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Henry Edward Wooldridge, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Marion Larimore Elliott, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Irwin Stuart Amberg, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Earle J. Carpenter, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Pratt Hodges, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Oakley George Kelly, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Welcome Bridges Elston, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Alexander Mollison, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Webster Beaton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Talcott Proudman Smith, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Gilbert Shaw Graves, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stewart Wellington Torney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Grayson Moore, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lawrence Brownlee Savage, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Leland Stanford Andrews, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edwin Thomas May, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edgar Eugene Glenn, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joe Jones Yeats, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harold Arthur Daly, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Millan Pennewill, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Henry Buechner, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John William Monahan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ernest Emery Harmon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Cortlandt Spencer Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Rentsch Rivers, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry Walter Ulmo, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Charles Carl Chauncey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Walter Eugene Richards, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Ellsworth Adams, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Elmer Selff, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Roy Bradford Mosher, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frederick Eugene Coyne, jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. John Myers McCulloch, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Richard Kemp LeBrou, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Wesley Sullivan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Luther Earl Keithly, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Paul Harter Leech, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. George William Haskins, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ernest Arthur DeWitt, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Albert Henry Johnson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Neal Dow Franklin, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Louis Joseph Harant, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Simmons Sullivan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Eugene Cooper Batten, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry Joachim Boettcher, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lonnie Ottis Field, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Stanley Mitchell Ames, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Melvin B. Asp, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Royal Beard Lea, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Maurice Stewart Kerr, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Clement McDonald, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Peter Emanuel Skanse, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Alfred Evans Waller, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clarence Roscoe MacIver, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Amos Moore, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Malcolm Nebeker Stewart, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John William Benton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John George Shannonhouse, Chemical Warfare Service.
Second Lieut. Odas Moon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Dean Bryan Belt, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Arthur George Liggett, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Westside Torkel Larson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Andrew Daniel Hopping, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Newton Longfellow, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Fred Evans Woodward, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lloyd Barnett, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Arthur Laird, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Bushrod Hoppin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles William Steinmetz, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Owen Evans Spruance, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Myrddin Davies, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Norris White, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Reuben Dallam Biggs, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Wendell Brown McCoy, Air Service.

Second Lieut. Francis Warren Nunenmacher, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Laurence Claude, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Augustus Barksdale, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Laurence Delmore, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harold Franklyn Rouse, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Lonnie Gilbert, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Arthur Bartron, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Douglas Givens, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Shields Catlin, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold DeLancey Stetson, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. William Cushman Farnum, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Milton Cummings, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Grant Thorp, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harold Kirkham Hine, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph Williams Benson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frederick Dan Lynch, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Atwater Woodruff, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Wallace Burke, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lester James Maitland, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Lee Shea, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Sterling Knox Harrod, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Earle Henry Manzelman, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Warren Welsh, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Arthur Ignatius Ennis, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Paul Duane Casey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. LeRoy William Yarborough, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Orville Ervin Davis, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. John Thomas McKay, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Percival Adams Wakeman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Hyman Jackson Crigger, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Floyd Thomas Gillespie, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Hal C. Bush, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Henry Speidel, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Herbert Linus Berry, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Robert Owen Montgomery, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Horace Napoleon Gibson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Sidney Frank Wharton, Infantry.
Second Lieut. David Marsh Todd, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Dayton Locke Robinson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Arvid Edward Maurice Fogelberg, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Yancey LeGette, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Howard Samuel Paddock, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. William Thomas O'Reilly, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Bryan McDavid, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Henry Elmer Sowell, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. James Webb Newberry, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Frederick Whiteley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edward Clay Johnson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Grissom Edward Haynes, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Guy Lewis McNeil, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Lebbeus Carman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Landon Johnson Lockett, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Henry Calais, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Oscar Lee Ansley, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Thomas Johnson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Clarence Prescott Talbot, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Graham Percy Brotherson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Deans Calley, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Alfred Liljevalch Jewett, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Raymond Calvin Milyard, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Louie Clifford Mallory, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Bob Childs, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lewis Selwyn Webster, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Andrew Smith, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Roy William Camblin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ray Eric Cavenee, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Wade Darragh Killen, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Andrew Jackson Schriver, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Frank James Lawrence, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Day Jewell, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Dorrance Scott Roysdon, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Francis Joyce, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Maurice Eugene Knowles, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Hyatt Floyd Newell, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Harry Mosby, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. John Easton McCammon, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Matthew Edward Finn, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Brandon Wright, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Albert Faitoute Hebbard, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clarence Lee King, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Evers Abbey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry Lee Kinnison, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. Helmuth Ernst Beine, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harold Frederick Greene, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harrison Gage Crocker, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Glendower Ellicott, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Chester Arthur Horne, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Harry Luther Coates, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Edmund Connolly, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Buckles Cassiday, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frank Lauderdale Cook, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Bernard Tobias Castor, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Homer Barron Chandler, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Carl Weston Pyle, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edwin Morgan Pendleton, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Walter Thomas Meyer, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Valentine Stone Miner, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Myron Emmett O'Hanly, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harry Forest Colliver, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Homer Martin, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Willard Shaw Clark, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Homer B. Pettit, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lieut. John Spalding Miller, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Stilwell Conrow, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Cornelius John Kenney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Winfield Scott Hamlin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Joseph McDonald, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Leo George Clarke, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Joseph Thaddeus Zak, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Alfred Gideon Anderson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Hugh Carlton Dorrien, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Carl Horne, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Werner Watson Moore, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Fremont Byron Hodson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Theodore Zane, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Rudolph William Broedlow, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Marvin Clifton Bradley, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Albert Edmund Rothermich, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Stowe Thompson Sutton, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Ainsworth Brown, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Elliott Raymond Thorpe, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Carson Grable, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Oscar Douglas Sugg, Infantry.
Second Lieut. LeRoy Allen Walthall, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lucas Victor Beau, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Arthur Lee Shreve, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Daniel Edward Morgan, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Newman Raiford Laughinghouse, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ambrose Victor Clinton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Jones Hanlon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Harold McFall, Finance Department.
Second Lieut. Hiram Wilson Sheridan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Howard Arnold Craig, Air Service.
Second Lieut. David Robert Stinson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph Theodore Morris, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Carl Hiestand Myers, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Armor Simpson Heffley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Robert Sweeley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Raymond Carl Zettel, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Carl Grammer Eliason, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Allan McHenry, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Oscar Harmon Harris, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Erling Schriver Norby, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Carlyle Howe Ridenour, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Carl Anson Cover, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Russell Carrigan MacDonald, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Bennett Edward Meyers, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Laurel Eugene Stone, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Robert Storie Heald, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Warren Arthur Maxwell, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Walter Hannumn Carlisle, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. William H. Papenfoth, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Harry Leon Speck, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frederick Mercer Hopkins, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Rupert Edison Starr, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. James Desmond Summers, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. George Edgar Rice, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Frank Edward White, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lowell Whittier Bassett, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Dudley Ely Rowland, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edward Michael Powers, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Maurice Edgar Jennings, Chemical Warfare Service.
Second Lieut. Victor Emile Bertrandias, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Felix Marcus Alexander, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Everett Listeman Kirkpatrick, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Burleigh Clarke, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Howell Harrell, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Paul Edmund Burrows, Air Service.

Second Lieut. George Harold Brown, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Elmer Daniel Perrin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Wallace Robinson Fletcher, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Dale Vincent Gaffney, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Kennedy Matthews, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Kenneth Bonner Wolfe, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stanley Powloski, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harry Lincoln Calvin, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. William Tillmon Agee, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Fraser Richardson, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Clifford Irving Hunn, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Chester Howard Elmes, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Vernon Hart, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Richard Hartnett Magee, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Simpson Carroll, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Henry Harold Reily, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Samuel DeWitt Tallmadge, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Donald Dakin Lamson, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Augustus Dawson Sanders, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William James Wagenknight, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. Cola Edgar Stone, Finance Department.
Second Lieut. Mitchell Franklin Orr, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Edward Milan Taylor, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Dayton Dudley Watson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Herschel David Baker, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Herbert Edward Baker, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Donald David Fitzgerald, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ulmont Ogden Cumming, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Thomas Standifer Gunby, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Andrew Paul Sullivan, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Austin Walrath Martenstein, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edwin Barton Bobzien, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Carl Gabriel, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John D. Corkille, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry Few Sessions, Air Service.
Second Lieut. DuVal Crump Watkins, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Levi L. Beery, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Carlton Foster Bond, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Roland Lester Spencer, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Willis Clark Conover, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Morton McDonald Jones, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Robert MacKenzie Shaw, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John DeForest Barker, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Albert Durnford, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Frank Griffin Marchman, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Francis Hugh Antony McKeon, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Edwin Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clifford Augustus Smith, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Warren Rice Carter, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Francis Sheehan, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Thad Victor Foster, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Bayard Haley, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Charles Eugene Schwarz, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Marshall Eugene Darby, Ordnance Department.
Second Lieut. George Cocke Bland, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. John Cyrus Gates, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. James Flannery, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Alling McGinnis, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harry Arthur Halverson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Theodore Skow, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Morton Howard McKinnon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Nathan William Thomas, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Walter Bernard Hough, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Caviness Rickner, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Guy Clifton Benson, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. William Michael Lanagan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Platt Tourtellot, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Hendricks Beverley, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harrison Jay Hartman, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Walter Kellsey Burgess, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Paul California Wilkins, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Gustavus Franzle Chapman, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Arthur Leslie Thornton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Norman Delroy Brophy, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Raymond Morrison, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Alexander Pearson, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Rupert Julian, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Graham Mead St. John, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Wallace Gordon Smith, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Adam Horn, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ployer Peter Hill, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clarence Chamberlin Wilson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Byron Elihu Gates, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Elmer Karl Pettibone, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Wendell Eugene Goodrich, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Lewis Boyd, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Leon Edgar Sharon, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Houston McWilliams, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. James Ferris Morison, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Oscar Monthan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ivan Lewis Proctor, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Matthew Ebbert Webber, Chemical Warfare Service.
Second Lieut. Wilfred Morey Clare, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Delmar Hall Dunton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Hjalmar Frithijof Carlson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Orvil Arson Anderson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Emile Tisdale Kennedy, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph Edwin Virgin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Reed Evans, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Hugh Chester Downey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Joseph Powers, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. George William Goddard, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Jack Greer, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Guy Kirksey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Herbert Chapman, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Robert Franklin Jones, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harry Hobson Mills, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Joseph Luther Walecka, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Angier Hobbs Foster, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edwin Sullivan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Carroll Ray Hutchins, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. John Raymond Drumm, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Oliver Kendall Robbins, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William Joseph White, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Fidelis Connell, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Faye Sherman Gullet, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Raglan Glascock, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Vardeman McPike, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Ray L. Owens, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry Leonard Kersh, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Lloyd Russell Garrison, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles Gage Brenneman, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Reuben Castor, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Leland Hudson Barnes, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Clarence Richard Sutherland, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Raymond George Miller, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Clyde Milton Hallam, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Nicolas Fosdick Galbraith, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. William A. Enos, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Richard Royall Baker, jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Norman Joseph Eckert, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Hugh Cort, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Benjamin Rhoten Morton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Samuel Oliver Carter, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Jasper Ewing Brady, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Good Cressey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Orville L. Stephens, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clarence Edgar Crumrine, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Albert Wyatt, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George William Snow, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Morris Langdon Tucker, Air Service.
Second Lieut. William King Moran, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Corley Perry McDarment, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Russell Hay Cooper, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Gaylord Leon Phipps, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Henry Guy Woodward, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clifford James Moore, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. John Ross Morgan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Pittman Wall Mills, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Robert Dudley Moor, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Roscoe Caleb Wriston, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Charles Edwin Thomas, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Fredrick Andrew Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry William Brandhorst, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Leonard Roberts Smith, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Stanley Noble Partridge, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Bigham Crandell, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. James Bumer Jordan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Albin Nace Caldwell, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Arvel Joshua Monger, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Hamilton Judd, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Thomas Jefferson Ford, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Richardson Smith, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Walter Franklin Graham, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Raymond Edward Shum, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Vernon Barnum, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Kenton Parkes Cooley, Infantry.

Second Lieut. Lester Erasmus Gruber, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Frederick William Wennerberg, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Alfred Nelson Taylor, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William John Hardy, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Jack Edmund Rycroft, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harold David Porter, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ben Robert Jacobs, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Mark Christian Neff, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Thomas Henry Foster, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lewis Dabney Hixson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Clyde Girard Banks, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Lyle Sayers Lindsey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ivan Downes Yeaton, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Thomas Everett Winstead, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harry Cullins, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Alfred Edwin McKenney, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Henry Bosard Ellison, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Don McKnight, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Joe Arthur Hinton, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Paul Hayes, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Earl Monroe Miner, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Eugene Lemuel Miller, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Reuben Ellis Jenkins, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Patrick Francis Powers, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Howard E. Pulliam, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Millard Fillmore Willet Oliver, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Arthur Lowell Johnson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Thomas Alfred Northam, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Robert Manees, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Roland Samuel Henderson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Cecilius White, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Norman Drysdale Gillet, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Jack Clemens Hodgson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Keifer Behler, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Victor Walter Smith, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Clay Beckett, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Carlisle Clyde Dusenbury, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Leland Bolt, Infantry.
Second Lieut. George Andrew Glover, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John A. Kase, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Theodore Thomas Teague, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Russell Calvert Worthington, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Clifford Elleman, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Eugene Vincent Elder, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Carter Weldon Clarke, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Ralph Gordon Richards, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Paul LaRue Neal, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Ray Guy Harris, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Wallace Caldwell Cummings, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Cole Shively, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Clifford Smith, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Karl Derby Guenther, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Francis Harold Vanderwerker, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. James Culver Cluck, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stacy C. Hinkle, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Richard Geter Rogers, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Joseph Felix Routhier, Finance Department.
Second Lieut. Robert Taylor Strode, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Thomas Harrison Ward, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Henry Beaumont Pennell Boody, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles Willard Getchell, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Julius Trousdale Berry, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Russell Dean Powell, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles Rudolph Carlson, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. William Clinton McCarthy, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Charles Herbert Day, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Thomas Oscar Foreman, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Harry Lee Watts, jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Tonnes Dennison, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Harold Engerud, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Raymond Thomas Joseph Higgins, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Sidney Cushman Page, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. David Dick Caldwell, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Walter Talcott Wilsey, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Albert James Hastings, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Paul Ruthven Jones, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Seward Lincoln Mains, jr., Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Herbert Glendonne Messer, Signal Corps.
Second Lieut. Frederic Cooley Eveleth, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Edwin Karl Pohlson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Kellogg McAlister, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Thomas Francis Keefe, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Edward Harold Metzger, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Clinton Steele Berrien, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Raymond Adelbert Knapp, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Courtland Moshier Brown, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Newman Hall Cherry, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harold Hopkins Miller, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Joseph Walter Francis Resing, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Henry William Kunkel, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Keith Kirkman Tatom, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Harry Walter Killpack, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Paul Revere Taylor, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Noel Amis, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Thomas Falin, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Jack Joseph O'Connell, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Alva Edison McConnell, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Hez McClellan, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harold Hibbard Carr, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Alphonse Stoeckle, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Timothy Alexander McLellan, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. James Russell Brownell, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Carley Lawrence Marshall, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Fred Griffith Threatt, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Frank Daniel Huarte, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Hugh Tom Edwards, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Otho Burdette, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Harold Russell Jordan, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Charles Edgar Burchett, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Edward Moore Masterson, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. John Charles Brown, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Henderson Wilcox Allen, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Arthur Burton Clark, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Edwin Milton Bush, jr., Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. John Wesley Hill, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Frederick Brodie Forbes, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Augustus Weinberger, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Onie Ray Dilley, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Andrew Bruyette Mangum, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. William Ernest Donegan, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Herbert Sherman Nettleton, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Thomas Brooks, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Cyrus Bettis, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Rufus Benjamin Davidson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stanley Milward Umstead, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Howard Carlton Brandt, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Roland Birnn, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stanton Thomas Smith, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Stephen Edward Stancisko, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Edward Vincent Freeman, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Kenneth Garrett, Air Service.
Second Lieut. James Joseph Langin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Norman Crawford Caum, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Howard James Edmands, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Glenn Clinton Holcomb, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Earl Thomas McCullough, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Alexander Sinclair Reynolds, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Gerard Swarthout, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Allan Francis Sullivan, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Clarkson Huggins, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Thomas Walter Roane, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Herman Jaeger, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. James Alva Murphey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Daniel Schas, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Robert Schaefer, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Moses Alexander, Infantry.
Second Lieut. James Merrill Robinson, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Kenneth Edgar Kline, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Donald Dewey McCaskey, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Allen Agee Goodwyn, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ralph Elmer Alexander, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Frederick Reinhold Undritz, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Howard Wylie, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Frank Wolle Stout, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Francis Emerson Charlton, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Charles Drysdale Simmonds, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Albert Pierson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Sylvian Gaston Kindall, Infantry.
Second Lieut. John Hancock Holder, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Joseph Popenjoy Bailey, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John McDonough Early, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Otto Lucratus McDaniel, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Francis Pat Booker, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Theodore Lawson, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Kenneth Campbell McGregor, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Rafael Louis Salzmann, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Riley Finley Ennis, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Clarence Frost Horton, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Francis Paul Connelly, Finance Department.

Second Lieut. Oliver Allen Gottschalk, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harry Joseph Martin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Lawrence Cornwallis Collins, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Hewitt Warren Richmond, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Porter Tate Gregory, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. James Hiram Bedford, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Ray Edward Dingeman, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Max Frederic Moyer, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Arthur Edmond Wilson, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. George Cobb Wynne, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. George Franklin Nichols, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Spencer Hall, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Harry Frederick Meyers, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Ola Aloysius Nelson, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. Robert Lowry Freeman, Cavalry.
Second Lieut. Harry Isaac Rosen, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. William Chauncey Hutt, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Arthur Nicholas Ziegler, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Robert Homer Soule, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Pardoe Martin, Air Service.
Second Lieut. John Augustus Hunt, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Raymond Rudolph Brown, Air Service.
Second Lieut. George Barnett Bloom, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Ernest Griffin, Coast Artillery Corps.
Second Lieut. James Sharp Eldredge, Air Service.
Second Lieut. Edwin Charles Lickman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Patrick Collins, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Rudolph George Schmidt, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Harrison William Johnson, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Ralph Willerton French, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Corwin Lynn Rogers, Quartermaster Corps.
Second Lieut. Joseph Elmer Monhollan, Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Prentiss Pittman, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Clifton Tredway Hunt, Corps of Engineers.
Second Lieut. Robert Scurlark Moore, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Aloysius Tagliabue, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Victor Otto Overcash, Infantry.
Second Lieut. David Ray Nimocks, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Archie Bird Whitlow, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Willam Thrower Fitts, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. William Kennett McKittrick, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Fredrik Lorentsen Knudsen, jr., Infantry.
Second Lieut. Jessie Thomas Harris, Infantry.
Second Lieut. Raymond Nesbitt Hutto, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Crowell Edward Pease, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Claude Bertram Avera, Quartermaster Corps
Second Lieut. William John McKiernan, jr., Air Service.
Second Lieut. Hobart Dewey Reed, Field Artillery.
Second Lieut. Frederick Buchanan Rosenbaum, Infantry.

PROMOTIONS IN THE PHILIPPINE SCOUTS.

To be first lieutenants with rank from July 1, 1920.

Second Lieut. Herbert Lee Merritt, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Furmon Arthur Shults, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Harry W. Howard, Philippine Scouts.
Second Lieut. Eustaquio Baclig y Sabio, Philippine Scouts.
First Lieut. Thomas Luther Spoon, Dental Corps, from September 10, 1920.
First Lieut. Earle Robbins, Dental Corps, from September 10, 1920.
First Lieut. Roy Albert Stout, Dental Corps, from September 12, 1920.
First Lieut. Oscar William Thompson, Dental Corps, from September 12, 1920.
First Lieut. Howard Austin Hale, Dental Corps, from September 18, 1920.
First Lieut. William Swann Shuttleworth, Dental Corps, from October 19, 1920.
First Lieut. Milton Julius Damlos, Dental Corps, from September 10, 1920.
First Lieut. Thomas Floyd Davis, Dental Corps, from February 4, 1921.

VETERINARY CORPS.

To be first lieutenants.

Second Lieut. Earl Floyd Long, Veterinary Corps, from September 4, 1920.
Second Lieut. Patrick Henry Hudgins, Veterinary Corps, from September 10, 1920.
Second Lieut. Gerald Woodward FitzGerald, Veterinary Corps, from September 13, 1920.
Second Lieut. Russell Samuel Shannon, Veterinary Corps, from September 17, 1920.
Second Lieut. Joseph Kiriam Dornblaser, Veterinary Corps, from September 16, 1920.
Second Lieut. Peter Thomas Carpenter, Veterinary Corps, from September 22, 1920.
Second Lieut. Samuel George Kielsmeier, Veterinary Corps, from September 22, 1920.

CHAPLAIN.

To be chaplain with the rank of captain.

Chaplain Adolf John Schliesser, from June 4, 1920.

WITHDRAWALS.

Executive nominations withdrawn from the Senate February 28 (legislative day of February 24), 1921.

Maj. John Baxter Sanford, Infantry, to be lieutenant colonel, with rank from July 1, 1920.
First Lieut. Charles William Hagen, Infantry, to be captain, with rank from July 1, 1920.
First Lieut. Ernest Frederick Apeldorn, jr., Infantry, to be captain, with rank from July 1, 1920.
First Lieut. Irvin Henry Zeliff, Field Artillery, to be captain, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Chaplain Adolph John Schliesser to be chaplain, with the rank of captain, from June 4, 1920.

QUARTERMASTER CORPS.

Maj. Henry Holden Sheen, Coast Artillery Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Maj. Joseph Edward Barzynsky, Infantry, July 30, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Maj. Laurence Oldham Mathews, Infantry, October 29, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Capt. Louis Arnold Beard, Field Artillery, July 1, 1920, with rank from May 15, 1917.
First Lieut. Thomas Grafton Hanson, Field Artillery, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 5, 1917.
First Lieut. Martin Owen Cahill, Field Artillery, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

Second Lieut. Henry Stephen Hostetter, Quartermaster Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 3, 1916.
Second Lieut. Emmett Crawford Morton, Quartermaster Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 3, 1916.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT.

Maj. Herman Heinrich Zornig, Coast Artillery Corps, September 4, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Capt. John Adams Brooks, Coast Artillery Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 25, 1917.
First Lieut. Charles Edward Hart, Cavalry, with rank from August 20, 1919.
First Lieut. Forrest Clifford Shaffer, Coast Artillery Corps, July 1, 1920, with rank from August 30, 1920.
First Lieut. Rudolph Francis Whitelegg, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from August 30, 1920.

SIGNAL CORPS.

Lieut. Col. George Ernest Kumpe, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
First Lieut. William Clarke Webster, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from January 28, 1919.

CAVALRY.

Second Lieut. John Williams Wofford, Infantry, September 10, 1920, with rank from July 2, 1920.

FIELD ARTILLERY.

Capt. Arthur John Betcher, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from May 15, 1917.
Capt. Clifford Barrington King, Cavalry, July 1, 1920, with rank from June 24, 1917.
First Lieut. John Victor Anderson, Field Artillery, July 1, 1920, with rank from December 19, 1918.
First Lieut. Christopher Columbus Strawn, Cavalry, July 1, 1920, with rank from March 25, 1919.
First Lieut. Hiram Wendall Tarkington, Infantry, July 1, 1920, with rank from September 21, 1919.

COAST ARTILLERY CORPS.

Maj. Stewart Oscar Eltinge, Cavalry, August 5, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Second Lieut. Joseph Honoro Rousseau, jr., Infantry, August 27, 1920, with rank from July 2, 1920.
Second Lieut. Edward Carl Englehart, Cavalry, September 11, 1920, with rank from July 2, 1920.

AIR SERVICE.

First Lieut. Edgar Peter Sorenson, Coast Artillery Corps, October 20, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.
Second Lieut. Joseph Flood, Infantry, October 30, 1920, with rank from July 1, 1920.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, February 28, 1921.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

Rev. James Shera Montgomery, D. D., pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we acknowledge Thy sovereignty. At Thy footstool may we learn to do well. Give a sweet peace unto those who are sick, and bless them with the calm of heaven. And may Thy heart ever be open like an infinite door; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Journals of the proceedings of Saturday, February 26, 1921, and of Sunday, February 27, 1921, were read and approved.

RESIGNATION OF CHAPLAIN COUDEN.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following letter:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 28, 1921.

Hon. FREDERICK H. GILLETT,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. SPEAKER: I beg hereby to respectfully resign as Chaplain of the House of Representatives, and request that my resignation be accepted at once.

Sincerely,

HENRY N. COUDEN, Chaplain.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the resignation will be accepted.

There was no objection.

REQUEST TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of fish-rescue work in the Mississippi River.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the subject indicated. Is there objection?

Mr. McCLINTIC. I object.

ARMY APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. CRAMTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Army appropriation bill, H. R. 15943, to disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Army appropriation bill, disagree to all the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Reserving the right to object, does the gentleman from Michigan feel like making any statement with regard to the amendment creating the office of lieutenant general and filling it by the appointment of Maj. Gens. Liggett and Bullard?

Mr. CRAMTON. The gentleman will understand that I am simply acting in the momentary absence of the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY]. The amendment referred to by the gentleman from Vermont, however, being, as I understand, one that could not be agreed to without an authorization from the House, of course, would not be agreed to without such authorization.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. GARD. Reserving the right to object, has the gentleman communicated with the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DENT] with regard to his request?

Mr. CRAMTON. I will say that I am not sure that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DENT] is in the city. While I have not communicated with the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON], I am sure he has no objection.

Mr. GARD. The gentleman is informed that there are no objections on the minority side to going into conference on the bill?

Mr. CRAMTON. I hope there is no objection at this stage of the session.

Mr. GARD. I mean no objection from members of the committee?

Mr. CRAMTON. Oh, no.

Mr. GARD. Then, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Michigan indicate the conferees?

Mr. CRAMTON. I do not know whether the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DENT] is in the city.

The SPEAKER. Of course, the gentleman can not appoint him contingently.

Mr. CRAMTON. Then, I suggest the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON].

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as conferees on the Army appropriation bill Mr. ANTHONY, Mr. CRAMTON, and Mr. SISSON.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether unanimous consent will be given or not. I ask unanimous consent that the conferees on the Army bill be authorized to agree in conference upon the Senate amendments which otherwise would have to be brought back to the House. There are a number of Senate amendments about which there would be no disagreement in the House. It is getting to the time in the session when it is quite necessary for the enrolling clerks to be able to enroll as much of these bills as possible. I think the gentleman would be willing to state that certain amendments would not be agreed to in conference without being brought back to the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the conferees be authorized by the House to agree to the Senate amendments. Is there objection?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Reserving the right to object, what amendments?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. To agree in conference in regard to Senate amendments.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. To what amendments?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. That would include the ones that are subject to disposition by the House.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Would that allow a vote in the House?

Mr. BLANTON. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I hope the gentleman will not object at present.

Mr. BLANTON. There are a number of amendments that the House would object to.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CRAMTON] is willing to state that those amendments will be brought back to the House, but there are about half the Senate amendments about which I think there is no disagreement at all in the House. If they can be disposed of in conference so that the enrolling clerk can go ahead with the enrolling of that part of the bill, it will expedite matters very much.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. By agreeing to the gentleman's request we would leave it to the conferees as to what amendments the House would probably not object to.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I suppose that the gentleman from Michigan would be willing to state what amendments he would bring back.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Is not this a rather unusual request?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. This request never has been made before.

Mr. BANKHEAD. That is my understanding. I think it is a unique request.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. It has never been necessary to make it before; we have not had this practice before.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I have no disposition to prevent action of the House on any amendment that is in real controversy.

Mr. MONDELL. I understand the gentleman from Michigan has a list of the Senate amendments which the committee would bring back if the Senate did not recede. It might be well for the gentleman to read that list and then if Members are agreeable to have the other amendments agreed to in conference it would expedite matters very much.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, I think it would be better at this time to proceed in the regular way, and I object.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON AGRICULTURAL BILL.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the agricultural bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota calls up the conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The conference report and statement were read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 6, 14, 17, 20, 21, 22, 24, 27, 28, 30, 43, 45, 47, 50, 52, 53, 54, 60, 61, 63, 66, 75, 81, 88, 96, 97, and 98.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 9, 13, 15, 23, 25, 26, 29, 34, 37, 38, 39, 44, 51, 59, 68, 69, 70, 74, 77, 86, 87, 90, 94, 99, 104, 106, 109, 110, and 113; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$56,860"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$379,705"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$20,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$325,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 36: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "$85,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 41: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,034,282"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$6,499,302"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$178,500, of which $10,000 shall be immediately available"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 56: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$190,000: Provided, That not less than $40,000 shall be used for investigating methods for the control and eradication of the grasshopper"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 57: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 57, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$165,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 58: That the House recede from its disagreement of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum "$65,000" proposed in said amendment insert the sum "$55,000," and in lieu of the sum "$25,000" named in said amendment insert the sum "$15,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 62: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$56,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$62,330: Provided, That $10,000 shall be used for investigation of the blowfly and screw worm"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 65: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 65, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$865,010"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 67: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,669,280"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 71: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$477,240"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$742,255"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 73: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$823,325"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 76: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 76, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$52,820"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 83: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$71,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 84: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,650,980"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,847,300"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 95: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$30,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 100: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 100, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum "$350,000" proposed in said amendment insert the sum "$300,000," and in lieu of the sum "$100,000" named in said amendment insert "$50,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 101: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 101, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,389,560"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 105: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 105, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$80,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 108: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 108, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,004,444"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 111: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 111, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$400,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have not agreed upon amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 31, 32, 33, 40, 46, 48, 49, 78, 79, 80, 82, 89, 91, 92, 93, 102, 103, 107, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, and 119.

SYDNEY ANDERSON,
WALTER W. MAGEE,
JAMES F. BYRNES,
Managers on the part of the House.

A. J. GRONNA,
WM. S. KENYON,
E. D. SMITH,
THOS. P. GORE,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, submit the following statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon by the conference committee and submitted in the accompanying report as to each of the said amendments, namely:

On Nos. 1, 2, and 3, relating to the Secretary's office: Restores the appropriation of $5,000 for a director of regulatory work, which was stricken out by the Senate.

On Nos. 5 and 6, relating to the Weather Bureau: Inserts the appropriation of $9,000, proposed by the Senate, for observations, reports, etc., for the protection of horticultural interests from frost damage; and strikes out the increase of $100,000, proposed by the Senate, for the maintenance of aerological stations.

On No. 9: Corrects an error in the amount set aside for administrative and operating expenses in connection with the eradication of tuberculosis.

On No. 13: Increases the appropriation for investigation of plant diseases from $62,020 to $72,000, as proposed by the Senate, and makes $10,000 of the amount available for research in brown rot and kindred diseases of peach trees.

On No. 14: Strikes out the increase of $114,000, proposed by the Senate, for eradication or control of the white pine blister rust.

On No. 15: Strikes out the increase of $4,600, proposed by the Senate, for investigations of diseases of cotton, truck, and forage crops.

On No. 16: Appropriates $56,860, instead of $51,860, as proposed by the House and $61,860 as proposed by the Senate, for investigating the physiology of crop plants.

On No. 17: Appropriates $50,000 as proposed by the House, instead of $40,000 as proposed by the Senate, for soil-bacteriology and plant-nutrition investigations.

On Nos. 18 and 19: Appropriates $379,705, instead of $359,705 as proposed by the House and $391,705 as proposed by the Senate, for cereal investigations; and provides that $20,000, instead of $32,000 as proposed by the Senate, shall be used for investigating the wheat scab or blight.

On Nos. 20, 21, and 22: Strikes out the changes proposed by the Senate in the phraseology of the appropriation to meet the emergency caused by diseases of wheat and other cereals.

On No. 23: Increases from $32,000 to $41,000, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for the investigation of tobacco.

On No. 24: Appropriates $94,115 as proposed by the House, instead of $100,000 as proposed by the Senate, for sugar plant investigations; and strikes out the authority, proposed by the Senate, for the use of $7,000 for a special greenhouse on the Arlington Farm.

On No. 25: Increases from $159,000 to $169,000, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for investigation and improvement of methods of crop production under subhumid, semiarid, or dry-land conditions.

On No. 26: Increases from $70,000 to $94,420, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for investigations in connection with western irrigation agriculture.

On No. 27: Strike out the increase of $10,000 proposed by the Senate in the appropriation for investigation of the culture of various kinds of nuts.

On No. 28: Strikes out language, proposed by the Senate, relative to investigations of the effect of transportation on fruits.

On No. 29: Reduces from $20,000 to $15,000, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for the upkeep of the gardens and grounds of the Department of Agriculture in Washington.

On No. 30: Strikes out language, proposed by the Senate, relative to studies of the effect of transportation on truck and related crops.

On No. 34: Makes a typographical correction in the text of the bill.

On No. 35: Appropriates $325,000, instead of $250,000 as proposed by the House and $400,000 as proposed by the Senate, for forest-products investigations.

On No. 36: Appropriates $85,000, instead of $50,000 as proposed by the House and $130,000 as proposed by the Senate, for investigations and experiments to determine methods for management of forests and forest lands, and strikes out the provisos inserted by the Senate.

On Nos. 37, 38, and 39: Make verbal corrections in the text of the bill.

On Nos. 41 and 42: Corrects totals in the bill.

On No. 43: Strikes out the language, inserted by the Senate, providing for cooperation with the Bureau of Chemistry by persons, associations, or corporations.

On No. 44: Inserts authority, proposed by the Senate, making the appropriation for investigation of the manufacture of table sirup available for the investigation of the manufacture of sugar.

On No. 45: Strikes out the increase of $26,500, proposed by the Senate, in the appropriation for the study and improvement of methods of dehydrating materials used for food.

On No. 47: Strikes out the appropriation of $15,000, inserted by the Senate, for the study of methods of home tanning of leather used on the farm.

On No. 50: Strikes out the increase of $10,000, proposed by the Senate, in the appropriation for the chemical investigations of soils.

On No. 51: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, that the appropriation for investigations of the sources of supply of fertilizers shall be available for investigation of "methods of obtaining" fertilizers.

On No. 52: Strikes out language, proposed by the Senate, limiting the appropriation for the examination of soils to aid in the classification of agricultural lands to lands within the national forests.

On Nos. 53 and 54: Correct totals in the bill.

On No. 55: Appropriates $178,500, as proposed by the House, for investigations of insects affecting deciduous fruits, orchards, etc., and makes $10,000 of that sum immediately available, as proposed by the Senate.

On No. 56: Appropriates $190,000, instead of $175,660, as proposed by the House, and $200,000 as proposed by the Senate, for investigation of insects affecting cereal and forage crops; and provides that $40,000 of that sum shall be used for investigating methods for the control and eradication of the grasshopper.

On No. 57: Appropriates $165,000, instead of $150,000, as proposed by the House, and $175,000, as proposed by the Senate, for investigations of insects affecting southern field crops.

On No. 58: Appropriates $55,000, instead of $40,000, as proposed by the House, and $65,000, as proposed by the Senate, for investigation of insects affecting forests, and provides that $15,000 of that sum, instead of $25,000, as proposed by the Senate, shall be used for preventing infestations of insects injurious to forest trees on and near the national forests.

On No. 59: Increases from $110,000 to $120,000, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for investigation of insects affecting truck crops.

On Nos. 60, 61, and 62: Appropriates $56,500, instead of $51,500, as proposed by the House, and $60,000, as proposed by the Senate, for investigation of insects affecting citrus and other tropical and subtropical plants; and strikes out reference to the camphor thrip.

On No. 63: Strikes out the appropriation of $20,000, inserted by the Senate, for the investigation of insects affecting greenhouse florist's stock and other ornamental plants.

On No. 64: Appropriates $62,330, instead of $52,330 as proposed by the House and $70,000 as proposed by the Senate, for the investigation of miscellaneous insects; and provides that $10,000 of that sum, instead of $17,000 as proposed by the Senate, shall be used for investigation of the blowfly and screw worm.

On No. 65: Corrects a total in the bill.

On No. 66: Strikes out language proposed by the Senate, making the appropriation for preventing the spread of the gypsy and brown-tail moths available for developing methods of dealing with the coddling moth.

On No. 67: Corrects a total in the bill.

On Nos. 68 and 69: Increases from $5,000 to $7,500, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for the Sullys Hill National Park game preserve.

On Nos. 70 and 71: Appropriates $477,240, instead of $452,240 as proposed by the House and $550,000 as proposed by the Senate, for the investigation of food habits of birds and mammals.

On Nos. 72 and 73: Corrects totals in the bill.

On Nos. 74, 75, and 76, relating to the Division of Accounts and Disbursements: Appropriates for an additional clerk at $1,600 as proposed by the Senate and strikes out the additional clerk at $1,200.

On Nos. 77 and 81: Provides for an assistant editor at $2,000 in the Division of Publications and strikes out the language, proposed by the Senate, making $3,000 of the appropriation for emergency employments and extra labor available for salaries for the distribution of bulletins.

On Nos. 83, 84, and 85: Appropriates $71,500, instead of $61,500 as proposed by the House and $81,500 as proposed by the Senate, for administration of the Hatch, Adams, and Smith-Lever acts and administration of the insular experiment stations in Alaska, Hawaii, Porto Rico, Guam, and the Virgin Islands.

On Nos. 86 and 87: Makes verbal corrections in the text of the bill.

On No. 88: Strikes out the increase of $11,000, proposed by the Senate, in the appropriation for road-management investigations.

On No. 90: Increases from $62,440 to $72,000, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for irrigation investigations.

On No. 94: Makes a verbal correction in the text of the bill.

On No. 95: Provides that $30,000, instead of $20,000, as proposed by the House and $40,000 as proposed by the Senate, of the appropriation for information on the marketing and distribution of farm products shall be used for a study of the methods of prevention of losses of fruits and vegetables in storage and in transit.

On Nos. 96, 97, and 98: Provides for the food-products inspection service of the Bureau of Markets in the language proposed by the House instead of the language proposed by the Senate.

On No. 99: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, that $30,000 instead of $25,860, of the appropriation for cotton-standardization investigations may be used for testing the waste, tensile strength, and bleaching qualities of different grades and classes of cotton to determine their spinning value.

On No. 100: Appropriates $300,000, instead of $250,000, as proposed by the House and $350,000 as proposed by the Senate, for crop-estimating work, and provides that $50,000 of that sum, instead of $100,000, as proposed by the Senate, shall be used for collecting and disseminating to interested persons information relative to the world's supply of and need of American agricultural products, marketing methods, prices, etc., in foreign countries.

On No. 101: Corrects a total in the bill.

On No. 104: Makes a typographical correction in the text of the bill.

On No. 105: Appropriates $80,000, instead of $65,000, as proposed by the House and $100,000 as proposed by the Senate, for the administration of the United States warehouse act.

On No. 106: Makes a typographical correction in the text of the bill.

On No. 108: corrects a total in the bill.

On Nos. 109 and 110: Increases from $115,400 to $125,000, as proposed by the Senate, the appropriation for general expenses for enforcement of the insecticide act.

On No. 111: Appropriates $400,000, instead of $125,000 as proposed by the House and $625,000 as proposed by the Senate, for cooperative fire protection of the forested watersheds of navigable streams.

On No. 113: Provides, as proposed by the Senate, that the appropriation for the control and prevention of spread of the Mexican bean beetle shall be available for expenditure in States other than the State of Alabama.

The committee of conference have not agreed upon the following amendments of the Senate:

On Nos. 4, 7, and 8: Appropriating $11,450 for a printing office in the Weather Bureau in Washington.

On No. 10: Making $8,000 available for buildings at the United States sheep experiment station in Clark County, Idaho.

On Nos. 11 and 12: Appropriating $3,000 for an administrative assistant in seed and plant distribution in the Bureau of Plant Industry.

On Nos. 31, 32, and 33: Relating to the appropriation of $300,000 for the purchase and distribution of valuable seeds.

On No. 40: Relating to the payment of grazing fees for the use of the national forests during the calendar year 1921.

On Nos. 46, 48, and 49: Appropriating $25,000 for investigation and development of methods for the prevention of plant-dust explosions and resulting fires.

On Nos. 78, 79, 80, and 82, relating to the Division of Publications: Appropriating $2,500 for a chief cinematographer and striking out an assistant in the document section at $1,800.

On No. 89: Authorizing the expenditure from the 3 per cent administrative fund provided by the Federal aid road act of July 11, 1916, of $148,200 for investigations of road materials.

On Nos. 91, 92, and 93: Appropriating $15,000 for supervising the preparation, distribution, and use of surplus war explosives for agricultural purposes.

On No. 102: Conferring upon the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates the powers and duties imposed on the Bureau of Statistics and the Bureau of Crop Estimates.

On No. 103: Authorizing the use during the fiscal year 1922 of moneys received from the sale of cotton in connection with the enforcement of the cotton futures act.

On No. 107: Relating to the disbursement among the growers of the wool clip of 1918 of sums collected or recovered by the Government from those who handled any part of such clip.

On No. 112: Appropriating $10,000 for the establishment of a live-stock department at the field station, Woodward, Okla.

On No. 114: Appropriating $5,000 for use of the joint committee on short-time rural credits.

On Nos. 115 and 116: Appropriating $5,000,000 for the purchase of seed grain for drought-stricken areas.

On No. 117: Authorizing the President to extend invitations to foreign Governments to be represented in a world's dairy congress to be held in the United States in 1922.

On No. 118: Directing the Secretary of Agriculture to submit to Congress at the beginning of each regular session a report relative to the completion of investigations and duplication of work.

On No. 119: The total of the bill.

SYDNEY ANDERSON,
WALTER W. MAGEE,
JAMES F. BYRNES,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, the amount carried in conference report, as agreed to, is $34,334,600. The Senate conferees receded on amendments carrying a total of $864,515. The House agreed to amendments of the Senate carrying amounts in addition to the House bill amounting to $666,600. There are in disagreement amendments carrying a net total of $4,700,000.

Mr. LANGLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. I will.

Mr. LANGLEY. Did the House conferees agree to the Senate amendment 31, striking out the congressional distribution of garden and flower seeds?

Mr. ANDERSON. The House conferees did not agree to that, that is one of those items in disagreement which have been brought back to the House.

Mr. LANGLEY. If the gentleman intends to move to recede and concur in that amendment, I would like to be permitted to make a motion to insist on the House provision.

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman has the right, but I would be glad to give the gentleman the opportunity.

Mr. SINNOTT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. I will.

Mr. SINNOTT. There was an item for the protection of forests of $500,000 and I am unable to find it. Can the gentleman tell me the number of the item and what was done with it?

Mr. ANDERSON. That is an item on page 82 of the bill, being amendment 111. The House bill carried $125,000, and the Senate added $500,000, making a total of $625,000. The conferees have agreed on $400,000.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the conference report.

The previous question was ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

For the maintenance of a printing office in the city of Washington for the printing of weather maps, bulletins, circulars, forms, and other publications, including the pay of additional employees, when necessary, $11,450: Provided, That no printing shall be done by the Weather Bureau that can be done at the Government Printing Office without impairing the service of said bureau.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, this item has been carried in the bill for many years. It is necessary in order to permit the prompt printing of maps and weather reports and other publications in the Weather Bureau. This work can not be done at the Government Printing Office but has to be done at the Weather Bureau in order that it may be printed promptly. I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 7: Page 8, line 1, strike out "$1,519,540" and insert "$1,539,990."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, that is to correct a total. I move that the House recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 8: Page 8, line 3, strike out the figures "$1,866,120" and insert "$1,886,570."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, this is also a total. I move that the House recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Provided further, That of the sum thus appropriated $8,000 is hereby made immediately available for the erection of necessary buildings at the United States sheep experiment station in Clark County, Idaho, to furnish facilities for the investigation of problems pertaining to the sheep and wool industry on the farms and ranges of the Western States.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, this is an item which has been carried in the bill for many years. It relates to the range sheep work which is carried on in Clark County, Idaho. It provides that $8,000 of the sum appropriated may be used for the construction of buildings. It does not call for an additional appropriation.

Mr. SNELL. Is that an item we have voted on in the House?

Mr. ANDERSON. No; this went out on a point of order.

Mr. SNELL. What does the gentleman mean by saying it does not require a special appropriation?

Mr. ANDERSON. Because the money is already appropriated, and this is only an allocation of the amount for construction.

Mr. HAUGEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. HAUGEN. What seems to be the necessity for this appropriation? We have been carrying it for a number of years, and it seems that it ought to have been sufficient to take care of that little flock of sheep out there after we have appropriated as many years as we have.

Mr. ANDERSON. That item was very thoroughly discussed in the House. The estimate carried a request for buildings at that station amounting to $16,250. These items included a horse barn at a cost of $3,000; a winter headquarters, at some distance from the present headquarters, estimated to cost $1,750; an extension of the lambing sheds, at a cost of $3,500; storage reservoir and fire mains amounting to $3,000; and superintendent's residence amounting to $5,000. The committee was of the opinion that the department would be able to construct the necessary buildings within the limit of $8,000, and therefore allocated that amount to the appropriation.

Mr. HAUGEN. Does that include all the buildings enumerated?

Mr. ANDERSON. No; it includes less than one-half of the buildings proposed.

Mr. HAUGEN. Does it include the $5,000 residence?

Mr. ANDERSON. No. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Richmond, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 15943) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, had requested a conference with the House of Representatives on the bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. WADSWORTH, Mr. SUTHERLAND, Mr. NEW, Mr. FLETCHER, and Mr. MCKELLAR as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 5000. An act directing the Mississippi River Commission to make an examination and survey of the Atchafalaya, Red, and Black Rivers, and to report plan for protection of their basins from flood waters of the Mississippi River; and

S. 5032. An act for the construction of a bridge across Rock River at or near Shirland Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message in writing was received from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House of Representatives that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

On February 26, 1921:

H. R. 15836. An act to amend the transportation act, 1920.

On February 28, 1921:

H. J. Res. 215. Joint resolution authorizing the legal heirs of certain officers of the United States Coast Guard who lost their lives when the Coast Guard cutter Tampa was destroyed in Bristol Channel, September 26, 1918, to receive pay and allowances that would have accrued to said officers;

H. J. Res. 465. Joint resolution for the appointment of one member of the Board of Managers of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers;

H. R. 178. An act authorizing an exchange of lands by A. A. Bruce, of La Veta, Colo.;

H. R. 646. An act for the relief of Perry E. Borchers because of losses suffered, due to destruction of property and termination of contract for services because of smallpox while in the employ of the Navy Department in Cuba;

H. R. 8038. An act to amend section 4 of the act approved July 17, 1916, known as the Federal farm loan act, extending its provisions to Porto Rico;

H. R. 8647. An act for the relief of the owners of the American schooner William H. Sumner;

H. R. 8692. An act authorizing the exchange of lands within the Montezuma National Forest, in Colorado;

H. R. 9840. An act for the relief of Capt. E. V. Dickson;

H. R. 10598. An act for the relief of the First National Bank of Sharon, Pa.; and

H. R. 11841. An act to amend "An act granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital Service," approved February 15, 1893.

ADDITIONAL CONFEREES, ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will appoint as additional conferees on the Army appropriation bill the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLEMP] and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. DENT].

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 16, line 7, after the figures "$3,000," insert "one administrative assistant in seed and plant distribution, $3,000."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that this amendment be temporarily passed over along with amendment No. 12.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent temporarily that this amendment be passed over. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 17, line 17, strike out the figures "$498,500" and insert in lieu thereof "$501,500."

Mr. ANDERSON. On that amendment I make the same request, that it be passed over.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 26, line 1, strike out all of pages 26, 27, 28, down to and including line 15, as follows:

"Purchase and distribution of valuable seeds: For purchase, propagation, testing, and congressional distribution of valuable seeds, bulbs, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants; all necessary office fixtures and supplies, fuel, transportation, paper, twine, gum, postal cards, gas, electric current, rent outside of the District of Columbia, official traveling expenses, and all necessary material and repairs for putting up and distributing the same; for repairs and the employment of local and special agents, clerks, assistants, and other labor required, in the city of Washington and elsewhere, $360,000. And the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby directed to expend the said sum, as nearly as practicable, in the purchase, testing, and distribution of such valuable seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants, the best he can obtain at public or private sale, and such as shall be suitable for the respective localities to which the same are to be apportioned, and in which same are to be distributed as hereinafter stated, and such seeds so purchased shall include a variety of vegetable and flower seeds suitable for planting and culture in the various sections of the United States: Provided, That the Secretary of Agriculture, after due advertisement and on competitive bids, is authorized to award the contract for the supplying of printed packets and envelopes and the packeting, assembling, and mailing of the seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants, or any part thereof, for a period of not more than five years nor less than one year, if by such action he can best protect the interests of the United States. An equal proportion of five-sixths of all seeds, bulbs, shrubs, vines, cuttings, and plants shall, upon their request, after due notification by the Secretary of Agriculture that the allotment to their respective districts is ready for distribution, be supplied to Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress for distribution among their constituents, or mailed by the department upon the receipt of their addressed franks, in packages of such weight as the Secretary of Agriculture and the Postmaster General may jointly determine: Provided, however, That upon each envelope or wrapper containing packages of seeds the contents thereof shall be plainly indicated, and the Secretary shall not distribute to any Senator, Representative, or Delegate seeds entirely unfit for the climate and locality he represents, but shall distribute the same so that each Member may have seeds of equal value, as near as may be, and the best adapted to the locality he represents: Provided also, That the seeds allotted to Senators and Representatives for distribution in the districts embraced within the twenty-fifth and thirty-fourth parallels of latitude shall be ready for delivery not later than the 10th of January: Provided also, That any portion of the allotments to Senators, Representatives, and Delegates in Congress remaining uncalled for on the 1st day of April shall be distributed by the Secretary of Agriculture, giving preference to those persons whose names and addresses have been furnished by Senators and Representatives in Congress and who have not before during the same season been supplied by the department: And provided also, That the Secretary shall report, as provided in this act, the place, quantity, and price of seeds purchased, and the date of purchase; but nothing in this paragraph shall be construed to prevent the Secretary of Agriculture from sending seeds to those who apply for the same. And the amount herein appropriated shall not be diverted or used for any other purpose but for the purchase, testing, propagation, and distribution of valuable seeds, bulbs, mulberry and other rare and valuable trees, shrubs, vines, cutting, and plants.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY].

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LANGLEY. I am greatly pressed for time, but I will yield to my friend from Washington for a brief question.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I would like to ask the gentleman if the House of Representatives is about to start for the third time in one session with the great pumpkin-seed contest?

Mr. LANGLEY. When I am for a proposition as righteous as this, I do not care how many times it comes up. I want it to keep coming up until the right thing is done. I think the gentleman from Washington would be a very good man to join in the pumpkin-seed contest on the side of the farmer, and I really believe that the gentleman, whom I happen to know is the farmers' friend, is for it, too, and is just kidding.

Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist upon the provision contained in the House bill so that——

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that is not a proper motion as put by the gentleman.

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman interrupted me before I had finished my motion.

Mr. ANDERSON. I did not hear the gentleman's motion.

Mr. LANGLEY. In order that it may be pending, I move that the House insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment. Mr. Speaker, I shall not detain the House more than two or three minutes. I think this is a time when we farmers should all stick together. [Laughter.] I have always been grateful to the Supreme Ruler of the Universe for permitting me to be born and reared on a farm. I have heard gentlemen in the many years I have been here denounce this and that, sometimes seriously and sometimes camouflaging, usually the latter, for home consumption. [Laughter.] I have heard them rave against what they called the mileage graft, and yet when they were voted down they were there in the front line by the cashier's desk to draw the mileage or were jostling the fellows who were in front. [Laughter.] These gentlemen who are opposing this on the ground that it is graft are simply mistaken about it. I have noticed one thing, and that is that the gentlemen who are always opposing this congressional distribution of seed are the stingiest men in the House with their quotas when we go to them to beg or borrow some.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANGLEY. I will.

Mr. DYER. Will the gentleman state again what his motion is with reference to this?

Mr. LANGLEY. I move to insist on the disagreement to the Senate amendment.

Mr. DYER. Do I understand the conferees in the House and Senate have agreed to the Senate amendment?

Mr. LANGLEY. My understanding from the gentleman from Minnesota is that there is a disagreement and he wants a vote of the House on the question to guide him and his associates as to the action the House conferees shall take.

Mr. DYER. If the motion prevails, then we would still have a chance——

Mr. LANGLEY. For it to go back to conference; yes.

Mr. DYER. And we still have a chance——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The gentleman's statement should not mislead anybody in the House. The vote will come first on the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. LANGLEY. Exactly; that is what I was going to say. The vote comes on the motion to concur and, of course, I am quite sure the majority is going to vote no, and then the question will be on my motion to disagree and send it back to conference. That is my understanding of the parliamentary situation.

Mr. DYER. It comes first upon the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to concur, so that those who vote aye to concur would vote——

Mr. LANGLEY. Would vote against the farmer.

Mr. DYER. Vote against seeds.

Mr. LANGLEY. Exactly.

Mr. DYER. So we want to vote that motion down and then vote on the gentleman's proposition.

Mr. LANGLEY. Of course, and vote in favor of it.

Mr. McKENZIE. You would not be voting against the farmers who write to us protesting against this appropriation.

Mr. LANGLEY. I have not had any protests myself, and I doubt if anyone has had many, except from those who are interested in selling garden seeds.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes.

Mr. LAYTON. As a matter of fact, while the garden-seed distribution began as a farm proposition years and years ago, is it not true that to-day the free seeds are more useful, more beneficial to the people at large and are more popular in all of the large cities for our school children who are engaged in using these seeds in their little gardens than for the farmer who plants a thousand acres of wheat? That farmer does not want these seeds, but in my judgment the best proposition there is in this bill, the proposition which brings more return for the money invested than anything else in the bill, is the free distribution of these seeds to the children of the little towns and villages and cities. [Applause.]

Mr. LANGLEY. Quite true. I brought out substantially the same argument when the question was under debate in the House upon my motion to amend the committee's bill by inserting this seed item.

May I not add to this that I have gone to a number of gentlemen who are voting against this congressional seed distribution but failed to get any from them; and I know many of them who have gone and secured an extra allotment of garden seed. They say they need them all, although they are voting against them. You could not take a crowbar and prize a hundred packages of seed out of any one of their allotments, and still they are voting the other way. Such inconsistency passeth my understanding.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, may I ask the gentleman to speak a little louder?

Mr. LANGLEY. I am doing my best. The gentleman will observe that I am a bit hoarse.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. All we have been able to hear over here is the statement of the gentleman that he is a farmer. [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes; I am a farmer, and I think my appearance shows it about as much as does that of the gentleman from Virginia. I want to say to my Republican colleagues, at the risk of losing the votes of some of my Democratic farmer friends on this question, that in my judgment you could not strike a greater blow to the Republican Party, especially in the farming and mountain sections of the Appalachian Range, than to let it go out to the public that a Republican Congress has abandoned the practice of more than 50 years of sending these garden seeds out to the farmers.

We have been scattering money by the millions, like waste paper, and yet when we ask for a few thousand dollars of appropriation to send out these vegetable and flower seeds to the people of the country, gentlemen object to it upon the ground of economy. Why do not they object to these flower contests and chrysanthemum exhibits, and things of that sort, and the sending of cut flowers to homes of high Government officials, all at Government expense, instead of sending a few cents' worth of useful seeds to the farmers up the creeks and hollows, as well as out on the plains?

Mr. BROOKS of Pennsylvania. Does the gentleman not think a great deal of the objection of Members is due to the fact that they want to save a little work in distributing these seeds?

Mr. LANGLEY. I think that is not the case. This is a bad time in the history of our country for the people generally to get the impression that some Member of Congress or his secretary wants to avoid the trouble of addressing a few thousand packages of garden seed. I have done it myself. I have sat up until midnight many a night doing that sort of work since I have been in Congress.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. I desire to get a little information about the parliamentary situation.

Mr. LANGLEY. I suggest that the gentleman had better ask the Speaker about that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, if I understand the way the situation now is, those who desire to retain garden seeds will vote against the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] to concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes; I have already made that quite clear, I think.

Mr. BARKLEY. And if that motion is defeated, then the gentleman from Kentucky has moved that the House further insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment, and the vote will come upon that.

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Has the gentleman any assurance, or does he know as to how the gentleman from Minnesota will view the vote against his motion to concur? Will he regard that as tantamount to instructions on the part of the House to the conferees on the part of the House?

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman from Minnesota is a very eminent Member of the House, and I think he will construe such a vote as any other Member of the House would construe it, as an instruction to him to insist on the House provision. Will the gentleman from Minnesota yield me five minutes more?

Mr. ANDERSON. Has the gentleman's time expired?

Mr. LANGLEY. Yes.

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. STEVENSON].

Mr. STEVENSON. Mr. Speaker, I have never taken any part in this seed controversy, but a good deal has been said about the waste of money in the distribution of seed. I represent an agricultural district. I have a number of very large cotton mills in my district, and probably 10,000 people in my district are engaged as laborers in those cotton mills. The mills desire the seeds to distribute among those people. The mill people are furnished with a house, with a flower garden, with a vegetable garden, and I find a great demand from these mill people to have the seeds with which to plant their vegetable gardens. It is not merely a matter of farm operation but it is a matter of encouraging the people who work from 8 to 10 hours a day in the cotton mills to have both vegetable and flower gardens from which they acquire not only their vegetables for their own use, but also the pleasure and beauty of flowers in their front yards. [Applause.] I have a tremendous demand for that kind of thing, and I plead here for the operatives in the mills as well as the farming people. Gentlemen talk about the farmers not wanting them. My mail for the last four to six weeks has carried an average of 50 requests a day from women on the farms in my district for garden seeds, and many of them for both flower and garden seeds. I hope the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota will not prevail.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG].

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Speaker, there has been more time consumed in this body discussing the seed proposition than a great many questions of importance. There have been all kinds of arguments offered why the seeds ought to be furnished free. I want to ask Members of this House a direct question. By what principle do you bring yourselves to believe that you ought to furnish free seeds to everybody rather than free anything else? On what right, on what governmental doctrine, do you base your claim that you should send free seeds out and not send a package of free nails or free clothing or utensils of any kind?

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I will answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. BEGG. I will say to the gentleman that he will have plenty of time to answer it in his own time. So far as free seeds are concerned, when you say it is for the farmers, it is a hoax, pure and simple. The seeds are not governmentally tested as pure seeds. It is a fake to say that they are sent out for test purposes, because no test or report is required.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. Not a single bit of advancement ever came from the sending out of governmental free seeds to either the Department of Agriculture or agriculture generally in this country. The production of this country has not been increased one dollar by sending out these free seeds.

Mr. LAYTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. I want to say, for one, that there is not any excuse nor any reason for sending these seeds to the cities.

The gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. STEVENSON] made a great plea for the laboring men. They can go to a 5 and 10 cent store and buy as many as we would send them for 10 cents. He makes a great plea that it will give them something to do in the evening. Bless you, if you save them this 10 cents, it will only mean one more picture show. It is the principle of the thing that I object to. It is socialistic, pure and simple. You will recall the corn laws in Rome. When a man got something for nothing, of course he was for it. It comes easy, apparently. You who are for this proposition are complaining about governmental extravagance and want to reduce the taxes.

Mr. LAYTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BEGG. I will not yield to the gentleman.

Every proposition before this House that calls for an appropriation is voted on with the idea that it is for the Republican Party. The gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] says that the Republican Party can not strike a worse blow at the mountain States than to cut off free seed. Well, all I have to say about that is that the Republican Party will stay in power longer if it stops some of these things that are taking money out of the Treasury, rather than to follow in the footsteps of the party that is just going out of power.

Mr. LANGLEY. Does not the gentleman know that this has been in vogue for more than 50 years?

Mr. BEGG. The gentleman knows that all right.

There is another thing. By what manner or process of reasoning do we bring ourselves to say that we will appropriate for enough seeds for every fourth family? I say that if the seed proposition is a good thing and it ought to be done, there should be mailed a package of seed to every voter in the United States.

Mr. LAYTON. That is not reasonable.

Mr. BEGG. The gentleman says that is not reasonable. If it is not reasonable, you have no right to appropriate money that comes out of the taxpayers' pocket to give something to a preferred class.

Mr. LAYTON. Let me show you something——

Mr. BEGG. I told the gentleman I did not have time to yield.

Mr. LAYTON. We send doctors out to cure hog cholera.

Mr. BEGG. I think this matter ought to have serious consideration. In another decade, if we continue to go on as we have been doing, it will not only be free seeds but it will be free medicine.

Mr. LAYTON. It is now.

Mr. BEGG. And it will be free everything else.

Mr. LAYTON. It is getting so now.

Mr. BEGG. And the individual will not be called upon to act on his own initiative for anything that he needs.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK]. [Applause.]

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I have not any recollection that I have ever spoken upon this proposition. It is possible that on one occasion I did make a remark or two about it. I am in favor of this appropriation, because I believe that it is educational, and that it is not a question of giving somebody something. The people in my district are not asking the Government of the United States to give them anything. We are able to take care of ourselves. We are able to buy garden seeds. But the minute it goes out to the people of this country that Congress has ceased this distribution, you will see the Seed Trust put seed beyond the reach of the ordinary man. [Applause.]

It is regarded by some Members of Congress as undignified and unstatesmanlike to support the seed proposition; yet the only means by which those gentlemen, some of them, can perpetuate the memory of the fact that they have ever been in Congress is by the placing of their names on a package of vegetable seeds. Some of these gentlemen, as I say, seem to think that it is the highest mark of statesmanship to take this floor and oppose vegetable seeds and things of that character. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG], a minute or two ago, in lecturing his side of the House on economy, said they ought to stop a lot of these things that would not perpetuate themselves. Let me tell you: If you give the people of this country these seeds for the benefit of the school children of the country and educate them along agricultural lines, you will do better in the expenditure of money than you will by keeping these contested-election cases off until the last days of the session and giving both Members of Congress the salary and the perquisites for the entire two years. Why do you not try these cases within 30 or 60 days and wind them up, and give the seeds to the men who are entitled to them, and not take them away from the school children of the land? [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER].

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to take the time of the House except to answer a statement made by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG]. He said that there is no earthly excuse for sending the seeds to the cities. I represent in this House a city district, and the requests which I have for seeds—flower and vegetable—have been ever since I have been here, for over 10 years, more than the quota that is allowed me. We have requests not only from people who want flower gardens but from some who do not even have the space in which to put them, except to plant some of them in a box, for instance, in a portion of the district where they have no yards. The institutions such as the hospitals, the homes for orphans, the homes for the aged, and the schools, all ask for and are anxious to obtain them, and they make the most valuable use of them. I think it would be unjust to deprive the little children of the public schools, who take a great interest in having these gardens in the schools. If the seeds did not come from the Government, they would not ordinarily plant any. And so in these institutions the flower seeds and the garden seeds have done a great deal of good and help out. To deprive them of this, which they have had for so many years, looks to me, and will look to them, as though the Government does not appreciate the opportunity of reaching the people directly with a little proposition of this kind. I doubt that some Members are so lazy as not to want to send out these seeds, or do not want to pay for clerk hire to do it. I do not think that is true; but I think that some of them, who have been here only a little while, do not understand the situation when they make these charges. But if they do stay here and understand the situation and the needs, there will be no denial of this seed distribution. The city people want them, the people of my district want them, and I hope the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to recede and concur will not be agreed to. Vote "no" on that, and then we will vote on the proposition of the gentleman from Kentucky.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN].

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I earnestly hope that the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] to recede and concur will prevail. This is the annual fight that has been before the Congress for many years. When this provision came before the House recently, by extraordinary effort there was a mere majority of seven votes cast in favor of putting in the seed provision. The Senate has again wisely striken out the item.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] stated a number of facts pertinent to this situation. Very few people in agricultural districts, where we would suppose that people would be interested in this proposition, are in favor of it. The district I represent is wholly an agricultural district, and I have received more protests against this seed appropriation and more requests for its discontinuation than upon any other subject of legislation that has been before the Congress.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Nebraska. I can not yield in three minutes. The gentleman had his time.

The gentleman from Florida [Mr. CLARK] stated that this was the only practice that made it possible for some gentlemen's names to be remembered as having been in Congress. If that is true, I think it would be better if they were entirely forgotten.

Gentlemen speak of sending these seeds to schools. Yes; I have been sending them to school superintendents, to city and county superintendents of schools, and principals of schools. I did it this year, and they came back to me with a protest to stop it, because they said, "You are not sending us enough seeds to go to every family," and when we give them to only one family out of four or five they say it is not a fair practice and that we should not send any.

Mr. LANGLEY. That is the reason why the appropriation has been increased 50 per cent in the amendment, to give enough to go around.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN of Nebraska. But the regrettable thing connected with this proposition is that gentlemen do not say what is really in their minds when they discuss this subject. They believe it will help them politically. [Laughter.] One of my colleagues came to me last year and asked me to give him a part of my quota of seeds, stating that the fight in his district was so close that he needed every possible help, and that if he did not send out sufficient garden seeds he would be defeated. [Laughter.] That is the reason why gentlemen stick to this old, worn-out practice and vote this needless appropriation upon the people of the country. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. UPSHAW].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. UPSHAW. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, most of us, perhaps all of us, who are in favor of continuing the garden and farm seed distribution are willing to confess that our offices would be relieved of a good deal of work if the distribution were discontinued. But we are willing to work, and I think the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. MCLAUGHLIN], who has just taken his seat, will agree that we ought to be willing to work if it will increase the patriotism and the production of the people who elected us. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BEGG] has inveighed against the matter of giving away things free. Listen. We furnish through the Agricultural Department free medicine for sick pigs and free medicine for sick calves and cows and colts and what not. Yes; and free fish for ponds and streams. We furnish free treatment for the ailments of corn and wheat and cotton and tobacco; and if that is "socialism" and "paternalism," as he styles it, for us to vote for this encouragement of the youth of our land, then everything that this Government does for the building of good roads and the encouragement of education and agricultural production might come under the ban of the same indictment. [Applause.]

I want to say to you that more of these letters come to me from the city than from the country, bringing a touch of the refreshing country into the crowded city life, and those letters are an inspiration. I love to think of the industrious boys and girls, to say nothing about the older ones, in the humble homes of the city, and likewise in rural life, who are thus tied on to the flag of their country by this practical investment in their earnest efforts to have beautiful homes and fruitful gardens. [Applause.]

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not think this proposal is entirely without merit. I am willing to concede that the congressional seed distribution has some educational as well as political value. This amendment, however, carries $121,000 more than was ever carried before for this distribution.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not yield.

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman is inaccurate in his statement.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman from Kentucky suggests that that statement is inaccurate. At least it carries $121,000 more than was carried last year. We owe something, it seems to me, to ourselves, and to the country in this matter. Now, when we are chopping off a thousand dollars here and a few millions there from necessary investigational and control work in order to exercise the highest degree of economy in these days when people are protesting against taxation, it seems to me we can well afford to forego what little political advantage or what little educational advantage there may be in this appropriation. The Senate was very insistent that this appropriation should go out. There was a vote in the Senate in which I think the Senate amendment was agreed to without a dissenting vote; and I want to say to gentlemen of the House that if this amendment goes back into conference of course the House conferees will be obliged to stand for the position of the House, and we may find ourselves in great difficulty in securing an agricultural appropriation bill at all. I hope the motion that I have made will be agreed to.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DYER. I desire to submit a privileged request. I ask for a division of the motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. DYER] demands that the motion to recede and concur be divided. As many as are in favor of receding will say "aye."

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. A division, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. ANDERSON. I ask for a division.

The SPEAKER. A division is demanded. As many as are in favor of receding will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] On this vote the ayes are 67 and the noes are 114.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. ANDERSON. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. On the motion to recede?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point of no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] There is clearly a quorum present. The gentleman from Minnesota demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Forty-two Members rising, not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit a request for unanimous consent.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. DYER. If we are going to have the yeas and nays——

SEVERAL MEMBERS. We are not.

The SPEAKER. The yeas and nays have been refused.

Mr. LANGLEY. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LANGLEY. What was the result of the vote on the motion to recede?

The SPEAKER. The noes had it.

Mr. LANGLEY. Now, Mr. Speaker, did the Chair recognize my motion a while ago to insist?

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman.

Mr. LANGLEY. I move to insist on the disagreement of the House to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky moves that the House further insist on its disagreement.

Mr. ANDERSON. I make a preferential motion that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment striking out $360,000 and inserting $250,000.

Mr. LANGLEY. That is not enough.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota makes a preferential motion, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. LANGLEY. Would it be in order now to move to amend that amendment? If so, I desire to move to amend.

Mr. ANDERSON. I move the previous question on the motion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota makes a motion on which he demands the previous question. The Clerk will report the gentleman's motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON moves to recede from the Senate amendment and concur therein with an amendment striking out $360,000 and inserting in lieu thereof $250,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I make a point of order against the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois will state his point of order.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I am not sure about the facts. I understand the gentleman from Minnesota moved to recede and concur, and that the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] while that motion was pending moved that the House further insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment, and that the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] moved the previous question. If that be the fact, it is too late to move another motion until these motions have been disposed of.

Mr. ANDERSON. The question now is on the motion to concur with an amendment.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Of course, if the House has receded; but I thought the vote was that the House would not recede.

The SPEAKER. The House refused to recede.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Then the motion to amend is not in order. The question now is on the motion to further insist upon the disagreement. The motion is pending, and upon that the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that is correct. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] that the House further insist.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. DYER. Division!

Mr. LANGLEY. Let us have the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. LANGLEY] that the House further insist.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 198, nays 134, answered "present" 1, not voting 95, as follows:

YEAS—198.

Almon	Dyer	Keller	O'Connell
Aswell	Echols	Kendall	O'Connor
Ayres	Evans, Mont.	Kiess	Oldfield
Bacharach	Farr	Kincheloe	Oliver
Bankhead	Ferris	King	Olney
Barkley	Fields	Kreider	Osborne
Bee	Fish	Lampert	Overstreet
Benham	Fisher	Langley	Padgett
Black	Fordney	Lanham	Park
Bland, Ind.	Fuller	Lankford	Parker
Boies	Gallagher	Larsen	Patterson
Bowers	Gallivan	Layton	Porter
Bowling	Ganly	Lazaro	Pou
Briggs	Gard	Lea, Calif.	Quin
Brooks, Ill.	Garrett	Lee, Ga.	Raker
Brooks, Pa.	Goodykoontz	Lehlbach	Ramsey
Burke	Greene, Mass.	Little	Randall, Calif.
Byrns, Tenn.	Griest	Longworth	Ransley
Campbell, Pa.	Griffin	McClintic	Reed, W. Va.
Candler	Hardy, Colo.	McDuffie	Rhodes
Cantrill	Hardy, Tex.	McKeown	Ricketts
Caraway	Hastings	McKinley	Riddick
Carew	Hawley	Major	Robinson, N. C.
Carss	Hays	Mann, Ill.	Robsion, Ky.
Carter	Hernandez	Martin	Romjue
Clark, Fla.	Hickey	Mason	Rouse
Cleary	Hill	Mays	Rucker
Copley	Hoey	Mead	Sabath
Crago	Holland	Miller	Sanders, Ind.
Crisp	Houghton	Milligan	Sanders, N. Y.
Crowther	Howard	Minahan, N. J.	Schall
Cullen	Huddleston	Moores, Ind.	Sells
Davey	Hudspeth	Mott	Siegel
Davis, Minn.	Hull, Iowa	Mudd	Sims
Davis, Tenn.	Humphreys	Murphy	Sinclair
Denison	Igoe	Nelson, Mo.	Sisson
Dewalt	Jacoway	Nelson, Wis.	Slemp
Dickinson, Mo.	James, Va.	Newton, Minn.	Smith, Idaho
Drane	Jefferis	Newton, Mo.	Smith, Ill.
Drewry	Johnson, Ky.	Nicholls	Smithwick
Dupré	Johnson, Miss.	Nolan	Steagall
Stedman	Thompson	Vinson	Wood, Ind.
Stephens, Ohio	Tillman	Voigt	Woods, Va.
Stevenson	Timberlake	Volk	Woodyard
Stoll	Tincher	Weaver	Wright
Sweet	Tinkham	Welty	Young, N. Dak.
Swope	Upshaw	Whaley	Young, Tex.
Tague	Valle	White, Kans.	Zihlman
Taylor, Ark.	Venable	Wilson, La.
Taylor, Colo.	Vestal	Wilson, Pa.

NAYS—134.

Ackerman	Dunn	Knutson	Reed, N. Y.
Anderson	Elliott	Kraus	Rogers
Andrews, Nebr.	Elston	Linthicum	Rose
Anthony	Esch	Luce	Sanford
Ashbrook	Evans, Nebr.	Lufkin	Scott
Babka	Evans, Nev.	Luhring	Sherwood
Barbour	Fairfield	McAndrews	Shreve
Begg	Fess	McArthur	Sinnott
Bland, Mo.	Frear	McKenzie	Smith, Mich.
Bland, Va.	French	McLaughlin, Mich.	Snell
Blanton	Godwin, N. C.	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Snyder
Box	Gould	McLeod	Stiness
Brand	Graham, Ill.	McPherson	Strong, Kans.
Britten	Green, Iowa	Madden	Strong, Pa.
Browne	Greene, Vt.	Mansfield	Summers, Wash.
Buchanan	Hayden	Mapes	Sumners, Tex.
Burdick	Hersey	Michener	Swindall
Burroughs	Hersman	Mondell	Temple
Butler	Hicks	Montague	Tilson
Byrnes, S. C.	Hoch	Moore, Ohio	Towner
Campbell, Kans.	Hulings	Moore, Va.	Treadway
Cannon	Husted	Ogden	Volstead
Chindblom	Hutchinson	Paige	Walters
Christopherson	Ireland	Parrish	Ward
Coady	Johnson, S. Dak.	Pell	Wason
Cooper	Johnson, Wash.	Perlman	Watson
Cramton	Jones, Pa.	Peters	Webster
Currie, Mich.	Jones, Tex.	Purnell	Welling
Dallinger	Kearns	Radcliffe	Wheeler
Darrow	Kelley, Mich.	Ramseyer	White, Me.
Dempsey	Kelly, Pa.	Randall, Wis.	Winslow
Dickinson, Iowa	Kennedy, R. I.	Rayburn	Yates
Dowell	Kinkaid	Reavis
Dunbar	Kleczka	Reber

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Haugen

NOT VOTING—95.

Andrews, Md.	Edmonds	Kahn	Riordan
Baer	Ellsworth	Kennedy, Iowa	Rodenberg
Bell	Emerson	Kettner	Rowan
Benson	Flood	Kitchin	Rowe
Brinson	Focht	Lesher	Rubey
Brumbaugh	Foster	Lonergan	Sanders, La.
Caldwell	Freeman	McCulloch	Scully
Casey	Gandy	McFadden	Sears
Clark, Mo.	Garner	McGlennon	Small
Classon	Glynn	McKinley	Smith, N. Y.
Cole	Goldfogle	MacGregor	Steele
Collier	Good	Magee	Steenerson
Connally	Goodall	Maher	Stephens, Miss.
Costello	Goodwin, Ark.	Mann, S. C.	Sullivan
Curry, Calif.	Graham, Pa.	Merritt	Taylor, Tenn.
Dale	Hadley	Monahan, Wis.	Thomas
Dent	Hamill	Moon	Vare
Dominick	Hamilton	Mooney	Walsh
Donovan	Harreld	Morin	Watkins
Dooling	Harrison	Neely	Williams
Doremus	Hull, Tenn.	Phelan	Wilson, Ill.
Doughton	James, Mich.	Rainey, Ala.	Wingo
Eagan	Johnston, N. Y.	Rainey, Henry T.	Wise
Eagle	Juul	Rainey, John W.

So the motion was agreed to.

The following pairs were announced until further notice:

Mr. ANDREWS of Maryland with Mr. BENSON.

Mr. KAHN with Mr. DENT.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. KENNEDY of Iowa with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.

Mr. ELLSWORTH with Mr. KITCHIN.

Mr. JAMES of Michigan with Mr. SULLIVAN.

Mr. CURRY of California with Mr. GARNER.

Mr. WILSON of Illinois with Mr. JOHN W. RAINEY.

Mr. CLASSON with Mr. GOLDFOGLE.

Mr. FOCHT with Mr. BELL.

Mr. WALSH with Mr. CONNALLY.

Mr. HAUGEN with Mr. SMALL.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. WINGO.

Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. EDMONDS with Mr. DOUGHTON.

Mr. GLYNN with Mr. DOMINICK.

Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. GOOD with Mr. FLOOD.

Mr. FOSTER with Mr. BRINSON.

Mr. HARRELD with Mr. COLLIER.

Mr. MCCULLOCH with Mr. SMITH of New York.

Mr. VARE with Mr. MOON.

Mr. MONAHAN of Wisconsin with Mr. WATKINS.

Mr. STEENERSON with Mr. NEELY.

Mr. JUUL with Mr. MCKINLEY.

Mr. TAYLOR of Tennessee with Mr. ROWAN.

Mr. COSTELLO with Mr. WISE.

Mr. MACGREGOR with Mr. RIORDAN.

Mr. ROWE with Mr. LESHER.
Mr. GOODALL with Mr. EAGAN.
Mr. HADLEY with Mr. HULL of Tennessee.
Mr. EMERSON with Mr. MAHER.
Mr. BAER with Mr. GANDY.
Mr. DALE with Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi.
Mr. MORIN with Mr. HARRISON.
Mr. COLE with Mr. PHELAN.
Mr. MERRITT with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.
Mr. SEARS (for) with Mr. MAGEE (against).

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. LANGLEY, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 32: Page 28, line 24, strike out the figures "$2,568,770" and insert "$2,394,235."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 33: Page 29, line 1, strike out "$3,067,270" and insert "$2,895,735."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 40:
"And provided also, That the grazing fees payable under existing law for the use of national forests during the calendar year 1921 may be paid, at the option of the holder of a permit, in two equal installments, the first half of said fees on the 1st day of August, 1921, and the remaining half on the 1st day of October, 1921, and in the event such payments are not made on or before such deferred dates, penalties shall be thereafter imposed in accordance with the provisions of existing law."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment 40 and concur in the same with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said Senate amendment insert: "And provided also, That the grazing fees payable under existing law for the use of the national forests during the calendar year 1921, may be paid on the 1st day of September, 1921, and in the event such payment is not made on or before such deferred date, penalties shall be hereafter imposed in accordance with the provisions of existing law."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, under the existing law and the regulations of the Department of Agriculture, grazing fees on the national forests are required to be paid in advance. Everyone is familiar with the situation in the stock-growing sections of the country; that has been discussed a great many times on the floor in connection with the tariff bill and other legislation, and I do not need to discuss that. The amendment of the Senate provides that the grazing fees, instead of being paid in advance this year, may be paid in two equal installments, one on the 1st of August and the second on the 1st of October, 1921. There seems to be no necessity for providing that payments shall be made in two installments. That would practically double the work in collecting the grazing fees. Those primarily interested in the matter said that it would be entirely satisfactory if one payment was required, and that payment deferred until the 1st of September. I have offered this amendment to the Senate amendment with a view of concurring in what I understand was the view of those who originally offered it.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Does this meet with the approval of the Forestry Service?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes; I understand so. The Forestry Service made no objection and agreed that it might be made in one payment.

Mr. GARD. This only applies for the current year.

Mr. ANDERSON. Only for the current year. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The motion is to recede and concur with the amendment which has been reported.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 46: For the investigation and development of methods for the prevention of grain-dust, smut-dust, and other plant-dust explosions and resulting fires, including fires in cotton gins and cotton-oil mills, $25,000.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendment. I should like to say in this connection that the estimate for this work has been made by the Department of Agriculture for the last three or four years. The Grain Corporation considered this work of such value in its conservation of grain in the elevators as well as in the stack that it made an allotment out of its funds of $250,000 for the purpose of investigating these explosions and fires. The department has developed a means of preventing fires resulting from static electricity that is generated in threshing machines. It is thought that the same thing is possible in connection with cotton gins, cement mills, starch mills, and flour mills where large amounts of dust collect in the process of manufacture. If that is possible, this appropriation will make possible a saving of very large losses through dust explosions.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the gentleman's motion to recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 48: In all, for general expenses, $973,061.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment and agree to the same with an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lieu of the sum mentioned insert "$969,561."

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 49: Total for Bureau of Chemistry, $1,303,751.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves to recede and concur with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,300,251."

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recede and concur with an amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 78: Page 59, line 22, insert after the figures "$3,000" "one chief cinematographer, $1,800."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 79: Page 59, line 25, strike out "assistant in the document section, $1,800."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 80: Page 60, line 17, strike out "$252,180" and insert "$254,880."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 82: Page 61, line 24, strike out "$380,110" and insert "$282,110."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House insist upon its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 89: Page 70, line 17, insert: "For investigations of the chemical and physical character of road materials, for conducting laboratory and field experiments, and for studies and investigations in road design, independently or in cooperation with the State highway departments and other agencies, $148,200, payable out of the administrative fund provided by the Federal aid road act of July 11, 1916, as amended."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur. I would like to say in respect to this amendment that this is an item which has been carried in the bill for several years. It was carried in the bill as it was reported by the House committee, but went out on a point of order. It is the item under which the basic investigational and experimental work which lies at the foundation of all road construction in the United States is done. There is this difference between this amendment and the language heretofore carried: This amendment provides that the sum carried in the item shall be paid out of the funds for administrative expenses of the public roads appropriations, whereas heretofore we have made a direct appropriation. It does not increase the total of the bill. There is a balance of about $5,000,000 in the administrative fund, which is ample to carry on the administration of the act, and includes this item.

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. FESS. I understood the gentleman to say that this item has been carried from year to year?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Is the gentleman satisfied that the expenditure of the money is justified?

Mr. ANDERSON. We expect to spend next year something over $400,000,000 in the construction of roads. It seems to me that $148,000 is a very small sum to be spent on basic experimental work which determines the character of the specifications upon which the roads are constructed.

Mr. FESS. Where is this experimental work carried on?

Mr. ANDERSON. Part of it is done in Washington on the Arlington farm and part of it in the field.

Mr. FESS. I agree with the gentleman that there is not any line of work that requires greater care and better material for road building, especially when we are entering upon such a Federal campaign. I have wondered whether we are getting specific results out of this expenditure for experimentation.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think we are getting very satisfactory results, considering the status of road-building knowledge when this work commenced.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Is the amount, $148,200, based on the present facilities for this work, or is it in excess of the present facilities with a view of enlargement?

Mr. ANDERSON. The appropriation carried last year was about one-half of the appropriation carried this year. The gentleman will bear in mind that road construction will be very much larger this year than it has been heretofore, and that this matter of experimentation and investigation in the art of road building is a progressive one.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. I have no objection to the appropriation. I simply wanted to know whether it is based on the existing facilities or whether it provides for an increase in those facilities.

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not know what the gentleman has in mind when he speaks of existing facilities.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. They have been doing this work?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Is it estimated that this amount would carry on the present work, or will it provide for some increase in the present work?

Mr. ANDERSON. It will enlarge the present work.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota to recede and concur.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 91: Page 72, line 16, insert:

"For supervising the preparation, distribution, and use of picric acid, trinitrotoluol, trojan powder, and such other surplus war explosives as may be made available for use in clearing stumps and stones from agricultural land, independently or in cooperation with agricultural colleges and other agencies, and for investigating and reporting upon the results obtained from the use of the explosives, $15,000."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in this amendment. This provision was also carried in the House bill, but went out on a point of order. The facts about it are as follows: The War Department has some 12,000,000 pounds of picric acid and other explosives which are suitable for blasting operations on the farms in the North and the Northwest. This picric acid and the other explosives carried in this item, unlike T. N. T., deteriorate in storage. If this amendment is not agreed to and if we are not able to use this for the purposes contemplated, it will have to be transported from Sparta, Wis., where most of it now is, to Fort Wingate, in New Mexico, where in all probability it will deteriorate and become worthless. This is a measure of conservation on the one side and a measure which will be of great advantage to the settlers in the pioneer parts of the country on the other.

Mr. BRIGGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. BRIGGS. How is this disposed of to those who are interested—at the cost to the Government?

Mr. ANDERSON. It is disposed of at cost of cartridging, with the addition of the transportation charges.

Mr. SINNOTT. Is this language broad enough to permit the use of explosives for the purpose of breaking up hardpan?

Mr. ANDERSON. In connection with agricultural operations?

Mr. SINNOTT. Yes.

Mr. ANDERSON. I should think so.

Mr. HAWLEY. Is the gentleman sure about that?

Mr. ANDERSON. I supposed that hardpan was stone. Of course, I know technically that it is not.

Mr. HAWLEY. In some places in the fruit-growing sections of the country for instance an indurated layer is found underneath the surface soil and is called hardpan. The roots of the trees can not readily penetrate it. A charge of explosive is placed in this layer and a hole blown in it. In that they plant the trees, so that the feeding roots can go down through the hardpan to the water and subsistence below. The gentleman believes that these explosives could be used for such work?

Mr. ANDERSON. Well, that was not in contemplation when this amendment was originally drafted but I do not imagine any objection will be made for using it for that purpose. There is plenty of it for everybody.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman to recede and concur.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 92: Page 72, line 23, strike out the figures "$329,500" and insert in lieu thereof "$365,060."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON moves to recede and concur with the following amendment: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$354,060."

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 93: Page 72, line 24, strike out the figures "$443,960" and insert in lieu thereof "$479,520."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$468,520."

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 71, line 12, insert: "That hereafter the powers conferred and the duties imposed by law on the Bureau of Statistics and the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the Department of Agriculture shall be exercised and performed by the Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur. This is language carrying out the consolidation of the Bureau of Markets and the Bureau of Crop Estimates as carried under the present bill.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 75, line 26, after the figures "$138,831," insert: "Provided, That any moneys received from or in connection with the sale of cotton purchased for the preparation of practical forms of the official cotton standards and condemned as unsuitable for such use may be expended by the Secretary of Agriculture during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, for the purchase of other cotton for such use."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 79, line 10, after the figures "$15,000," insert "and to continue, as far as practicable, the distribution among the growers of the wool clip of 1918 of all sums heretofore or hereafter collected or recovered with or without suit by the Government from all persons, firms, or corporations which handled any part of the wool clip of 1918, which said regulations are hereby legalized, ratified, and confirmed as fully to all intents and purposes as if the same had by prior act of Congress been specifically authorized and directed."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON moves to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with the following amendment. Of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the following: "which said regulations are hereby legalized, ratified, and confirmed as fully to all intents and purposes as if the same had by prior of Congress been specifically authorized and directed."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, during the war all purchases of wool were taken over by the Government. As a part of the regulations incident to the Government controlling the purchases of wool it was provided that the profits of those engaged in the purchase of wool under the Government regulations should not exceed a certain amount either per pound or upon the value of the wool. There were quite a large number of instances in which the profits of those buying the wool were in excess of the amounts allowed by the regulations. The Department of Agriculture succeeded the domestic wool section of the War Industries Board in the work of collecting back from those purchasers of wool the amount of profits which they made in excess of what they were allowed under the regulations. The amount so collected is prorated among the farmers from whom the wool was purchased. The Senate amendment undertook not only to provide for the continuance of this work but to legalize the regulations under which the profits were determined.

The House committee felt that whatever rights the Government had and whatever rights the private individuals had under these regulations were determined by the regulations themselves and that the Congress would be entirely outside of its province in undertaking to establish a different liability than the regulations themselves established. Therefore the House committee agreed to the amendment tentatively with an amendment striking out the provision which provided that legalization.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Was not the Senate theory this, that without this particular provision which the gentleman proposes to strike out there might not be sufficient basis for suits that ought to be brought and should be maintained, the thought being that probably injustice has been done to the woolgrowers, but if they should litigate without such provision as the Senate has incorporated the defense might be based upon an assertion of the invalidity of the regulations?

Mr. ANDERSON. Well, it does not seem to me that the Congress can by such a provision as this legalize regulations which they had not authority to make and under which both private parties and the Government got whatever rights they now assert. That would be in the nature of an ex post facto law.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. An ex post facto law applies to criminal matters. If there should be a question as to the regulations, would not the provision the gentleman designs to strike out prove a helpful provision? It could do no harm to retain the language which the Senate incorporated as it seems to me.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think the House conferees ought not to agree to a provision of that sort. I think the House ought not to agree to it. It is a proposition which involves a very close question of law, and very close questions of law can not be very well considered in a conference upon an Agricultural bill.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I suppose the gentleman takes the view, as certainly I do, that if a regulation is invalid people have a right to treat it as invalid. It ought not to be made law now—two years later.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Let me say that as a result of a conference in which I participated some time ago with some of the officials of the Agricultural Department there is reason to believe that the regulations were supposed to be valid and by everybody were assumed to be a proper basis of action. Those regulations were adopted in good faith. They were not contested or doubted at the time they were made. Now, litigation may occur, and any question as to the validity of the regulations may be removed by the provision of the Senate amendment that is under discussion here.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I suppose we could provide the law should take effect 10 years ago, an ex post facto law relating to a criminal matter. But is it fair?

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I think in this case it is entirely fair, because of the moral question involved. So far as I have been able to ascertain, there was no sort of doubt expressed at the time of the transaction that the regulations were all right and ought to be adhered to, but some dealers have raised a doubt in order to escape the payment they are supposed to be liable for.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think it would be very unfortunate to say to any department of the Government, "You go ahead and make illegal regulations under authority to make legal regulations, and then have Congress, after the transaction is completed, legalize the regulations." If we commence it, we will be asked to do it very frequently.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Some woolgrowers have been put in a very helpless condition. This amendment might assist them in collecting what is due them, and I am in favor of retaining it, but I do not make any particular point of it.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I hope the departments will make legal regulations, and I hope in this case they have.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Sometimes, I may say to my friend, it is doubtful when we act here whether we do or do not do the legal thing. I find that the Supreme Court divides on very important questions, having great doubt.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. For that reason the gentleman does not assume, however, to follow the opinion of the minority of the court? You would not ask Congress to provide that the minority of the court laid down the law and not the majority?

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Quite frequently Congress has done that.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Not to my knowledge.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following amendment:

Amendment 112. Page 83, line 18, insert: "Field station, Woodward, Okla.: For the establishment in connection with the Woodward (Okla.) field station of a live-stock department, through which experiments and demonstrations in live-stock breeding, growing, and feeding, including both beef and dairy animals, may be made, $10,000, of which sum the Secretary is hereby authorized to use not exceeding $3,000 for the purpose of building additional sheds, stalls, and pens for the protection and care of said animals."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

This proposition was carried in last year's bill, with the exception of the provision which permits $3,000 to be spent for the purpose of building additional sheds, stalls, pens, and so forth. In the absence of provisions authorizing the construction of buildings, the department was unable to carry on the work, with the result that the sum carried in last year's bill will go back into the Treasury. This provision carries out what it is understood was the intention of the Senate last year.

Mr. SNELL. Is this the same proposition as the other? It does not increase the appropriation for the sheep sheds?

Mr. ANDERSON. It does not increase the appropriation.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Just what is meant by the establishment of a "live-stock department"?

Mr. ANDERSON. There is a station now at Woodward, Okla., a dry-land station, where they are carrying on experiments connected with the growth of plant life. They desire to have, as I understand it, in addition, a department for the study of questions relating to live-stock production. And this provides for the additional work.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I think they have chosen a very poor name for it, by calling it a "department."

Mr. ANDERSON. I have no difficulty in agreeing with the gentleman upon that. We can not very well correct it now.

Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The Clerk read the following amendment:

Amendment 114. Page 88, line 15, insert: "To enable the joint committee of the two Houses on short-time rural credits constituted and appointed in pursuance of Public, No. 234, Sixty-sixth Congress, 'An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921,' to continue and complete its labors and reports, $5,000."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede and concur.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman please explain just what that is?

Mr. ANDERSON. I will say that last year the Congress provided for the creation of a joint congressional committee to study the question of short-time rural credits. Owing to the fact that the farm loan act was under question in a suit before the Supreme Court, I understand that the commission has not made any investigations this year and has not spent any of the money which was provided by the appropriation we carried last year creating the commission. It it desired, as soon as the question with respect to the farm loan act is determined, to go on with this work, and this simply provides a reappropriation.

Mr. SNELL. They have not spent any money so far?

Mr. ANDERSON. I understand they have not. If they have spent any, it has been a very small amount.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SNELL. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Does the gentleman know whether there is any case on record where a joint congressional committee has completed its work within the limit of time under which it was appointed?

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not; and I presume this proposition is in accordance with the precedents.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. We are constantly criticizing the executive departments of the Government because they do not do a work within the time provided. I do not recall now any instance where a congressional committee or a joint committee has done its work within the time provided by law.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 115: Page 88, line 21, insert:

"Purchase of seed grain for drought-stricken areas: That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, for the crop of 1921, to make advances or loans to farmers in the drought-stricken areas of the United States, where he shall find that special need for such assistance exists, for the purchase of wheat, oats, and barley for seed purposes when necessary, to procure such seed and sell same to such farmers. Such advances, loans, or sales shall be made upon such terms and conditions and subject to such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, including an agreement by each farmer to use the seed thus obtained by him for the production of grain. A first lien on the crop to be produced from seed obtained through a loan, advance, or sale made under this section shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, be deemed sufficient security therefor. The total amount of such advances, loans, or sales to any one farmer shall not exceed the sum of $300. All such advances or loans shall be made through such agencies as the Secretary of Agriculture shall designate. For carrying out the purposes of this section there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000,000 immediately available."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House recede from its disagreement to the Senate amendment and agree with an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves that the House recede and concur with an amendment. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON moves that the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment 115, and agree to the same with the following amendment: Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Purchase of seed grain for drought-stricken areas: That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, for the crop of 1921, to make advances or loans to farmers in the drought-stricken areas of the United States, where he shall find that special need for such assistance exists, for the purchase of wheat, oats, barley, and flaxseed for seed purposes and when necessary to procure such seed and sell same to such farmers. Such advances, loans, or sales shall be made upon such terms and conditions and subject to such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, including an agreement by each farmer to use the seed thus obtained by him for the production of grain. A first lien on the crop to be produced from seed obtained through a loan, advance, or sale made under this section shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, be deemed sufficient security therefor. The total amount of such advances, loans, or sales to any one farmer shall not exceed the sum of $200. All such advances or loans shall be made through such agencies as the Secretary of Agriculture shall designate. For carrying out the purposes of this section there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,000,000, to be immediately available."

Mr. LONGWORTH. I could not distinctly hear the reading. I would like to ask the gentleman from Minnesota if there is any change in the proposed amendment except the substitution of "$2,000,000" for "$5,000,000"?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes. In addition to that, it changes the maximum amount which can be loaned to each farmer to $200 instead of $300, and includes, in addition, under the grains upon which the loans can be made, flaxseed.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It is assumed that the people who raise flaxseed know that it is not a grain, when by law the gentleman would have it considered as a grain. The gentleman has a provision which I think is the same as the Senate amendment, whereby an agreement with the farmer is made to use the seed obtained by him for the production of grain. I think it will be difficult to get the farmer to produce grain by sowing flaxseed. However, that may be technical; I do not know.

Mr. MONDELL. Is it the thought of the gentleman that flaxseed would not be included in the seeds that may be purchased?

Mr. MANN of Illinois. He has named flaxseed.

Mr. ANDERSON. The Supreme Court of Minnesota has held that flaxseed is not grain, and I think the same thing has been held in other States.

I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, to modify my amendment by inserting after the word "grain," at the end of the second sentence, I think it is, the words "or flaxseed."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent to modify the amendment. The Clerk will report the modified amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON asks unanimous consent to modify his amendment by inserting after the word "grain" in the first sentence the words "or flaxseed."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the modification?

There was no objection.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I want to know if the gentleman is going to make a statement about this, because I am opposed to the motion, and I would like to make a short statement concerning it.

Mr. ANDERSON. I want to make a short statement myself, and then I shall be glad to yield to the gentleman from South Carolina or any other gentleman who desires to discuss the proposition, within limits, of course. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I want to have some time in which to discuss it. The Senate amendment involves $5,000,000 and is offered at the closing days of the session. I would like to have 20 minutes. It should be explained what is to be voted on. I may not use that much time myself, but I think we should have at least 25 minutes over here on this side.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, the amendment now under consideration authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to make advances or loans to farmers for the purpose of purchasing seed, or to procure such seed and sell it to the farmers in the drought-stricken sections of the United States. The Senate amendment limited the amount to be loaned to one farmer to $300, and carried an appropriation of $5,000,000. The amendment which I have offered, in addition to adding flaxseed to the grains which might be purchased, or for which loans could be made, reduces the amount which can be loaned to any farmer from $300 to $200, and the appropriation is reduced from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000.

In fixing the amount at $2,000,000 I undertook to fix it at the lowest amount which I thought would meet the requirements in these sections of the country, as I understand them to be. While the amendment in its terms applies generally to the United States, it is my understanding that the sections chiefly affected by the amendment are North and South Dakota and Montana. A very small portion, if any, of South Dakota is affected by the drought. The drought exists for the most part in spots over the entire State of North Dakota, and very largely over the entire State of Montana. Some counties are very much worse off than others. I understand that in North Dakota 35 out of 53 counties had a practical crop failure last year, and a practical crop failure the year before. In some sections there have been more than two successive crop failures. There are sections of Montana in which there have been three and four successive failures of crops. In these sections the people are entirely destitute. Their condition is not only pitiable but desperate—so desperate that during the last winter the National Red Cross made an allotment of $50,000 to relieve the distress in Montana and in parts of North Dakota, which was supplemented by funds and by help from district and local Red Cross chapters.

There is not any doubt in my mind that these people are in desperate need. The whole question, as I see it, is whether it is a matter in which the Federal Government is justified in making an appropriation. If the counties concerned were in such a condition as to permit them to take care of the situation, it seems to me clear that the Federal Government ought to make no appropriation. But, as a matter of fact, because there have been successive droughts, the counties have loaned up to the limit allowed by law. They can not sell any more bonds for the purpose of making these loans. I understand the finances of the State of North Dakota are in such a condition that the State is unable to sell its bonds, and consequently unable to take care of the people in these drought-stricken sections. In Montana the counties are in very much the same situation as they are in North Dakota. I am told that the State has a constitutional provision preventing it from issuing bonds for the purpose of relieving this distress.

Mr. COPLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. COPLEY. What is the reason that the State of North Dakota can not sell its bonds?

Mr. ANDERSON. I think the reason is because the State of North Dakota has a government which is not sufficiently stable so that people who have money are willing to loan it upon the bonds of the State.

Mr. COPLEY. Will the gentleman yield for another question?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. COPLEY. Who selected the State government of North Dakota?

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman knows as much about that as I do. I suppose the people of North Dakota selected it.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Who will administer these loans, provided they are granted?

Mr. ANDERSON. They will be made through the Secretary of Agriculture, and I understand the same procedure will be followed as was followed in the case of the $5,000,000 allotment that was made by the President for the purpose of making loans in this section and in the Southwest in 1919.

Mr. SNELL. Did he depend on local representation in making these loans?

Mr. ANDERSON. No; the work was done, as I understand, through the Treasury Department and the Federal reserve banks and the local banks.

Mr. SNELL. I was going to ask the gentleman whether people who have had such an irresponsible State government of their own would have anything to do with the distribution of this money if it were granted to them?

Mr. ANDERSON. That would be a matter within the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture under this amendment. I should hope, so far as I am concerned, that these loans will not be made through the local governments.

Mr. SNELL. I certainly hope so; and I think everybody else does.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think the Secretary of Agriculture would take that view.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Is the seed grain to be purchased by the Agricultural Department and then furnished to the farmers, or will the Agricultural Department hand the money over to them?

Mr. ANDERSON. It might be done in either way under this amendment. The Government could purchase the grain and furnish it, or it could make a loan under conditions which would insure that it would be used for the purpose of seed grain by the farmers and that the seed grain would be planted by them.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Does the gentleman know of any legislative precedent in past Congresses for an appropriation of this character, of money to be loaned directly to individuals?

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not know of any direct legislative precedent that I can call to mind at the moment. If my recollection serves me correctly, I think the House passed a law for this purpose two or three years ago, during the war, but that bill did not pass the Senate.

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. CANNON. Is not this substantially a gift? They have nothing to mortgage, have they?

Mr. BUTLER. No.

Mr. ANDERSON. No; they are mortgaged to the limit, as I understand it. Of course, the gentleman understands that there will go with this a lien upon the crop to be grown with the seed; not only a lien upon the crop grown from the seed thus furnished or bought with the money that is loaned, but a lien on the entire crop grown by the farmer. The situation in that respect is this: In my judgment, if these sections of the country get a crop this year, a very large percentage of the money will be paid back. If they do not get a crop, in all probability there will be a very small proportion of the money paid back. I base that upon the fact that in 1919 the President gave the Secretary of Agriculture an allotment for this purpose, and in the Southwest, where the seed planted was succeeded by a crop, 90 per cent of the money came back, but in those sections where there was a succeeding crop failure a very small proportion of the money came back. So that, in my judgment, it depends on whether they get a crop or not; and, as there have been two or three failures, the gambling percentage is in favor of their getting a crop this year.

Mr. HICKS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. HICKS. I understand three or four years ago we loaned some $4,000,000 for a proposition of this kind.

Mr. ANDERSON. Four million and a half.

Mr. HICKS. How much of that money has been returned to the Treasury of the United States?

Mr. ANDERSON. I understand that about one-third of it has been returned, and that practically all of that which was returned came from the section where they made a crop following this loan and the planting of the seed which was purchased by it.

Mr. HICKS. Is not the section to which we loaned the seed three or four years ago the same section to which this loan will apply?

Mr. ANDERSON. Part of it is.

Mr. HICKS. Was there not a proviso in the previous loan which provided that if the crop of wheat did not exceed 10 bushels an acre, the loan would not have to be returned to the Government?

Mr. ANDERSON. No; the gentleman is in error about that. There was no such proviso in the regulations attached to the loan. But last year the appropriation bill carried a provision to the effect that where the yield had been less than 5 bushels an acre the amount should be remitted. That was not the exact language, but that was the effect of it. Some of it was remitted in this way which under other conditions would have been paid.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. As I understand it, this advance is to be made entirely in the event of drought?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. And not by reason of any unfavorable conditions that exist elsewhere, but by reason of local, physical conditions occasioned by the weather, resulting in the failure of crops.

Mr. ANDERSON. Exactly. This results from elemental conditions over which the Government and Congress can exercise no control.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. It would furnish no precedent for other interests to come to Congress and seek aid because of the disadvantage they labored under by economic conditions.

Mr. ANDERSON. I should say not. We have appropriated money in cases of disaster by fire and flood. In the section represented by my friend from South Carolina we appropriated at one time $540,000 on account of flood conditions existing there. This does not create any new precedent which would bring in other applications in the future.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. Is not this a different proposition than where you appropriate money to relieve disaster by flood or fire. This condition has prevailed in this territory for three years.

Mr. ANDERSON. For two years in a part of it, one year in a part, and in some others three and some four. I will say frankly to the gentleman that I think it would be a sound economic result if many of these people would move away from these places where there is no prospect of making successful agriculture. But the gentleman knows that the production of wheat in this country, which is the bread of this country and of the world, grows largely in this section of the country where wheat raising is normally precarious, and we must have wheat raised there or we will not have wheat enough to supply ourselves and have any surplus for export.

Mr. SNELL. Is not there a good supply of wheat in the country at the present time, and there has not been any raised in this country out there for three years?

Mr. ANDERSON. There was at the beginning of the present crop season a small surplus, but I do not apprehend that there is any surplus at present. The gentleman from New York will realize the possibilities of getting a crop of 600,000,000 bushels this year and 1,000,000,000 the next year from the same acreage, but if you reduce the crop acreage you may have a situation that would be disastrous.

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. FESS. Is not the language in lines 24 and 25 giving power to the Secretary of Agriculture to say whether the need does exist very broad? What will be the basis upon which that judgment will be reached, that the need is such that the Government should do it?

Mr. ANDERSON. I think that resolves itself into a much more practical thing than is indicated by the gentleman's inquiry. As a matter of fact—we might as well be frank about the matter—the only section that I know of that this applies to is a section of North Dakota—possibly a part of South Dakota and Montana.

Mr. FESS. If the gentleman will remember, in 1914 representation was made here to us from the South of the cotton-stricken section, and this same relief was asked for. We declined it on the basis that the need did not appeal to us sufficiently and that we ought not to enter upon this sort of legislation. We did do something two years ago, I think. I would like to know whether the gentleman knows what was the result of our effort.

Mr. ANDERSON. I have already answered that. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. YOUNG].

Mr. YOUNG of Texas. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, there is more involved in this piece of legislation than simply an appropriation of two or five million dollars. If the appropriation was alone involved, it would be worth while to discuss it, because $2,000,000 is quite a sum of money. But there is a question of policy involved, and I want every gentleman to listen to the discussion of the proposition.

There is this question of policy involved: If you vote for this amendment of the Senate, or for the substitute amendment that has been offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], you are voting not only for the appropriation but you will begin a new policy of this Government, and that policy is that the Government makes direct loans to the private citizen of this Nation—going into the banking business. That is the proposition involved. Now, if you want to embark on that policy, vote for the amendment placed in the bill by the Senate or for the substitute, because that contains this new policy on which this Government is beginning to enter. As far as I am concerned I do not think it a correct policy. I think it is a dangerous policy, and the danger is shown in this very piece of legislation. What do you gentlemen know about the necessities of the section of the country to which this money is to be carried? I know nothing except the statements that have been made here this morning. This matter was not brought before the Committee on Agriculture during the present session of Congress. We had no hearings upon it, and if you embark upon the policy now you do it without any congressional investigation; you do it simply by a floor amendment. It is a dangerous policy for this Congress to enter into. Legislation such as this ought not to be passed. If you have a right to relieve the distress by making these loans in this section of the country, why do you stop with that kind of distress? I can take you to the great section of the country from which I come. We made a wonderful crop, and yet we are afflicted because of the fact that we have no market for that crop. The farmers throughout the entire South are bankrupt and unable to finance another crop this year. If it is right because of drought to extend loans as you are undertaking to do here, why is it not right for the Government to grant aid when a great section of this country suffers from another calamity, and why should they not come and ask loans at the hands of the Government? I am not in favor of their doing it. I think it is a wrong policy to enter upon. I think private enterprise should take care of these things, and if we enter upon this policy now, I tell you that it will rise up to give you trouble every year that Congress shall meet. More and more we are asking this Government to do too much for the private citizen. We are more and more encouraging the private citizen to come to Washington, that he may have some aid from the Treasury of the United States, and when you are doing that you are undermining the principles on which our Government is founded.

I do not want that time to come when the private citizen in my district and in the other districts of the Nation shall look to the Government as a parent of the citizen and appeal to it as a parent. I would rather have them understand that the Government is their Government, protecting their liberties and their rights, and that they owe the Government the responsibility of supporting it. I am not in favor of this policy, and I shall vote against both the Senate amendment and the substitute offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON]. [Applause.]

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, this amendment comes as a result of Senate bill 2508, which was an act to appropriate $5,000,000 for the purchase of seed grain to be supplied to the farmers in the drought-stricken areas of the United States. That bill passed the Senate on February 21, 1921. A reference to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of that day, on page 3531, in the remarks of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA], discloses the fact that he spoke as follows:

> I am glad to say the farmers are not affected in the eastern portion of North Dakota, or even in the central part of the State, but in the western part of the State, and over a large area in Montana, and in the western part of South Dakota, and in many other sections the farmers are absolutely helpless and will not be able to purchase seed grain.

On page 3534 I find, when a question was asked as to what amount of money would be necessary in each State, the following statement was made:

> I have made an estimate as to what other States will require. It may not be absolutely correct, but I believe the State of Montana will require at least two and a quarter million dollars, the State of North Dakota will require one and three-quarter million dollars, and the State of South Dakota will require at least one million dollars to help out in this great emergency.

Mr. Speaker, this presents a peculiar situation. Gentlemen come to this Congress asking for an appropriation of $1,000,000 to help the farmers of South Dakota, when, so far as I have been able to find out, so far as my colleague, the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. CHRISTOPHERSON], has been able to find out, not one farmer is seeking this sort of an appropriation to purchase seed wheat. I do not deny, and I believe it to be true, that the State of Montana does need assistance and that the State of North Dakota does need some assistance. I am going to give some reasons for that in addition to the drought.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Not now. Here are two States, North Dakota and South Dakota, carved out of one Territory, the same number of people in each State, each entering statehood with exactly the same kind of laws. To-day the State of South Dakota has borrowed in the open market $30,000,000 at from 5 to 6 per cent and has loaned it to its farmers, and it has no difficulty in selling its bonds and taking care of its citizens and attending to its obligations. It has had few bank failures, and conditions are such that we do not come to this Congress asking for an appropriation from any source with which to buy seed wheat or to purchase anything else. In North Dakota the State government is bankrupt, large numbers of banks have failed, and the people are facing disaster. Those two States lie side by side, and in South Dakota we collect from the people through the Red Cross to help the people of the adjoining State of North Dakota. The reasons for that are clear, and it is because in North Dakota a few years ago there was gathered together a great bunch of political agitators, long-haired socialists, I. W. W's, bolshevists of all kinds, who deluded the good citizens of North Dakota, and they entered into a line of experiments that have absolutely bankrupted the people of the State and its government to such an extent that you could not sell their State bonds on any market in the world. In order to give them an opportunity to put in a crop this year it is probably necessary for us of South Dakota and you of the rest of the United States to come in and take them out of the difficulty into which they inserted themselves. That is the reason I am going to vote for this bill, and the only reason, because I know there is a class of people in North Dakota who are not bolshevists any more than the rest of you. I know there are people in North Dakota who feel worse than anyone else in the world because their banks have broken and because the people have lost their money. I do not want to punish those few people because the majority in North Dakota fell into this trap that had been so carefully prepared for them by the Industrial Workers of the World, by the radical wing of the Socialist Party, and by the bunch of men who came in there and operated upon the farmers of that State by going out and assessing them $16 each upon the theory that they could perfect a form of government better than had ever been perfected in all the history of the world.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Not until I have finished my statement. I want to repeat that in voting for this I am voting for it against my better judgment, because the majority of the people of that State put themselves in the position in which they find themselves when they surrendered to the bunch of men who came in there for personal gain and not to help the people of the State.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. In a moment I will yield. I call attention to the fact that to-day, while there are two Nonpartisan League Representatives in this House from North Dakota, Mr. BAER and Mr. SINCLAIR, neither one of them nor any person connected with the Nonpartisan League seems anxious to give this bill any assistance or is willing to answer any questions, but the fight for this bill devolves upon the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. YOUNG] and the gentleman from Montana [Mr. RIDDICK], both of whom have been advocating sound legislation for many years.

And the question should be asked by the people of North Dakota, Where were their Representatives of the Nonpartisan League when this question came before the House of Representatives for action on this particular day? I yield to the gentleman from North Dakota.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I think it is only fair to say that Mr. SINCLAIR is present and supporting this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Does the gentleman really think that he should reply for Mr. SINCLAIR with respect to the statements I have made?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I am only answering the statement whether he was here and supporting this bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Undoubtedly the other gentlemen to whom I have referred will secure time from the gentleman from Minnesota to discuss their banking law and some of the statutes. I now yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN].

Mr. MADDEN. I understand there is a million dollars of this for South Dakota. The gentleman is not going to vote for that; he is going to move to strike that out, is he not?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I will say that the chairman of the subcommittee [Mr. ANDERSON] reduced that appropriation from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000 largely because of the fact we are not asking for something for South Dakota. We do not want it ourselves. [Applause.]

Mr. FESS. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I will yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. FESS. Would the gentleman state what is the situation fiscally in respect to the banks of North Dakota?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. It will be a pleasure to answer. I will say to the gentleman that a great number of banks of North Dakota failed because this long-haired socialistic crew I have mentioned before formed a State bank. They gathered the liquid capital of the State up and put it into unsound loans and long-time loans so nobody could ever get to it, and those who received this money have not been able to pay back this money into the central bank.

Mr. FESS. One other question. Is it not true that it is money they want rather than seed?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I would say to the gentleman that there is no question in my mind that they need money out there and will need a great many more millions if they continue their present system of government.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I will.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. That is, whether the State is under the same government now, of this bolshevik, I. W. W. crew, as the gentleman described it?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I would say to the gentleman there has been some little change in the last two years when they returned to sanity in one legislative body, and after the experience they have had they will probably turn all of these socialists who have come to North Dakota back to the place from whence they came and the State will probably be conducted upon a sane basis.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I understand they are trying to extend their form of government in some of the other Western States.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I will say they are trying to extend their form of government to States such as Kansas and Nebraska, but I have too much confidence in the intelligence, integrity, and judgment of the people of those States to believe they will get very far with that, especially when they learn the facts about North Dakota.

Mr. COPLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I will.

Mr. COPLEY. How is it that this bolshevik government there did not issue paper certificates for State indebtedness which might be used to pay the farmers who voted to put them in office for their products?

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I would say to the gentleman from Illinois I have been trying to answer that question, and there is no certificate of indebtedness to be issued in the State by the present government in North Dakota that any intelligent man would buy expecting he would be paid unless they return to sound governmental economic principles. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. BYRNES].

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I know that in the closing days of a short session many things are put through which would never see the light of day at any other time, but I am not ready to believe that this House is going to concur either in the Senate amendment or in the motion made by the gentleman from Minnesota. I represent an agricultural district, and I know I am in sympathy with the farmer. I know the distressed condition existing in many States of the Union to-day, but I believe of all the propositions that have ever been submitted to this Congress there is none so lacking in merit as this. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] referred to the fact that this proposition passed the Senate as a separate measure on February 21. It is pending in the Committee on Appropriations. As a separate measure it would never be reported from any committee of this House. If reported to the House not a handful of men would ever vote for it. The only chance for consideration is that in the closing days of this session it is tacked on an appropriation bill and comes back to the House and you are asked to agree to it in order to pass the appropriation bill. An appropriation of $2,000,000 for no reason other than that if you do not now agree you may cause the conferees to remain out longer upon this bill. Now, I want to tell you what is proposed, and I think $2,000,000 worth talking about. I wish that before Members of the House vote upon this proposition they could go down in the Sergeant at Arms' office and make out their income-tax returns. I believe they would devote serious thought to it. But here is the proposition:

> That the Secretary of Agriculture is authorized to make advances or loans to farmers in the drought-stricken areas of the United States where he shall find especial need for such assistance exists, for the purchase of wheat, oats, barley—

And so forth.

Where is this drought-striken area? Who contends there is such an area? The chairman of the Committee on Agriculture of the Senate, Senator GRONNA, of North Dakota, says there is a drought-stricken area. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] states that he has not had a request for assistance from any man in his State. What does the Secretary of Agriculture say? Why, when the Senator from North Dakota presented this measure to the Senate he was asked whether or not the Secretary of Agriculture was in favor of it. He said that he thought the department was, though the Secretary of Agriculture said it was a matter for Congress to consider.

Now, I want you to listen to this letter from the Secretary of Agriculture to Senator GRONNA, if you desire the facts before you vote $2,000,000 or $5,000,000 out of the Treasury. Senator GRONNA sent his resolution to the Secretary of Agriculture, and this is the response of the Secretary:

> I have had careful inquiry made in the several bureaus of this department whether information has been received to indicate that there is any serious shortage of seed grain in any part of the country. All information which the department has indicates that there is at least a normal supply of seed grain, including wheat, oats, and barley, in practically all portions of the country where these grains constitute important crops.
>
> The conditions existing in the spring-wheat belt are, no doubt, distressing, as they are in other sections of the country, including even the corn belt, where recent settlers and tenant farmers have been unable to dispose of their crops at prices which would clear off the indebtedness incurred in their production.

Now, can any gentleman construe that letter as meaning that the Secretary of Agriculture believes that this is a wise measure?

Mr. BUTLER. What is the date of the letter?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. It is dated February 11—two weeks ago.

I want to go on and prove this case.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Will the gentleman answer an inquiry?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. The Secretary referred to the fact that the farmers in the corn belt have been unable to sell their crops. Consequently they have plenty of seed. This appropriation is for the relief of farmers who had no crop last year or the year before, and have no money with which to buy seeds.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. But the Secretary says it is not so. He says that he has information from the several bureaus that there is no shortage of seed grain in any part of the country; that all of the information the department has indicates that there is at least a normal supply of seed grain, including wheat, oats, and barley, in all sections. And I am going to prove that that is true.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I can not, because I want to prove that statement.

Here is the Monthly Crop Reporter, dated December, 1920. I will ask gentlemen to listen to this. If anybody thinks there is a condition demanding relief, let him look at the figures. Here are the official figures.

Spring wheat, 1920, the average production was 10.8 per acre, the country over. Let us see what happened in North Dakota. In North Dakota you will find the average production was 9. It only lacked 1 bushel per acre there of meeting the average the country over.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I can not. If I get through my statement, I will.

To be specific, in 1920, the production in North Dakota was 68,400,000 bushels, and the production the year before, 1919, was only 55,200,000, or 13,200,000 bushels increase over the previous year. Talk about a shortage! You have increased the production. Now, let us see about other crops. Here is barley. In North Dakota, in 1919, the production was only 13,800,000. In 1920, this past year, it was 22,680,000.

Mr. KNUTSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. When I get through this statement I will.

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. Can you give us Minnesota?

Mr. KNUTSON. Minnesota is not in on this.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. There is no statement from anybody as to what they need, except from the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. STRONG of Kansas. How is Montana?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Montana, in 1919, produced of spring wheat 8,500,000 bushels; in 1920, produced 15,950,000; and of barley, where it produced only 540,000 bushels in 1919, it produced, in 1920, 1,540,000, an increase of a million bushels. Those are the latest figures.

Mr. SMITH of Idaho. Will you give us the acre production?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes; I will tell you that. In the case of North Dakota the acreage was 7,600,000 in 1920 and 8,000,000 in 1919, so that on a smaller acreage in 1920 they have produced 13,000,000 more bushels of wheat. I am glad the gentleman suggested it to me. I forgot it. But that is the case. Who says they need it? The Senator from North Dakota. You pass this, and tell the Secretary of Agriculture to look after it, and where is he going to find this drought-stricken area? He says he does not know. What are you going to force him to do? To go to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to find out what you intended, because there alone can he find it. Now, if he looks at the RECORD, what will he find? He will find that the Senator from North Dakota, the chairman of the Senate Agricultural Committee, states that this distribution must be made immediately in the State of North Dakota. When the question is asked as to how he shall attempt to distribute this $5,000,000, this $300 to any fellow who wants to borrow, he is told by the chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Senate that the commissioners and the county attorneys have announced their willingness to attend to it. Now, think of that! Just think of $5,000,000 or $2,000,000 being turned over to your county commissioners and mine for distribution. One of the faithful will present himself to the commissioners and say, "I want $300." If the applicant has been loyal to the nonpartisan organization in North Dakota, you know that the commissioner has got to give him the maximum. If you are going to throw away $2,000,000, why not give it to the Congressmen and let them distribute it when they get back home. If you are going to be asked by people who are in a bad fix for a little loan, why not let us, instead of the county commissioners, loan the Government money? It is a cinch. [Laughter.] My friend from Ohio, Mr. FESS, asks about it as a business proposition. The gentleman from North Dakota will tell you that this money will be paid back. They said so in 1918, when they asked for a similar appropriation. They said they had to have assistance in order to increase food production during the war, and the President came across with $5,000,000 out of his presidential fund, and it was loaned out there through the Federal land banks. They had a guaranty provision that if a fellow produced over five bushels to an acre he had to chip in to help out the fellows who did not. Kansas and Oklahoma paid back nearly 100 per cent and helped the other fellows. But let us see what was done by the North Dakota farmers in whose behalf this aid is asked.

Their loans were handled out of the St. Paul bank; the disbursements in the form of loans amounted to $358,370, and they paid back only $69,012—a little less than 19 per cent. Of course, they did not pay it back.

Then what happened? In the Senate they tacked on an amendment to the last agricultural bill to the effect that any farmer who produced 5 bushels or less should have his note canceled, and they have got the clerks down there as busy as a one-armed paperhanger canceling notes to-day. [Laughter.]

The State of Montana was handled through the Spokane Land Bank. They loaned out of the Spokane Land Bank $1,950,000, and up to date they have got back but $10,073. A great business! The best business in the world. Gentlemen admit there is nothing to that. They admit there is no drought-stricken condition demanding charity, but they admit that some of the banks up there are in bad, and this is the way they are going to try to cure it. They are going to tell these socialists that my friend from North Dakota was talking about that, inasmuch as the State has got in bad by going into the banking business, they will also put the United States Government in bad by going into the banking business.

Mr. LONGWORTH. What was the rate of interest?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Six per cent. Those who paid up paid that rate. But you are going to cure the socialism of North Dakota by putting the United States in the very socialistic business that you condemned on the part of the Nonpartisan League.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. MADDEN. Of course, they could agree to pay any rate of interest if they did not intend to pay the principal?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes. They might agree to pay 50 per cent. I have a friend who says he never refuses to sign a petition or to sign a note at any rate of interest, because he never intends to pay. [Laughter.]

If you adopt the motion of the gentleman from Minnesota, you will instruct your conferees, who up to this time have been standing out against the whole thing, to stand for $2,000,000. The Senate conferees say they want $5,000,000. I have no criticism to make of the Senate. Nobody can do that here with propriety; but, my friends, I wonder what would happen if some part of that senatorial courtesy should be transferred over here. For instance, if I advocated a proposition of this kind here and you asked me why I did it, I would say, "The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. WINGO] is interested in it. This is his item." [Laughter.] But I suppose the small amount of $5,000,000 between friends is not to be considered in the closing days of the session. [Laughter.]

Mr. WINGO. Do not saddle this on me, even at the end of the session. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. No; I know the gentleman is not for it. I happened to see you first. My friends, we must have some sanity. Talk about killing the bill! Let the Senate vote on this proposition. It is true they can tie up the bill. If they want to stick, let them stick. If it kills the bill, you will save from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 for your people, and you could not put in a better day's work than that. As a separate measure this proposition could never pass.

Mr. MADDEN. Further than that, you will refrain from setting a precedent that should not be established.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes. This precedent will come back to haunt you year after year. You tell people when they are in trouble that the Government will lend money to them, as in this case, and whenever the banks want to be relieved they will start a similar agitation. If there was any justification for such an appropriation during the war as a war measure, there certainly is none now.

Who will collect this money? The county commissioner, I suppose, will go out in the fall and collect it. If he lends Tom, Dick, and Harry the money, do you think he would force them to pay it, especially if they supported him?

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. The Supreme Court has just held constitutional the farm loan act. Will that help?

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Yes; it will help to the extent that the farm loan banks in that section have applications that have been approved. But if you put this thing in here they will not pay it. Nobody expects them to pay. The Government can not properly go into this business. I know that a proposition may be submitted here on any day which is regarded as ridiculous and that when the majortiy leaders change their minds and get behind it and make a motion to put it through that it becomes a perfectly legitimate function of government. But if you can transform this proposition into a legitimate function of government, I would like to know how you could do it. By doing this you are simply bringing Santa Claus to the farmers of North Dakota in the springtime. If you are going to send Santa Claus out to distribute $200 per man in North Dakota, why not send him into all the sections of the country that are in a bad fix? Do not let him go just to one man and make all the others dissatisfied. You will cause jealousy among the others. Before you vote to do it go downstairs and fill out your income-tax return. [Laughter.]

The majority leader asked me the other day on the floor whether I would help him hold down appropriations. I told him I would do my best to help. I would like to know now if he is willing to help hold down appropriations. If he does not help us defeat this raid, then we might as well throw up our hands and say, "On with the dance. Let joy be unconfined and appropriations be unrestrained." [Applause and laughter.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DOWELL). The time of the gentleman from South Carolina has expired.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I want to say that this is no place to wash North Dakota's political linen. I have neither time nor inclination to do it, and do not propose to be diverted from the real subject before us.

Wheat was one of the few commodities the price of which was controlled during the recent war. The day before the Government of the United States fixed a price on wheat it was selling for more than a dollar a bushel higher than it was selling on the day following, and the day after the control of the Government ceased wheat started to jump and rapidly went up to a point over a dollar a bushel higher than it was on the last day of Government control. The profits of the farmers were commandeered.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. No; I do not want to go into that question too far. It would eat up all of my time. But I want to say just this, that if during the entire period the price of wheat was under Government control the farmers had been able to obtain the normal market price there would not be any request here now from Montana and North Dakota for the Government to make loans for seed grain.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. SNELL] wanted to know whether there was not plenty of wheat now in the country. I want to tell you this: This proposition of foodstuffs for the Nation is something that the Congress ought to be thinking about. There is a situation now facing us and a situation that will face us in the next year or two where we may be taken to task for not having satisfactorily answered the question of where our people are going to get their bread.

In spite of the statements that the winter crop is looking well, I want to call attention to the fact that the winter acreage is very much reduced, and the spring acreage is certainly going to be very greatly reduced, according to every forecast and every estimate we can get from those who ought to know. There is a world shortage. Dr. Taylor, formerly connected with the Department of Agriculture, in the Saturday Evening Post, has very thoroughly discussed that situation and given the figures after returning from Europe where he studied the problem. There is an undoubted shortage of wheat, a very great shortage in Europe and other portions of the globe, and there is a shortage on this hemisphere. In the United States, for instance, two years ago this month we had a visible supply of 145,000,000 bushels, a year ago 75,000,000 bushels, and now 31,000,000 bushels, so you will see that the supply of wheat is being rapidly reduced. At Minneapolis and Duluth, for instance, a year ago there was a visible supply of 8,000,000 bushels of wheat and rye, as against a visible supply of 3,000,000 bushels at this time.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. That was in the elevators?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. The farmers are not selling it now.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Pretty nearly all the wheat is in elevators, either in Minneapolis or out in the country. It has not been sold, but it has been hauled into town and put in the elevators, and it is visible. I was talking about the visible supply.

Mr. Speaker, something has been said about establishing a precedent, particularly by our friends on that side of the aisle. I want to call attention to the fact that the President of the United States set aside $5,000,000 out of his war emergency fund for this very purpose of making seed loans to farmers. Other precedents might be cited——

Mr. LONGWORTH. Will the gentleman yield for a very brief question?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes, indeed.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Does not the gentleman think that if the President will permit the bill that passed on Saturday to become a law it will greatly relieve this situation?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I think it would to some extent. It might not relieve particular areas which were so hard hit, but I think it would help the situation generally. I want to call attention to another fact, and that is that when the proposed appropriation was reduced by the committee from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000 it was with the distinct understanding that South Dakota was not wanting or asking for any of the seed under this appropriation. I hope the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] will bear this in mind.

The chairman of the committee has given you a statement as to the needs. I simply want to add this, that there was no guesswork at all about the number who require seed and who can not get it unless they get it from the Government. These statistics showing 8,533 farmers actually in need of seed in North Dakota were prepared with very great care by an actual canvass made throughout the drought areas, and I am satisfied that they are accurate and that they represent only those particular cases where it will be absolutely impossible to raise the money.

Mr. LAYTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. LAYTON. Evidently this money is not going for winter wheat, because that has already been sown everywhere. Is the money to be used for wheat for spring sowing?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. YATES. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. YATES. Do you favor the $5,000,000?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I am asking now for the amount that the committee has recommended—$2,000,000. It ought to be more. I fear many farmers who have made a brave struggle against adverse circumstances and conditions will not be taken care of because of the insufficiency of the appropriation.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield there for a question?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes; certainly.

Mr. BARKLEY. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. LONGWORTH] a moment ago suggested that the tariff bill which passed Saturday might relieve the situation. I understand that tariff bill practically prohibits the shipment of wheat into your State, does it not?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I do not yield for a discussion of the tariff. There is not time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired.

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield to the gentleman three minutes more.

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. SNELL. What proportion of your country up there raises winter wheat and what proportion spring wheat?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. It is entirely a spring-wheat area.

Mr. SNELL. Is the same true of Montana?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes. And I will say this, too, that most of the wheat in the United States is grown in areas where the crop is uncertain. It may not be good judgment for the farmers to continue to grow wheat, but if they do not continue to grow wheat we will be facing a serious situation. We have got to get our bread supply from somewhere, and I think it will be exercising good judgment for us in Congress to encourage the growing of wheat in the United States. It will cost our people much more if we become dependent upon other countries for our bread supply.

Mr. YATES. Will the gentleman permit one more question?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. YATES. On what basis was the amount of $2,000,000 arrived at?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. A canvass was made to ascertain those who would require the seed, and they went only to those localities where it was known that the banks could not extend loans and where the county itself had gone to the limit of its bonded indebtedness and there was no possibility of raising the money in that way, and then in that area a canvass was made to find out how many would absolutely require it. Those are the only localities that were canvassed, and the names of those who simply asked for it were not all submitted. Upon the contrary, the list that was prepared and handed in to the committee represented only those who absolutely needed it.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Yes.

Mr. BARBOUR. Can the gentleman state how long it has been since there was a crop in that section?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. As the chairman of the subcommittee has said, that varies from one year to four years.

Mr. BARBOUR. Is this a section which does on an average yield an annual crop, or is the average yield once in two years, or three years, or four years?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Take, for instance, the county of Bottineau, which might be called representative of this area. In the last 20 years it has had crops more than half of the time.

Mr. BARBOUR. Are the crops large when they do have one?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. The yield is never large in western North Dakota and Montana.

Mr. BARBOUR. Usually where there is a failure of crops for two or three years, when you do get one you get a pretty good one?

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Hope springs eternal in the human breast. We think out there that this year, after a good long wait, we will get a good, big crop of wheat, and I hope you will give those farmers in the drought-stricken areas a chance to produce it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has again expired.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask that my time be extended 25 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota asks unanimous consent that his time be extended 25 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Montana [Mr. RIDDICK].

Mr. RIDDICK. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I wish to speak briefly and tell you of conditions that have come under my personal observation in relation to this matter. Under ordinary circumstances I would be opposed to paternalistic legislation of this character, as would the people of my part of the country. But the conditions which exist are not ordinary conditions. I personally know that thousands of people in Montana are facing not only terrific losses but actual ruin and that the passage of this measure is the only thing that can save them. The conditions are so unusual and so serious as to be in the nature of a catastrophe. One or two years of drought creates a serious situation even in the older farming sections.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIDDICK. After I make my statement.

Mr. MADDEN. I want the gentleman to yield right there. The gentleman spoke of drought. How does the gentleman account for the fact that the crop was so much larger in 1920 than in 1919?

Mr. RIDDICK. If the gentleman will permit me, I will answer that question in a moment. I said one or two years of drought in any farming community is a serious matter, even in the older sections of the country, where farmers have something laid by for a rainy day. But in the western country, where the young farmers have gone as pioneers and have started in with very little capital and where one crop failure wipes out nearly everything they have, three successive crop failures and four successive crop failures such as have been experienced in certain sections of Montana have brought distress and suffering beyond my powers to describe.

Now, answering the question of the gentleman from Illinois and in an effort to throw more light upon the statement made by the gentleman from South Carolina, who quoted statistics showing that Montana raised quite a wheat crop last year, permit me to say that there have been sections in Montana, including the irrigated sections, where tremendous crops have been raised even during these dry years. It is well known that under ordinary conditions the Montana crop yield per acre excels that of every other State in the Union, both as to wheat and other small grains, and some sections of Montana last year, which were favored by rain and where there was irrigation, produced yields as indicated. But we also have large sections of territory in Montana, larger than many Eastern States in extent, where there have been three and four years of successive crop failures. The young men farmers on this land, who have gone there from other States to reclaim and populate the West, own their land. They have their farm machinery ready to go to work, they have their work horses, and they are anxious to remain upon their farms and continue to produce, but to do so they must find some way to secure necessary seed. They are unable to get further credit at the banks. The merchants and the banks have heroically helped through this trying period. Some banks have had to close because their reserves fell below the legal limit; other banks are only able to maintain their legal reserves by extraordinary efforts. They can not extend further help.

The counties have extended credit up to the amounts permitted under the law. A constitutional provision makes it impossible for the State of Montana to extend its credit. Thousands of people are facing a situation where they will have to leave that country and add to the congestion in the crowded cities. They will have to abandon and lose their lifetime savings, and they will bring ruin to merchants and banks, that may spread no one can tell how far, unless aid comes quickly. This not only means financial ruin for thousands of people in that great State, but it will literally mean the breaking up of homes and heartbreaking suffering in many, many cases.

Mr. BARBOUR. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. RIDDICK. I will.

Mr. BARBOUR. Can the gentleman state where the idea of coming to Congress for this relief originated?

Mr. RIDDICK. It originated in the minds of the people out there, who realize that there is now no other place to which they can turn for the only relief that can save them. At the last session of Congress I introduced this measure. It was given a careful hearing before the House Agricultural Committee, and on January 30 a year ago that committee made a favorable report on the measure without a single dissenting vote, as the records will show.

Mr. BARBOUR. Did the idea originate with the gentleman?

Mr. RIDDICK. With me and my friends in Montana. In the last few weeks I have filed in this Congress petitions signed by thousands of Montana farmers praying that Congress grant this relief.

Mr. BARBOUR. I am interested in this, because we have had three dry years in California and the grain farmers have suffered thereby, but it had not occurred to me to come and ask for congressional relief.

Mr. RIDDICK. I do not know about your needs in California, but in Montana the farmers are asking Congress for the relief which they can hope for from no other source.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Is it not possible for these people to get relief by applying to the farm loan bank, which the Supreme Court of the United States has just held constitutional?

Mr. RIDDICK. Before the farm loan bank could function, even in the face of the favorable Supreme Court decision which has just been made, the planting season would be over and these drought-stricken farmers would have been compelled to face ruin and leave the State by thousands, and dire calamity would overtake them and that part of the country. Not only would thousands of farmers be ruined, but merchants who have been extending them credit and also the banks.

Now, I want to say just a word about the difference between the $5,000,000 seed loan two years ago and this proposed loan. The purpose of that loan was quite different from the purpose of this loan. While the war was on a great many people were doing necessary work under cost-plus contracts, which were yielding them large profits. There were strikes in some quarters for increased wages. By the fixing of the price of wheat any possible profits which wheat farmers might make was commandeered for the general good of our Army and the country. During that period the President loaned $5,000,000 out of his war emergency fund to be used for the purchase of seed, with the provision that if the crop yield was less than 5 bushels per acre the seed money borrowed would not have to be repaid.

The purpose of that loan was not particularly to help save a threatened calamity, but to stimulate the planting of wheat and the sharing of losses in case of crop failure between the Government and the individual farmers, who in the most favorable circumstances were prohibited from making much, if any, profit by the price-fixing arrangement. One of the reasons why our farmers are in peculiarly straitened circumstances now is because that while everybody else was permitted to make enormous profits during the war, they alone were discriminated against for the good of the whole country, and for that very reason, in addition to the other reasons, they have been unable to lay anything by for the lean years.

The experts of the Weather Bureau show by the curves indicating wet and dry seasons in Montana that the peak of the drought has been passed and that the situation promises to be a good deal better. While our Nation is so generously extending aid to China and Poland and other foreign countries in the way of loans and gifts, that suffering may be alleviated among these alien peoples, I urge that the Members of the Congress shall not harden their hearts to the dire need of our sturdy young American farmers who are doing the pioneering in the Western State of Montana. I hope you will vote to extend this needed relief in the way of a short-time loan which will be repaid promptly by a people who will in the future bless you for standing by them in their hour of need.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. SINCLAIR].

Mr. SINCLAIR. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I am strongly in favor of this amendment to the Agricultural bill, notwithstanding the fact that the gentleman from South Dakota said that I was not on the floor of the House. I have been here continuously since the session opened, and have been working for this proposition for a long time. I feel that this appropriation is justified because of the peculiar conditions that exist in the new homestead region of western North Dakota, the eastern part of Montana, and other portions of the country. Everybody knows that this part of the United States has been suffering for the past few years from an almost unprecedented drought. And yet it is a region capable of producing millions of bushels of the finest wheat that can be grown. The present deplorable conditions are not due to any fault of our farmers, and they have stuck nobly by their tasks in an effort to own their little homesteads. They have reached the limit of their individual resources. The various counties have rendered all the aid that the laws will permit. Now, as a last resort, they have come to their Government, asking, not charity, but simply for a loan that will enable them to continue their farming operations another year. In my opinion it is not only right but highly advisable for the Government to encourage agriculture in every way possible, for if the present trend to the cities and away from the farm continues this Nation will inevitably face a diminished production that will result in an infinitely increased cost of living. Only one-fourth of the arable land of the United States is now under cultivation. I believe the Federal Government should do all it can to keep the present farmers on the land, and it is our duty by proper encouragement to help distribute the population so that a parity between city and country may be maintained. If this is wisely done, our country will support a population of 200,000,000 just as comfortably as it does the present number. This problem, then, is one for business men as well as farmers.

If it is true, as has been stated on the floor of this House a good many times, that one farmer is as good a customer of the business and manufacturing interests of the country as four other individuals, then this amendment is certainly justifiable.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SINCLAIR. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. For the last two years the tobacco farmers of Kentucky have been unable to market their crops because of the breakdown of the European market. They are very sorely in need of a loan. Will the gentleman support an amendment to this proposition to loan them money also?

Mr. SINCLAIR. I have not given that matter any thought. I do not believe the tobacco industry is on the same plane as the wheat industry. A man may want tobacco, but that is a luxury. When he wants bread he is hungry. That he needs every day.

Mr. BARKLEY. Besides that, the Government gets an enormous revenue out of the tobacco business.

Mr. SINCLAIR. I do not care to yield any further along that line. I want to say that just across the Canadian border the Government of Canada is offering inducements for settlers that are a great deal more favorable than any such thing as this. We can not afford to lose any of our settlers in the western part of the country. As soon as they have learned how to farm under new conditions, and have had a little more instruction from our Government upon the crops that will grow best, they will make a success, but in the initial period, in the early stages of homesteading they do need help. The Canadian Government advances loans to the extent of probably $2,000 in some cases to new settlers in Saskatchewan and Alberta, and they are entering into competition with our farmers here.

In five minutes I have not time to go into the program of the nonpartisan league. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] stated that all of the farmers out there are bolsheviks. You never heard of bolshevists who were home owners and home lovers as my people are. They are struggling to own their own homes and live in them and they need a little assistance. The State government may have made some mistakes. I am not here to say that it has not, but certainly they have had sufficient cause and reason for the experimentation they are carrying on there. For over 20 years the farmers of my State have been at the mercy of the grain speculators. If, during this time, they had received the value of their work and product, it might not now be necessary for them to ask for help during the lean years. They are trying to build up their own individual homes and save their own individual property. If they have made mistakes, those mistakes have been of the head, rather than of the heart. They are patriotic, liberty-loving citizens, and compare favorably with any other class in the United States. Every State official that we have is a man of intelligence and integrity. Most of them have lived there for 30 years. Our governor is a university graduate and a very intelligent and able man. I think it is hardly fair for the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON] to cast aspersions upon his character and motives. We have our own political differences up there and we are fighting them out, and if we have time I believe we will be able to settle them and settle them in a manner that is favorable and fair to the citizens of our State. [Applause.]

North Dakota has received a lot of unjust and unfair advertising that is unwarranted by the facts. Its financial condition is no worse than many other States dependent solely upon agriculture.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, the action proposed by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] and the expenditure suggested is, it is true, unusual, but it is not without precedent by any manner of means. When I was a boy and lived in northwestern Iowa, there was a time when that section of Iowa and practically all of Nebraska and Kansas that was then settled was devastated for a period of years by hordes of grasshoppers, which destroyed the crops of the settlers. My recollection is that it was Congress that came to the relief of those people. At any rate, I remember very well as a boy the distribution of seed grain throughout northwestern Iowa, Kansas, and Nebraska.

The people with whom I lived did not have to borrow from the Government to get seed; they were rather fortunate, but many of our neighbors were only able to remain on their lands by reason of the fact that they were furnished seed. My recollection is that both Congress and the State of Iowa furnished seed.

Mr. CROWTHER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. CROWTHER. Does the gentleman think that the distress of these agriculturists is any greater than the distress of two or three million people in the industrial communities who are out of work now?

Mr. MONDELL. I do not know; I do not pretend to say. I do know that at various times in the settlement of the West it has been necessary for public agencies to come to the relief of the settlers. Very frequently it has been the State, and in this case perhaps it ought to be the States. There are some difficulties, however, apparently in securing the needed relief from the State. In North Dakota it is said that that is due to the fact that North Dakota has not been well governed during the last few years and that, due to that fact, the credit of the Commonwealth and its counties has been sadly lowered, and that the Commonwealth can not come to the relief of its people for that reason. If that be true, and I express no opinion on the subject, we ought to remember the need of the people, in view of the condition of the Commonwealth. So far as the State of Montana is concerned, that State has gone through a series of years of very severe drought, and many of the counties which have heretofore relieved their own people are, I am told, unable to furnish the relief required now.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question as to that fact?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Does the gentleman know that the production, according to the agricultural department, was higher in Montana than the average of the country?

Mr. MONDELL. It does not make a particle of difference whether Joe and Jack and Bill have produced more wheat if Jim and George have not produced any at all and are in dire need.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. The State ought to be able to help them if the State has made a good crop.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman's statement does not prove anything.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I am quoting the statement of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Mr. MONDELL. In my own State we have had for years local organizations at our county seats that have helped the farmers during the trying period of early settlement in the matter of furnishing him seed grain.

We have been able to do that in the past, and we expect to be able to do it in the future. Let me remind gentlemen that furnishing relief is not a matter without precedent. In 1913 we appropriated $650,000 for the relief of certain flood sufferers in Mississippi, Ohio, and Alabama. In 1916——

Mr. SNELL. Will the gentleman yield for a question there?

Mr. MONDELL. I can not yield at just this moment. In 1916 we appropriated $540,000 for the relief of flood sufferers in the State of my friend who has just spoken in opposition to this amendment. North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, and Florida were given—not loaned, but given—$540,000. Mississippi, Ohio, and Alabama had been given, not loaned, $650,000 in 1913 to relieve their distress caused by floods. We appropriated in all—we gave, we did not loan—$2,500,000 for the relief of the situation caused by the earthquake and the fire in San Francisco. So that the Congress has heretofore relieved distress by making direct gifts or grants. This is a loan. The gentleman from Minnesota who favors the amendment suggested that perhaps there was some doubt about the wisdom of settlers going upon some of those western lands in that unsettled region and trying to grow crops. I can well remember when the growing of the ordinary farm crops was considered a very uncertain thing anywhere west of the first tier of counties west of the Missouri River, in North and South Dakota, anywhere west of eastern Kansas or Nebraska, and when the farmer who went beyond the center of those States took his fortune in his hands and was compelled to endure the privations of years of drought. Through all that country there have been waves of devastating droughts that have driven settlers from their homes and left the country for a time in its original unsettled state. The settler having lost everything, his lands passed into the hands of loan companies and from them to new venturers at a low price, and the second or third crop of settlers finally completed the conquest. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MONDELL. I would like to have five minutes more.

Mr. ANDERSON. I will yield the gentleman five additional minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. I helped build a railroad once, years ago, across Kansas, 52 miles without a settler the entire distance, but with a sod house, ruined and abandoned, on every quarter section of the entire area. [Applause.] It is true we did not relieve those people and help them hold on, but it would have been better if we had. They went back to their wives' folks in Missouri and elsewhere. They lost all they had, and finally the lands were bought up for a song. But now that part of Kansas blooms and blossoms as a rose. There is no man wise enough to say how far into the semiarid region you can successfully carry agriculture without irrigation. These people are trying to prove that you can carry agriculture successfully to the very foot of the Rockies [applause] and they have proven it as to considerable areas. But they have gone through three bad years, very bad years, of drought in Montana and North Dakota, and the question is, are you going to say to them, "Leave your farms, go back east and rent, or go to Canada where they are making loans to settlers."

Mr. MADDEN. What did they say to Kansas when she was in trouble?

Mr. MONDELL. Well, whenever Kansas needed help she got it; sometimes she got it from the Government, but generally those settlements had other settlements lying close to them that could help them out. It has so happened that northern Montana has suffered so long, her droughts have continued for so long, that the banks and the communities and the municipal organizations can not well carry those settlers along. The question is, shall we say to them, "Abandon your farms, give up the effort, go back whence you came, leave all of your efforts behind you as a total loss," or will we loan them $100 or $200 each with which to buy seed in order that they may make an effort another year? We may not get it all back, I am not sure we will, but we will get a large portion of it back, and we will get it all back if they make good, if they raise a crop. If they do not, it is possible that some of this country will yet have to be abandoned as agricultural country; I hope not, but let us help these people while they are making their trial. They are courageous and hardy; let us give them another chance. It will be a mighty good investment. [Applause.]

Mr. ANDERSON. I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. OLIVER].

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, the people of my State are not unmindful, and certainly not ungrateful, of the favors extended by the General Government to those in need in the past. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] has correctly stated that in 1913 and 1916 help was given by the National Congress to flood sufferers in Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida. The help so extended came at a time when our people were in need and without that help it would have been difficult, if not impossible, for people living in some sections to have replanted their crops that had been washed away by flood. So far as I am concerned, if the farmers of North Dakota are now in need of seed I shall gladly vote for this appropriation. [Applause.] There may be some—like the gentleman from South Carolina—who feel that sufficient proof has not been submitted to show any widespread need by the farmers of Montana and North Dakota, but may I call attention to the fact that this appropriation, if made, is to be placed in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture, and he is only authorized to lend money to farmers living in drought sections, who actually need help for the purpose of enabling them to plant their crops? If there is no need, then no money will be lent, and certainly the appropriation, if made, is so safeguarded as to give assurance that it will not be unwisely or improvidently expended. I personally know that in wide areas of Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, and South Carolina, the money appropriated by Congress for flood sufferers was wisely used. It certainly would be ill becoming of any Representative from those States, in whose districts national funds have been asked for and accepted, to now deny to North Dakota the help that her farmers are asking. [Applause.]

What matters it now whether the people of North Dakota have made mistakes in the past? They are the sufferers from such mistakes, and I am glad to know that they seem to be rapidly repenting. I recognize that much of the legislation passed in the State of North Dakota during the last few years has been extremely unwise, and will continue for some time to entail heavy loss on her people; but certainly that fact should not deter Congress from extending help to worthy farmers who are now suffering from a disaster which has left them penniless and unable to provide even seed for planting their crops.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OLIVER. Yes.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Why should we refuse to help the people of North Dakota when we are extending help to nearly all the European countries and to China? We have helped other sections of the United States, and why should we refuse to help these people?

Mr. OLIVER. Certainly there can be no reason why we should deny them help. I would not vote for this appropriation if it was not safeguarded; but this only seeks to place the money in the hands of the Secretary of Agriculture with authority to lend it where clear cases of need are shown, need arising from causes over which the sufferers had no control. Remember, he is only authorized to lend the money where he finds actual need therefor. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] says that Kansas has never asked or received aid from the Federal Government. I find upon examination of the records that of the $5,000,000 which the President allotted to provide seed for the drought-stricken sections of the United States in 1919 the State of Kansas received $943,000. [Applause.] I find that the State of Oklahoma received $773,000; the State of Texas, $292,000; the State of New Mexico, $16,000. Are these gentlemen from the States who received this money, and received it gladly, now going to vote against an appropriation to do for North Dakota and Montana the same things as were done for them?

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. I will.

Mr. MONDELL. Wyoming did not receive any of that.

Mr. ANDERSON. Not a dollar.

Mr. BLACK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. BLACK. Is it not true that in that same year Montana and North Dakota received a large loan, and is it not true that Kansas, Texas, and Oklahoma paid back a much greater percentage of it than the other two States?

Mr. ANDERSON. Undoubtedly they did, because they got a crop yield that North Dakota and Montana did not get, a crop which was in part the result of loans made for seed from the $5,000,000 allotted by the President. The fact that North Dakota and Montana got no crop from that seed is not a reason for refusing this appropriation but a reason for giving it. We have appropriated $100,000,000 to feed the starving people of Europe. Ninety-three million dollars of that $100,000,000 has been spent, and with it we shipped some millions of bushels of wheat. Are we going to be more tender with the starving people of Europe than we are with the distressed and destitute people of our own country?

I have here a long list of cases in which the Federal Government has extended aid to destitute and desperate people. As far back as 1867 I find that the Federal Government made an appropriation of $50,000 for the purchase of seed to aid the destitute and drought-stricken sections of the South. I find that in 1875 the Congress of the United States made an appropriation for the purchase of seed to be used in those sections of the country that had been ravished by the grasshopper. That was an appropriation of $30,000, and in the same year we made an additional appropriation for the same purpose of $150,000.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. MONDELL. Then I was correct in my recollection that the Congress had provided for the grasshopper sufferers?

Mr. ANDERSON. The gentleman is correct in that statement.

I find that in 1882 the Federal Government made an appropriation for furnishing food to flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley. I find that in 1884 Congress again made an appropriation to relieve flood sufferers in the Ohio Valley. Again, in 1897, the Congress made an appropriation to relieve flood sufferers in the Mississippi Valley. Are you gentlemen, whose constituents and whose predecessors gladly received this aid, going now to refuse to give the aid which is asked for the destitute people of North Dakota and Montana?

Mr. HUSTED. Does the gentleman from Minnesota consider the condition which exists in this area now comparable to the condition that existed as a result of the floods in the Mississippi Valley and the condition which existed as the result of the grasshopper pest?

Mr. ANDERSON. They are all the results of elemental hazards which the people in the communities can not and do not control.

I find that in 1913——

Mr. HUSTED. Have these people been brought to great destitution?

Mr. ANDERSON. I will say that they have been brought to such a degree of destitution that the National Red Cross made an allotment of $50,000 to furnish food and clothing to them during the winter, and they recommended to the district and local chapters of the Red Cross that they furnish such aid as they could under the circumstances.

Mr. HUSTED. Are they greatly in want of the necessities of life at the present time?

Mr. ANDERSON. I am told that the conditions with some of these are pitiable indeed. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman to recede and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

Mr. TIMBERLAKE. Mr. Speaker, may we have that amendment reported?

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it will be again reported.

The amendment was again read.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendment as amended.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 82, noes 62.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina demands the yeas and nays.

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina. I make the point of no quorum.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and ninety-one Members are present, not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors; the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees. As many as are in favor of the motion to recede and concur with an amendment will, as their names are called, vote "yea," and those opposed will vote "nay," and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 183, nays 151, not voting 94, as follows:

YEAS—183.

Ackerman	Evans, Nebr.	Kelly, Pa.	Purnell
Almon	Farr	Kettner	Quin
Anderson	Ferris	King	Raker
Andrews, Nebr.	Fields	Kinkaid	Ramsey
Ashbrook	Fisher	Knutson	Ramseyer
Babka	Focht	Kreider	Randall, Calif.
Bankhead	Fordney	Lampert	Randall, Wis.
Barbour	Frear	Langley	Ransley
Barkley	French	Lankford	Reavis
Benham	Fuller	Lazaro	Reed, N. Y.
Bland, Va.	Gallivan	Lee, Ga.	Rhodes
Boies	Gandy	Lehlbach	Riddick
Bowers	Glynn	Little	Robsion, Ky.
Bowling	Green, Iowa	Luhring	Romjue
Briggs	Greene, Mass.	McArthur	Sabath
Brinson	Griest	McDuffie	Sanders, N. Y.
Brooks, Ill.	Hadley	McKeown	Schall
Brooks, Pa.	Hardy, Colo.	McKinley	Shreve
Browne	Harreld	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Sims
Buchanan	Hastings	Magee	Sinclair
Burroughs	Haugen	Mann, Ill.	Sinnott
Candler	Hawley	Mansfield	Smith, Idaho
Cannon	Hayden	Martin	Smith, Ill.
Caraway	Hays	Mason	Smithwick
Carss	Hernandez	Mays	Steenerson
Chindblom	Hersman	Merritt	Strong, Kans.
Christopherson	Hickey	Miller	Strong, Pa.
Clark, Fla.	Hoch	Minahan, N. J.	Summers, Wash.
Collier	Houghton	Monahan, Wis.	Sweet
Cooper	Howard	Mondell	Swindall
Curry, Calif.	Huddleston	Moores, Ind.	Taylor, Colo.
Dallinger	Hudspeth	Murphy	Thompson
Davis, Minn.	Hull, Iowa	Nelson, Mo.	Timberlake
Denison	Humphreys	Nelson, Wis.	Tincher
Dickinson, Iowa	Hutchinson	Newton, Minn.	Towner
Dickinson, Mo.	Igoe	Nolan	Upshaw
Dowell	Johnson, Ky.	O'Connor	Vaile
Dunbar	Johnson, Miss.	Oliver	Voigt
Dupré	Johnson, S. Dak.	Osborne	Volstead
Eagan	Johnson, Wash.	Padgett	Walters
Elliott	Juul	Parrish	Wason
Esch	Keller	Patterson	Weaver
Evans, Mont.	Kelley, Mich.	Pou	Webster
Welling	White, Kans.	Wilson, Pa.	Young, N. Dak.
Welty	Wilson, Ill.	Woods, Va.	Zihlman
Wheeler	Wilson, La.	Yates

NAYS—151.

Aswell	Elston	Longworth	Rouse
Bacharach	Fairfield	Luce	Rucker
Bee	Fess	Lufkin	Sanders, Ind.
Begg	Fish	McClintic	Sanford
Bell	Flood	McKenzie	Scott
Black	Foster	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sherwood
Bland, Ind.	Freeman	McLeod	Siegel
Blanton	Ganly	McPherson	Smith, Mich.
Box	Gard	MacGregor	Snell
Brand	Garrett	Madden	Snyder
Britten	Godwin, N. C.	Major	Stedman
Burdick	Gould	Mapes	Steele
Butler	Graham, Ill.	Michener	Stephens, Ohio
Byrnes, S. C.	Greene, Vt.	Milligan	Stevenson
Campbell, Kans.	Griffin	Montague	Stiness
Campbell, Pa.	Hardy, Tex.	Moore, Ohio	Stoll
Cantrill	Hersey	Moore, Va.	Swope
Carter	Hicks	Mott	Tague
Cleary	Hill	Mudd	Taylor, Tenn.
Coady	Hoey	Neely	Temple
Connally	Holland	Nicholls	Tillman
Copley	Hull, Tenn.	O'Connell	Tilson
Crago	Husted	Ogden	Tinkham
Crisp	Ireland	Oldfield	Treadway
Crowther	Jacoway	Olney	Venable
Cullen	James, Va.	Overstreet	Vestal
Currie, Mich.	Jones, Pa.	Paige	Vinson
Darrow	Jones, Tex.	Parker	Volk
Davis, Tenn.	Kearns	Pell	Walsh
Dempsey	Kiess	Perlman	Ward
Dewalt	Kinchelce	Phelan	Watson
Donovan	Kraus	Radcliffe	Whaley
Drane	Lanham	Rayburn	White, Me.
Drewry	Larsen	Reber	Williams
Dunn	Layton	Reed, W. Va.	Wingo
Eagle	Lea, Calif.	Ricketts	Winslow
Echols	Lesher	Rogers	Wright
Edmonds	Linthicum	Rose

NOT VOTING—94.

Andrews, Md.	Dyer	Kleczka	Rowe
Anthony	Ellsworth	Lonergan	Rubey
Ayres	Emerson	McAndrews	Sanders, La.
Baer	Evans, Nev.	McCulloch	Scully
Benson	Gallagher	McFadden	Sears
Bland, Mo.	Garner	McGlennon	Sells
Brumbaugh	Goldfogle	McKiniry	Sisson
Burke	Good	Maher	Slemp
Byrns, Tenn.	Goodall	Mann, S. C.	Small
Caldwell	Goodwin, Ark.	Mead	Smith, N. Y.
Carew	Goodykoontz	Moon	Steagall
Casey	Graham, Pa.	Mooney	Stephens, Miss.
Clark, Mo.	Hamill	Morin	Sullivan
Classon	Hamilton	Newton, Mo.	Sumners, Tex.
Cole	Harrison	Park	Taylor, Ark.
Costello	Hulings	Peters	Thomas
Cramton	James, Mich.	Porter	Vare
Dale	Jefferis	Rainey, Ala.	Watkins
Davey	Johnston, N. Y.	Rainey, Henry T.	Wise
Dent	Kahn	Rainey, John W.	Wood, Ind.
Dominick	Kendall	Riordan	Woodyard
Dooling	Kennedy, Iowa	Robinson, N. C.	Young, Tex.
Doremus	Kennedy, R. I.	Rodenberg
Doughton	Kitchin	Rowan

So the motion was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. BAER (for) with Mr. YOUNG of Texas (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri with Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee.

Mr. ANTHONY with Mr. SISSON.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island with Mr. MEAD.

Mr. SLEMP with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas.

Mr. GOODALL with Mr. CAREW.

Mr. JEFFERIS with Mr. RUBEY.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. STEAGALL.

Mr. WOODYARD with Mr. AYRES.

Mr. CRAMTON with Mr. FIELDS.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. MCANDREWS.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana with Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY.

Mr. BURKE with Mr. GALLAGHER.

Mr. KLECZKA with Mr. SEARS.

Mr. SELLS with Mr. DOUGHTON.

Mr. COLE with Mr. SUMNERS of Texas.

Mr. PETERS with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. ROWE with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ with Mr. JOHN W. RAINEY.

Mr. KENDALL with Mr. RIORDAN.

Mr. GOOD with Mr. GARNER.

Mr. PORTER with Mr. MCGLENNON.

Mr. DYER with Mr. ROBINSON of North Carolina.

Mr. HULINGS with Mr. DOREMUS.

Mr. MCFADDEN with Mr. PARK.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 116: Page 89, line 18, insert the following:
"SEC. 2. That any person who shall knowingly make any false representation for the purpose of obtaining an advance, loan, or sale under this act shall, upon conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not exceeding $1,000, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or both."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to recede and concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves to recede and concur with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. ANDERSON moves to recede and concur with the following amendment: Of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the following: "SEC. 2."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, the words "Sec. 2" were inserted by a mistake of the printer and should be stricken out, leaving the rest of the matter inserted by the Senate amendment as a paragraph.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the motion will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 117: Page 89, line 23, insert the following:
"SEC. 3. That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and requested to extend invitations to foreign Governments to be represented by delegates in a world's dairy congress to be held in the United States in 1922: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to create any pecuniary obligation on the part of the Government of the United States."

Mr. ANDERSON. I move to recede and concur with an amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves to recede and concur with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the following: "SEC. 3."

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment similar to the preceding one, simply striking out the words "Sec. 3." The remainder of the matter in the amendment has been favorably reported by the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ought to be adopted. I move to recede and concur with the amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 118: Page 90, line 4, insert the following:
"SEC. 4. The Secretary of Agriculture is directed hereafter to submit to Congress at the beginning of each regular session a report showing what investigations devolved upon the Department of Agriculture have been completed during the preceding fiscal year, and also showing what services, if any, devolved upon the department are being performed or duplicated, in whole or in part, by any other department, bureau, or agency of the Government."

Mr. ANDERSON. I move to recede and concur with an amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota moves to recede and concur with an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the following: "Sec. 4."

Mr. CANNON. Will the gentleman explain his amendment?

Mr. ANDERSON. The amendment simply strikes out the words "Sec. 4." This amendment has no relation to the preceding paragraph. The words "Sec. 4" ought to be omitted. They were put in, in the first place, by an error of the Government Printing Office.

The Senate amendment itself requires the Secretary of Agriculture to report at the beginning of each session of Congress what investigations carried on by the department during the preceding fiscal year can be discontinued, and whether there is any duplication in the work being done in the department. There seems to be a feeling that some of the investigations which were begun many years ago have reached a point where they can be discontinued, and possibly there is some duplication of work between the Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Standards and the Bureau of Fisheries. I know of no reason why the amendment should not be adopted.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to recede and concur, with the amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 119: Page 90, line 14, strike out "$33,668,009" and insert in lieu thereof "$39,909,274."

Mr. ANDERSON. I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Now, I ask to return to amendments 11 and 12, which were passed over.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report amendment numbered 11.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 11: Page 16, line 7, after the figures "$3,000," insert "one administrative assistant in seed and plant distribution, $3,000."

Mr. ANDERSON. I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 12: Page 17, line 7, after the word "all," strike out the figures "$498,500" and insert in lieu thereof "$501,500."

Mr. ANDERSON. I move that the House insist on its disagreement to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a further conference with the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks a further conference with the Senate. Is there objection?

There was no objection; and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. MAGEE, and Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15275) imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bills:

H. R. 7775. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 9281. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and to certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 11554. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 10515. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 14461. An act to limit the immigration of aliens into the United States.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 14063. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and to certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 13944. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war.

PANAMA RAILROAD CO.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President, which, with the accompanying documents, was referred to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

I transmit herewith, for the information of the Congress, the Seventy-fifth Annual Report of the Board of Directors of the Panama Railroad Co. for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
28 February, 1921.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE OF WICKERSHAM AGAINST SULZER AND GRIGSBY.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up a privileged report, the contested-election case from Alaska of James Wickersham against Charles A. Sulzer and George B. Grisby, and I desire to offer a resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa calls up a contested-election case and submits a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Charles A. Sulzer was not elected a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the Territory of Alaska in this Congress, and George B. Grigsby, who is now occupying the seat made vacant by the death of said Sulzer, is not entitled to a seat herein.

Resolved, That James Wickersham was duly elected a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska in this Congress and is entitled to a seat herein.

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. KING. I understand that Mr. Sulzer is dead. Can we act upon that matter here in the House when the Member is dead and gone?

The SPEAKER. This is a contested-election case which was referred to the committee and the committee has reported upon it.

Mr. DOWELL. May I inquire of the gentleman from Texas how much time is desired on that side?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I have requests for enough time to make two hours and a half on this side. Two years ago they consumed from two to three days in the discussion of the case, and the record in this case is as voluminous as it was in that.

Mr. DOWELL. I appreciate that fact, but the condition of the calendar is such that we will be unable to get that much time.

Mr. HUDSPETH. The requests that I have will amount to more than that time. How much time does the gentleman expect to use on that side?

Mr. DOWELL. The same time as gentlemen use on that side.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Well, I will be willing to agree on five hours.

Mr. DOWELL. We must close this case up in a short time, as other matters are pressing. We must get through it as soon as possible.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOWELL. Yes.

Mr. MONDELL. I was under the impression that this case could be disposed of in two hours—one hour on a side.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I would state that the record in this case comprises 800 pages, and I do not think you can discuss it in 30 minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. One hour on each side is suggested.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I certainly would like to have a half an hour and my colleague [Mr. O'CONNELL] would like a half an hour.

Mr. MONDELL. If we had an abundance of time we would be delighted to hear the gentlemen at length; unfortunately we are close to the end of the session.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I appreciate that, but in order to do justice to this case I do not think we should have less than two hours on a side.

Mr. DOWELL. Can not the gentlemen get along with one hour on that side?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I do not think so.

Mr. DOWELL. We have more to talk on on this side than you have on that side, but, in order to facilitate matters, I am willing to get through with it in an hour on this side, because I know the pressure there is for other matters, and I think this case should be completed as soon as possible. Can not the gentleman get along with one hour?

Mr. HUDSPETH. No; I would not attempt to discuss the case and present it to the House under 30 minutes. I assume that the House wants to hear the facts, and I am going to try and give them to the House so that they can pass on it intelligently.

Mr. MONDELL. The gentleman will certainly be able to cover the case in an hour and a half?

Mr. HUDSPETH. As I said to the gentleman from Iowa, I noticed that two years ago they consumed three days in the discussion of the case.

Mr. MONDELL. We then had plenty of time; but the gentleman realizes that we are within three days of the end of the session, with some appropriation bills to be considered. The gentleman realizes that it is necessary that we shall reduce the time on this matter as much as possible.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I appreciate that. I want to curtail the time as much as possible, and am willing to take two hours on this side.

Mr. MONDELL. An hour and a half. I realize that we can not conclude this matter to-day, and if we give any further time, I think the gentleman ought to be able to get along on an hour and a half.

Mr. HUDSPETH. If we had an hour and a half on a side we could not conclude to-day.

Mr. MONDELL. No; we can not conclude to-day.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Then, why not give us more than an hour and a half?

Mr. MONDELL. Because we have a number of important matters coming up to-morrow; we have a caucus to-night, so that we can not run beyond 6 o'clock.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I have conferred with my colleagues, and they do not think we can get through in an hour and a half.

Mr. MONDELL. I do not see how we can make it a longer time than an hour and a half, and I think under the circumstances that is very liberal.

Mr. GARD. Is it the purpose of the gentleman that we should have a night session to-morrow night?

Mr. MONDELL. It is, if we have business requiring it, and I think we will. We have a great deal of business left.

Mr. GARD. I suggest that we go on with this case this afternoon and again to-morrow night.

Mr. FIELDS. Is this proposition for an hour and a half on each side?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Well, I do not think it a sufficient time, but if it is agreeable to others I will accept.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Iowa asks unanimous consent that the time be limited to three hours, one hour and a half on each side, one-half to be controlled by himself and one-half by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH]; is there objection?

Mr. FERRIS. Reserving the right to object, I do not think you will have changed a single vote by these long speeches. There are some other matters which have been waiting for weeks and months more important than this. I do not think at this late day that we ought to have three hours of debate on an election case.

Mr. MONDELL. I agree with the gentleman fully; but we want to be reasonable even at this late day in the session.

Mr. FERRIS. I call attention to the fact that there has been a great exercise of patience on bills which are much more important, involving an entire people and an entire State, of vital interest to our State. We can pass it in 20 minutes, but we can not get the 20 minutes.

Mr. MONDELL. Well, if the gentleman insists, we may move the previous question within the hour.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. You might try it, but you will fail; you can not throw a man out of the House without giving him a chance to be heard. It will not work.

Mr. MONDELL. I think the gentleman ought to agree to three hours.

Mr. COLLIER. That is an hour and a half on a side?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes. A bill in which the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] is vitally interested, and in which we are all interested, I think, will follow this.

Mr. FERRIS. Would not the majority leader consent to let a bill be sandwiched in somewhere, under suspension, that would not take over 20 minutes.

Mr. DOWELL. Consent will not be given that any bill come in front of this contested-election case.

Mr. FERRIS. I do not want to stand in the attitude of making an objection.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Objection will not do any good; it would not shorten the time.

Mr. FERRIS. It might.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Oh, no.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. COLLIER. Mr. Speaker, I think this is a matter of great importance to the people who are interested, and that an hour and a half on a side is not asking too much.

Mr. HUDSPETH. They have agreed to that.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time be limited to three hours, one-half to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] and one-half by myself; that the gentleman from Texas be permitted to yield a part of his time to the contestee, Mr. Grigsby, and that I be permitted to yield a part of my time to the contestant, Mr.

Wickersham, and that at the end of the time allotted the previous question shall be considered as ordered.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. And that meanwhile the gentleman from Texas have permission to offer a substitute. Of course, he has that right anyway.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, does the gentleman intend to continue this to-morrow, until it is concluded?

Mr. DOWELL. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. There might be conference reports come in, or a suspension of the rules.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARD. What is the proper time for the gentleman from Texas to offer a substitute?

The SPEAKER. The Chair is of the same opinion just expressed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that he has the right to offer it at any time before the previous question is ordered.

Mr. DOWELL. The previous question will also be considered as ordered on any amendment or substitute?

The SPEAKER. Certainly. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following substitute which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That James Wickersham was not elected a Delegate to the Sixty-sixth Congress from the Territory of Alaska, and is not entitled to a seat in said Congress.

Resolved, That Charles A. Sulzer was duly elected a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska to the Sixth-sixth Congress, and that said Charles A. Sulzer having died, and George B. Grigsby having been elected at a special election as a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska, and having been sworn in as a Member of the House of Representatives on July 1, 1920, that the said Grigsby is entitled to retain his seat therein.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, this contest differs in some respects from many of the contests that have been brought before the House. The certificate of election in this case was issued to Mr. Sulzer as a Delegate from Alaska after the death of Mr. Sulzer. This certificate was duly filed. Thereafter Mr. Wickersham served notice upon the Clerk and attempted to proceed with a contest. Later on a resolution was offered in the House after Mr. Grigsby had been elected at a special election called for that purpose to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Sulzer. The House passed the resolution which provided a method by which this contest might be continued or by which the contest might be carried on, extending the time for taking the testimony and consolidating the Grigsby case with the case of Mr. Wickersham against Sulzer. The two contests, as it were, are in the same case.

Your committee present its findings in the report filed herein, and recommend the passing of the resolution declaring that Mr. Wickersham was elected at the regular election in November, 1918, and as he was elected at the regular election, the death of Mr. Sulzer caused no vacancy, and therefore there was no vacancy to fill and Mr. Grigsby is not entitled to the seat.

As was suggested by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH], this case required a great deal of investigation. The arguments on each side before the committee lasted 12 hours. The record in the case is very voluminous and it will hardly be possible to go over this case in the time allotted. I do want to call attention, if I can, to some of the things which controlled the committee in making its findings. Your committee are unable to agree upon the law and the facts in the case, and the minority have filed their views and will present their reasons for their findings.

Two years ago there was a contest of the same character here involving some of the same questions that are involved in this case. That case was then before a committee, a majority of whom were from the other side of the House. The committee presented a unanimous report and it was presented to the House by the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. WILSON]. In that report the committee went into many of the questions which are being considered in this case. So far as the questions involved in the case before the last Congress are concerned, your committee adopted the law in the report submitted to that Congress, believing that that case was carefully investigated and well considered. That report was from the Committee on Elections No. 1. That case determined, as I have suggested, a number of questions involved in this case and which I will not now take the time to go into, as it is fully covered in the report. This committee has followed identically that report. Forty-four of these soldiers who enlisted in the United States voted in Alaska, and these 44 were placed under the rule laid down by the former committee.

Congress adopted a law regulating the elections in Alaska. Under the law that Congress has adopted it requires that everyone entitled to vote shall be a resident of the Territory for one year and of the precinct for 30 days. Under this law a number who did not vote in their proper precincts were not entitled to vote, as determined by your committee, and I call attention to the fact that this question was determined by Mr. Grigsby in this contest, he then being the attorney general of Alaska. Mr. Grigsby at that time was legal advisor of the canvassing board, and I want to read to you his opinion which states clearly the law with reference to this question. It appears that the legislature of Alaska attempted to enact a law in conflict with the act of Congress relating to elections in Alaska, and it is to that act that reference is made in this opinion. I read you this opinion:

I have to advise you that the legislature in attempting to change the qualifications of voters by this act exceeded its power, the qualifications having been fixed by the act of May 7, 1906, and continued in full force and effect by the organic act or constitution of Alaska. The organic act expressly authorized the legislature to extend the elective franchise to women, but in no other way authorized the changing of the qualifications of electors by the legislature.

Respectfully submitted.

GEORGE B. GRIGSBY, Attorney General.

I am not going to dwell upon that further than to give you the law that was laid down by Congress and followed by Mr. Grigsby as attorney general.

With reference to the Indian vote, the committee followed the action of the former committee. Judge Wickersham protested with a great deal of vigor, and sometimes very vehemently, that the Indians should not be permitted to vote. This committee, however, followed the opinion laid down by the former committee and held that we would let this vote stand. Judge Wickersham would have gained many votes by excluding the Indian vote, but your committee felt that because the House overwhelmingly adopted the opinion in the other case we ought to follow literally the opinion rendered in that decision.

Now, I want to come to another question with reference to this election which is a sample of some of the things done in this election. In what is known as the 40-mile district there were five voting precincts. The law laid down by the Congress provides that the commissioner may create voting precincts by entering of record 60 days before the election and by giving notice thereof. Just before the election, about 35 days, Mr. Donovan, who was commissioner of the 40-mile district, redistricted the 40-mile district, putting it into three voting precincts. Now, I call your attention to how this was done. The law required that it should be done 60 days before the election. Mr. Grigsby in the hearings before this committee stated the following:

But the order is irregular and defective in these particulars technically.

It was not made 60 days before the election and it compelled 15 or 18 voters if they wanted to vote to walk or ride a distance of 14 to 16 miles and return, and some of them did it and some of them got mad and would not do it.

Now, I am setting this out because there is no controversy on the question of the law. The law required this to be done 60 days before. It was not done in compliance with the law, and therefore my contention is that the district recreated was not lawfully done, and therefore this vote should not be lawfully counted. Now, what are the facts? Twenty or twenty-one witnesses were called in this case and testified that they lived in the two precincts which were absorbed in the other three. Those two precincts were what were known as Jack Wade precinct and Steel Creek precinct. These were both post offices and centers in their localities. The other precincts were not post offices, but people came to these post offices to get their mail. The two precincts which were abolished in this district were Republican precincts. Both of them were known to be Republican precincts. Here is the testimony of one witness and the others were similar. Remember there were 20 who failed to vote, and he said they could not vote because of the change, that the distance had been made so great they were unable to vote. These people did not have automobiles, they were poor people who had but one remedy, and that was to walk the 16 miles and return. I read from the testimony of C. D. Arnold, page 260 of the record:

Q. How far is it from Steel Creek to the Moose polling place and return?—A. Thirty miles.

Q. Would it be a two days' trip in November?—A. Yes.

Q. What would the expense be?—A. $8.

Q. How many voters are there resident at Moose Creek?—A. Two.

Q. Where does Moose Creek and all of the Moose voting precincts get mail?—A. Steel Creek and Jack Wade post offices.

They moved these precincts by this method, and, mark you, in violation of law. They moved them from the post office where the people from the other precincts came to get their mail and placed them 15 to 16 miles away—one place, Moose Creek, where only 2 voters resided, thus depriving 20 voters from voting, some of them having resided there for many years and had been voting at this precinct for six years. This precinct had been established for at least six years. Many voters were disfranchised by this unlawful act of the commissioner. Now, I want to call your attention to the law, as some may not understand how the committee arrived at its conclusion. Everyone knows that these 20 voters ought to have had an opportunity to vote at this election. Sixteen or seventeen of them testified, if permitted to vote, they would have voted for Judge Wickersham. Two or three testified they would have voted for Mr. Sulzer. The commissioner who made this change in the program knew what the result would be. The other precincts were not Republican, and he knew it. These two precincts were the only Republican precincts in his district, and they were abolished by adding them to another one 15 or 16 miles away.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has consumed 20 minutes.

Mr. DOWELL. I will take 10 minutes more. We had a similar case in the Forty-fourth Congress. Now, my position is that no one who has a right to vote—and those were all qualified as voters in Alaska, and in these precincts—my position is that no one ought to be deprived of the right to cast his vote by a manipulation, and especially in violation of law; that every one of these 20 voters ought to have had the right to go to the polling places that they had been going to for the past six years and cast their vote for a Delegate from Alaska. In the Forty-fourth Congress a case arose similar to this one.

Mr. YATES. Will the gentleman state what the majority was as finally found?

Mr. DOWELL. The committee have found that Wickersham was elected by 37 majority. The original vote was 33 for Sulzer, and I will say, in counting the ballots, 2 more votes were added to the vote of Wickersham, making 31. But I want to call attention to this committee report in the Forty-fourth Congress in the case of Cox against Strait, from Minnesota, page 310, Rowell's Digest.

The law of Minnesota authorized the board of supervisors to fix the boundaries of precincts just as this Congress authorized the commissioner in Alaska to fix the precincts in Alaska, and the board of supervisors were given authority to fix those precincts at any stated meeting of the board in January or September. They had a legal right to hold special meetings which they held, and on the 5th of October they held a special meeting and they then fixed the precincts for the election to follow, which is identically the question involved here. Commissioner Donovan fixed these precincts at a time not authorized by law, being less than 60 days prior to the election.

Let me read to you what was said by the committee in that case:

> The allegation that certain precincts in Lyon County were illegally established was sustained. The law provided that the board of county commissioners should meet at certain times in the year, and in extra sessions at other times when deemed necessary by a majority of the board. At their stated meetings in January and September they were empowered, under certain circumstances, to establish election districts. The election districts complained of in this county were established at an extra session, and were hence illegal. All the votes cast at them were rejected.

There was nothing in that case that deprived any voter of the right to vote. But the committee held as a question of law, by reason of the fact that they did not comply with the law, that notwithstanding no harm was done, they should refuse to count 111 votes for the contestee. And that report was accepted by the House, and your committee have followed it, as it is directly in line with this case.

Mr. DAVIS of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOWELL. I can not. I have only a few minutes.

There is one other question I want to take up, and that is in the Cache Creek precinct. Cache Creek was the place where they voted at 5 o'clock in the morning. I want to call your attention to it, because it is one of the places where it may be immaterial whether this precinct is counted or not so far as this election is concerned, because if you count all of it or do not count any of it, it may not affect the result here.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DOWELL. I can not. I have not the time.

Mr. YOUNG of North Dakota. I want to know when the day starts up there.

Mr. DOWELL. The law provides the polls shall be open from 8 o'clock a. m. until 7 p. m. Cache Creek was a little camp that was broken up. They were leaving that camp on the morning of election. I call your attention to this, because some queer things happened up there pretty nearly in the middle of the night. There were five witnesses who testified in this case. Some 23 votes were cast there.

The camp moved out that morning, except probably some five or six people who remained, and took all their baggage. I want to call attention to the testimony of one witness, who is the only witness that testified directly, and who answered questions in such a way that indicated that he was trying to state the facts. The rest of them were evasive, uncertain, not definite. But Malcolm McDonald—I take it from the name that he was a newcomer; Scotchman—testified as follows. He is the only witness that fixed the time definitely, the only one that could put his finger upon it and say what the time was when they pulled out. The testimony says:

> Q. Mr. McDonald, how early in the morning did you begin to pack up before leaving, as near as you can recollect?—A. At 4 o'clock I was out in the yard getting ready.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Q. About what time did you have breakfast?—A. About 4 o'clock. * * * I noticed the time when I went to breakfast.
>
> Q. What time was it?—A. Ten minutes after 4.
>
> Q. How long after that did you leave, do you recollect?—A. Not more than an hour.

And further he says:

> I think I can remember nearly. I am sure myself that it was not more than 5 o'clock. I do not think it was after 5 when we pulled out.

Every one of some 23 to 26—and some of them put the number as high as 30—who were entitled to vote, cast his vote before he left the camp, and left the polls there, if they were left, almost unguarded.

Now, here comes more of this.

> Q. Did you vote?—A. No, sir.

This is not one of the partisans, now, gentlemen. They say he is not naturalized; that he only had his first papers. He says that he did not vote. But he states the reason he did not want to vote.

> Q. For what reason?—A. There had been arguments about it, and I thought it was illegal.
>
> Q. With whom did you have arguments, Mr. McDonald?—A. Mattocks.
>
> * * * * * * *
>
> Q. On the morning of the election?—A. Before that; it had been talked over the night before.
>
> Q. Were there any others present when you were having this talk?—A. I did not speak to anyone but Harris.

Harris is one of the shareholders of the Cache Creek Dredging Co., he says.

> I said, "What are you going to do about this election?"
>
> Q. What did Harris say?—A. Harris said, "If they all want to vote, we'll shove the clock ahead and make it time."
>
> Q. Was Harris one of the judges of election?—A. I understand that he was. I was not in where they voted. He was appointed one.

Now, that is not all. They took him to task because he said he did not vote because he thought it was illegal, and they asked him:

> You made the statement you would not vote because you thought the election was illegal. Isn't it a fact that you knew you were not entitled to vote, not being a citizen?—A. No; I thought I could vote.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has now consumed 30 minutes.

Mr. DOWELL. I will take five minutes more.

He said:

> No; I thought I could vote, having my first papers.
>
> Q. You thought you could vote on your first papers?—A. Yes, sir.

Here is a man who thought he could vote, even though he only had his first papers. Now, here is other testimony of one who did vote, and this question was asked him:

> Wouldn't you be positive you were in the precinct 30 days before election?—A. I could not say as to that; would not try to.

This is one of the men who voted and left before 5 o'clock in the morning, according to Mr. McDonald.

Now, here is another one that testified, Mr. Kingsbury. Here are the questions that were asked him. Listen to his answers:

> Q. What time did the polls open, Mr. Kingsbury?—A. I would not say, sir.
>
> Q. What time did you vote?—A. I could not say that.

Further questions asked him were as follows: "Was it before 8 o'clock?" The answer was, "I could not say it was before 8 o'clock." "Was it after 8 o'clock?" The answer was, "I could not say it was after 8 o'clock." The next question was, "You could not say what time it was?" The answer was, "No; I could not say."

That is the kind of testimony that was given here. But here is something more: One James Wheelock testified. He voted. The question was asked of him, "At what time of day did you vote?" He said, "That I could not say. I never noticed the time." "What was the condition of the light?" and so forth. "It was lamplight." "Where was the voting done, Mr. Wheelock?" The answer was, "In the dining room of the company's camp." "Is that where you voted?" "No, sir; I voted in my place. They brought me the ballot box." "From the place where the election was held?" "Yes, sir." "Was the lamp lit?" "Yes, sir." "Was it dark outside?" "Yes, sir."

Think of it, gentlemen, 5 o'clock in the morning, out with a lantern and a ballot box, hunting votes to put in this ballot box, that they might leave at 5 o'clock in the morning! It seems to me, gentlemen, that while it may not be necessary to the election of Judge Wickersham that this precinct be eliminated, there is no one who would want to establish such a precedent and expect an election there hereafter to be conducted in accordance with law.

I want to call your attention to the law applicable to this case. In a California case—Tebbe v. Smith (41 Pac. Rep., 457 Calif.)—which was quoted and approved by the Supreme Court of Texas in the case of Savage v. Humphreys (118 Southwestern Rep., 893).

I read from this opinion:

In this case we are quite willing to believe that the misconduct of the officers of Lake precinct was prompted by nothing worse than ignorance—

In this case the polls were open about three hours after time.

In this case we are quite willing to believe that the misconduct of the officers of Lake precinct was prompted by nothing worse than ignorance and lack of appreciation of the responsibility of their positions, and we may say further—for such is the evidence—that no harm is shown to have resulted from their conduct; but, looking to the purity of elections and integrity of the ballot box, we are constrained to hold that conduct like this amounts in itself to such a failure to observe the substantial requirements of the law as must invalidate the election. And while reluctant so to hold in this instance, we are confirmed in the opinion by consideration of the fact that any other interpretation would add grave peril to the safe conduct of our elections, which are already harassed by dangers enough.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman has occupied 35 minutes. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] is recognized.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. O'CONNOR].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Louisiana is recognized for 15 minutes.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker and Members of the House, in order to fully understand this contested-election case and to have a full appreciation of the arguments that will be made by the Members in behalf of the majority report, as well as those of the minority who submitted their views for the consideration of the House, permit me to make this statement of the case:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

At the general election held in Alaska on November 5, 1918, James Wickersham, the contestant herein, was the Republican candidate and Charles A. Sulzer was the Democratic candidate for Delegate to Congress. Francis Connolly was the Socialist candidate, but received only a few hundred votes.

From the official count as reported by the canvassing board Francis Connolly received 329 votes, Charles A. Sulzer 4,487 votes, James Wickersham 4,454 votes. Sulzer's plurality, 33.

Before the canvassing board had completed the canvass and announced the result, and on April 15, 1919, Charles A. Sulzer died. The canvassing board completed the canvass and declared the result on April 17, 1919, and issued a certificate of election certifying the election of Charles A. Sulzer, which certificate was duly filed with the Clerk of the House of Representatives.

The Legislature of Alaska passed an act providing for a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Sulzer. This act was approved on April 28, 1919. Under this act the governor called a special election, which was held on June 3, 1919, at which special election James Wickersham was not a candidate, and George B. Grigsby received a majority of the votes cast, and the canvassing board on June 14, 1919, issued a certificate of election to George B. Grigsby, the contestee herein, which certificate was filed on July 1, 1919, and he was sworn in and took his seat in the House of Representatives as such Delegate from Alaska on said date.

After the death of Charles A. Sulzer, and after the certificate of election had been issued to him, James Wickersham, the contestant, on May 3, 1919, filed notice of contest with the Clerk of the House, and under this notice took some ex parte testimony in the case. Contestant also about June 23, 1919, served notice of contest on Mr. Grigsby, notifying him of his intention to contest the special election of June 3, and also the election of Sulzer on November 5, 1918.

The Committee on Elections, finding the testimony taken by contestant was ex parte, therefore could not consider such evidence in the case. On account of the death of Sulzer and the contestant being unable to comply with the statute relative to notice and the taking of testimony on the 28th day of July, 1919, the House of Representatives passed a consolidating resolution extending the time for taking testimony for 90 days from the date of passing the resolution, and providing the manner of giving notice and taking the testimony, substituting George B. Grigsby in all necessary respects for Charles A. Sulzer, deceased, in this contest.

Under this resolution both parties took testimony, which was fully submitted to the committee, and the committee has fully considered all of this evidence, including the arguments of counsel. The questions in this case are, first, the election on November 5, 1918, as between James Wickersham, contestant, and Charles A. Sulzer; second, the election of George B. Grigsby at the special election of June 3, 1919. The special election was to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Charles A. Sulzer, and in the event Sulzer was duly elected on the 5th of November, 1918, the question then turns to the objections contestant makes to the special election on June 3, 1919. In the event James Wickersham was elected on November 5, 1918, and not Charles A. Sulzer, there was no vacancy created by the death of Charles A. Sulzer, and therefore no vacancy could be filled at the special election on June 3, 1919.

The record in this case is very voluminous, involving many controversies of fact and a number of questions of law. I will endeavor in the time allotted to me to touch upon but a few of the very high spots, or peaks, that stand out from this sea of facts and law and precedent. If I had had my way, in view of the limited time allowed for the presentation of this case, I would have divided that time between Judge Wickersham and Mr. Grigsby and permitted each of them to present his own view and his own case. I am satisfied that if that plan had obtained you would have rendered judgment in favor of Mr. Grigsby, because under such an arrangement he might be able to present the unanswerable case which he so brilliantly made before the committee. Even under the present circumstances, Mr. Speaker, and with the very limited time which will be allowed him if he present the case one-half as well as he did before the committee, there will be no doubt about the decision you will render. He will be under a handicap as a result of an inability to present his argument as fully as he desires, but the justice that is in his cause and the irresistible logic with which he presents it to you for your consideration will, I have no doubt, determine the decision in his favor.

I have no feeling against Judge Wickersham, the contestant in this case, either personally or politically. I have no hostility to him because he marches behind Republican banners. I feel no antagonism to him because he wears the Republican badge.

Personally I have found him to be a charming gentleman with an agreeable personality. I believe that he is a virile, dominating character. I have no political bias in favor of Mr. Grigsby, as I realized from the moment that I was made a member of the Committee on Elections that I was to act more in a judicial than a legislative capacity.

The legislator is always mindful of the solemn duties that he has to perform and though he is never forgetful of his oath of office the political complexities, plans, and aspirations of his party may at times unconsciously obscure his judgment. Not so with one who has to bear the great responsibility of deciding justly between men and upon matters of great moment to the welfare of the Nation. Every man, I think, recognizes to a certain extent the full meaning of the maxim "Noblesse oblige"—rank imposes obligations—but no one recognizes the obligation more than the upright judge who venerates the institution over which he presides. I have approached this case as a judge free from party prejudice rather than as a legislator who might unconsciously view it, with its political colorings, from a biased standpoint. Before proceeding to a discussion of the contest, again permit me at the risk of tautology and redundancy of expression to say that I concede to others what I wish granted to myself—the right to criticize the judgment of my fellows when called upon to do so in my public capacity and character, free from rancor or passion, keeping in mind the eternal truth that no man possesses the inflexible touchstone of truth, and that men equally honest and sincere will draw opposite conclusions from a given state of facts. I will discuss this report as the subjects therein appeal to my mind, and not in the order in which they are arranged in that report.

One of the peaks in this case and the first one which I shall discuss is known as Cache Creek precinct. It is difficult, notwithstanding my affection and esteem for the majority Members, to read this finding on this phase of our investigation without indignation. Perhaps in order to understand this and other chapters in this amazing report, we might do well to look at the map of Alaska. Within that great inclosure whose shores are washed by the Arctic, North Pacific, and Bering Seas are approximately 600,000 square miles of territory—a land of mist and snow, stupendous mountains, great lakes, canyons, and vast wonderful stretches, over which miners make their way for miles by trail when breaking summer camp and heading for winter quarters. At this period of the year the days are very short and in order to make a journey one has to start early and run the risk of losing the trail. In this Cache Creek precinct Connolly received 1 vote, Sulzer 23, and Wickersham 2 votes. Election day fell on the last day that the men of Cache Creek had to "hit it" for another, a winter camp. On the night before it was agreed by unanimous consent, as it were, to vote early, and then begin the dangerous journey ahead and with might and main beat the sun to it, and reach the end of the trail before night closed in on them. Not a single voter was deprived of or denied his rights or privileges. Not a man was heard to complain that he was injured, not a protest from a single American citizen, and yet, I almost hesitate to say it, the majority threw out, flung on the trash heap, as it were, this ballot box, divested red-blooded Americans of their birthright, men who toil and moil far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife, and for no other reason in the world than that the poll was opened a little too early, that the majesty of the law was ignored, offended against because the miners did not wait until the hour fixed had arrived and then perhaps lose the trail in an unbroken country where trails are few and far between.

There is a gentleman in this House who sits on the Republican side, who is more than friendly to me, who has been almost affectionately disposed to me from the time I came to Congress. I have ofttimes laughed in admiration at the manner in which he takes this floor, when moved to exasperation by what he considers the twaddle offered as a reason in support of a weak or inconsistent position by Members, and cries out in stentorian tones, "Bunk!" I wish I could adopt that tone to-day in denouncing this judgment of the committee. I wish I had his manner and could feelingly express the words that would burn and blister this judgment. I wish I had his raucous yell of anger and his strident voice to denounce this majority report.

To justify this finding which strikes down the rights of their countrymen the majority submits the case of Verney v. Justice (86 Ky., 595) decided in Kentucky before Alaska was acquired by the United States, a decision which dealt with conditions in a populous State and circumstances totally different than obtains in tremendous Alaska, as large in area as Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and all of the Southern States put together except Texas, a decision as applicable to Alaska as it would be to the moon, if that be not a burned out and uninhabitable satellite, as astronomers tell us; or the planet Mars, if there be contests on that far-away mysterious sphere. What a superstitious regard for precedents, what a reverence for the principle of mortmain—the dead hand ruling tyrannically and denying justice to the living. One is tempted, at the risk of being trite, to alter the celebrated exclamation of Mme. de Roland while going to the guillotine, and shout out, "Oh, law! oh, precedents, what political crimes are committed in your name!" But injustice can never be law and no precedent will be applied that would support such a monstrous iniquity that it is sought to perpetrate here. Nay, the common law itself is nothing else but reason. It is the perfection of reason, so declared Edward Coke. So declares millions of common-sensed English-speaking people.

Mr. Speaker, that finding was a part of a whittling-down process, pursued unconsciously perhaps, but relentlessly. Sulzer's majority was 33. It invited a contest. So be it. Attention committee! Do your duty! "Theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do or die," politically. On to the dump heap with Grigsby and Sulzer! The living foe and the dead enemy must go down in a common ruin! Already you see the end. Why, of course you do. But let us follow on, for the oppression that lies behind this terrible judgment may have value for liberty-loving souls who would love liberty in the darkest hours and loneliest cells. By order of "the committee," or the majority members thereof, Sulzer is stripped of 23 votes, a net loss of 21 votes, and Freedom may shriek in Alaska if she will.

Forty Mile district! What romance and adventure lies in the name, but in the future it will also be associated with the grossest miscarriage of justice ever perpetrated in the name of law and order within the history of the Congress of the United States. Let me give you the history of "Forty Mile" in so far as it affects this contest and as it is written into their report by the majority:

The contestant charges that in the Forty Mile district there was an official suppression in the election in certain precincts in the district in the interest of Mr. Sulzer, whereby the contestant lost some 20 votes. The testimony discloses that prior to the election in 1918 there were five voting precincts in this district, known as the Jack Wade precinct, Steel Creek precinct, Franklin precinct, Chicken precinct, and Moose Creek precinct. That about October 1, 1918, Commissioner Donovan, of the district, made an order redistricting the district into three voting precincts, to wit, Franklin, Chicken, and Moose Creek, thereby abolishing the Jack Wade and Steel Creek voting precincts in the district, or rather merging these precincts into the other three precincts, and it is charged that this was done for the purpose and that it had the effect of placing the voting precincts at such great distances from the voters that the voters in the Jack Wade and Steel Creek precincts, by reason of the great distance, were unable to reach the polls and to cast their ballots at the election. The authority and duty of the commissioner in providing voting precincts in the various election districts is defined in section 5 of the act of Congress of May 7, 1906, and is as follows:

"SEC. 5. That all of the territory in each recording district now existing or hereafter created situate outside of an incorporated town shall, for the purpose of this act, constitute one election district; that in each year in which a Delegate is to be elected the commissioner in each of said election districts shall, at least 30 days before the date of said first election and at least 60 days before the date of each subsequent election, issue an order and notice, signed by him and entered in his records in a book to be kept by him for that purpose, in which said order and notice he shall—

"First. Divide his election district into such number of voting precincts as may in his judgment be necessary or convenient, defining the boundaries of each precinct by natural objects and permanent monuments or landmarks as far as practicable and in such manner that the boundaries of each can be readily determined and become generally known from such description, specifying a polling place in each of said precincts, and give to each voting place an appropriate name by which the same shall thereafter be designated: Provided, however, That no such voting precinct shall be established with less than 30 qualified voters resident therein; that the precincts established as aforesaid shall remain as permanent precincts for all subsequent elections, unless discontinued or changed by order of the commissioner of that district.

"Second. Give notice of said election, specifying in said notice, among other things, the date of such election, the boundary of the voting precincts as established, the location of the polling place in the precinct, and the hours between which said polling places will be open. Said order and notice shall be given publicity by said commissioner by posting copies of the same at least 20 days before the date of said first election and at least 30 days before the date of each subsequent election, etc."

The election of November 5, 1918, was not the first election after the passage of the act, and therefore the order, under this act, must be made at least 60 days before the date of the election. The evidence, however, shows that it was made and signed on October 1, 1918, calling the election for November 5, 1918. We herewith set out a copy of the order of Commissioner Donovan with reference to this voting district:

"ORDER AND NOTICE OF ELECTION TO BE HELD ON TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1918.

"In the office of the United States commissioner at Franklin, Alaska, fourth judicial division, in the matter of the election of a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the Territory of Alaska, one member of the Senate of the Territory of Alaska, four members of the House of Representatives of the Territory of Alaska, one road commissioner for road district No. 4.

"In pursuance of an act of Congress approved May 7, 1906, entitled 'An act providing for the election of a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the Territory of Alaska,' I, John J. Donovan, United States commissioner, in and for the Forty Mile precinct, fourth division, Territory of Alaska, do hereby order that said recording district be, and the same is hereby, divided into the following voting precincts, the boundaries thereof defined, a polling place specified, and a notice of said election published, fixing the date of said election, and designating the said polling places as follows, and the hours between which said polling places will be open:

"1. Moose Creek precinct.—It is ordered that the boundaries of said precinct shall be as follows: Commencing on the Forty Mile River, at the international boundary line, thence running upstream to the mouth of O'Brien Creek, including all tributaries flowing into the said Forty Mile River and Walkers Fork and all its tributaries, from the mouth of Cherry Creek upstream to the international boundary line.

"2. Franklin voting precinct.—It is ordered that the boundaries of said precinct shall be as follows: Commencing on the Forty Mile River at the mouth of O'Brien Creek, thence running upstream and including all tributaries of the North Fork, within the boundaries of the Forty Mile precinct, and all tributaries of the South Fork upstream to the mouth of Walkers Fork, thence in an easterly direction to the mouth of Cherry Creek on said Walkers Fork and all its tributaries flowing into Walkers Fork.

"3. Chicken voting precinct.—It is ordered that the boundaries of said precinct shall be as follows: Commencing at the mouth of Walkers Fork on the South Fork of the Forty Mile River, thence in a southerly direction, including Dennison Fork and all its tributaries, Mosquito Fork and all its tributaries, and the Tanana Basin within the boundaries of the Forty Mile precinct.

"4. That the several polling places herein designated will be open for the reception of votes from 8 o'clock unto 7 o'clock p. m. on the day of said election, to wit, the 5th day of November, 1918.

"Dated this the 1st day of October, 1918.

"JOHN J. DONOVAN,
"United States Commissioner in and
"for the Forty Mile Precinct,
"Territory of Alaska."

This order fixing the precincts in this district is not in compliance with the law above set forth. It was not issued and entered in his records 60 days before the date of the election and does not specify a polling place in each precinct, as required by law, and does not give the location of the polling places in each precinct, as provided by law.

Prior to the election on November 5, 1918, there had been five polling places in the election district as above stated. These had been established for some years and were well known to the voters. These could be changed only under the provisions of the law. In this instance the commissioner had received a letter from the clerk of Judge Bunnell, which was approved either before or after its signing. The last clause of the letter of instructions was as follows:

"The attention of one or two commissioners is directed to section 396 of the Compiled Laws of Alaska. The law does not contemplate the establishing of voting precincts in places where many prior elections have proven that there are but five or six votes. While it is not believed that any considerable number of voters should be deprived of their franchise by reason of having no voting precinct established, yet it is a matter which should receive the careful attention of the commissioner creating the same.

"Respectfully,

"J. E. CLARK, Clerk.

"(In the District Court for the Territory of Alaska, Fourth Judicial District.)"

The record in this case discloses that 20 witnesses were called who lived in the Jack Wade and Steel Creek precincts. These were citizens and lawful voters of these precincts. All of these witnesses testified they were unable to vote because it would require at least two days, and traveling a distance of some thirty-odd miles, to and returning from the voting precincts as designated by the commissioner. Three of these voters testified had they been permitted to vote they would have voted for Mr. Sulzer. One testified he would have voted the Socialist ticket. All of the others testified they would have voted for Mr. Wickersham for Delegate from Alaska.

John Ostergard, who testified he would have voted for Sulzer, page 265 of the record, states:

"Q. Is it not true that in redistricting the Forty Mile recording precinct J. J. Donovan, the United States commissioner, retained only those that had before given a Democratic majority, i. e., Chicken, Franklin, and Moose voting precincts, and eliminated both Steel and Jack Wade precincts, usually giving a Republican vote?—A. Yes."

Brost, a Democrat, testified, page 262 of the record, as follows:

"Q. Is it not true that the United States commissioner, in redistricting the Forty Mile precinct, eliminated the Steel and Jack Wade voting precincts, the two that gave a Republican majority?—A. Yes."

In the election in 1916 the vote at Jack Wade precinct was: Sulzer, 3; Wickersham, 9; Lewis, 9, making a total of 21 votes. In the Steel Creek precinct: Sulzer, 1; Wickersham, 9; Lewis, 2, making a total of 12 votes.

Ewing, who testified, page 262 of the record, said:

"Q. How far is it from Steel Creek to Moose and return?—A. Thirty miles.

"Q. Is it a two-day trip in November?—A. Yes, sir.

"Q. How many resident voters are there at Moose Creek?—A. Two.

"Q. Where do the voters of Moose Creek get their mail?—A. Steel Creek."

J. A. Kemp testified he had been a resident of Steel Creek for a number of years. The record, page 261, discloses the following:

"From your mercantile acquaintance of the residents of both Jack Wade and Steel precincts, would you say the vote of 1916 had materially changed in 1918?—A. Most certainly not.

"Q. As a matter of fact, where do the voters of the Moose Creek precinct go for their mail?—A. Steel Creek post office, and some to Jack Wade.

"Q. Is Moose a post office?—A. No."

T. E. Phillips, a merchant at Wade, page 259 of the record, says:

"Q. Which has the larger population, Franklin or Jack Wade?—A. Wade, by four times as much."

C. D. Arnold, on page 260 of the record, testified as follows:

"Q. How far is it from Steel Creek to the Moose polling place and return?—A. Thirty miles.

"Q. Would it be a two days' trip in November?—A. Yes.

"Q. What would the expense be?—A. Eight dollars.

"Q. How many voters are there resident at Moose Creek?—A. Two.

"Q. Where does Moose Creek and all of the Moose voting precincts get mail?—A. Steel Creek and Jack Wade post offices."

We have set out this testimony because it clearly shows that the changing of the precincts by the commissioner was not entirely in the interest of economy. The abolishing of the Jack Wade and Steel Creek precincts, the largest centers in this division, both of them having post offices where the residents for miles around went for their mail, and including the territory of these precincts in other precincts, and the placing of the voting precincts at Franklin, Chicken, and Moose Creek, the latter place having only two residents, the committee believes was for the purpose of depriving the voters of Jack Wade and Steel Creek precincts from having an opportunity to cast their votes. This action of the commissioner, as shown by the record, was in violation of law and did deprive 20 legal voters from casting their votes at the election.

These 20 voters had a legal right to vote and should have been permitted to vote and could have voted had the commissioner conducted the election in compliance with the law. Had they been permitted to vote, Connolly would have received 1 additional vote, Sulzer 3 additional votes, and Wickersham 16 additional votes in the two precincts abolished and absorbed into the other precincts. If these votes are counted 1 vote should be added to the aggregate vote for Connolly, 3 votes to the aggregate vote for Sulzer, and 16 votes to the aggregate vote for Wickersham.

However, the committee finds that the whole action of the commissioner in the Forty Mile district in redistricting said district on the 1st day of October, 1918, was in violation of the law, and this action of the commissioner did deprive at least 20 legal voters from casting their ballots at said election, and said action was without authority or jurisdiction.

It is the judgment of the committee that the votes cast in said entire district, which includes the precincts of Chicken, Franklin, and Moose Creek, were illegal and should be rejected. In the three precincts in this district the vote case was as follows:

	Connolly.	Sulzer.	Wickersham.
Chicken precinct		7	8
Franklin precinct		6	3
Moose Creek precinct	3	10	2
Total	3	23	13

Your committee therefore finds that from the aggregate vote of Connolly there should be deducted 3 votes; from the aggregate vote of Sulzer there should be deducted 23 votes; and from the aggregate vote of Wickersham there should be deducted 13 votes, a net loss to Sulzer of 10 votes.

Why did not the minority Members give value and credit to the 20 votes of those who they claim had a right to vote and should have been permitted to vote? The answer is apparent to anyone who will take the trouble to examine the figures, because such action would have resulted in giving Connolly a total of 4 votes, Sulzer 26, and Wickersham 29 votes, admitting that the computation or distribution of the 20 votes of those who did not vote is correct. That procedure would give Wickersham only 3 majority—not enough. Strip Sulzer, even though he is dead and in his grave, to the bone! Throw out the whole district; that will cut Sulzer to the extent of a net loss of 10 votes. Why this outrage? The votes are needed!

Did not the commissioner neglect to enter the order in his book, at least 60 days prior to the election, even though the voters and electors had ample notice? Keep that in mind; it was not entered in the book. The mysterious awe that took possession of the Roman when he mentioned the Sibyline books and the reverence attached to the readings and interpretations by the curators of the temple and repository of the books was hilarious joy compared with the profound humility and hushed tones of the majority when they referred to this failure to record the order in the book.

But steady; the end is near. One more outrage, before the culminating act which will close, mark finis, to this political tragedy, or farce as you choose to view it. The soldier must be denied his right, but he must be stripped with a soft and caressing hand, otherwise it might arouse the resentment of 4,000,000 who wore the uniform and whose anger is to be feared. Go easy now! Honeyed words may be found in an old report. Listen how easy they flow:

The question of domicile or place of residence of those in the military service of the country, either as officers or as men in the line, has been before Congress and in the courts in a number of cases, but not of very recent date so far as Congress is concerned. The subject is one of great importance and absorbing interest just at this time, not only in this case and in Alaska but throughout the country.

The soldier has an interest in knowing what construction is going to be placed upon the law affecting his domicile with its civil and political rights and privileges during his absence in the service of the country, while, on the other hand, the public is equally concerned as to the conditions under which a new domicile or residence may be acquired by those in the military service and stationed at many places in the several States.

Of course, domicile is more a question of fact than law; a soldier who has reenlisted and reenlisted and lived for years in Alaska, off the reservation, and has married or done any other act that creates that residence we call domicile, has a right to vote. But hold, ye majority of the committee, that domicile means the place he left at the time of original enlistment and before going to Alaska! That will kill the soldier vote. There are soldiers from all parts of the country out there. Listen to this:

In the case under consideration the evidence shows that 44 soldiers in the United States Army, stationed in Alaska, voted for Delegate at the election on the 5th day of November, 1918. As in the former case, each and all of the 44 voters in question in this case came to Alaska as soldiers in the United States Army. They remained in such service from the date of their arrival in Alaska up to the date of the election, and were in Alaska in such service on that date. All of them were enlisted and accepted for service in the States; and as indicated by the record, the number of men and dates of enlistment being as follows: Eight in 1917, 2 in 1916, 5 in 1915, 6 in 1914, 6 in 1913, 2 in 1912, 2 in 1911, 1 in 1909, 2 in 1908, 1 in 1907, 3 in 1903, 1 in 1899, 1 in 1898, 4 in ——, of whom there were 6 from Washington State; 3 each from Minnesota, California, and New York; 2 each from Texas, Illinois, Oklahoma, Kentucky, Louisiana, and Missouri; and 1 each from Georgia, Ohio, Virginia, West Virginia, Montana, South Dakota, Michigan, Kansas, Iowa, Wisconsin, and New Jersey; and 5 from States not specified.

A few of these were honorably discharged and immediately reenlisted in Alaska; and each and all of them had been in the Territory more than a year immediately preceding the date of election, and in the precinct more than 30 days immediately preceding the election day.

"If they had acquired a legal domicile in Alaska, they were entitled to vote, and the vote should be counted; otherwise not. To become a citizen and a qualified elector in Alaska a bona fide residence of 1 year in the Territory and 30 days in the voting precinct is required."

This is the rule laid down in the former case, and under this rule the House excluded all of this vote.

Remember, soldiers, you are not denied the right to vote. Perish the thought! How can we, who belong to a party that has always deplored the election laws of the Southern States passed by them to preserve their culture, their civilization, their racial purity—how can we who have protested against these enactments deny you who are bone of our bone and blood of our blood and flesh of our flesh your sacred rights? Exercise your rights, boys—you of Louisiana—if you can get the money with which to make the trip; get the steamer, and come down the sea, then cross the continent and then 1,500 miles southward, register in your former home, comply with all the registration laws of Louisiana; then you may vote. What wonderful interpretations to obscure the fundamental truth that a soldier may vote at his domicile; that a domicile is more a question of fact than of law. What attenuated refinements and ponderous, sonorous sentences to inform a soldier that he can not do the possible and convenient thing in Alaska, but that he may perform his duty by accomplishing an impossible journey, at incredible expense to himself. Again, with my friend who yells "Bunk!" I shout "Twaddle!" "Rot!" "Balderdash!" But just the same the whittling goes on, and the soldier vote is stricken down regardless of domicile acquired or not and Sulzer is reduced 35 votes, a net loss of 26 votes.

The "guff" of some authorities has supported us—the majority on the committee—in our hour of need, in the name of justice. We have knocked out Sulzer and Grigsby. Let justice be done though the heavens fall.

One more chapter and we close the book. It is a fitting finale:

Sections 1859–1860, Revised Statutes U. S., fixed the qualifications of electors in the Territories. They are as follows:

"SEC. 1859. Every male citizen above the age of 21, including persons who have legally declared their intention to become citizens in any Territory hereafter organized, and who are actual residents of such Territory at the time of the organization thereof, shall be entitled to vote at the first election in such Territory, and to hold any office therein; subject, nevertheless, to the limitations specified in the next section.

"SEC. 1860. At all subsequent elections, however, in any Territory hereafter organized by Congress, as well as at all elections in Territories already organized, the qualification of voters and of holding office shall be such as may be prescribed by the legislative assembly of each Territory; subject, nevertheless, to the following restrictions on the power of the legislative assembly, namely:

"First. The right of suffrage and of holding office shall be exercised only by citizens of the United States above the age of 21 years, and by those above that age who have declared on oath, before a competent court of record, their intention to become such, and have taken an oath to support the Constitution and Government of the United States.

"Second. There shall be no denial of the elective franchise or of holding office to a citizen on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

"Third. No officer, soldier, seaman, mariner, or other person in the Army or Navy, or attached to troops in the service of the United States, shall be allowed to vote in any Territory, by reason of being on service therein, unless such Territory is, and has been for the period of six months, his permanent domicile.

"Fourth. No person belonging to the Army or Navy shall be elected to or hold any civil office or appointment in any Territory."

In 1906 Congress passed an act governing elections in Alaska. In August, 1912, Congress passed an act creating a legislative assembly in Alaska, and in the act changed the time of election for Delegates to Congress, and provided that "all of the provisions of the aforesaid act shall continue to be in full force and effect and shall apply to the said election in every respect as is now provided for the election to be held in the month of August therein." It is clear to anyone that this provision is a redundancy and should be treated as surplusage as the act of 1906 would remain in force without it and be the law in every respect until changed, in accordance with the grant of powers, by the legislative assembly, both by virtue of the act of 1912 and sections 1859 and 1860. It was not the intention of Congress to treat Alaska differently from the other Territories, and where the qualifications of electors were left to the wisdom of the Territorial legislatures it was never intended to "strait-jacket" and "Chinese shoe" Alaska, bind her hand and foot, and deny to her legislature the right to fix the qualification of voters. Alaska had the right to pass the act making the district instead of the precinct the unit for voting purposes. That act was for several years observed, respected, but the closeness of the political contests, their extreme bitterness, the personal hostilities and resentments aroused drove men into searching for the means by which to promote their own fortunes and party interests while divesting the other party of its support through apparently arbitrary constructions of the laws. "All's fair in love and war and politics," became the slogan. What was constitutional and not was discussed and all in connection with the winning or losing of the votes. The majority of this committee have adopted Wickersham's construction—that Alaska has no right to fix the district as the unit instead of the precinct. Of course, Sulzer loses 21 votes, or a net loss of 10 votes, as a result of this construction.

Did Freedom give her last shriek when Kosciusko fell? Or has she a few more shrieks with which to express her agony and despair when tortured by tyranny and oppression and bunk and piffle and balderdash? Sulzer's plurality of 33 has been cut to pieces and sufficient additional votes thrown out to give Wickersham a plurality of 37 votes.

My speech is ended; my protest is filed; my duty is performed. You, now, gentlemen of the House, have a duty to perform, a duty you can not escape; you must pronounce judgment. I do not believe the Republicans of this country will give their approbation, their approval, to the report when they understand it. I do not believe in their heart of hearts that the Republicans of this House who will vote to sustain it believe it expresses justice, law, equity, or the "fair and square deal" which was such a powerful phrase when uttered by a great leader who is no more. Yes, Members of this House, you have a duty to perform, and in the years to come the faithful or unfaithful discharge of it will be a consolation or a desolation to you. In the words of the great orator who sleeps his last sleep at Marshfield:

With consciences satisfied with the discharge of duty, no consequences can harm you. There is no evil that we can not either face or fly from but the consciousness of duty disregarded. A sense of duty pursues us ever. It is omnipresent like the Deity. If we take to ourselves the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, duty performed or duty violated is still with us for our happiness or our misery. If we say that the darkness shall cover us, in the darkness as in the light our obligations are with us. We can not escape their power or fly from their presence. They are with us in this life, will be with us at its close; and in that scene of inconceivable solemnity which lies yet farther onward we shall find ourselves surrounded by the consciousness of duty—to pain us wherever it has been violated and to console us so far as God may have given us the grace to perform it.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Texas to use some of his time now.

Mr. HUDSPETH. We expect that the next speaker will be Mr. GRIGSBY.

Mr. DOWELL. I suggest that he speak now.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HICKS). The gentleman will state it.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Has not the contestee the right to close the discussion of this resolution?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will state to the gentleman from Louisiana that if he will allow the Chair to look up a precedent, he will reply to him in a few moments.

Mr. O'CONNOR. I think the Chair will find that in the Tague-Fitzgerald case it was held that the contestee has the right to close.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ELLIOTT].

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House of Representatives, we are nearing the end of one of the longest and most tedious cases that it has ever been my luck to help try. I have not time in 10 minutes to go into this matter very extensively, but during that time I am going to confine my attention to the individual frauds in Alaska.

It has been stated to you that the law in Alaska, as passed by this Congress, requires everyone who desires to vote to reside in the precinct where he desires to vote for at least 30 days prior to the election. It has also been stated to you that the Alaskan Legislature, in violation of that act, and without any delegation of authority of Congress, passed a law allowing anybody to vote in any precinct in the judicial division in which he had lived. In other words, if he lived in one precinct in the judicial division and he was at some other precinct in that division on election day, he could vote there. Mr. Grigsby, who was the attorney general of Alaska, in a well-written opinion to the governor of Alaska, the man who was chairman of the board of canvassers in Alaska, held that when the Alaskan Legislature passed that act, they were without the power to do it and the act was void. Consequently it left the voter in the position that he had to be a resident of the precinct for 30 days before he could vote.

In looking over these votes the committee carefully studied the evidence in regard to the individual vote and we found that 19 people had voted in the wrong precinct, and that they had voted for Sulzer. Among those was Mr. Sulzer himself. Mr. Sulzer had a legal residence in a place they call Sulzer. On the morning of the election he showed up at a place called Ketchikan. The evidence showed that he offered to vote at that place and was challenged, that he was told that he could vote if he would make an affidavit that he had been a resident of the precinct for 30 days. This he refused to do, and he moved on down to a little place further down the hill that they call Charcoal Point, and there he found an election board that was more in sympathy with him, and there he cast his vote in violation of the law of Alaska. I am not surprised that other people violated the law up there, when the candidate himself violated it.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a suggestion?

Mr. ELLIOTT. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Charcoal Point is 50 miles from Sulzer.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Yes; both of these places are far removed from Sulzer, Several voters showed up at precincts in Alaska on the morning boat. They never had resided in these places. They got off the boat and went up to the election booths and voted. I do not say that they voted corruptly, because they thought this law, this illegal act of the Legislature of Alaska, was in force, allowing them to vote.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLIOTT. Yes.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Was the opinion of the Attorney General written before or after the election?

Mr. ELLIOTT. After the election.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. But before this election.

Mr. ELLIOTT. No; it was when they were counting these ballots.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Was it rendered before or after the November election when Mr. Sulzer was a candidate?

Mr. ELLIOTT. It was rendered in 1919 when they were counting the ballots. The election was held in November, 1918, and the ballots were not counted and disposed of until the next April. It was sometime during the time they were counting the ballots that Mr. Grigsby rendered this opinion to the governor, who was the chairman of the board of canvassers.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Then when Mr. Sulzer voted in November it was before this opinion had been rendered, and he was presumed to be within his rights until the opinion which came after that time.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Mr. Grigsby was not in this election.

Mr. LINTHICUM. I know, but the gentleman said that Mr. Sulzer voted and that he ought not to have voted, and what could you expect other people to do, if the opinion was not rendered until after that time? Then the law presumed to be in force.

Mr. ELLIOTT. Well, it does not make any difference whether it was presumed to be or not; it was not and it was illegal.

Mr. LINTHICUM. The law was on the statute books——

Mr. ELLIOTT. I do not yield for an argument in my time.

Mr. LINTHICUM. I wanted to show he did not do a wrong act.

Mr. ELLIOTT. I made the statement Mr. Sulzer voted in that precinct and he voted in a precinct 50 miles from where he lived, and I said Mr. Grigsby, as attorney general of Alaska, in deciding on this case, said, in a written opinion, and a well-written opinion, that the law was illegal, and consequently all of those people who voted out of their precincts upon the theory they had the right to vote in a judicial division cast illegal votes.

Mr. YATES. The date of the opinion is given as of February 12, 1919. Is that right?

Mr. ELLIOTT. That is right. Now, all of those people who voted illegally did not vote for Sulzer. We threw out 10 votes of men whom we found had voted for Wickersham, and when we got through we cast out 19 of these ballots for Sulzer and 10 for Wickersham. Now, in addition to that there were three people who lived at Valdez Bay precinct and voted over at Valdez. There was no question about their voting illegally, but the question came up how they voted, and the evidence does not show how they voted, so we had, under the rules laid down by this House in other election cases, to apportion this vote. Now, in the election in that precinct Connolly received 80 votes—he was the Socialists' candidate—Sulzer 180 votes, and James Wickersham 66 votes; so in apportioning those three votes we apportioned two of them against Sulzer and 1 against Wickersham, and that was as near as we could come to complying with the rule of apportionment in the vote cast.

Mr. STEVENSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ELLIOTT. I will.

Mr. STEVENSON. I want to ascertain if these people had voted at their home precinct were qualified to vote there?

Mr. ELLIOTT. If they had voted in their own precinct, they would have been.

Mr. STEVENSON. They were simply thrown out because they voted in the wrong precinct?

Mr. ELLIOTT. Yes. Now, here is another. Of these individual votes we threw out 21 for Sulzer and 11 for Wickersham, making a net gain for Wickersham of 10 votes. Now, there were some other peculiar things in this election. Over at Chicaloon precinct there was a man there by the name of John Probst. His evidence shows that he came to that precinct along in the afternoon between 2 and 3 o'clock and asked permission to vote, and they told him that he could not vote because the election board had taken the ballot box and books and had gone up the creek about a thousand feet to get the vote of a man who was sick with the flu. He testified that he was there ready and willing to vote for Mr. Wickersham, but by reason of the fact that this board, in violation of the law, had taken the election supplies and gone up the creek a thousand feet away from the polls that he was not permitted to vote, and consequently he lost the right to vote for Wickersham. Now, there was the situation there, a very plain illegal act. So far as we know the rest of the people who voted in that district voted legally. The committee had no desire to disfranchise any of those people. As we could not find out how the sick man voted up the creek, we could not throw his vote out; had we thrown out the whole precinct on account of the illegal act of the election board in leaving the election precinct with their books and tally papers, it would have resulted in a net loss of 10 votes for Sulzer, but justice compelled us to the conclusion that Wickersham was entitled to this vote, and rather than throw out the whole precinct we counted the vote for him. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. LINTHICUM].

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to say anything in this matter, because I am not on the committee, but when fraud is alleged in this election it seems to me somebody ought to contradict that statement. The majority report, as submitted, proposes to seat Judge Wickersham mainly upon three points. First, that the election in one precinct was held at 5 o'clock in the morning instead of at 8 o'clock, as prescribed by law. We all know that in November it is not daylight until way late in the morning. These men had to go to a certain point which they had to make during the daytime, and if they wanted to make it during the light hours and not lose the trail, they had to have the election early.

Now, I appeal to any common-sense people whether that was not the best thing to do.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield? It is dark all day in that part of Alaska.

Mr. LINTHICUM. I rather thought so myself, but I did not want to make that statement.

Now, what would appeal to the ordinary citizen living up there in Alaska? Would it not be to say, "Boys, there are only about 18 of us here; let us vote now, and then we can proceed on our journey." And the consequence was they took the ballot box and all hands voted, and they took the ballot box to one man who was not there and gave him a chance to vote. So every man in the camp who wanted to vote did vote, at 5 o'clock instead of 8 o'clock, because they wanted to proceed on their journey. There was no charge whatever as to any fraud in this nor even the intention or semblance of fraud.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LINTHICUM. No; I can not. I have only five minutes. Was not that a fair, honorable, and just proposition? Now, then, what is the next proposition? There was a law passed by the Alaska Legislature which said to the voters in this Territory of 600,000 square miles, "If you are away down there 200 or 500 miles from your polling place and you can prove you are a citizen, you can vote down there." And Sulzer and 16 others, I believe it was, found themselves away from their precinct, and they voted in the place where they were, which they had a perfect right, as they thought, to do under the law which had been passed by the legislature. But later, in February, 1919, about three months after the election, the Attorney General said that the law was unconstitutional. Therefore the votes cast outside the home precinct are all thrown out. This act is said to have been illegal; that they ought not to have voted outside their own precinct; and that it was against the rules of the election laws. But these men thought they were doing the right thing and were within the law until it had been construed by the Attorney General to be unconstitutional. And yet you not alone throw their votes out, but you charge them with fraud, and charge Mr. Sulzer with fraud for so voting. How were any of them to know that the law was not constitutional?

And coming now to this contest, what I am particularly interested in is this: Here you have Mr. Wickersham, who comes here and contests the election of a man who is dead. He comes the second time. He contested in the last Congress, if you remember. He was seated and served only about one week and we paid him $15,000 salary and several thousand dollars mileage and clerk hire, and gave him all his expenses, and he went away from here with a very goodly sum of money for services of about one week. Now he comes to us with another contest for the Sixty-sixth Congress.

Mr. RICKETTS. The gentleman will not say if he was legally entitled to the money, according to the rules of this House, that he would want to deprive him of what belonged to him?

Mr. LINTHICUM. No; this House seated him, and when he was so seated he was entitled to it.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Can the gentleman yield me two minutes more?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I can not. I have not the time.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. GARRETT. I ask unanimous consent for one moment in order to make an inquiry of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, would it be agreeable to the gentleman from Wyoming to have an agreement that the House meet at 10.30 in the morning, and that we now adjourn?

Mr. MONDELL. I am very much afraid, Mr. Speaker, that it would be very difficult to inform all the Members as to that change in the program. I would rather run a half hour longer, if that is agreeable, and then meet at 11.

Mr. GARRETT. There would be just as much time lost in a roll call after 11 as there would be at 10.30.

Mr. MONDELL. If the gentleman will allow us to use five minutes more now, I think at the expiration of the five-minute speech I can give the gentleman my answer.

WICKERSHAM AGAINST SULZER AND GRIGSBY.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield one more minute to the gentleman from Maryland. He wanted to finish his statement.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Speaker, as I was saying, after that last contest the gentleman served only about one week and we gave him those funds. Here he comes into the House again with another contest, and a majority report within five days of the termination of the session favors his seating when his contestant, Mr. Sulzer, is dead and a special election held by which another, Mr. Grigsby, has been elected from Alaska and has received the salary and performed the duties. We are asked to unseat Mr. Grigsby, seat Mr. Wickersham, pay him $15,000 salary for five days for this Congress and his mileage, and such other emoluments as go with the office. I contend that he was not elected, and in the present financial stress of this country we must go slow; the man who has not performed the services is not entitled to any gratuity from the House of Representatives unless his election was certain beyond doubt, and I protest against it at this time. This is a time to be just but not generous. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Maryland has again expired.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HAYS].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Missouri is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. HAYS. Mr. Speaker, I am astonished at the nature of the last argument that has been made to this House. The gentleman from Maryland [Mr. LINTHICUM] has stated that Wickersham was a contestant two years ago and was seated; he has implied that the fact of the contest made two years ago should bar Wickersham from further attention in a contest proceeding at this time. Permit me to say that it is a matter of small importance as to whether the seat in this House is awarded to Mr. Grigsby or to Mr. Wickersham. The paramount proposition is whether the electorate of Alaska shall have the privilege of asserting their choice at an election or whether the election shall be dominated and determined by a corrupt political machine.

In the limited time at my command it will not be possible for me to make a detailed analysis of the many controverted points appearing in this election contest. My remarks will, therefore, deal only with the general principles involved.

The Committee on Elections, of which I am a member, has analyzed this case most thoroughly, and the task has been neither pleasant nor easy. At the general election in 1918 James Wickersham, Charles A. Sulzer, and Francis Connolly were rivals for the office of Delegate from Alaska. The canvassing board counted the returns and announced the vote as follows: Sulzer, 4,487; Wickersham, 4,454; and Connolly, 329, giving Sulzer a plurality of 33. Wickersham, the Republican candidate, charged that the election machinery of Alaska was manipulated to his disadvantage. He instituted a contest proceeding. On April 15, 1919, Sulzer died, and two days later the canvassing board issued a certificate of election, declaring that Sulzer had been elected. Shortly thereafter a special election was ordered in Alaska to fill the vacancy created by Sulzer's death. George B. Grigsby became the Democratic candidate. Wickersham, still contending that he had been lawfully chosen at the preceding general election in 1918, declined to submit his name for the special election in 1919. As a result of that special election George B. Grigsby was declared the victor. Thereupon Wickersham broadened his contest proceedings so as to make them challenge the right of Grigsby as the successor of Sulzer. The House of Representatives, by a resolution passed on the 28th day of July, 1919, consolidated the case of Wickersham against Sulzer with the case of Wickersham against Grigsby into one contest. This was eminently the proper procedure on the part of the House, because Grigsby, by virtue of the special election, had become heir to whatever rights to a seat in this House had been enjoyed by Sulzer. If Sulzer was legally elected, then Grigsby is entitled to a seat, for the reason that he was chosen to fill the vacancy caused by Sulzer's death. On the other hand, if Sulzer was not legally elected in 1918, his death could not create a vacancy and the special election was a nullity. The determination of this case, therefore, hinges upon the validity of the general election in 1918 in Alaska. Grigsby stands here to-day in the shoes of Sulzer and as his political heir. When we determine the 1918 contest between Wickersham and Sulzer it will settle the collateral question of Grigsby's right to a seat in this body.

The members of the two political parties who comprise our Committee on Elections have been honest and diligent in their efforts. We have spent weeks in analyzing the case, and I believe that every man has tried to reach an honest decision in making his conclusions. A large number of witnesses were called by the contending parties and the written transcript of their sworn testimony has been carefully reviewed; we have examined the ballots; we have studied the law and read the briefs; and we have listened to exhaustive arguments on every phase of the matter.

As the logical result of that painstaking and exhaustive inquiry the majority of the members of the committee honestly believe that the 1918 election in Alaska was shot through with fraud and corruption, and that the manipulation of the political machine controlling the elections operated to defeat Wickersham, who was the choice of a majority of the voters.

Mr. Speaker, I deplore the fact that so many Members show evidence of regarding this case as a personal contest between Wickersham and Grigsby. Some men here unfortunately seem to think our only function is to award a prize to the most popular man. But again I say the real thing for determination is whether the will of the people or the cunning plan of a political machine shall prevail.

I want to say, so far as Mr. Grigsby is concerned, that his defeat, if he shall be defeated in this vote, is no reflection on him. I do not charge Grigsby with fraud, but I do charge that Sulzer was elected by fraud, and that Grigsby can claim no higher rights than Sulzer might have claimed had he lived. While I do not desire to assail Grigsby, I do desire to charge as unfair some of the methods that have been used by his partisans on this floor. Every Member of Congress is glad to be advised by his constituents as to their views about legislative matters. An election contest, however, is not a legislative matter, but should be considered as a cold, dispassionate analysis of the facts submitted to the committee and the House, and should be settled according to the facts involved.

One of my good friends at home has just sent me a telegram which reads:

Many of your friends here are anxious for the success of Grigsby over Wickersham.

My constituent who sent the telegram is a splendid gentleman, but he knows no more of the merits of this election controversy than the man in the moon. I do not hesitate to affirm that the telegram was not an original thought with him, and I charge that it was inspired by some one in Washington. The Washington partisans of a contesting claimant, who undertake to sway votes on this floor without regard to evidence, are using tactics quite as unfair as were employed by the election machine in Alaska.

It has been my pleasure to associate a great deal with Grigsby during the months he has been here, and I have found him to be an admirable gentleman, and one who would grace a seat in this Hall. On the other hand, I know but little about Wickersham. Yet, it is not a question of choice between the men so much as to guarantee a square deal for the people of Alaska. As we sit here to-day we are judges acting under an oath of office, each one clothed with authority as a trier of fact to determine the will of the people at the general election of 1918 in Alaska. When we vote on this contest it should not be for the purpose of achieving a partisan victory, neither should we vote according to the promptings or friendship or of prejudice. Let the cold facts in the case determine the result. Briefly summarized, each one of the following outstanding facts contributed to deprive Wickersham of votes to which he was entitled, and to give Sulzer votes to which he was not entitled.

The Legislature of Alaska passed an election law contravening the provisions of the Federal statute, which forms the organic law of the Territory, and which amounts to its constitution.

The election officials without warrant or authority of law divided one of the election districts into new precincts in such a way as to abolish long-established precincts, and to prevent a large number of voters from exercising their right of franchise.

In one instance the polls were opened at 5 o'clock in the morning, and the voting was practically all finished before the hour of 8 o'clock, when the polls were permitted to open under the law.

The ballot box was taken in one case a long distance from the polls to accommodate a voter who could not come to the polling place.

Voters were permitted to cast their ballots in precincts in which they did not reside. Even Sulzer himself offered to vote in one precinct where he did not reside, and, when denied that privilege, he went to another precinct in which he did not reside and cast a fraudulent ballot.

Soldiers were permitted to vote who were not citizens of Alaska but who only had a military residence there.

All of these irregularities and many more were permitted and encouraged by the corrupt organization in control of the election machinery, with the result that the certificate of election awarded to Sulzer was an outrage upon the voting public in Alaska.

Our committee, after the careful review of more than 700 pages of printed record in this case, believes that Wickersham was elected by a plurality of 37 votes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, how does the time stand?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas has 64 minutes and the gentleman from Iowa has 40 minutes remaining.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I am going to make a point of no quorum.

Mr. DOWELL. Did not the gentleman from Texas say he would use 20 minutes to-night and the rest in the morning?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I would very much prefer to use all of my time at once.

Mr. LINTHICUM. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman withhold that a moment?

Mr. LINTHICUM. Certainly.

HOUR OF MEETING TO-MORROW.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 10.30 a. m. to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wyoming asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 10.30 a. m. to-morrow. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. MCFADDEN, for three days, on account of illness.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 5 o'clock and 13 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Tuesday, March 1, 1921, at 10.30 a. m.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, bills and resolutions were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the several calendars therein named, as follows:

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 15687) granting certain public lands to the city of Phoenix, Ariz., for municipal purposes, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 1385), which said bill and report were referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

Mr. SINNOTT, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (S. 4511) authorizing the Secretary of War to grant a right of way over certain Government lands to the State of Oregon for the Columbia River highway, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1387), which said bill and report were referred to the House Calendar.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII,

Mr. SINNOTT, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 15006) for the relief of E. W. McComas, reported the same with amendments, accompanied by a report (No. 1386), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. IRELAND: Resolution (H. Res. 702) for the employment of additional help in the enrolling room; to the Committee on Accounts.

By Mr. MASON: Resolution (H. Res. 703) to pay the Capitol and House Office Building police forces $200 for extra services; to the Committee on Accounts.

By the SPEAKER (by request): Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Utah, favoring the modification of the present coal, shale, and oil leasing law; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also (by request), memorial from the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring emergency legislation which will permit the use of the vessels of the Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet to carry foodstuffs and supplies to China and the Near East; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also (by request), memorial from the Legislature of the State of Arkansas, favoring the erection of a tubercular sanatorium at Booneville, Ark; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Utah, favoring a reduction of 50 per cent in our annual naval expenditures for a period of five years, providing England and Japan do the same; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. FRENCH: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Idaho, favoring the McFadden bill; to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Also, memorial from the Legislature of the State of Idaho, urging emergency legislation permitting the employ of vessels in transporting supplies to China and the Near East; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. STINESS: Memorial of the Legislature of Rhode Island, in aid of legislation now pending in Congress for the benefit of the disabled men of the World War; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. VOLSTEAD: Memorial from the Legislature of the State of Minnesota, favoring a tariff on agricultural products imported from other countries; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII,

Mr. HERNANDEZ introduced a bill (H. R. 16157) granting an increase of pension to Juana Royval de Martinez, which was referred to the Committee on Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

6117. By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of Council St. Thomas d'Aquin, No. 324, l'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, of Springfield, Mass., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6118. Also (by request), petition of New York Wholesale Grocers' Association, opposing a gross sales or turnover tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6119. By Mr. BABKA: Petition of the council of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, favoring the location of a tubercular sanatorium in that city; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

6120. By Mr. BURDICK: Resolution of the general board of l'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6121. By Mr. BURROUGHS: Resolution of l'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique Council St. Antoine No. 81, Manchester, N. H., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6122. Also, resolution of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council St. Edmond, No. 252, Manchester, N. H., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6123. Also, resolution of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council Ste. Irene, No. 285, Somersworth, N. H., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6124. By Mr. CANNON: Petition of citizens of the eighteenth district of Illinois, praying for an amendment to the Volstead Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

6125. By Mr. DALLINGER: Petition of Council Notre Dame, No. 327, of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6126. By Mr. EMERSON: Petition of the City Council of Cleveland, Ohio, favoring the location of one of the hospitals in the city of Cleveland; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

6127. By Mr. ESCH: Petition of Wisconsin Retail Lumberman's Association of Milwaukee, Wis., opposing a duty on lumber imported from Canada; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6128. By Mr. HERSEY: Petition of the general board of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6129. Also, petition of Council Vallee St. Jean, No. 246, L'Union St. Jean-Baptiste d'Amerique, of Fort Kent, Me., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6130. By Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island: Resolution of Council Labelle, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, of Woonsocket, R. I.; and resolution of Council Notre Dame de Lourdes, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Passoag, R. I., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6131. By Mr. KLECZKA: Petition of 48 citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against enactment of Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6132. Also, petition of 185 citizens of Milwaukee, Wis., protesting against enactment of Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6133. By Mr. MANN of Illinois: Petition of citizens of Chicago, Ill., favoring an amendment to the Volstead Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

6134. By Mr. MORIN: Petition of members of St. Augustine Rectory, Pittsburgh, Pa., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6135. Also, petition of the Ingram Borough school district, Ingram, Pa., urging passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6136. By Mr. O'CONNELL: Petition of Spanish Green Olive Importers' Association, of New York, opposing the passage of the Haugen bill (H. R. 10311); to the Committee on Agriculture.

6137. Also, petition of New York Wholesale Grocers' Association, opposing a gross sales or turnover tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6138. By Mr. PETERS: Petition of the La Fayette Council, L'Union St. Jean-Baptiste d'Amerique, of Skowhegan, Me., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6139. By Mr. RANDALL of Wisconsin: Petition of residents of Kenosha, Wis., requesting an amendment to the Volstead enforcement law, permitting the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines; also protesting against the McKellar bill; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

6140. By Mr. ROGERS: Petition of Council Notre Dame de Lourdes, No. 292, L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, of Lowell, Mass., and Council Ste. Therese, No. 351, same organization, of Lowell, Mass., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6141. By Mr. ROWAN: Petition of S. G. Bayne, president Seaboard National Bank, opposing the Haugen bill; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6142. Also, petitions of Young Women's Societies of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Frank J. Guck and 100 others, Patrick Jones and 11 others, and Anna Marie McHugh, all of New York City, protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6143. Also, petition of the Merchants' Association of New York, favoring the continuing of the passport office maintained in New York City by the Department of State; to the Committee on Appropriations.

6144. By Mr. SNELL: Petition of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council Charbonneau No. 39, of Keeseville, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6145. Also, petition of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council Champlain No. 38, of Champlain, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6146. Also, petition of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council Notre Dame, No. 339, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6147. Also, petition of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council Chagnon, No. 316, of Chazy, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6148. Also, petition of L'Union St. Jean Baptiste d'Amerique, Council Legrand, No. 272, of Malone, N. Y., protesting against the passage of the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6149. By Mr. STINESS: Petition of South Kingstown and Narragansett Poultry Association, of Rhode Island, urging the enactment of tariff legislation to protect the hen, egg, and allied industries of the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6150. By Mr. TAGUE: Petition of Maturity Court, Daughters of Isabella, and Mary A. Murphy and Katherine T. Delanty, all of Boston, Mass., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6151. Also, petition of Drs. George, Leonard, and Sherman, of Boston, Mass., concerning Senate bill 4927; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

6152. Also, petition of Howes Bros. Co., of Boston, Mass., concerning packer bills; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6153. Also, petition of Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests, in favor appropriation for blister rust; to the Committee on Agriculture.

6154. Also, petition of International Association Bridge, Structural, and Ornamental Iron Workers, in favor bonus of $240 to Federal employees; to the Committee on Appropriations.

6155. Also, petition of Boston Post Office Clerk Association, in favor of the Steenerson bill (H. R. 15906); to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

6156. Also, petition of the National Budget Committee, in favor budget act; to the Committee on Appropriations.

6157. Also, petition of Frank N. Nathan Co., against the McFadden gold bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

6158. Also, petition of New England Dressed Meat & Wool Co., against the Haugen bill (H. R. 15995); to the Committee on Agriculture.

6159. Also, petition of Division 72, Ancient Order of Hibernians, of Boston, Mass., protesting against the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6160. Also, petition of Boston Progressive Retail Jewelers' Association, against the McFadden bill; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

6161. Also, petition of Cheverus Council, No. 6, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, opposed to the Smith-Towner bill; to the Committee on Education.

6162. Also, petition of National Retail Hardware Association, to extend time for filing claims under section 206 (c) of transportation act; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, March 1, 1921.

(Legislative day of Thursday, February 24, 1921.)

The Senate met at 11 o'clock a. m., on the expiration of the recess.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Hale	McLean	Smith, Md.
Ball	Harris	McNary	Smith, S. C.
Borah	Harrison	Moses	Smoot
Brandegee	Heflin	Myers	Spencer
Calder	Henderson	Nelson	Sterling
Capper	Hitchcock	New	Sutherland
Colt	Jones, N. Mex.	Norris	Swanson
Culberson	Jones, Wash.	Overman	Thomas
Curtis	Kellogg	Owen	Townsend
Dial	Kendrick	Phelan	Trammell
Dillingham	Kenyon	Phipps	Underwood
Edge	Keyes	Pittman	Wadsworth
Elkins	King	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Fernald	Kirby	Pomerene	Walsh, Mont.
France	Knox	Ransdell	Warren
Frelinghuysen	La Follette	Robinson	Willis
Gay	Lenroot	Sheppard	Wolcott
Glass	Lodge	Shields
Gooding	McCumber	Simmons
Gronna	McKellar	Smith, Ga.

Mr. PITTMAN. I desire to announce that the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. GERRY] is absent on official business.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-seven Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA WATER SUPPLY.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting a communication from the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia submitting a supplemental estimate of appropriation in the sum of $200,000 for increasing the water supply of the District of Columbia, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by D. K. Hempstead, its enrolling clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922; that it had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 7, 8, 10, 46, 78, 89, 91, 102, 103, 112, and 114, and agreed to the same; that it had receded from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 40, 48, 49, 92, 93, 107, 115, 116, 117, and 118, and agreed to each thereof with an amendment; that it insisted upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 11, 12, 13, 32, 33, 79, 80, 82, and 119; and asked a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. MAGEE, and Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. MYERS presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Montana, ss:

I, C. T. Stewart, secretary of state of the State of Montana, do hereby certify that the following is a true and correct copy of senate joint resolution No. 3, enacted by the seventeenth session of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, and approved by Jos. M. Dixon, governor of said State, on the 23d day of February, 1921.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of said State.

Done at the city of Helena, the capital of said State, this 24th day of February, A. D. 1921.

[SEAL.] C. T. STEWART,
Secretary of State.
By CLIFFORD L. WALKER, Deputy.

Senate joint resolution 3. Introduced by Donlan.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas there was granted to the State of Montana by the United States large tracts of timberland within said State for educational purposes; and

Whereas by the terms of said grant it was provided that said lands "shall be disposed of only at public sale and at a price not less than $10 per acre, the proceeds to constitute a permanent school fund ——"; and

Whereas pursuant to the laws of the State of Montana the State has sold and disposed of the timber from a large acreage of the said timberlands and the lands so cut over are valuable only as timberlands and for timber culture and have no value for agriculture or other purposes, and that it is to the interests of the State of Montana and the educational institutions for which said lands were granted that said cut-over lands be reforested; and

Whereas said cut-over lands are widely scattered and in most cases isolated and by reason thereof it is impracticable and uneconomic to undertake the reforesting and care thereof, and that in order that this important work may be successfully carried on the State should be permitted to exchange said cut-over lands that are valuable only for timber culture for other lands of like character and of the same value to the end that the State may acquire or secure its holdings in a compact body in order that reforesting may be undertaken in a businesslike and economic manner: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (the house of representatives concurring), That we, the Seventeenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States to immediately enact such legislation as will permit the State of Montana to dispose of the cut-over timberlands heretofore granted by exchange so that a reforesting program may be successfully and economically carried out by said State of Montana; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy hereof be transmitted by the secretary of state of the State of Montana to the Senators and Representatives of the State of Montana in Congress and that they be urged to use their best efforts to obtain congressional action herein indicated.

NELSON STORY, Jr.,
President of the Senate.
FRED L. GIBSON,
Speaker of the House.

Approved February 23, 1921.

JOS. M. DIXON,
Governor.

Filed February 23, 1921, at 3.20 o'clock p. m.

C. T. STEWART,
Secretary of State.

Mr. MYERS presented a resolution of the Lewistown Woman's Club, of Lewistown, Mont., protesting against commercializing the national parks, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

Mr. McLEAN presented a memorial of New London County Pomona Grange, of Norwich, Conn., remonstrating against the so-called daylight savings bill, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a telegram in the nature of a petition of Eddy Glover Post, No. 6, American Legion, of New Britain, Conn., favoring the fivefold adjusted compensation plan for the benefit of ex-service men, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a memorial of the Woman's Club of New Haven, Conn., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation commercializing the national parks, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented memorials of Court Schiller, No. 117, Foresters of America, of Meriden, and Meriden Lodge, No. 276, D. O. H., of Meriden, both in the State of Connecticut, protesting against the presence and action of French colonial troops in the occupied zone of the Rhine, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Waterbury, Conn., protesting against an appropriation being made in the Agricultural appropriation bill for the investigation and improvement of tobacco, which was ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented memorials of Council Ste. Anne, No. 205, l'Union St. Jean-Baptiste d'Amerique, of Hartford; Marquette Council, Knights of Columbus, of Ridgefield; John Leo Sullivan, of New Britain; and Branch No. 627, Ladies' Catholic and Benevolent Association, of Winsted; all in the State of Connecticut, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation creating a department of education, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a resolution of Washington Camp, No. 18, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Waterbury, Conn., favoring legislation making armistice day a legal holiday, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. CAPPER presented a resolution of the Lane County Grange, of Eugene, Oreg., favoring legislation to prohibit gambling in grain products, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia, from the Committee on Education and Labor, to which was referred the bill (S. 1017) to create a department of education, to authorize appropriations for the conduct of said department, to authorize the appropriation of money to encourage the States in the promotion and support of education, and for other purposes, reported it with amendments and submitted a report (No. 824) thereon.

Mr. REED, from the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 9755) to establish the standard of weights and measures for the following wheat-mill and corn-mill products, namely, flours, hominy, grits, and meals, and all commercial feeding stuffs, and for other purposes, reported it without amendment.

Mr. SPENCER, from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, to which was referred the bill (S. 2086) to provide for the erection of a public building on ground already acquired at Caruthersville, in the State of Missouri, reported it without amendment.

BONUS FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

Mr. THOMAS submitted his views, being a minority report to the bill (H. R. 14157) to provide adjusted compensation for veterans of the World War, to provide revenue therefor, and for other purposes, which was ordered to be printed as part 2 of report No. 821.

AMENDMENT OF INTERSTATE COMMERCE ACT.

Mr. KNOX submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 4933) to amend the interstate commerce act by adding thereto a new section, No. 20b, and to amend an act entitled "An act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," approved October 15, 1914, by adding a new paragraph to section 10 thereof, which was ordered to lie on the table and be printed.

APPOINTMENTS OF POSTMASTERS.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, in the presidential campaign of 1916 the Civil Service Reform Association addressed a letter to the Republican candidate for President, Mr. Hughes, and the Democratic candidate for President, Woodrow Wilson, making inquiry as to what policy each would adopt in the event of election and the demand that post offices of the first, second, and third class should thereafter be filled under the civil-service rules instead of by arbitrary Executive appointment. Mr. Hughes answered at once that if elected President of the United States he would inaugurate a policy of civil-service reform and have all postmasters of the first, second, and third class, as well as the fourth class, selected by a civil-service examination. President Wilson replied in substantially the same terms. The result was that on the 31st of March, 1917, immediately after President Wilson's second term began, he promulgated an Executive order under which the postmasters of the first, second, and third class, known as presidential offices, should thereafter be selected as the result of a civil-service examination.

That order has now been in effect for nearly four years, and as the term of President Wilson is drawing to its close, it seems to me a proper time to put in the RECORD what has been the result of that reform. I will say frankly that during the last four years the operation of the reform has not been altogether acceptable or agreeable to Senators on this side of the aisle. It has not been a pleasant operation to see the appointment under a Democratic administration of Republican postmasters throughout the country, but it is proper at this time, at the close of the present administration, to examine briefly what the operations have been.

No one has known until lately what the exact figures or approximate figures are. Upon the other side of the aisle Republicans have claimed that it has been a farce. Upon this side of the aisle many Senators have thought that most of the appointments have fallen to Republicans. So I desire to take up now briefly what the results have been. First, let me read a paragraph from a dispatch appearing in the Evening Star of this city a few days ago and reading as follows:

ST. AUGUSTINE, FLA., February 24.

One of Warren G. Harding's first acts as President of the United States will be to rescind the order of President Wilson placing all postmasters under the protection of the civil service. Mr. Harding will insist that merit should control in the appointment of postmasters, but he does not believe the Democrats who have been placed in the postmasterships during the last eight years should be perpetuated in office.

I do not know whether that is authentic or not, and it is not of great importance at this time, but it raises the question and creates a doubt whether the reform is to be continued, and makes it decidedly proper to have placed in the RECORD what the actual facts in that reform have been.

I ask permission to place in the RECORD at this point, without reading, the Executive order of President Wilson promulgated March 31, 1917, and with it the statement of the Postmaster General concerning that order and the regulation which went into effect with it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

EXECUTIVE ORDER.

Hereafter when a vacancy occurs in the position of postmaster of any office of the first, second, or third class as the result of death, resignation, removal, or on the recommendation of the First Assistant Postmaster General, approved by the Postmaster General, to the effect that the efficiency or needs of the service requires that a change shall be made, the Postmaster General shall certify the fact to the Civil Service Commission, which shall forthwith hold an open competitive examination to test the fitness of applicants to fill such vacancy, and when such examination has been held and the papers in connection therewith have been rated the said commission shall certify the result thereof to the Postmaster General, who shall submit to the President the name of the highest qualified eligible for appointment to fill such vacancy, unless it is established that the character or residence of such applicant disqualifies him for appointment. No person who has passed his sixty-fifth birthday shall be given the examination herein provided for.

WOODROW WILSON.

MARCH 31, 1917.

The Postmaster General made the following statement in giving out the Executive order:

"The order speaks for itself and it will be observed.

"Incumbent postmasters of the classes referred to who are rendering good service and who continue to administer the affairs of their offices with ability will not be disturbed in such offices by any recommendation made by the head of the department. It is due them, however, at this time to make it clear that hereafter the supervisory officials of the department will be more exacting in the enforcement of those postal rules and regulations which make for increased efficiency, and postmasters will not only be expected to devote their time during office hours to a proper administration of their respective offices, but they will be required to thoroughly acquaint themselves with the various postal activities under their charge, and in the future to occupy such part of their time not properly given to administrative work to the performance of some part of those activities."

The First Assistant Postmaster General, who has charge of the post-office service, stated that it is the most advanced step ever taken in the Postal Service toward increased efficiency and businesslike administration, and that no doubt the necessary legislation to place these positions entirely within the classified service will be enacted in the near future.

WASHINGTON D. C., March 31, 1917.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, since that order was issued some 2,700 vacancies in first, second, and third class post offices in the United States have occurred. A short time ago, desiring to know what the exact facts were, I addressed a letter to the Postmaster General, asking him to advise me, if he could, what the results had been under the operation of that order. In order to ascertain what the results had been the Postmaster General directed the First Assistant Postmaster General to address a letter to every postmaster appointed to fill a first, second, or third class vacancy during the last four years, and I ask at this point to insert that letter in the RECORD.

I will say, in brief, that the letter merely asks the appointee to state his party affiliations for statistical purposes, and assures him that no partisan or political use shall be made of it.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, February 12, 1921.

(Personal.)

POSTMASTER: On March 31, 1917, the President issued an Executive order whereby appointments to presidential post offices were made as the result of an open competitive examination, the result thereof being certified by the Civil Service Commission to the Postmaster General, who submitted to the President the name of the highest qualified eligible for appointment, unless it was established that the character or residence of such applicant disqualified him for appointment.

In accordance with this order you were appointed postmaster, the appointment being based solely on merit, as shown by the result of the examination. It is now claimed by some that in making these appointments the department has shown discrimination for political reasons. The department is without knowledge of the political affiliations of those appointed under the Executive order, as politics was not considered. It will be to the interest of the service to demonstrate that there has been an impartial administration of this order. As all appointments have been submitted to the Senate, it can not affect the selection or appointment of anyone, and in order to enable the department to answer this charge, which is unfounded, you will state in the space below your political affiliations.

It is not desired to know how you voted in any particular election or whether you voted for any particular candidate, but the party with which you usually affiliate.

Please reply at the earliest date possible.

J. C. KOONS,
First Assistant.

Name of office, ———.
I am affiliated with ——— Party.
Date, ———.

——— ———, Postmaster.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, as a result of that inquiry of the Postmaster General I am able to give the following information:

From the 2,700 inquiries made by the Postmaster General of the 2,700 appointees to first, second, and third class offices, information has been secured from 2,110 and this information reveals the following facts:

Postmasters appointed to fill vacancies during the last four years are reported as follows:

Democratic affiliation	1,012
Republican affiliation	907
Independent	32
Prohibition	10
Socialist	3
No affiliation	129
Dead	7
Blank	10
Total	2,110

On its face this statement shows a very fair distribution between the parties, particularly when we take into account that in most of the Southern States any competitive examination with educational qualifications must necessarily be confined to white people, most of whom belong to the Democratic Party. If we except the 11 Southern States and consider only the 37 States where the parties are more nearly equally represented we find that the summary in these 37 States is as follows:

Democratic affiliation	598
Republican affiliation	846
Independent	26
Prohibition	9
Socialist	3
No affiliation	95
Dead	6
Blank	9
Total	1,592

We find that in such Republican States as Massachusetts out of 28 vacancies Republicans have been given the office in 20 cases.

I may say that, according to my recollection, one of those cases was the city of Boston, in which a Republican was appointed postmaster. I think the Senator from Massachusetts will bear me out in that statement.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, what was the Senator's statement in regard to Massachusetts?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. My statement in regard to Massachusetts was that out of 28 vacancies occurring during the last four years Republicans have been given the post offices in 20 cases.

Mr. POMERENE. In how many cases?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Twenty cases out of twenty-eight.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. I might add that, so far as I have been able to learn the political affiliations of the 28 postmasters in Massachusetts, all of them are Republicans; I do not know of any Democrats.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. There are some who report themselves as Democrats. I shall put the statement in the RECORD in detail.

In Michigan out of 68 vacancies, 46 went to Republicans, while in Minnesota, out of 80 vacancies, 55 went to Republicans.

In my own State, out of 90 vacancies, 55 were filled by Republicans and only 21 by Democrats.

These are naturally offset when we come to the Democratic States. In Texas, for instance, out of 119 vacancies 98 were filled by Democrats and 11 by Republicans, while in Mississippi 37 were filled by Democrats and only 1 by a Republican.

This showing, Mr. President, is very conclusive evidence that the Post Office Department has during the last four years administered with an honest effort this attempt at civil-service reform and has endeavored to carry the Executive order into effect in good faith and to take out of political patronage absolutely the appointment of postmasters nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

In order that this record may be made complete, I ask to have inserted the following tabulated statements giving the appointments in each State together with the party affiliation of all men appointed so far as the returns have been received since the inquiry was made. They bear out the summaries which I have already given.

The new administration may wipe out this reform and in defiance of a public opinion which called for it may throw all of the post offices of the country back into political patronage but the record will remain that this administration has made an honest effort to establish the reform.

Mr. President, at this point I ask to have inserted in the RECORD the tabulated statement which I hold in my hand, which gives the statistics for each State in the Union.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The statement referred to is as follows:

States and Territories.	Democrat.	Republican.	Independent.	Prohibition.	Socialist.	No affiliation.	Dead.	Blank.	Total.
Alabama	24	6				4			34
Alaska
Arizona	7	3				3			13
Arkansas	30	5				1			36
California	14	33		1	1	1	1		51
Colorado	15	10				2			27
Connecticut	5	10				1		1	17
Delaware	2	1							3
District of Columbia
Florida	18	7				3			28
Georgia	38	6	3			8			55
Guam
Hawaii
Idaho	5	11		1		1			18
Illinois	33	62	1	1		7	1	1	103
Indiana	29	19				1			49
Iowa	18	63	2	1		9		1	94
Kansas	20	29		1		9			59
Kentucky	33	5				1			39
Louisiana	35	4	1						40
Maine	10	18	2		1	2			33
Maryland	10	4							14
Massachusetts	6	20	2						28
Michigan	16	46	2			4			68
Minnesota	15	55	2	1		7			80
Mississippi	37	1				4			42
Missouri	54	18	1			4	1		78
Montana	10	25				4	1		40
Nebraska	21	55	2	1		11			90
Nevada	1	2				2			5
New Hampshire	4	7				1			12
New Jersey	11	21				1			33
New Mexico	7	3							10
New York	36	40	1		1	3		1	82
North Carolina	51	9				2			62
North Dakota	16	26				1			43
Ohio	29	34	2			5		1	71
Oklahoma	61	26	2			2		1	92
Oregon	5	11							16
Pennsylvania	37	55	2	1		3		2	100
Rhode Island	1								1
South Carolina	35	2		1		1			39
South Dakota	18	27				5		1	51
Tennessee	24	8							32
Texas	98	11	2			8			119
Utah	4	4				1			9
Vermont	3	3	1						7
Virginia	15	5				2	1	1	24
Washington	10	23	1			1	1		36
West Virginia	31	10							41
Wisconsin	7	54	3	1		4	1		70
Wyoming	2	10							12
Total	1,012	907	32	10	3	129	7	10	2,110

Omitting the 11 Southern States of Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia, the tabulation is as follows:

Democrat	598
Republican	846
Independent	26
Prohibition	9
Socialist	3
No affiliation	95
Dead	6
Blank	9
Total	1,592

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I also ask leave to add to my remarks extracts from a number of letters received by the First Assistant Postmaster General from Republican postmasters who bear testimony to the genuine character of the reform brought about by the establishment of the merit system in naming postmasters. The names of the writers are not given, neither are the names of the towns, because I have no disposition to expose the authors of the letters to any possible resentment from partisan neighbors. I could add many more to the same purpose, but these will suffice to show the good faith in which the reform has been carried out.

I ask that these letters be inserted in the RECORD at this point as samples of those received from the Republican appointees in various parts of the country.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letters referred to are as follows:

FEBRUARY 16, 1921.

FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: While these few words may be superfluous, I feel that I should further state that I have affiliated with the Republican Party for the past 20 years.

So far as I have been able to ascertain, the question of politics did not enter into either the examination or my subsequent appointment to this office.

Yours, respectfully, ——— ———.

—

FEBRUARY 17, 1921.

POSTMASTER:

I am returning to-day answer to your inquiry as to my party affiliation. I do not think, however, that the mere statement that I am and always have been a Republican is sufficient answer in my case to the inquiry.

For 40 years I have edited Republican newspapers in * * *. More than 30 of those years I edited newspapers in this city. They were not merely Republican in name. I was regarded as a radical, uncompromising, "stand-pat" Republican. With that record I entered the contest for * * * post office when it was announced that civil-service rules would govern the appointment.

When the Civil Service Commission made its report I was the highest on the list, and my name was certified to Postmaster General Burleson, who promptly recommended me for appointment, and President Wilson at once made the appointment as recommended. If there is any question or doubt as to the fairness or consistency of the administration in living up to its pledges in this line, my own case should be sufficient to prove the doubt groundless. I desire to give my testimony as to the absolute fairness of the department in making these appointments.

* * * * * * *

Very truly, yours,

———, Postmaster.

—

FEBRUARY 17, 1921.

In connection with the inclosed letter I wish to make this additional statement, which you are at liberty to use:

I was rejected by the local board in August, 1917, because of bad eyes, and a little later the local banker called my attention to the Executive order and of the call for a competitive examination for office of postmaster at ——— and advised me to look into it.

Being advised by various persons, some of whom were holding civil-service appointments, that politics was not considered in such examinations and that my standing on my examination alone would govern, I made application for permission to take the examination.

Of the four applicants who took the examination, the other three were affiliated with the Democratic Party, and two have been candidates for other offices. I and my father before me have always been affiliated with the Republican Party.

No information was asked of me at any time as to my political affiliations, and I can say further that the Democratic committeeman from this precinct worked for one of the candidates and that a friend of another of the candidates who happened to be at the Capitol made a special call in the interests of his friend, and I can also say further that one of the applicants also had petitions signed by about 25 asking for his appointment.

* * * * * * *

Respectfully, yours,

———, Postmaster.

—

FEBRUARY 15, 1921.

I was one of six who took examinations for this position. I was the only one who was Republican; the rest were Democrats; two boasted of party influence. I simply took the examination. I had taught in grammar and high school; been superintendent of schools for 25 years; and for 2 years had been treasurer and head bookkeeper of a ——— corporation doing some thousands of dollars a week of business. I felt that if I did not get the position there must be something wrong about "civil service," but I got it, although in the "wrong" party. I never voted a Democratic ticket in my life. * * *

———, Postmaster.

—

FEBRUARY 16, 1921.

The Republican Party will do well to copy the Democratic Party in the matter of post-office appointments. A lot of my friends thought there would be no use for me to take the examination for postmaster on account of being a Republican, but politics did not enter into the matter at all. The Democratic Party has been very fair as far as I am concerned, and the Republican Party will make a mistake if the old political spoils system is employed in making post-office appointments.

* * * * * * *

Respectfully, yours,

———, Postmaster.

—

FEBRUARY 15, 1921.

At time of my appointment I was Republican county chairman.

—

FEBRUARY 17, 1921.

Have been Republican county chairman 10 years.

—

FEBRUARY 18, 1921.

FIRST ASSISTANT, Washington:

In reply to inclosed communication, I wish to submit the following facts in connection with my appointment as postmaster at this place: I am in possession of three commissions signed by Republican Presidents for postmaster at another office of the third class, and at the examination held for Postmaster at * * * the other applicant was a Democrat and chairman of the precinct committee, so I can truthfully state that there was no discrimination shown in this case for political or other reasons. The Hon. FRANK W. MONDELL will verify that he has recommended me to the previous appointments as postmaster under a Republican administration, and am satisfied that the ruling of March 31, 1917, was strictly adhered to in this case. Any further information will be cheerfully supplied.

———, Postmaster.

FEBRUARY 17, 1921.

The charges of political discrimination by your department are unfounded.

Respectfully, ——— ———.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, let me say in conclusion that this reform has not been altogether to the comfort of Democratic Senators and Representatives, but it was a reform pledged to the people of the United States by President Wilson; it was a reform pledged to the people of the United States by the then candidate for President, Mr. Hughes, who is now to appear as the head of the Cabinet in the incoming administration. If it is carried out by the incoming administration it will be a reform permanently established in this country, because no other administration will ever venture to change it.

Mr. President, let me say further that I do not stand here as an advocate of the Executive order in the language in which it was written; I think it was overdrastic. I urged the President to modify it; I believe it should have been modified; I believe that the President should have some discretionary power in the appointment of postmasters. I think that the Executive order should have been so modified, and I hope it will be so modified, that all that the Civil Service Commission shall do shall be to subject to a test the candidates for postmaster in the first, second, and third class offices, and report a list of eligibles to the President, leaving the President, with the advice of Senators and Representatives, some discretion to select from those eligibles. But the reform has been started, and I hope that our Republican friends will not destroy the start that has been made.

Mr. LODGE subsequently said: Mr. President, I do not desire to delay action on the conference report a moment or to take the attention of the Senate away from that subject. However, when I came into the Senate this morning the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] was making some observations—I did not hear all he said—in regard to the presidential order in reference to postmasters. I merely desire to have that order printed in the RECORD, if it has not already been ordered to be done.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The order has been ordered printed in the RECORD.

Mr. LODGE. Then, of course, it is not necessary to have it again printed.

I wish to call attention merely to two matters. The proposed examination for postmasters under the order does not place them in the classified service. In the second place, I wish to call attention to the fact that the order is very cunningly drawn. It provides:

> Hereafter when a vacancy occurs in the position of postmaster at any office of the first, second, or third class as the result of death, resignation, removal—

It excludes the expiration of a commission as creating a vacancy. Of course, the result of that would be that postmasters holding offices would be kept in office without examination. The purpose of that, I think, I need not go into.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. If the Senator will submit to a question, I desire to ask, would not such a position be analogous to other civil-service positions that are held during good behavior?

Mr. LODGE. It is not a civil-service position; it is specifically stated that the order does not put it in the classified service.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I understand that.

Mr. LODGE. But the point is that the expiration of a commission does not create a vacancy. Therefore, the man who is in office may be reappointed without the examination; and that, of course, was the purpose of the order.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I will ask the Senator whether a continuance in office during good behavior is not analogous to the general plan of civil-service reform pertaining to the classified service?

Mr. LODGE. I do not think it has anything to do with civil-service reform. I think it is a plan for keeping in post offices appointees who are now there.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Is it not the plan of the classified service to keep a person in office during good behavior?

Mr. LODGE. In the general classified civil service employees are there by competitive examination.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Exactly.

Mr. LODGE. And come into the classified service with certain rights defined by law——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. So do postmasters.

Mr. LODGE. The post-office appointees referred to get no such rights, and under the Executive order most of the vacancies have been excluded by not making the expiration of a commission create a vacancy. If this effort were genuine, the expiration of a commission would create a vacancy and postmasters in office would be compelled to stand examination with outsiders; but they are explicitly excluded.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, the point I am making is that this process of continuing postmasters in office during good behavior is entirely analogous with the general rule governing the classified service, and while postmasters are put into this status by an Executive order that is in exact accord with the demand for civil-service reform.

Mr. LODGE. But those in the classified service who are kept there during good behavior have passed competitive examinations.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. That is so of postmasters.

Mr. LODGE. No; I beg the Senator's pardon. The postmasters who are to be kept are required to pass no examination at any time or even to be examined by a commission, and that is the object of the cunning drafting of the order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I dislike to delay the Senator in charge of the conference report; but, if he will pardon me for about five minutes, I should like to say something for the RECORD. The Senator from Massachusetts has evidently stated his party's position on the question of the removal of postmasters.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, let me explain to the Senator that I have stated no position but my own. I wanted to show what I consider to be the humbug of this order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It will undoubtedly be reflected as his party's position. I have no criticism of the Senator reflecting his party's position on this question, but I think the RECORD should clearly define the position.

As to whether or not the Republican Party when it comes into power next Friday intends to continue the efforts of President Wilson to place all of the postmasters in the United States under the civil service law or a qualified civil service law is a matter of policy for that party, on which it must go to the country; but there is no reason why there should be a misunderstanding as to the situation.

The classified civil service laws were passed a quarter of a century ago or more, and they authorized the President of the United States to blanket into the classified service any employees of the Government that he desired, except those whose nominations required confirmation by the Senate. When that was done under a Republican administration no civil-service examination was ever held for the men who were in office. They were first blanketed in by Executive order, and then they held during the period of good behavior.

Mr. LODGE. The Senator knows as well as I that that has been done by every administration.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Cleveland blanketed in 40,000 postmasters at one time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly; I am not criticizing that position; I am merely criticizing the position of the Senator in trying to differentiate in this case. Of course, there have been times when it has been convenient for our Republican friends to remove the blanket and get rid of surplus civil-service employees, and after they had put their own kind into office to return the blanket and protect their own appointees. In this case the President of the United States could not by Executive order apply the civil service laws to first, second, and third class postmasters, because their nominations have to be confirmed by the Senate. It was not cunning on the President's part in drawing this order that kept these men in office to continue to serve without a reexamination after their terms had expired; it was merely an attempt on the part of the Executive, so far as he was able to do so, to follow the sentiment of the existing law in connection with civil-service matters, to make all original appointments by competitive examination, and then establish the precedent that if a man served well and faithfully, as he would do if the position were strictly under the classified service, to return his name to the Senate without a reexamination, because civil-service rules do not contemplate the turning out of office of a faithful and capable servant. There was nothing cunning in the order.

Mr. LODGE. There was no examination, of course, but simply an inspector would be sent to report as to the postmaster.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Undoubtedly; but that is the case in the classified service in connection with bureaus in Washington. If a department has any ground for turning out an employee, they turn him out, whether he is under the classified service or not, but if he is capable and efficient they retain him.

I admit that the President did not have the opportunity to put these men directly under the classified service, because they must be confirmed by the Senate; but he took the position that so far as the Executive was concerned, if they were faithful and capable servants, performing their duties well, he would, at the expiration of their terms, return their nominations to the Senate for confirmation.

Mr. LODGE. Without any examination at all.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly not.

Mr. LODGE. Because the expiration of the commission does not create a vacancy, under this order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly not. The Senator does not seem to understand the position that I take.

Mr. LODGE. I understand it, I think, perfectly.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Senator says that the order was made by the President with cunning, as if he had made this order in order to keep in office men of his political faith. Not at all. The President was trying to liken his order, as nearly as was practical, to the civil service laws of the country.

Mr. LODGE. It never occurred to me that the President drafted the order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I am saying it came from him, or whoever it is.

Mr. GLASS. Mr. President, permit me to suggest that, however cunningly the Executive order may have been contrived, it does not appear to have been cunningly administered, since under the order 50 per cent of the appointees were Republicans.

Mr. MOSES. Oh, no; that merely shows the superior intelligence of the Republican contestants in the examinations.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire that while he may claim the intelligence of the country for his party, he has not demonstrated it. At any rate, it shows that under President Wilson's administration of the post offices of the country under this order he attempted to live up to the principles and policies of the civil service laws of the United States; and I do not think it is right to attempt to controvert those facts or leave a slur on his position.

If the Republican Party conclude to take the back track on civil-service reform and go to the spoils system, that is your responsibility, not ours; but I say, if you are going to take that position, take it openly, tell the country what you are doing, and do not try to camouflage the situation. Say that you are going to turn these Democrats out because you want to put Republicans in. You have the power. You can take the responsibility of it to the country.

EXTENSION OF CREDITS FOR EXPORT TRADE.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, we all recognize the necessity for restoring our export business to central Europe. The Senate has recognized the importance of establishing credits there and helping to maintain those credits. The passage by Congress of the joint resolution directing a resumption of work by the War Finance Corporation was a recognition of the importance of this question. I think most of us regret that the Treasury Department took the position that the War Finance Corporation could not in any way assist in establishing credits in Germany and Austria and other countries with which we have been at war and are now technically at war.

I hold in my hands quite an interesting article from the New York Commercial of January 29, 1921, by Mr. Ludwig Nissen, in which he discusses the importance of rehabilitating our export trade to central Europe and the necessity for credits in connection therewith. While he, perhaps, goes somewhat further in the line of these credits than I would go, yet I consider his article so interesting that I desire to have it printed in the RECORD as a part of my remarks, and I ask permission to do so.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and permission is granted.

The article referred to is as follows:

URGES MORE LOANS TO HELP EUROPE—SAYS CREDITS WOULD RELEASE UNITED STATES SURPLUS GOODS—REHABILITATION OF STABLE AMERICAN EXPORT TRADE DEPENDS UPON POLICY OF HARDING ADMINISTRATION, IS VIEW OF LUDWIG NISSEN, FORMER HEAD OF WHOLESALE JEWELERS.

[By Ludwig Nissen, former president Wholesale Jewelers' Association.]

The rehabilitation of a stable American export trade depends upon the policy of the incoming national administration. America can have no profitable foreign trade without her participation in the reestablishment of equitable economic relations all the world over.

The first requisite to the attainment of that condition must be the conclusion of peace with former enemies with whom, by the way, she formerly carried on an enormous import and export trade.

The great industrial plants of Germany have, for decades past, proved to be the heart strings of the economic world. The continued paralyzation of these industries can only be compared to the partial paralyzation of the heart of the human body, which makes for inactivity, indolence, inefficiency, irregularity of action, and practical stoppage of the functioning of all contributory organs.

All Europe, including Germany, needs raw materials. We have them in great abundance. At the present time we have them piling up on us to such an extent that we can hardly find warehouse room for them. Many of them rot or in some other way deteriorate. The same applies to our surplus foodstuffs. In the cases of both commodities the storing and hoarding of them clogs commerce. The lack of foreign markets for our surplus products of fields, farms, mines, and factories curbs ambition and energy and will lessen production, throw labor out of employment, weaken our financial structure, and throw the whole economic system of our country into inevitable chaos and lethargy. It does more than that. Money is kept at high rates, and therefore kept beyond reach for productive, labor-employing enterprise by credits being tied up in unsold commodities. If the banks should attempt to withdraw these credits, immense losses will be sustained by the banks as well as by the borrowers. Sell these hoarded commodities and credits will be released, money will become easier and naturally flow into legitimate channels of a healthfully reviving business.

In order to accomplish the sale of our great surplus of raw materials it will be necessary to devise some system of credits upon which the countries needing them can buy them. This should be easy. Frequently a creditor has to extend new credits in order to protect credits already granted—the liquidation of which would be doubtful and often impossible without the new credits to put the debtor in a position to work out a hazardous situation. We have loaned European nations approximately $10,000,000,000 for the purposes of destruction.

It would not be throwing good money after bad to loan a few more billions for the purposes of reconstruction, for in that way they would be set upon the road to recovery and prosperity, furnishing thereby a guaranty of ultimate liquidation of all their obligations to us. Simultaneously this would create an immediate outgo of our surplus of raw materials and foodstuffs, simulate new production, and by providing universal employment also forthwith increase consumption. This would within a comparatively short time lead to the beneficent return of normal conditions in which production and consumption would fairly balance each other.

Can anyone imagine, however, that this result can be brought about for our country alone without regard to conditions in other and all other countries? No! Just as it is impossible for the body human to be happy in one part while miserable in the other so it is with the body politic. The economic fabric of the world at large must be made to dovetail in order to present a harmonious and coordinate whole. Any attempt therefore to foster prosperity and happiness in one part of the world to the exclusion of other parts must lead to failure and consequent misery, discontent, unrest, labor disturbances, financial unsettlements, and all the ails and ills of an unhealthy economic system.

The first immediate necessity for healthful and helpful cooperation of all countries should be the insistence of the world upon the definite fixing of the German indemnity to be paid to the Allies. It should be fixed upon the basis of possibility to pay within a short time limit for the present generation to liquidate. No settlement intending to bind unborn generations to liquidation of undetermined and indeterminate obligations to foreign countries could possibly be expected to meet with successful execution. It would mean to be born into slavery.

The spirit of mankind rebels against the thought of working to pay a debt the limit of which is not known and may never be reached. Uncertainty, suspense, fear of never ending calamity, of slavery lead to desperation; and desperation leads to violence, which may mean the outbreak of new wars. A law against common sense is unenforceable. A contract against public policy is illegal. And so the settlement of international difference intended to controvert the law of nature will not win the approval of the second sober thought of humanity.

In order, therefore, to get the world moving along in peace and amity and all working with hope and confidence toward the realization of the spirit of the brotherhood of man, the world should insist upon the immediate settlement of the question of indemnity in such a way as to secure the friendly cooperation of all nations toward the reestablishment of normal economic conditions.

A short time ago at a dinner attended by some of New York's greatest thinkers of questions of economics this same thought was advanced by two very forceful speakers as being particularly in the interest of France. From that point of view one gentleman in a carefully prepared essay mildly dissented in calm and deliberate argument, and although he seemed to represent the minority sentiment of those present he retained the respect of all his hearers by his considerate handling of the subject.

Another gentleman, however, with great vehemence interjected that if it were a question of economics alone that view might be accepted as correct. But that was not the only question to be considered. He declared that the rehabilitation of German industries would make her financially and materially strong in every way and might in a short time put France at her mercy again. This must be prevented for France needed security against that very condition and for that reason Germany must be kept down.

If that sort of view is to be adopted by America as its guiding star, Germany will be a long time recovering her position of usefulness to the world; but in the meantime the rest of the world—and particularly those countries expecting to benefit from the receipt of German indemnities—will continue to suffer with her. And, as for our foreign trade, it will continue to be stagnant, and with it our whole system of economics—farming, mining, manufacturing, shipping, financing, and all the activities that have made our country great, rich, and powerful—will remain in the same condition of stagnancy.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I ask consent of the Senator in charge of the naval appropriations bill, who is entitled to the floor, to present and have considered a partial report of the committee of conference on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Wyoming?

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, before consenting to take up the conference report I wish to call attention to the situation in regard to the naval appropriation bill. There seems to be an idea being circulated in the Senate that there is no chance to enact the naval appropriation bill at this session of Congress. I have heard a number of statements made to the effect that in whatever form we pass the bill in the Senate, if it is changed in any way from the bill which was passed by the House, we will be unable to agree with the House conferees and that the bill will fail. Of course, if the Senate is to accept as a guide for its conduct in connection with a great appropriation bill a statement of that kind, it might as well abdicate its functions. I do not suppose that there ever was an appropriation bill taken up in the Senate to which amendments were made and which went to conference with the other House of Congress as to which it was not necessary and was not the fact that certain compromises and adjustments in the matters of disagreement between the two Houses were made.

In my opinion, the United States is confronted at the present time in its foreign relations by a very critical situation. For the first time in the history of the United States we now have an opportunity, as a result of the war, of securing an adequate Navy to protect and defend the interests of the United States throughout the world. That is about the only thing which we got out of the war. We did not even get the Island of Yap. Japan obtained a great empire of the Pacific Islands, extending her dominion over an area of the earth's surface of some 4,000,000 square miles of land and water.

The United States got nothing. After these matters had been disposed of and other countries had obtained the sanction of the great powers that adjusted the differences following the war and had obtained possession of these islands, after it was too late for the United States to protect its interests, we began to assert them and say that we wanted the island of Yap; but we did not get it. What we did get out of the war, however, by reason of the enactment of the naval building program of 1916, was an opportunity to secure an adequate Navy. Now it is proposed to destroy that. On both sides of the Chamber here there is a disposition among a few Senators to delay, and possibly to defeat, any naval appropriation bill at all.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I will ask my friend if he denies me the opportunity to present and have considered the conference report on the legislative bill?

Mr. POINDEXTER. If the Senator will yield for just a very few moments, I will state my position in regard to his application.

Mr. WARREN. I think the Senator will not accuse me of attempting either to delay or to defeat his bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Not at all. The Senator from Wyoming has given no indication of any desire either to delay or to defeat this measure.

The other day the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] stated upon the floor of the Senate that he did not desire to delay this bill, and I am sure that he does not. I take his statement in absolute good faith; but whatever his intentions may be in that regard, he and those who are cooperating with him are adopting a course which will have the effect of defeating the bill, on account of the short time that will elapse before the adjournment of the session, unless they should change their attitude in regard to it.

Among the other things that the Senator from Idaho stated as of interest to him in connection with this bill was the adoption of an amendment providing for a limitation-of-armaments conference. He has proposed an amendment to the bill on that subject:

> The President is authorized and requested to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which understanding or agreement is to be reported to the respective Governments for approval.

Mr. President, I have not any objection whatever to the object of that amendment; and I stated to the Senator from Idaho several days ago that not only had I no objection to the object which he has in view in the presentation of this amendment, but that I am heartily in favor of it. I think the form of the amendment would have to be changed if it were to have any effect, because under the Constitution of the United States nobody can formulate treaties and agreements between nations except, in the first place, the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. I have no objection to the appointment of representatives of the United States to confer with other countries as to a plan of disarmament. I have always thought that a great opportunity was overlooked at the Paris peace conference, when for six months, at a time when the affairs of the world were being molded, the representatives of the United States, with the power that they had from the wealth and the armies of this country, which at that time were mobilized for war, did not take advantage of the opportunity to formulate and present to the various powers that had been engaged in that war some specific plan for the limitation of armaments; but they allowed the opportunity to go by. No effort was made to formulate or to present any such plan.

If there is any possibility of arriving at any such agreement, and having that agreement submitted to the various countries for their approval, I not only do not object to it but I am heartily in favor of it. I want to say, however, that it is very largely an act of supererogation for the United States Senate to pass a resolution to that effect. The only purpose or object which could be accomplished by it would be as an expression of opinion. It is not necessary as a matter of law. The Constitution vests in the President of the United States the authority to do that very thing. It makes it his duty to do so if he considers it necessary for the welfare of the country. The President of the United States alone has the power to initiate and to negotiate treaties. Then he is to submit whatever is the result of those negotiations to the Senate for its ratification.

Not only is the authority that is proposed by the amendment vested in the President by the Constitution, but the Senate and also the House of Representatives have long ago indicated their attitude upon it, for in connection with this very building program which is the basis of this appropriation bill, which was adopted in 1916 under the impetus which was given by the threat of a great world war, in the very act in which we authorized the construction of the battleships and battle cruisers, Congress authorized and instructed the President of the United States to negotiate with foreign countries for a limitation of armaments, and that law is still in effect. I want to call attention specifically to it.

This act was approved August 29, 1916. It provided, as I said before, for 10 battleships, for 6 battle cruisers, for 10 scout cruisers, for 50 torpedo-boat destroyers, for 9 fleet submarines, for 58 coast submarines; and in connection with that, and appropriately in connection with it—because without power to back up the policies which the representatives of this country might agree upon, their representations would be of no force or value in negotiations with foreign countries—while they provided for negotiations for a limitation of armaments, Congress gave to the United States the necessary forces to back up whatever position it might take, and they provided in this bill:

It is hereby declared to be the policy of the United States to adjust and settle its international disputes through mediation or arbitration, to the end that war may be honorably avoided. It looks with apprehension and disfavor upon a general increase of armament throughout the world, but it realizes that no single nation can disarm, and that without a common agreement upon the subject every considerable power must maintain a relative standing in military strength.

In view of the premises, the President is authorized and requested to invite, at an appropriate time, not later than the close of the war in Europe, all the great Governments of the world to send representatives to a conference which shall be charged with the duty of formulating a plan for a court of arbitration or other tribunal, to which disputed questions between nations shall be referred for adjudication and peaceful settlement, and to consider the question of disarmament and submit their recommendation to their respective Governments for approval.

In substance, that is identical with the amendment proposed by the Senator from Idaho.

The President is hereby authorized to appoint nine citizens of the United States, who, in his judgment, shall be qualified for the mission by eminence in the law and by devotion to the cause of peace, to be representatives of the United States in such a conference. The President shall fix the compensation of said representatives, and such secretaries and other employees as may be needed. Two hundred thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated and set aside and placed at the disposal of the President to carry into effect the provisions of this paragraph.

That authorization is still upon the statute books; and what object would one have in objecting, if it becomes a matter of importance in the parliamentary situation of Congress, to its repetition? What would it add to the influence which Congress might have upon the action of the Executive, if any influence in addition to his constitutional prerogatives and duties were needed?

Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho has fallen into a number of errors in regard to the Naval Establishment of the United States, undoubtedly based upon information which he has relied upon. For instance, the Senator from Idaho stated in his address the other day that this appropriation bill carries something over $500,000,000. It does not. It carries something under $500,000,000.

Mr. BORAH. How much under?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Several million dollars.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, let me ask the Senator whether I am to have unanimous consent to consider this conference report or not. We are skating on thin ice. It is getting toward the end of the session.

Mr. POINDEXTER. We are also skating on thin ice with the naval bill.

Mr. WARREN. I do not think it would be any satisfaction to the Senator, even if it turns out that he loses his bill, to have the legislative bill killed, also.

Mr. POINDEXTER. There is no reason why we should lose the naval bill. If the Senate wants to pass the naval bill, it can pass it, and it can be enacted by Congress. I want to see whether or not they want to assume the responsibility for defeating it. I will yield to the Senator in a very few moments.

It is not a question, as I said in my last remark, of how much over or how much under $500,000,000 the bill carries. It is under and not over. That is the point to which I want to call attention.

The Senator from Idaho stated in his remarks that if the appropriations provided for in the House bill were enacted, and the program provided for in that bill were carried out, the United States would have a Navy 31 per cent greater than that of Great Britain, as I recollect his remarks. The fact of the case is that we will have a Navy about 50 per cent less than the navy of Great Britain instead of 31 per cent greater. If we should carry out that part of the program that is provided for in the House bill, we would still be in the middle instead of at the conclusion of the building program in which we are now engaged.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I yield.

Mr. LENROOT. I will ask the Senator if the personnel of our Navy to-day is not larger than the personnel of the navy of Great Britain?

Mr. POINDEXTER. It is about the same.

Mr. LENROOT. It is larger, however, is it not?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Not when you take into consideration the marines, who serve upon the British battleships and man the guns that are manned by sailors in the American Navy, and when you take into consideration the 30,000 trained reserves that are subject to the call of the British Navy at any moment, in peace or in war. Furthermore, Mr. President, I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the British Navy is upon an entirely different establishment from the American Navy. Their enlistments are, first, an enlistment of 5 years, and then an enlistment of 7 years, making 12 years' enlistment, and under the inducements and the practice of the British people it is almost the invariable custom for British sailors to reenlist for the second term. The consequence is that they have a navy of older men and of trained men, whereas the United States has a Navy composed very largely of recruits, 20,000 of whom have to be in training camps at all times in order to fit them for service on board of a battleship. That is the situation and the difference between the personnel of the American Navy and the British Navy.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I yield to the Senator from Maryland.

Mr. FRANCE. In connection with the question as to whether this bill should pass or not, I desire to ask the Senator what proportion of the 1916 program can be carried on under the provisions of the bill, and with the sums appropriated made under it. It seems to me that that program has been very materially cut.

Mr. POINDEXTER. About 10 per cent. The appropriation in this bill for the building program of 1916 is the same that it was in the bill as it passed the House. The Senate committee made no change whatever in the amount appropriated by the House, and while there has been considerable talk about a building holiday, and the bill does not provide for a building holiday, yet the appropriation that is made by the House, and which the Senate committee has not undertaken to increase, practically would bring about a building holiday, because it will slow down the work upon the program so as to delay its completion for two years.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I desire to say that I think the Senate is making a very grave, if not a fatal, blunder in acceding to any policy which will cut down the 1916 program, and personally I feel that it would be almost better to have this bill not pass than to have it pass with such a curtailment of that program as would be involved under its provisions.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The House apparently went upon the theory, on the testimony that was submitted to it, that the appropriation of $90,000,000 would be sufficient to carry on the building program upon the capital ships at the same rate at which it was carried on last year. They overlooked the fact that last year the building resources of the United States in naval construction were engaged in completing work upon destroyers which were adopted as an emergency war measure, in order to fight the submarine, which program is now completed; that they were not engaged at that time in speeding up the program upon the capital-ship construction which was provided for in the act of 1916; and that this $90,000,000 will make it impossible for the Navy to carry on that work at the speed at which it ought to be carried on, which would enable it to have these ships in 1923, as was at first proposed, but would postpone the completion of it until 1925. But, in view of the situation in the House, and the attitude of certain Senators, and on account of certain other provisions we put in this bill, the Senate committee has not undertaken to increase that amount, but has left it identically as provided in the House.

Another statement made by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], which is an error, is that the bill as it passed the House provided for the carrying on of the entire building program of 1916. That is not correct. The bill as it passed the House expressly forbade the use of any of the money appropriated in the bill upon any ship which is not already under construction or contracted for.

In the 1916 program there were 6 fleet submarines, great submarine cruisers, they might be called, supposed to be able to accompany the fleet at sea, with a wide radius of action, which had not been contracted for, and were not under construction, and which were left out of the bill by the House. Also, in addition to that, there were 12 destroyers provided for in the 1916 program which are not provided for, but the construction of which is expressly forbidden in the bill as it passed the House; and, in addition to that, a transport. So that there were 12 destroyers, 6 fleet submarines, and 1 transport in the 1916 program, which the bill as it passed the House did not provide for, in contradistinction of the statement made by the Senator that it provided for all of that program.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I was called from the Chamber when the Senator from Washington was discussing the disarmament amendment to the pending bill, and I did not hear his line of conclusions as to that amendment. Would the Senator, so far as in his power, as the Senator in charge of the bill, accept for consideration at this time the amendment offered by the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I shall be very glad to accept it at any time. I think it would be better, instead of providing that the representatives of the United States should have authority to enter into an agreement, that it should provide that they would have authority to negotiate and propose a plan of disarmament, to be submitted to the Senate of the United States, in accordance with the Constitution. That would have to be done anyhow. But I have no objection to the particular form of it, because that matter will take care of itself. We are compelled to follow the limitations of the Constitution, whatever the form of the proposed amendment might be.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, my only thought in asking the direct question was to see if it was not possible to find some common ground upon which it might be possible to pass the naval appropriation bill. If the consideration of that amendment bears directly upon it, though I am not sure whether it does or not, it would seem to me we might make haste by taking up the bill and considering that amendment. If the amendment is agreed to, in whatever form finally decided upon, it might have an effect in securing definite action upon the entire measure.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I think the Senator from Washington will agree by this time that I am entitled to have an answer as to whether I am or am not to be allowed to get up this conference report. I wish to say to the Senator that a report from a conference committee is always in order, and could be sent up and read at the desk. But I wanted to get the consent of the Senator, if possible, to have it considered.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I wish the Senator could give me about 10 minutes before making his motion.

Mr. WARREN. What does the Senator request?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I would like to complete my statement. I think I can do it in 10 minutes.

Mr. WARREN. There will be a great many statements of others, perhaps, which may follow. Had the Senator thought of that? This is a partial report, and it has to go back for further consideration. I want to get back to the conference myself.

Mr. POINDEXTER. It can not possibly endanger the report.

Mr. WARREN. I have to accept the Senator's decision, if he is not willing to grant my request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thought the Senator from Wyoming was just yielding the floor. The Senator from Wyoming had the floor, and the Senator from Washington had not any right to proceed unless the Senator from Wyoming had given his consent. The Chair thought the Senator from Wyoming had given the floor to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. WARREN. I have; but the Senator from Washington does not now give his consent for me to bring up this report, and I desire to have it read. However, I am perfectly willing to allow the Senator to proceed.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I will complete what I have to say in a few moments. It has been under considerable difficulties that we have gotten to the consideration of this matter.

Now, I wish to comment on the statement made by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] as to the relative strength of the navies of the world. I think he said the American Navy, if these programs were carried out, would be about two and a half times the size of the Japanese Navy. That is not a matter of guesswork; it is not a matter of surmise or speculation. When the programs of the respective countries are carried out the Japanese Navy will be about 75 per cent of the strength of the American Navy. But there is a great deal of doubt as to whether or not it will not be the equal of the American Navy, instead of the American Navy being two and a half times the strength of the Japanese Navy. At the present time Japan has four modern battle cruisers in commission, armed with 14-inch guns. The United States has not one. Japan has six modern scout cruisers. The United States has only three old and almost obsolete scout cruisers.

When these programs are carried out, when the United States has completed the 1916 program, if it is ever allowed to complete it, it will have six battle cruisers. Japan will have 12.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Washington yield to the Senator from Massachusetts?

Mr. POINDEXTER. In just one moment. At the present time of ships of the first line, armed with guns over 12-inch, the United States has 11 and the Japanese have 9.

Four of the nine Japanese ships of the first line, capital ships, are battle cruisers of great speed and of enormous radius of action, which could sweep the Pacific Ocean, and which no battleship could compete with as to speed, or as to radius of action, or as to ability to deliver a surprise attack.

When the building programs of Japan and the United States shall have been completed, if ours ever is completed, if we are not compelled to stop ours halfway, after having expended $500,000,000 upon it, and leave the ships half constructed or a quarter constructed, the United States will have 27 ships of the first line, including 6 battle cruisers, and Japan will have 24, including 12 battle cruisers.

I yield to the Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. LODGE. I only wanted to give some figures in connection with the battle cruisers. It will take just a moment.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I would be very glad to have the Senator give them.

Mr. LODGE. Japan has now afloat four battle cruisers of 110,000 tons. She has authorized and in course of construction four battle cruisers of 40,000 tons each. One is building, the others are all appropriated for, what we should call "authorized." She has four others projected of 40,000 tons each.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The Senator from Idaho cited a number of figures as to the amounts of money appropriated in 1912 and 1913 for the purpose of construction by Germany, by France, by Great Britain, and by Japan, and he stated it in such a way that the casual hearer would have gotten a notion—I know that was not the intention of the Senator from Idaho, because it was perfectly plain upon reading his remarks what he meant—but the impression might well have been gotten that those were the total appropriations for naval purposes by those countries, but what he said was that they were the appropriations for construction of new vessels in the Navy, and I want to call attention to the fact that while he said that back in 1912 and 1913 the construction program in Great Britain calls for $93,000,000, in Germany $55,000,000, in Russia $60,000,000, and in France $44,000,000, the construction program contained in the present bill, with the exception of two airplane carriers, which are provided for in a Senate amendment, calls for only $90,000,000, notwithstanding the vast increase in wages and in the cost of material between 1912 and 1921.

The Senator spoke of the great cost of the Navy. It is great, and one of the reasons for that is the increase in the pay of the American sailor, for which the Senator from Idaho and myself voted. If we cut down the pay of the American sailor, we can reduce the cost of the maintenance of the American Navy. I do not think we want to do that now. Ultimately we may have to return to a prewar basis and immediately the cost of the Navy will be reduced. The common American sailor of the lowest grade gets $30 a month and a great many accessories in the way of clothing and food. The Japanese sailor gets practically nothing, but some provision is made by the Japanese Government for the care of his family. The American sailor is one of the best paid men in the world. Congress has provided for his rations and written into the law what shall be contained in the ration of an American sailor. I am told that life at sea gives them a great appetite and they eat more than the soldiers in the Army. Congress has provided liberally for them, whereas the Japanese sailor lives largely upon a diet of rice.

The Senator from Idaho speaks of the cost of the French Navy. My recollection is that the French soldiers and sailors are paid about 8 cents a day. We can not compare the cost of the respective navies without taking those things into consideration.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, will the Senator permit an inquiry at that point?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I yield.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. As I understand it the Senate committee have recommended that about $100,000,000 in round numbers be appropriated in addition to the amount called for in the bill as it passed the House.

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is true.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Is the Senator able to state what proportion of that increase of $100,000,000 is due to new naval construction or armament?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Fifteen million dollars.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is beyond what the House recommended?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Yes. The House provision as to new construction is not changed, but left just exactly as it was, $90,000,000 for carrying out the 1916 program in which we are already engaged. But in accordance with the theory that has been so emphatically presented by the Senator from Idaho that we ought to pay more attention to aviation in the Navy and upon the urgent recommendation of the technical officers of the Navy, the Senate committee have provided an increased appropriation for aviation. We provide for two airplane carriers. That is the only new construction of ships for which the bill provides, and we appropriate to be applied on account of that construction, $15,000,000. The ships cost, with armor and armament complete, something like $26,500,000 apiece. We have none at the present time. Great Britain has six. Japan is building two similar to the two which we are undertaking to recommend by the amendment.

It is said—and we have to accept the advice of technical men from some source, who may be mistaken, though I do not know that the Senator from Idaho claims that they are—that airplane carriers are essential features of a naval aviation service. They are to carry something like 80 planes and to go with the fleet, mother ships of the planes from which they are launched to take the air. Without them, and unless the Navy is equipped with them, we are at a disadvantage.

We have provided an increase from $6,000,000 to $18,000,000 for the procurement of new aircraft and maintenance and operation of the aviation service. That is one thing that the Senator from Idaho has emphasized. The House bill did not provide for the procurement of new aircraft. That is one of the principal items of increase. The Senate committee have provided for the maintenance of the personnel of the Navy at its present force, not for an increase. The present authorized force of the Navy is 143,000 men. We have prepared appropriations supposed to be sufficient for the maintenance of a force of 120,000 men. While the House nominally provides appropriations for the support of 100,000 personnel, the Navy Department claim that the appropriation contained in the bill as it passed the House is only sufficient for the maintenance of 80,000 men. The Senate committee adopted a compromise between the urgent request and recommendations of the Navy Department and the amount provided in the House bill.

There is another feature of the bill to which I wish to call attention before I sit down, and that is that while we authorized new construction in the form of two airplane carriers, we have canceled the authority which is in the existing law for the construction of 12 destroyers, upon the conclusion of the committee that the fleet at the present time is sufficiently supplied with torpedo boat destroyers. That particular item of the 12 destroyers costing some $26,000,000 should be credited to the committee as a set-off against the amount by which the committee has increased the total amount appropriated in the House bill. Of course the principal increases in the bill come from the proposed increase in personnel, increase in pay, and increase in food and rations, which are necessary to maintain the Navy at its present status, with 20,000 of the recruits of which the Navy is composed in training camps instead of upon ships.

I shall not take time at present to discuss the status in which the Navy will be left at these various figures. If we ever come down to 100,000 men, four ships of the fighting force of the Navy will have to be put into reserve, the complement of men upon board all the ships will be reduced, the destroyers of the Navy will be put into reserve, with the exception of 80, and instead of maintaining a condition in the Navy to meet an emergency it will be put practically upon a basis of 50 per cent reserve. The American Navy has established a system of fire control on board its ships which necessitates the employment of more men than are employed in other navies, and which the department and those who have examined the question in minute detail believe increases the efficiency of the Navy.

If the bill goes over until the next session of Congress, the emergency matters for which the special session of Congress will be called will be impeded and obstructed by the practical necessity of continuing the controversy about the American Navy and the naval appropriation bill. Personally I think it is of the utmost importance for the country that the Navy should be maintained at its full present strength; that the building program of 1916, in the midst of which we are now engaged, should be carried out to its completion; that it is false economy to stint the appropriation for the necessity of prosecuting that work with vigor and with speed; and that the bill should be passed at this session of Congress and not relegated to the uncertainties of the short period of time that will be possible to secure for its consideration in the extra session which is to come before the 1st of July.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. WARREN submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15543) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 3, 4, 25, 26, 31, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 47, 56, 57, 70, 78, 79, 93, 94, 96, 103, 105, 109, and 110.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 27, 28, 32, 33, 35, 36, 45, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 55, 60, 61, 62, 64, 65, 67, 68, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 77, 89, 90, 91, 92, 97, 100, 101, 102, 104, 106, 107, 108, and 111, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 8: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 8, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$87,800"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$2,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 39: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 39, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$275,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 53: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 53, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"Section of surety bonds: Clerks—1 of class 3, 1 of class 2, 2 of class 1, 1, $1,000; assistant messenger; in all, $7,120."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 54: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"Pierce accounting machines, $255,000: Provided, That no part of this sum shall be expended for the installation of machines until the Director of the War Risk Bureau certifies to the Secretary of the Treasury that said machines are working satisfactorily."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 66: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 66, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"Carson City (Nev.) Mint: Assayer in charge, who shall also perform the duties of melter, chief clerk, and cashier, $1,800.

"For services of workman and other employees, $1,500.

"For incidental and contingent expenses, $600."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 69: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 69, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$25,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 81: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 81, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out all of the matter inserted by said amendment after the word "northwest," in line 5; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 83: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "36"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 84: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "64"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "31"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 86: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 86, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "one $720"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 87: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 87, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the number proposed insert "three"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 88: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 88, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$310,750"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have not agreed upon the following amendments of the Senate numbered 29, 30, 34, 37, 38, 46, 58, 59, 63, 76, 80, 82, 95, 98, 99, 112, 113, and 114.

F. E. WARREN,
REED SMOOT,
LEE S. OVERMAN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

WILL. R. WOOD,
EDWARD H. WASON,
T. U. SISSON,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I did not hear all the numbers of the Senate amendments that were agreed to or rejected. I wish to inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], concerning amendment numbered 40, which relates to the New York passport bureau. How was that disposed of?

Mr. WARREN. That is not in the agreement. The Senate was compelled to recede from the three items which cover the passport bureaus. If the Senator will allow me, I will make a report as to the condition of matters in the conference.

The long list of disagreements which the Secretary last read has been concurred in by the House, with the exception of four; so that while there is a large number apparently in conference, yet it is reduced to four items, and I shall state what they are.

One of them is for repairs of the naval building for the Shipping Board in the exchange that is to be made, and the amendment merely makes the amount immediately available, which, of course, is highly necessary.

The next one is a trifling matter relating to typewriters—to regulate the rise in price from one to the other, according to the length of the carriage of the machine.

The third one is numbered 58, which is the $200,000,000 that the Senate sought to authorize the Treasury to use in the purchase of farm land bank bonds; but by a decision yesterday of the Supreme Court that is made unnecessary, so that I am enabled to move that the Senate recede from that amendment, with no necessity of further disagreement, which the House asked only for the purpose of carrying it over until they should learn what was the opinion of the court.

The fourth and last amendment refers to the bonus for employees. That was changed, in that the House moved to amend it by making the War Risk Insurance Bureau operative clerks receive $240 instead of $120, as the Senate had provided. They voted against the adoption of the Senate amendment regarding Navy Shipping Board employees and that class of employees for which there is a wage commission to regulate the wages.

They also refused to indorse the bonus for the Women's Bureau, the employees of that bureau being provided for in a lump-sum appropriation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the conference report as agreed upon?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. After the Senator from Wyoming has finished his statement, I desire to reserve the right to object, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thought the Senator from Wyoming had concluded, or he would not have made the inquiry.

Mr. WARREN. I was about to make a motion with respect to the four items in disagreement.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Before the motion is put, I wish to ask a question of the Senator from Wyoming, but I do not want to interrupt him.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks the first question is on agreeing to the conference report. Until that is done the Chair could not entertain any other motion.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Before agreeing to the conference report, I did not know but that it might be in order for me to ask a question of the Senator from Wyoming.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That would be in order.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am not able to give the number of the amendment which I have in mind, but the Senate struck out a House provision, which the House had inserted in the bill, preventing the clerk of a United States court from receiving any compensation for services rendered when he might be appointed as a master or receiver or to any such ministerial position as that. I wished to ask the Senator from Wyoming whether or not the Senate had receded from that amendment?

I received this morning a letter from a gentleman who had written me about the matter previously, explaining it, and from his letter it would appear that his understanding was that the Senate had receded. I simply wished to ascertain what the situation was before making any remarks.

Mr. WARREN. The Senate receded on that amendment, the other House contending that quite lately the question of compensation of court clerks had been provided for in a special law, which carried the authority to the Attorney General to fix the salaries of the various clerks. The list of adjusted clerks' salaries, together with a statement concerning the matter, had been cited to the comptroller; and, notwithstanding that the department itself had undertaken to correct one or two errors, as they viewed it afterwards, the comptroller took the view that that could not be done without legislation.

Mr. JONES of Washington. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Washington will state it.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I desire to ask whether or not the Senate has given consent for the consideration of the conference report?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has been proceeding on that theory, though actual consent was not given.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I ask unanimous consent that the unfinished business may be temporarily laid aside for the purpose of considering the conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, I do not understand the statement which has been made by the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. WARREN], and I am not sure that I understand the situation. The provision which the House put in the bill did not attempt to alter the salaries of the clerks of the courts at all, as I understand. The clerks of the courts receive the salaries which have been established by the law. The House put a provision in the bill under which if the court appoints a clerk to do something for which he is not compensated at all by his regular salary he may not receive any compensation for that extra work.

Clerks of courts are frequently appointed to positions by the judge of the court of which they are clerks; they do the work involved after office hours and at night, and are able to pick up a little additional money in that way, which they earn. I can see no reason why they should not be allowed to have it if the court allows it to them and it has been earned, as well as to have somebody else appointed to the position. The practice may have been abused in some cases; I do not know.

Mr. THOMAS. Does not the Senator perceive the possibility of infinite abuse, once the door is opened to such outside employment? It seems to me it would be a very dangerous innovation.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It is not an innovation. The House provision changes the existing law.

Mr. WARREN. The existing law provides that they shall receive no extra compensation.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Oh, no.

Mr. THOMAS. If it is an innovation, I think it ought to be prohibited.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I differ with the Senator entirely in my understanding of the matter. I am inclined to think that the House provision was put on for the purpose of affecting a particular case, but I can not be positive about that. The amendment which we have been discussing was offered in the Senate by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE]. Of course, I am not going to oppose the adoption of the conference report because the amendment was stricken out, but I thought the Senate amendment was a wise one. I am sorry the Senate conferees yielded on the matter; that is all.

Mr. WARREN. We were compelled to do so.

Mr. President, I ask now to consider these four differences.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question still is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, just a word, if I may.

The Senator from Connecticut a moment ago referred to the Senate amendment which had been offered by myself to strike out the provision of the House bill which prevented the appointment of clerks or deputy clerks as masters or referees in equity or other cases which were tried before the court. I recognize that it is possible, without a provision of that kind, that some injustice may be done by certain judges, so also injustices may take place with the House provision in the bill. But I submit that the judges can take care of that situation better than the Congress of the United States.

I have received letters and telegrams on this subject from the judges in my own State, one of whom is a Democrat and one of whom is a Republican, both of them high-class judges. There are deputy clerks in their courts whose pay is so insignificantly small that they can not maintain themselves unless they do get some outside compensation of this kind. One of these judges writes me that they are going to lose the services of some of these deputy clerks if this House provision remains in the bill.

I am very sorry that the Senate conferees surrendered to the House conferees upon that subject. In my judgment, the judges are better capable of choosing referees and masters than anyone else. It is their duty, and I dare say they would not choose these clerks or deputy clerks as masters or referees unless they were of the opinion that they could perform this service and perform it satisfactorily to the court and to the litigants.

At this late hour I do not know what can be done. I suspect that nothing can be done, unless the conferees feel that by a further conference upon this subject they could persuade the House conferees to change their vews; and I want to ask the chairman of the committee what, in his judgment, might be done in that behalf if a further conference is held?

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me to say a word, nothing can be done. There has been a fight made here for years and years, and there have been petitions by lawyers and bar associations, to do away entirely with the fee system of the clerks. In response to that sentiment, after several years of work on it, we passed a law giving the Attorney General power to look into the question and fix the salaries of all the clerks and these other men and do away with all of the fees. No fee system is allowed.

There has been scandal in this country of the worst sort between judges and clerks as the result of the clerks being appointed masters or being appointed to some office that ought to be given to some good lawyer outside, away from the court; and the idea of the Judiciary Committee was to do away with the fee system and with the idea of the judges appointing clerks to these positions. Let them appoint some outsider and make the clerk do the work for which he is appointed and pay him a good salary for it, leaving it to the Attorney General to look into the matter and fix his salary.

The salaries have been fixed and the fee system has been done away with, and while there might be some exceptional cases where the judge ought to appoint the clerk, this provision ought to be enacted, so that no clerk can be appointed by the judge to any position of the kind. Let him get his salary and let some other attorney get the fees as master in equity.

Mr. POMERENE. Yes; but that is looking at the matter from the standpoint of the lawyer.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Ohio yield?

Mr. POMERENE. Pardon me for just one moment until I answer the Senator from North Carolina, if I may. That is entirely a different proposition. This amendment does not relate to the fee system. I agree with the Senator that the compensation of clerks by the fee system was rightly abolished; but this goes to the question of the appointment of a master or a referee. As my good friend the Senator from North Carolina says, they should be upon a salary basis and properly paid, reasonably paid. That is just what you have not done. They are not reasonably paid.

Mr. OVERMAN. That is a matter for the Attorney General to handle.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I have had this question up with the Attorney General in times past. The deputy clerks have received no increase in their salaries at all, unless they got the benefit of this bonus, and I think they did get the bonus. Everyone else was getting an increase in pay; but these clerks, who render faithful and efficient service, have been so miserably paid that they have not been able to maintain themselves and their families. To permit the clerks and their deputies to be eligible for appointment as masters or referees gives an opportunity for some little additional compensation, and I am in thorough sympathy with the position taken by the Senator from Connecticut upon this amendment.

Mr. KENYON. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Ohio whether the compensation of the deputy clerks in the Federal courts is fixed by the Attorney General now?

Mr. POMERENE. I rather think that is true. Yes; I am confident that that is so, and the compensation of the deputy marshals as well.

Mr. KENYON. I think it is, too. I am sorry this change has been made. I know deputy clerks in the Federal courts who are working 10 and 12 hours a day and getting a mere pittance, and I do not understand why we deal in such a niggardly manner with these clerks. I am sorry this change has been made.

Mr. POMERENE. They could not be here to speak for themselves.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, we took evidence and had all the clerks of the United States here before the Judiciary Committee, and we tried to fix their compensation, and not knowing exactly how to fix it we left it to the Attorney General to go into the matter and see what the proper salary was, basing it upon the fees they had received, and the salaries have been fixed, at the discretion of the Attorney General, by a statute. We have had evidence before us of outrageous scandals, where men have been appointed by the judge and the judge has borrowed some of the money they received and put it in his pocket. We tried to abolish all that. I am not reflecting on anybody, but I say it came to be a scandal in this country.

Mr. POMERENE. May I ask the Senator how long ago that was?

Mr. OVERMAN. Why, it has been only a few years ago.

Mr. POMERENE. I think the Senator will find that it has been longer than that.

Mr. OVERMAN. No; it has not. It has been since I have been in the Senate.

Mr. POMERENE. The Senator has been here a good many years, and I hope he will be here a good many years more.

Mr. OVERMAN. I thank the Senator; but the Senator asked me how long ago it was. I think it was six years ago when this evidence came before us that a judge had appointed a man master in equity and he got a large sum in hand and the judge borrowed it from him, and we talked about impeaching the judge. This happened in several instances, and we wanted to stop all that sort of thing.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Ohio yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. POMERENE. If I have the floor, I yield.

Mr. HARRISON. I wanted to make a motion here, or suggest a division of a question, when we get down to the brass tacks of this proposition. I understood that the Senator was going to ask that the conference report be adopted by the Senate, and that on four amendments he was going to ask for concurrence in the House amendments. I was going to ask for a division, so far as the motion applied to amendment No. 113.

Mr. WARREN. I intended to ask, and do intend to ask, that action shall be taken on each one of the four individually. I do not propose to group them together.

Mr. HARRISON. That is all right.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President——

Mr. WARREN. If I may be allowed a moment in the matter of this report, I hope the Senator from Ohio understands that when a committee goes into conference with a couple of hundred differences it is impossible for the Senate to maintain its position on all of those matters, and, on the other hand, it is the duty of the conferees to maintain, so far as they can, all of those; and that was done in this case. I am sorry, of course, to see the matter defeated, because my sympathies were with it; but the presentation by the House left us in a position where we had every right to recede.

Now, with all these different items the Senator is not alone in feeling discouraged about some one item. I know that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, because of his office as chairman of the conference committee, has many disappointments and he is willing to take all the criticisms and all the troubles of everybody, and he does not ask any sympathy, nor does he ask any choice of language so long as Senators keep in order; but he does wish them to consider what they would do in the same place. We have here two contending bodies, the House and the Senate. They differ not so much as would seem at first sight, because some things from the House went out on the point of order, and others perhaps could not, so that many of the amendments the Senate put on can almost immediately be accepted by the House, as a great many of them are now accepted; but, on the other hand, the House has the same right to insist that we have, and unless somebody gives way somewhere I fear we shall have no legislation. Of course, as to the merits of the case, whatever they may be, we have finally to reach a reconciliation or lose our bill.

Mr. POMERENE. Mr. President, I recognize the difficulties that conferees encounter, but I think I know something about the conditions in the Federal courts in Ohio. I do not think Senators appreciate the extent to which the business of those courts has been increasing in the last few years, and the striking out of that provision is going to cripple the courts in Ohio—and I speak of them because I know whereof I speak. It is going to deprive the public of the service of some very efficient men. That will be the result.

Mr. WARREN. Yet the Ohio Members of Congress were all there when this bill was framed and passed.

Mr. POMERENE. Does the Senator know whether their attention was called to this or not?

Mr. WARREN. I assume the Members of Congress from Ohio are ever vigilant, as the Senators from Ohio are. I have no reason to think otherwise.

Mr. POMERENE. We have a very able delegation from Ohio in the other House, but they are not omniscient. In that respect they do not differ from other Representatives and other Senators.

There is another matter I wanted to call attention to. I observe that the amendment providing for an increase in the salary of the Vice President by $3,000 was also stricken out. The same explanation for the striking out of this increase no doubt will be made by the conferees. I regret exceedingly that it has been stricken out.

Mr. WARREN. No more than I.

Mr. POMERENE. I do not know the incoming Vice President; I have never had the pleasure of meeting him. I admire his public career.

I think I know something of the demands made upon the occupant of the Vice President's chair, whoever he may be. Out in Ohio we have rollers in our iron and steel mills who get as much pay in a year as the United States of America gives its Vice President. I do not think the great American people have any right to ask the Vice President to serve for the small salary which he gets. He is second in rank in our Government. He succeeds the President if anything should befall him. I am not going to make any objection to the striking out of this increase because at this late hour it will do no good.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, I want to add a word to what the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] and the Senator from Ohio [Mr. POMERENE] have said concerning the provision in the bill forbidding clerks and deputy clerks of courts from acting as referees and masters in chancery.

When this amendment was put in the bill I received a complaint regarding it from one of the clerks in one of the New York courts, and then, after the Senator from Ohio had stricken it from the bill in the Senate, I was called upon by one of the judges of the District Court for the Southern District of New York regarding this matter. This court has more business than any other district court in the country; in fact, in that court we have four district judges holding terms of court continuously, and usually two judges from outside the city assisting.

The deputy clerk of that court receives a salary of $3,000 a year. He acts as referee and master in hundreds of cases assigned to him by the judges of the court. The judges tell me—and in this they are supported by a number of lawyers who have discussed the matter with me—that not only is this a benefit to the clerks, but it is of advantage to the court, to litigants, and to the lawyers who practice in the courts. I am told that if this remains permanent law, it will be a matter of great inconvenience to the business of the courts. The condition of legislation is such that it seems impossible to change it now. If it goes in as a permanent law, immediately on the convening of the new Congress I shall introduce a bill to repeal this provision. I know that nearing the end of the session, it is perhaps impossible to adjust this, but it is a very grave mistake, Mr. President, and one which never should have been made.

While I am on my feet I want to say a word about amendment No. 40, which refers to the New York passport bureau. We have at the New York customhouse a bureau where people may apply for passports. The amendment continuing that bureau was placed in the bill in the Senate. It has been stricken out in conference. It simply provided for an appropriation of $15,500 to carry on the business of that office for the next fiscal year.

Mr. President, in the New York bureau last year 41,000 applications were filed for passports. That is double the number of passports given in the entire country in the years before the war. The last calendar year the State Department issued 168,000 passports. That is nearly double the number granted in 1919 and eight times the number issued in 1912. People are traveling on business and for other purposes, and to-day no one goes abroad without a passport.

The bureaus in New York and San Francisco were established for the convenience of the traveling public and for the convenience, too, of the State Department. There is a fee charged, a fee given to the officers of the court, or of the State courts, when the petition is made up. From these fees alone last year the New York passport office received $25,000, which otherwise would have gone into the pockets of the clerks in the State courts or the local justices of the peace.

So, Mr. President, we have stricken out of this bill a provision that was a matter of great convenience to the traveling public and besides was profitable to the Government. For the life of me I can not see why the Senate conferees agreed to this. It must have been apparent to them, if they had made any inquiry about it at all, that there would really have been no charge upon the Government if this had been left in.

I shall not protest further, because the House has agreed to this particular provision cutting out this item, and it would be useless to do anything further about it. But I prophesy that before the 1st of July comes some action will be taken by Congress restoring this instrumentality, which was so necessary and convenient for the entire country.

Mr. McLEAN. I would like to inquire of the Senator in charge of the bill if the amendment which authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to continue the chaplains in the Public Health Service hospitals was retained?

Mr. WARREN. It was not.

Mr. McLEAN. Does the Senator remember whether it was stricken out because it was considered to be unnecessary, or as too expensive?

Mr. WARREN. It is not always allowable for conferees to expose on the floor of the Senate everything said in a conference, but it was considered by the House conferees unnecessary at the present time, and looked upon as a move to establish a sort of bureau of chaplains, so that they could be here in Washington, and receive grades all the way up to colonel, perhaps to brigadier general, and so on. I do not entertain that belief myself. I simply say that is one of the many things which came up in the struggle we made for them. I may not always appear to be a good Christian, but I assure the Senator I was on the Lord's side in the chaplain matter, and did the best I could.

Mr. McLEAN. I think it would not be out of place for the Lord to have one bureau in Washington, and I am sorry that the Senator being on the Lord's side felt it to be his duty to surrender his position.

Mr. WARREN. I think perhaps that bureau would be very lonesome.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. CALDER. Would the adoption of the report carry with it the approval of the action of the House on the bonus amendment?

Mr. WARREN. Oh, no.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It would not.

The conference report was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House, which the Assistant Secretary read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
February 26, 1921.

Resolved, That the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 29, 30, 34, 37, 38, 46, 59, 63, 76, 80, 95, 98, 99 and 114 to the bill (H. R. 15543) entitled "An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes," and agrees to the same;

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 82 and agrees to the same with the following amendment: In the last line of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "necessary" insert the following: ", to be available immediately."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 112 and agrees to the same with the following amendment: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 4. That no part of any money appropriated by this or any other act shall be used during the fiscal year 1922 for the purchase of any standard typewriting machine, except bookkeeping and billing machines, at a price in excess of the following, to wit: For correspondence models with carriages which will accommodate paper 10 inches in width, $70; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 12 inches in width, $75; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 14 inches in width, $77.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 16 inches in width, $82.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 18 inches in width, $87.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 20 inches in width, $94; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 22 inches in width, $95; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 24 inches in width, $97.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 26 inches in width, $103.50; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 28 inches in width, $104; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 30 inches in width, $105; for models with carriages which will accommodate paper 32 inches in width, $107.50.

"All purchases of typewriting machines during the fiscal year 1922 by executive departments and independent establishments for use in the District of Columbia or in the field, except as hereinafter provided, shall be made from the surplus machines in the stock of the General Supply Committee. The War Department shall furnish the General Supply Committee, immediately upon the approval of this act, a complete inventory of the various makes, models, and classes of typewriters in its possession, the condition of such machines, and the point of storage, and shall turn over to the General Supply Committee such typewriting machines in such quantities as the Secretary of the Treasury from time to time may call for by specific requisition for sale to the various services of the Government. If the General Supply Committee is unable to furnish serviceable machines to any such service of the Government, it shall furnish unserviceable machines at current exchange prices and such machines shall then be applied by the service of the Government receiving them as part payment for new machines from commercial sources in accordance with the prices fixed in the preceding paragraph. And in selling typewriting machines to the various services the General Supply Committee may accept an equal number of unserviceable machines as part payment thereon at the exchange prices quoted in the current general schedule of supplies."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113 and agrees to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 6. That all civilian employees of the Governments of the United States and the District of Columbia who receive a total of compensation at the rate of $2,500 per annum or less, except as otherwise provided in this section, shall receive, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, additional compensation at the rate of $240 per annum: Provided, That such employees as receive a total of annual compensation at a rate more than $2,500 and less than $2,740 shall receive additional compensation at such rate per annum as may be necessary to make their salaries, plus their additional compensation, at the rate of $2,740 per annum, and no employee shall receive additional compensation under this section at a rate which is more than 60 per centum of the rate of the total annual compensation received by such employee: Provided further, That the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, shall not be computed as salary in construing this section: Provided further, That where an employee in the service on June 30, 1920, has received during the fiscal year 1921, or shall receive during the fiscal year 1922, an increase of salary at a rate in excess of $200 per annum, or where an employee whether previously in the service or not, has entered the service since June 30, 1920, whether such employee has received an increase in salary or not, such employees shall be granted the increased compensation provided herein only when and upon the certification of the person in the legislative branch or the head of the department or establishment employing such persons of the ability and qualifications personal to such employees as would justify such increased compensation.

"The provisions of this section shall not apply to the following: Employees paid from the postal revenues and sums which may be advanced from the Treasury to meet deficiencies in the postal revenues; employees whose pay is adjustable from time to time through wage boards or similar authority to accord with the commercial rates paid locally for the same class of service; employees of the Panama Canal on the Canal Zone; employees of the Alaskan Engineering Commission in Alaska; employees paid from lump-sum appropriations in bureaus, divisions, commissions, or any other governmental agencies or employments created by law since January 1, 1916, except employees of the United States Tariff Commission and the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, who shall be included, and officers and members of the Metropolitan police of the District of Columbia and the United States park police who receive the compensation fixed by the act approved December 5, 1919, and officers and members of the fire department of the District of Columbia who receive the compensation fixed by the act approved January 24, 1920, shall receive increased compensation at the rate allowed by this section for other employees. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees whose duties require only a portion of their time, except charwomen, who shall be included; employees whose services are utilized for brief periods at intervals; persons employed by or through corporations, firms, or individuals acting for or on behalf of or as agents of the United States or any department or independent establishment of the Government of the United States in connection with construction work or the operation of plants; employees who receive a part of their pay from any outside sources under cooperative arrangements with the Government of the United States or the District of Columbia; employees who serve voluntarily or receive only a nominal compensation, and employees who may be provided with special allowances because of their service in foreign countries. The provisions of this section shall not apply to employees of the railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems taken over by the United States, and nothing contained herein shall be deemed a recognition of the employees of such railroads, express companies, telegraph, telephone, marine cable, or radio system or systems as employees of the United States.

"Section 6 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved May 10, 1916, as amended by the naval appropriation act approved August 29, 1916, shall not operate to prevent anyone from receiving the additional compensation provided in this section who otherwise is entitled to receive the same.

"Such employees as are engaged on piecework, by the hour, or at per diem rates, if otherwise entitled to receive the additional compensation, shall receive the same at the rate to which they are entitled in this section when their fixed rate of pay for the regular working hours and on the basis of 313 days in the said fiscal year would amount to $2,500 or less: Provided, That this method of computation shall not apply to any per diem employees regularly paid a per diem for every day in the year.

"So much as may be necessary to pay the additional compensation provided in this section to employees of the Government of the United States is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

"So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to employees of the government of the District of Columbia is appropriated, 40 per cent out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated and 60 per cent out of the revenues of the District of Columbia, except to employees of the Washington Aqueduct and the water department, which shall be paid entirely from the revenues of the water department, and to employees of the Minimum Wage Board, the community center department, and the playgrounds department, which shall be paid wholly out of the revenue of the District of Columbia.

"So much as may be necessary to pay the increased compensation provided in this section to persons employed under trust funds who may be construed to be employees of the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia is authorized to be paid, respectively, from such trust funds.

"Reports shall be submitted to Congress on the first day of the next regular session showing for the first four months of the fiscal year the average number of employees in each department, bureau, office, or establishment receiving the increased compensation at the rate of $240 per annum and the average number by grades receiving the same at each other rate."

That the House insists upon its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, the House insisted upon amendment numbered 58, based entirely upon the uncertainty of what the Supreme Court would decide in the matter of the constitutionality of the Federal land-bank bonds. That decision came yesterday and renders the call for the money unnecessary, and therefore I move that as to amendment No. 58 the Senate recede from its amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. I move that as to amendment numbered 82, which refers to repairs of the Navy building for the Shipping Board, the Senate recede from its insistence and agree to the House amendment to the Senate amendment, making the sum immediately available. That is the only difference.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. As to amendment numbered 112, that is a matter of typewriters, which is no difference of consequence, and I move that the Senate in that case agree to the House amendment to the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. WARREN. The question of amendment numbered 113, the remaining matter, is that of the bonus, which the Secretary has just read, and as there may be some Senators here now who were not present when I explained before, I will say that the differences are that the House has allowed all of the bonuses that the Senate provided for directly, and in addition has changed the $120 bonus to $240 in the case of the employees of the War Risk Insurance Bureau. They have changed the language which is supposed to refer to navy yards, and so forth, and inserted language which is nearly the same, if not quite the same, as first contained in the bill, and which provides that the bonus shall not apply to those workmen who get per diem compensation and whose wages are fixed on a regular scale by wage boards or commissions constituted for that purpose.

I move the concurrence of the Senate in the amendment of the House to the Senate amendment as stated.

Mr. HARRISON. May I ask the Senator a question? The Senate, by a very large vote, placed amendments in the bill touching the navy-yard workmen and touching the Women's Bureau. Of course, the motion that the Senator has made is a preferential motion. Will he not change his motion to disagree to the House amendment and insist on the Senate amendment and let it go back to conference again in that way?

Mr. WARREN. The same result will be accomplished, of course, if that is done.

Mr. HARRISON. It will be brought in, then, if the Senate adopts the amendment.

Mr. WARREN. If my motion is voted down, of course the only motion then will be to insist further, and to ask a further conference.

Mr. HARRISON. We are trying to expedite business. If the motion of the Senator is insisted upon there will be quite a good deal of debate on the proposition. If the motion could be stated the other way—to insist on the Senate amendment and let the matter go back to conference—there would be no debate, I am quite sure, and the matter could be expedited.

Mr. WARREN. It is as broad as it is long. I realize we are skating on very thin ice now. We have lost the sundry civil bill already, apparently, and we have a long route to travel with this bill even if we should get an early determination, because it is one of the longest bills, a bill that contains more figures than any other, a bill that requires very difficult work in the matter of engrossing to get it ready and get it into another conference and then secure another opportunity on the floor to report it back; and then to have it enrolled and to get the signature of the Presiding Officer, and all the other things that must be done very carefully, and then to get the enrolled bill sent to the Executive, who may not be able to be here at the Capitol when the time comes.

However, if the Senator is going to insist upon that suggestion, I can withdraw my motion.

Mr. HARRISON. I think it will expedite the matter if the Senator will change the motion in that way.

Mr. WARREN. Then if I may do so, I withdraw my motion and ask that as to amendment numbered 113 the Senate insist upon its amendment and ask a further conference with the House and that the Presiding Officer appoint the conferees upon the part of the Senate.

Mr. HARRISON. I understood the motion was to disagree to the House amendment and insist further upon the Senate amendment?

Mr. WARREN. Yes.

Mr. POMERENE. To what does that relate?

Mr. HARRISON. It relates to the navy yard workmen.

Mr. POMERENE. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. WARREN. Certainly.

Mr. POMERENE. The question with regard to a bonus to naval employees was discussed at considerable length. I understand what the Senator's position was with regard to that, but I have not heard a reason assigned for the denial of the bonus to the Women's Bureau. I should like an explanation of that matter from the standpoint of the committee.

Mr. WARREN. I do not wish to take up any time. I do not know what may have been their considerations. I did not read the RECORD. The appropriation was a lump sum and that was, of course, included with the other lump sums. The Women's Bureau has an appropriation of $75,000.

Mr. POMERENE. Do I understand it to be the position of the chairman of the committee that those employees were in fact given the bonus previously out of the lump sum? Is that the Senator's position?

Mr. WARREN. The Women's Bureau was only established last year and they were provided only $8,500. Five thousand dollars of that went to one person and $3,500 to another. By legislation since then we have extended that, and it is provided that they shall have a larger sum. In the meantime, before the matter came to consideration, we could not tell what salaries they had paid, because they were paid out of a lump sum.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I can say to the Senator that Miss Anderson, the head of the bureau, filed a statement of the salaries which are being paid. I will call the Senator's attention to them so that he can see exactly how much of a bonus was paid. For instance, we will start with messengers. The statutory compensation of a messenger is $840. The messenger was paid by the Women's Bureau $1,080, which would apparently make the $240 bonus. If we add $240 more, the messenger will receive $1,320.

Take the chief clerk. The chief clerk there is getting $2,700. Nearly every chief clerk we have now in any of the departments, outside of some in the Treasury Department and one or two in other departments, receives $2,250. The statistical clerk receives $2,200. I can point to hundreds of statisticians in other departments who get only $2,000. The bonus does not, of course, affect Miss Anderson. Some of the investigating assistants get $3,000 and the industrial supervisors get $3,000. We have supervisors in the field for the Interior Department, making examinations of public lands all over the United States and they get $2,650. Field examiners in this bureau get $3,000. If there is any justice in that, I can not see it.

Mr. POMERENE. How many of those employees were there?

Mr. SMOOT. Enough to take up the full amount of the lump-sum appropriation. The appropriation is a lump sum.

Mr. POMERENE. What is the lump sum?

Mr. SMOOT. Eighty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, may I have the attention of the chairman of the committee just a moment? I was not in the Chamber, perhaps, or did not notice what action was taken on Senate amendment No. 58.

Mr. WARREN. That amendment was disagreed to and sent back because of our amendment calling for $200,000,000. The decision of the Supreme Court yesterday was considered to settle that matter, and therefore the motion has just been agreed to that we recede from our amendment.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. The reason why I am asking the Senator the question is because some information has come to me indirectly that the Farm Loan Board may be in need of funds before it can sell its bonds in the open market. As this is a mere authorization, it is the opinion, I understand, of some of the members of that board that it might be well to leave the authorization in the bill until the condition of the market has improved.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I yield to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. THOMAS. I desire to ask the Senator from South Carolina if he has noticed that the Supreme Court of the United States on yesterday rendered a decision affirming the constitutionality of the farm loan bank act?

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. It is in view of that decision that I am making this statement. I understood the chairman to state that on account of the decision of the Supreme Court, and in view of that decision, the House has agreed to strike this provision from the bill. The information I have is to the effect that, though the decision has relieved the situation so far as the functioning of the Farm Loan Board is concerned, they still might find it difficult, on account of the demoralized condition of the money market at present, to obtain certain moneys which they need, and, as this is only an authorization, it is thought perhaps it might be well to leave it in the bill, to be used at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I do not understand there is any demoralization of the money market, so far as capital seeking tax-free bonds is concerned. The Senator from South Carolina, as he keeps up with the times and all matters pertaining to this subject, has, of course, noticed that tax-free bonds have been going up in price lately. They are higher to-day than they were two weeks ago and were higher then than they were a month previous, because capital is seeking nontaxable bonds. The Senator from South Carolina, I think, may be perfectly assured that there are probably farm loan bonds being sold already, or they will be sold under the decision of the Supreme Court. The Farm Loan Board have the bonds, and that body has been now firmly established by the finding of the highest tribunal in the land as being sound under the Constitution. So I have no idea that there is going to be any embarrassment in reference to the sale of the bonds.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. All I care to say about the matter is that I have discharged my responsibility in the case. The information to which I have referred was given to me just awhile ago. Of course, if the committee which has the bill in charge thinks that the character of the bonds is such that striking out this clause will not embarrass the operations of the Farm Loan Board, I have nothing to say. I merely thought, perhaps, that it might be well to leave the amendment in the bill, as it is a mere authorization, to be used at the discretion of the Secretary of the Treasury, and that it might enable the board to get to work more rapidly than it otherwise could.

The VICE PRESIDENT. As the Chair understands that the motion of the Senator from Wyoming——

Mr. WARREN. The motion which I have already made is before the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the Senator's motion was that the Senate disagree to the House amendment to the Senate amendment, that the Senate insist upon its amendment, and ask for a further conference with the other House.

Mr. WARREN. On amendment No. 113; and that the Senate ask the House for a further conference, the Chair to appoint the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Wyoming.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. WARREN, Mr. SMOOT, and Mr. OVERMAN conferees on the part of the Senate at the further conference.

CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES.

Mr. KENYON. I ask unanimous consent to submit a report from the Committee on Privileges and Elections. It is the report of the subcommittee appointed to investigate campaign expenditures. I am instructed by the Committee on Privileges and Elections to make the report directly to the Senate. I think the report should be printed in the RECORD. It is not a long report, as we have boiled it down.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The report (No. 823) is as follows:

[Senate Report No. 823, Sixty-sixth Congress, third session.]

The Committee on Privileges and Elections, which was directed by a resolution adopted on May 20, 1920, to investigate and report the campaign expenditures of the various presidential candidates of all parties, have completed their investigation and submit herewith a report in relation thereto.

On the 20th day of May, 1920, the Senate passed the following resolution:

[Senate resolution 357, Sixty-sixth Congress, second session.]

"Resolved, That the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, is instructed to investigate forthwith and report to the Senate as soon as possible the campaign expenditures of the various presidential candidates in both parties, the names of the persons, firms, or corporations subscribing, the amount contributed, the method of expenditure of said sums, and all facts in relation thereto, not only as to the subscriptions of money and expenditures thereof, but as to the use of any other means or influence, including the promise or use of patronage and the providing of funds for setting up contesting delegations, and all other facts in relation thereto that would not only be of public interest but would aid the Congress in any necessary remedial legislation.

"That said Committee on Privileges and Elections, or any subcommittee thereof, is hereby empowered to sit and act at such time and place as it may deem necessary; to require by subpœna, or otherwise, the attendance of witnesses, the production of books, papers, and documents; to employ stenographers at a cost of not exceeding $1 per printed page. The chairman of the committee or subcommittee, or any member thereof, may administer oaths to witnesses. Subpœnas for witnesses shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee thereof. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee, or any subcommittee thereof, willfully makes default, or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any question pertinent to the investigation heretofore authorized, shall be held to the penalties provided by section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

"The expense thereof shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate on vouchers ordered by said committee, signed by the chairman thereof, and approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

On the 21st day of May, 1920, the Committee on Privileges and Elections passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That a subcommittee of five members, of which three shall constitute a quorum, be appointed by the chairman to conduct the investigation with which the committee is charged by Senate resolution 357, and that it proceed at once to prosecute the same; that the managers of the campaigns of the various candidates or persons reputed to be candidates be requested by telegraph to attend before the subcommittee on Monday, May 24, 1920; that the hearings before the said subcommittee be public and that it be directed to proceed in the work with which it is charged with all dispatch. The subcommittee may appoint one or more of its members to investigate any particular question or questions. The subcommittee shall report to the full committee."

The chairman of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, Senator DILLINGHAM, on the 21st day of May, 1920, appointed the following subcommittee: Senator WILLIAM S. KENYON (chairman), Senator ATLEE POMERENE, Senator JAMES A. REED, Senator WALTER E. EDGE, and Senator SELDEN P. SPENCER.

On June 5, 1920, the Senate also passed the following resolution:

[Senate resolution 383, Sixty-sixth Congress, second session.]

"Resolved, That the powers conferred upon the Committee on Privileges and Elections and the subcommittee heretofore appointed by it under Senate resolution 357 be, and they are hereby, extended so as to authorize and require the Committee on Privileges and Elections, or the subcommittee thereof now acting under Senate Resolution 357, to investigate, after the adjournment of the Democratic national convention, and before the November elections, 1920, the receipts and expenditures of the several political committees, and the receipts and expenditures of the campaigns conducted by and on behalf of, or against, the election of the several candidates for President and Vice President, and the United States Senate, and for said purposes the said Committee on Privileges and Elections, or the said subcommittee, and the members thereof, are hereby clothed with the same powers conferred on said committee and said subcommittee, and the members thereof, by said resolution No. 357; and they are further directed to make report of their proceedings to the Senate not later than the first Monday in December, 1920."

On the 7th day of December, 1920, the Senate extended the time in which the committee should make report.

These three resolutions constitute the authority under which the Subcommittee of Privileges and Elections conducted its investigation. The report will deal with the subjects as follows:

I. The campaign funds of the various candidates for the nomination of President in both the Republican and Democratic conventions, gathered from both receipts and expenditures.

II. The amounts expended by the various national committees of the respective parties during the campaign, these committees being as follows: (a) Republican national committee, (b) Democratic national committee, (c) Republican congressional committee (d) Democratic congressional committee, (e) Republican senatorial committee, (f) Bureau of senatorial elections, Democratic national committee.

III. The amounts received by State committees in the various States outside of the sums received from the national committee.

I.

The committee investigated the receipts and expenditures of money in connection with the candidacies of 17 persons, including avowed candidates in both the Republican and Democratic Parties and those not formally candidates, but in whose interests activities were apparent.

In certain instances the financial interlocking arrangements of the various organizations in the interest of a candidate were of such a nature that it is difficult to arrive at a specified sum as representing the total funds used. The following compilation, however, based both upon the testimony taken and an examination of the financial statements of receipts and expenditures, as furnished the committee is, in our judgment, a fair statement of the approximate amounts of the campaign funds used in the interest of each candidate as found by the committee. The list is alphabetically arranged.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, Republican	$40,550
Gov. Calvin Coolidge, Republican	68,375
Gov. James M. Cox, Democrat	22,000
Gov. Edward I. Edwards, Democrat	12,900
Senator Joseph Irwin France, Republican	None.
James W. Gerard, Democrat	$14,040
Senator Warren G. Harding, Republican	113,109
Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Democrat	3,337
Herbert Hoover, Republican	173,542
Senator Hiram W. Johnson, Republican	194,393
Gov. Frank O. Lowden, Republican	414,984
William G. McAdoo, Democrat	None.
Senator Robert L. Owen, Democrat	8,595
A. Mitchell Palmer, Democrat	59,610
Senator Miles Poindexter, Republican	77,150
Senator Howard Sutherland, Republican	4,145
Gen. Leonard Wood, Republican	1,773,303
Total	2,980,033

Some explanation of the above may be in order. For instance as to the Wood campaign:

Mr. Sprague, who is the national treasurer of the Wood campaign committee, testified to receipts of (see hearings, S. Res. 357, pt. 1, p. 518)		$1,180,043
Mr. Stebbins, who had to do with handling funds In the East for two Wood organizations, received at one time	$156,271
At another time	280,213
Making a total of (pt. 5, p. 779)		436,484
In addition to these were the funds received from Indiana not included in the Sprague or Stebbins accounts amounting to (pt. 1, p. 523)		21,000
In Michigan there was money collected and expended not accounted for in these other matters, of (pt. 1, p. 236)	54,266
And (pt. 2, p. 621)	23,000
Making a total of		77,266
In addition to this, Mr. Loeb testified to receiving (pt. 6, p. 864)		406,000
Making a total of		2,120,793
In this there are some duplications; in the Stebbins totals there is duplication of (pt. 5, p. 777)	$77,490
In the Stebbins account there is accounted for by Loeb (pt. 5, p. 77)	130,000
In the Loeb account there is accounted for by Sprague (pt. 1, p. 509; pt. 6, p. 864)	225,000
Making a total duplication of		432,490
Deducting this from the $2,120,793 leaves a balance of		1,688,303
There should be added to this the amounts collected by Mr. King (pt. 1, p. 286)		91,000
Making a total of		1,779,303
And there should be deducted from this the amount Mr. Loeb testified was returned to Col. Procter (pt. 6, p. 864)		6,000
Which leaves a balance of		1,773,303

Campaign, Senator HIRAM W. JOHNSON:
Amount raised and disbursed by the eastern manager (pt. 1, p. 37)	72,230
Amount raised in California (pt. 3, p. 723)	113,000
Amount raised in Michigan (pt. 1, pp. 203, 204, 205)	7,250
Amount raised in Nebraska (pt. 1, p. 369)	1,913
Making a total of	194,393

Campaign, Herbert Hoover:
The Hoover National Republican Club collected (pt. 1, p. 98)	66,332
The Pennsylvania Hoover Club collected (pt. 1, p. 115)	20,000
The Hoover Republican Club of California collected (pt. 5, p. 796)	87,210
Making a total of	173,542

The last two items are independent of any funds received from California.

We insert these illustrations merely to show how we reach the sum totals expended by the various campaign committees in the preconvention campaign. It has been difficult to arrive at entirely accurate totals, but we believe our figures show the situation fairly and as accurately as it is possible to do. Undoubtedly as to some of the candidates more was spent than is here indicated.

II.

In this connection we set forth the disbursements of the national organizations of both the Republican and Democratic Parties from the time of the national conventions up to the end of the periods of disbursements in connection with the presidential election of November 2, 1920. Both of the great political parties claim they closed the campaign with a deficit. Consequently we do not set out the receipts but the disbursements, as they will more clearly show the amounts expended in the campaign, it being reasonable to suppose that the deficits will be eliminated by subsequent contributions.

We have not ascertained the disbursements of the Socialist Party or the Farm Labor Party. Reports were requested from the Socialist Party, but they were not furnished, and as the real contest was between the two great parties the committee believe it sufficient to set forth their expenditures. In this connection we desire to call attention to the fact that there are many organizations in the country of a semi-political nature, active in political matters, which organizations, however, had no candidates for the Presidency, but did exert their influence in various ways in the election. As they were not conducting campaigns for the Presidency the committee did not feel warranted in entering into an investigation of their activities. If the Senate should desire that their receipts and expenditures and general method of operation be investigated, the committee is quite willing to do so. It would, we think, require further authorization from the Senate and an extension of time in which the committee should make its final report.

We believe the activities of the various quasi-political organizations should be investigated and a statement given to the Congress and to the public as to what their activities and objects are.

Following is a statement of the disbursements of the national organizations of both Republican and Democratic Parties from the time of the national conventions up to the close of the campaign in connection with the presidential election of November 2, 1920, including the post-election financial statements:

Republican national committee (does not include a loan of $306,233.50 to the Republican congressional committee, a major portion of which the records show was paid back, or the loan of $100,000 to the senatorial committee, which the records show was repaid in full)	$5,319,729.32
Democratic national committee	1,318,274.02
Total	6,638,003.34
Republican congressional committee	375,969.05
Democratic congressional committee	24,498.05
Total	400,467.10
Republican Senatorial committee	326,980.29
Bureau of senatorial elections, Democratic national committee	6,675.00
Total	333,655.29
Making a grand total of	7,372,125.73

We do not deem it essential to set forth in this report all the particulars involved in these various disbursements. The figures furnished us do not go at all into minute detail, but we have been furnished with lists of contributors of $100 or more. We file these lists with the report, and they will be subject to inspection in the office of the Secretary of the Senate. The expense of printing the same would be enormous, and we do not believe the situation demands it. Anyone desiring specific information on these matters may examine these lists in the office of the Secretary of the Senate.

We group the amounts sent by the Republican senatorial committee into the respective States as shown by figures presented, and it is as follows:

Arizona	$23,000	New Hampshire	$5,500
California	6,500	New York	4,000
Colorado	13,000	North Carolina	2,500
Idaho	13,000	Ohio	8,000
Indiana	10,000	Oklahoma	15,500
Iowa	5,000	Oregon	15,450
Kansas	3,000	South Dakota	5,000
Kentucky	3,000	Utah	12,000
Maine	1,000	Virginia	500
Maryland	8,000	Washington	7,725
Missouri	10,000	Wisconsin	10,000
Nevada	17,000

III.

The expenditures of the national committees do not show the entire amounts used in the campaign, but, of course, it is practically impossible to show such amounts. It would necessitate not only getting the State expenditures, but the county and township expenditures, likewise the expenditures of independent groups and individuals. This the committee did not feel warranted in undertaking. We have, however, endeavored to secure from the respective political committees of the various States the amounts collected by them outside of the amounts received from the national committees.

It was developed in the hearings that the Republican national committee had a joint collection arrangement with the Republican State committees in various States whereby funds were collected by the national committee and returned to the State committee. The figures we have heretofore shown as to the national committees would cover these items, but the report would not be complete without showing the receipts by the State committees of contributions separate and distinct from the contribution of the national committee. Your committee therefore made an effort to secure from the various State committees a statement of the aggregate receipts of the State party organizations independent of the funds raised by the national committees.

In the early part of January, 1921, the chairman of the committee addressed a letter to the chairman of the Republican State committee and to the chairman of the Democratic State central committee in each State in the Union, including the District of Columbia, asking him to furnish the committee with a sworn statement of the aggregate receipts and expenditures of his State party organization for any purpose in connection with the presidential campaign of 1920, independent of any funds collected by or for or received from the national party organization or any agency or branch of the same. In instances where the replies were not forthcoming after a reasonable time the letters were followed up by urgent telegrams.

The response to this request for information was quite general, and as a result the committee is able to attach a table showing the receipts by States of such contributions, with but two Republican and three Democratic committee reports missing. The statements returned were of varied character. A great many indicated that the funds collected were used in part in connection with the campaigns for State and other local officers, for United States Senator, Congressmen, etc. Many furnished certified copies of statements filed in compliance with State law, and in these instances it was necessary to deduct the apparent contributions by the national party organizations for the purposes of this compilation, which, in so far as possible, contains only information responsive to the purpose of the inquiry. Owing to varied systems of keeping accounts by the committees of the different States, it soon became apparent from an examination of the statements returned that it would be impracticable to attempt to tabulate the disbursements without duplication of funds accounted for by the national party organizations. Many of the committees apparently were able to determine with some degree of accuracy the amounts received from sources other than the national organizations, but their records were such that they could give only the disbursements of funds collected from all sources. Inasmuch as it can reasonably be assumed that the amount of the funds collected outside of the contributions of the national party organizations were expended in connection with the presidential and local political campaigns of 1920, the tabulation of the receipts furnishes also the most accurate figures of the disbursements for the purpose of this inquiry that can be supplied from the statements furnished by the various State committees. We include herewith such tabulation:

Aggregate receipts of the Republican and Democratic State committees, respectively, in connection with the presidential campaign of 1920, exclusive of funds received from the national organizations of the two respective parties.

[In many instances these funds were used in part in connection with the local campaigns for State officers, etc.]

	Republican.	Democratic.
Alabama	$115.00	$5,000.00
Arizona	38,366.28	15,482.50
Arkansas	193.75	None.
California	35,000.00
Colorado	99,626.99	10,346.00
Connecticut	[1] 66,596.58	39,699.40
Delaware	[2] 46,258.65	17,964.54
District of Columbia	8,804.00	7,843.82
Florida	2,339.50	None.
Georgia	None.	None.
Idaho	25,970.95	4,260.00
Illinois	42,634.07	9,925.00
Indiana	215,938.15	74,692.66
Iowa	13,138.54	14,174.99
Kansas		13,587.64
Kentucky	59,182.45	62,930.23
Louisiana	1,022.50	None.
Maine	15,055.35	6,537.76
Maryland	50,577.00	57,889.63
Massachusetts	133,658.31	25,335.21
Michigan	4,848.50	24,478.79
Minnesota	9,993.26	6,736.08
Mississippi	700.00	None.
Missouri	23,884.80	56,901.69
Montana	35,060.27	6,508.50
Nebraska	11,155.19	10,752.92
Nevada	3,753.45	11,485.00
New Hampshire	24,653.66	11,121.41
New Jersey	None.	10,745.00
New Mexico	23,189.32	15,858.73
New York	479,699.19	63,373.00
North Carolina	[3] 4,880.18	16,418.95
North Dakota	3,835.43	2,000.00
Ohio	74,373.90	58,815.00
Oklahoma	55,663.68	63,575.45
Oregon	8,205.24	12,633.28
Pennsylvania	139,613.25	58,512.08
Rhode Island	25,000.00	9,552.00
South Carolina	706.00	500.00
South Dakota	8,948.51	6,706.00
Tennessee		17,932.16
Texas	25,148.95	2,668.75
Utah	10,475.00
Vermont	2,192.00	686.41
Virginia	925.00	2,596.00
Washington	[4] 116,537.45	18,476.00
West Virginia	84,872.31	25,803.06
Wisconsin	None.	7,818.00
Wyoming	45,237.93
Total	2,078,060.55	838,323.64

[1] This amount includes $64,185 received from the National and State ways and means committee which had receipts of $84,148.46, of which $15,000 went to the national committee. (See letter of J. H. Roraback.)

[2] Amount received and distributed by Delaware Republican finance committee. Of this amount the Republican State committee received $8,653.79 and distributed $6,097.89. (See letter of Chas. Warner, chairman, for details.)

[3] This amount is arrived at by subtracting from the total disbursements of the Republican State executive committee $12,744, the amount contributed by the national committee $7,863.82, as shown by Mr. Upham's Exhibit 4, page 1256 of the campaign committee hearings. (See letter of Gilliam Grissom, secretary.)

[4] From Nov. 1, 1918. Considerable expenditure prior to national convention including the expenses of an educational campaign to counteract activities of Non-Partisan League. (See letter of Charles Hebberd, chairman.)

These letters we also insert at this point.

DELAWARE REPUBLICAN FINANCE COMMITTEE,
Wilmington, Del., January 31, 1921.

Hon. WILLIAM S. KENYON, Chairman,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Further answering recent communications on aggregate receipts and disbursements for local use in Delaware by our Republican committees, will advise:

The Delaware Republican finance committee received and disbursed	$46,258.65
The Republican State committee—
Received	8,653.79
Disbursed	6,097.89

I explained in my former correspondence that the finance committee was the clearing house for all receipts and disbursements, and on approved budget requests the finance committee disbursed directly to the five operating committees, viz, the State committee, the Wilmington city committee, and the three county committees. Hence the report above of the receipts of the State committee is a part of the total disbursements also reported above for the finance committee.

Trust this answers your purposes.

Very truly, yours,

CHARLES WARNER, Chairman.

REPUBLICAN STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
Greensboro, N. C., January 31, 1921.

Hon. WILLIAM S. KENYON,
Washington.

DEAR SENATOR: Your letter addressed to Chairman Frank A. Linney, of Boone, N. C., has been referred to this office for answer.

Accordingly, the sworn statements as filed with the secretary of state of North Carolina are copied and inclosed to you.

Let me say that the money expended in the late campaign in this State has no doubt been shown in the statements of the Republican national committee.

This committee, by our request, sent to our State a collector who received contributions and turned same over to the national committee, who in turn returned the funds for use here where collected.

Let me suggest that very aptly this office will be able to give any desired information as to our committee's expenses.

Most respectfully,

GILLIAM GRISSOM, Secretary.

—

REPUBLICAN STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
Greensboro, N. C., October 23, 1920.

The SECRETARY OF STATE,
Raleigh, N. C.

DEAR SIR: The following is a statement of the expenses of the Republican State executive committee from the beginning of active campaign to the time for preelection report:

Postage, printing, stationery	$3,576
Clerical help, typewriting, addressing, folding	3,290
Furniture, heat, light, rent, water	432
Traveling expenses, speakers, organizers	847
Telephone, telegraph, messenger	240
Literature, advertising	1,358
Total	9,743

The above received from J. J. Jenkins, treasurer.

Personally appeared before me Gilliam Grissom, to me well known, who being first duly sworn deposes and says that the foregoing statement is true to the best of his knowledge and belief.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 23d day of October, 1920.

S. S. MITCHELL, Notary Public.

—

REPUBLICAN STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
Greensboro, N. C., November 11, 1920.

The SECRETARY OF STATE,
Raleigh, N. C.

DEAR SIR: The following is a statement of expenditures of the Republican State executive committee, as required to be reported within 10 days after election:

Postage, stationery	$1,354
Advertising, printing	717
Clerk hire	487
Telephone, telegraph	163
Traveling expenses, speakings	280
Total	3,001

There appeared before me Gilliam Grissom, known to me, and swears the above statement is true to the best of his knowledge and belief, this 11th day of November, 1920.

S. S. MITCHELL, Notary Public.

—

REPUBLICAN STATE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE,
Greensboro, N. C., November 20, 1920.

The SECRETARY OF STATE,
Raleigh, N. C.

DEAR SIR: The following is a statement of expenditures of the Republican State executive committee, as required to be reported within 20 days after election:

Postage, stationery	$1,354
Advertising, printing	717
Clerk hire	487
Telephone, telegraph	163
Traveling expenses, speakings	280
Total	3,001

There appeared before me Gilliam Grissom, known to me, and swears the above statement is true to the best of his knowledge and belief.

S. S. MITCHELL, Notary Public.

—

CONNECTICUT REPUBLICAN STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE,
Hartford, Conn., February 2, 1921.

Hon. W. S. KENYON,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: On my return to Hartford this week I found your telegram of January 27 asking for statement of contributions and expenditures of National and State ways and means committee in the last campaign.

This request, I assume, also includes a statement of the receipts and expenditures of the State committee.

I am inclosing herewith a synopsis of the receipts and expenditures of both the State committee and National and State ways and means committee for the last campaign, which I think answers your requirements.

Both of these statements are on file in the office of the secretary of state and are public documents. I can obtain and send to you certified copies should you desire it.

The statement of the National and State ways and means committee is very voluminous, as the receipts of $84,000 are made up of contributions ranging from 25 cents to $1,000.

Very truly, yours, J. H. RORABACK.

—

Connecticut Republican State central committee—Campaign of 1920.

Receipts.
Balance on hand last campaign		$2,201.42
Charles L. Spencer, treasurer (National and State ways and means committee)		64,185.00
John A. Macdonald, assistant treasurer		$210.16
Total		66,596.58
Expenses of campaign		64,268.42
Balance on hand		2,328.16

National and State ways and means committee for Connecticut—Campaign of 1920.

Receipts	$84,148.46
Disbursements	81,715.11
Principal items of disbursements:
State committee	64,185.00
National committee	15,000.00

—

SPOKANE, WASH., January 31, 1921.

Hon. WILLIAM S. KENYON,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Replying to your letter of January 7 to Mr. S. A. Walker, former chairman of the Republican State central committee, I inclose herewith a statement of the aggregate receipts and expenditures by the Republican State central committee of Washington from November 1, 1918, to November 15, 1920.

You will please note that the aggregate expenditures include considerable expenditure prior to the Republican national convention, including the expenses of a preconvention educational campaign to counteract the activities of the Nonpartisan League in State politics, and this should not be considered a part of the expenditures of the national campaign. I regret that I have not the data available for segregating these expenditures.

Also, I beg to call your attention to the item of $36,059.82, allotments to county central committees as per Schedule I. These funds were collected by the ways and means committee of the State central committee, but were turned over to the various county central committees for expenditure by them.

Also, it should be noted that the balance of the expenditures of the State committee, viz, $73,820.57, included the expenses of the campaign for the election of State officers as well as the national, senatorial, and congressional campaigns within the State. It is, however, impossible to segregate these State campaign expenditures from the others. I may say, however, that the expenditures for the State campaign probably exceeded those for the national, congressional, and senatorial campaigns, as we had in this State a very strong farmer labor party (including the Nonpartisan League) whose especial interest was to capture the State government, and which had, we thought, a rather formidable candidate for governor.

There have been a few expenditures, aggregating several hundred dollars, made since November 15, 1920, which are not included in the inclosed report. I have written my Seattle office for an itemized statement of these subsequent expenditures, and shall forward it to you as a supplemental report upon receipt.

I trust that this will give you the desired information.

CHAS. HEBBERD,
Chairman Republican State Central Committee.

—

Washington Republican State central committee, Seattle, Wash.—Statement of cash receipts and disbursements, Nov. 1, 1918, to Nov. 15, 1920.

Receipts		$116,537.45
Disbursements:
Allotments to county central committees as per Schedule I		36,059.82
State campaign expenditures—
Speakers' and organizers' salaries and expenses	$34,660.40
Printing and stationery, campaign literature, and express	9,704.03
Office salaries	7,127.01
Stenographers' salaries	3,565.82
Telephone and telegraph	2,879.58
Advertising	2,766.16
Office rent	2,175.00
Office supplies and expense	1,734.98
Finance committee expense	1,404.10
Banquets, etc	1,397.95
Publicity	1,539.56
King County Republican Club	1,100.00
Postage	950.70
Sundry hall rentals	650.00
Miscellaneous expenses	605.81
Clipping service	266.47
Refund	200.00
Radicalism	500.00
Furniture and equipment	593.00
		73,820.57
		109,880.39
Balance on deposit Nov. 15 1920		6,657.06

CHAS. HEBBERD,
Chairman Republican State Central Committee.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 31st day of January, 1921.

[SEAL.] G. S. HEBBERD,
Notary Public, County of Spokane, State of Washington.

SCHEDULE I.

Analysis of statement of cash receipts and disbursements.

Allotments	$36,059.82
King County	17,921.00
Spokane County	4,500.00
Pierce County	4,100.00
King County Republican Club	1,758.34
Skagit County	841.18
Walla Walla County	800.00
Women's Republican Club	784.40

Adams County	$685.00
Lewis County	556.35
Stevens County	545.00
Pacific County	515.83
Whitman County	500.00
Pend Oreille County	361.00
Kitsap County	300.00
Thurston County	250.00
Klickitat County	250.00
Kittitas County	212.50
Chelan County	206.25
Grant County	200.00
Columbia County	171.87
Franklin County	150.00
Snohomish County	150.00
Clarke County	100.00
Wahkiakum County	90.00
Benton County	78.60
Garfield County	32.50

SPOKANE, WASH., February 5, 1921.

Hon. WILLIAM S. KENYON,
Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: I inclose herewith supplemental statement of expenditures of the Republican State central committee of Washington, from November 16, 1920, to February 1, 1921.

This is the supplemental statement which I stated in my letter of January 31 I would forward to you as soon as the items were available.

Very truly, yours,

CHARLES HEBBERD.

Supplemental statement of Washington Republican State central committee, Seattle Wash.—Statement of cash receipts and disbursements, Nov. 16, 1920, to Feb. 1, 1921.

Allotment to county central committees, Mason County		$250.00
Speakers' and organizers' salaries and expenses	$112.90
Telephone and telegraph	129.16
Office rent	90.00
Miscellaneous expenses	143.25
Postage	15.00
Stenographers' salaries	133.85
Printing and stationery	419.00
		1,043.16
Total		1,293.16

CHAS. HEBBERD,
Chairman Republican State Central Committee.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this 5th day of February, 1921.

[SEAL.] G. S. HEBBERD,
Notary Public.

The two Republican reports missing in the above tabulation are Tennessee and Kansas. Correspondence on file indicates that the first mentioned will be forthcoming.

The three Democratic reports missing are California, Utah, and Wyoming. Correspondence indicates that the first two mentioned will be forthcoming. We do not feel warranted, however, in further delaying this report.

From the figures gathered, as we have herein set out, it appears that the two great political parties, through their various national organizations, including expenditures of State committees, spent in the presidential campaign of 1920 a sum in excess of ten and a quarter million dollars:

Or, to be more exact	$10,338,509.92
Of which the expenditures of the Republican Party were	8,100,739.21
And the expenditures of the Democratic Party were	2,237,770.71

These figures do not by any means represent the entire amount of money expended in the campaign, as we have heretofore explained. The funds collected, of course, were not used exclusively in the presidential campaign. They were used likewise in the election of Senators and Congressmen and State officials.

The resolutions under which the committee has acted do not provide for recommendations to the Senate on the part of the committee. Naturally the committee has discussed remedies to limit the amount of campaign expenditures, for they feel that the expenditure of these vast sums is a present and growing menace to the Nation. We recognize there are constitutional difficulties involved in the passage of laws to regulate expenditures in presidential campaigns, but are of the opinion that the Committee on Privileges and Elections of the Senate should in the next Congress take up the question of remedial legislation, and if a constitutional amendment should be necessary that the proper steps be taken to submit the same, as provided by the Constitution. The subject is of such importance that the next Congress should give early attention thereto.

We have made this report as brief as possible. The evidence taken by the committee is voluminous and comprises 22 volumes.

Since the above report was prepared, the return from the Democratic State committee of Utah has been received and we attach the same hereto:

STATE OF UTAH,
County of Salt Lake, ss:

George G. Smith, being first duly sworn, upon oath deposes and says: That he is a citizen of the United States over the age of 21 years, a resident of the city and county of Salt Lake, State of Utah, and treasurer of the Utah Democratic State central committee; that the total aggregate receipts and expenditures of the Democratic State central committee of Utah for all purposes in connection with the presidential and State campaign of 1920, independent of any funds collected by or for or received from the Democratic national committee or any agency or branch thereof is as follows:

Receipts	$11,210.55
Disbursements	10,987.57

GEO. G. SMITH.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 27th day of January, A. D. 1921.

[SEAL.] HENRY D. MOYLE,
Notary Public.

My commission expires September 12, 1923.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. GRONNA. I ask the Senator from Washington to yield to me in order that I may submit a conference report on House bill 15812, the Agricultural appropriation bill. As I am sure the report will not lead to any extended debate, I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SUTHERLAND in the chair). Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, which was read, as follows:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 2, 3, 6, 14, 17, 20, 21, 22, 24, 27, 28, 30, 43, 45, 47, 50, 52, 53, 54, 60, 61, 63, 66, 75, 81, 88, 96, 97, and 98.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 5, 9, 13, 15, 23, 25, 26, 29, 34, 37, 38, 39, 44, 51, 59, 68, 69, 70, 74, 77, 86, 87, 90, 94, 99, 104, 106, 109, 110, and 113; and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 16: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 16, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$56,860"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$379,705"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$20,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$325,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 36: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert "$85,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 41: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,034,282"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$6,499,302"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 55: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 55, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$178,500, of which $10,000 shall be immediately available"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 56: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$190,000: Provided, That not less than $40,000 shall be used for investigating methods for the control and eradication of the grasshopper"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 57: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 57, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$165,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 58: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 58, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum "$65,000" proposed in said amendment insert the sum

"$55,000," and in lieu of the sum "$25,000" named in said amendment insert the sum "$15,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 62: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 62, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$56,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "$62,330: Provided, That $10,000 shall be used for investigation of the blowfly and screw worm"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 65: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 65, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$865,010"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 67: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,669,280"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 71: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 71, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$477,240"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$742,255"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 73: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 73, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$823,325"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 76: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 76, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$52,820"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 83: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 83, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$71,500"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 84: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 84, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,650,980"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 85: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 85, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$4,847,300"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 95: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 95, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$30,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 100: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 100, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum "$350,000" proposed in said amendment insert the sum "$300,000," and in lieu of the sum "$100,000" named in said amendment insert "$50,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 101: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 101, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,389,560"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 105: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 105, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$80,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 108: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 108, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$3,004,444"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 111: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 111, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$400,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The committee of conference have not agreed upon amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 7, 8, 10, 11, 12, 31, 32, 33. 40, 46, 48, 49, 78, 79, 80, 82, 89, 91, 92, 93, 102, 103, 107, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, and 119.

A. J. GRONNA,
WM. S. KENYON,
E. D. SMITH,
THOS. P. GORE,
CHAS. L. MCNARY,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

SYDNEY ANDERSON,
WALTER W. MAGEE,
JAMES F. BYRNES,
Managers on the part of the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives on the bill, which will be read.

The reading clerk read as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
February 28, 1921.

Resolved, That the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 4, 7, 8, 10, 46, 78, 89, 91, 102, 103, 112, and 114 to the bill (H. R. 15812) entitled "An act making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922," and agrees to the same.

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 40, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: ": And provided also, That the grazing fees payable under existing law for the use of national forests during the calendar year 1921 may be paid on the 1st day of September, 1921, and in the event such payment is not made on or before such deferred date, penalties shall be thereafter imposed in accordance with the provisions of existing law."

That the House recede from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 48, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$969,561."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 49, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$1,300,251."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 92, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$354,060."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 93, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

In lieu of the sum proposed, insert "$468,520."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 107, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

Of the matter inserted by said amendment, strike out the following: ", which said regulations are hereby legalized, ratified, and confirmed as fully to all intents and purposes as if the same had by prior act of Congress been specifically authorized and directed."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 115, and agrees to the same with the following amendment:

Strike out the matter inserted by said amendment and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Purchase of seed grain for drought-stricken areas: That the Secretary of Agriculture is hereby authorized, for the crop of 1921, to make advances or loans to farmers in the drought-stricken areas of the United States, where he shall find that special need for such assistance exists, for the purchase of wheat, oats, barley, and flaxseed for seed purposes and, when necessary, to procure such seed and sell same to such farmers. Such advances, loans, or sales shall be made upon such terms and conditions and subject to such regulations as the Secretary of Agriculture shall prescribe, including an agreement by each farmer to use the seed thus obtained by him for the production of grain or flaxseed. A first lien on the crop to be produced from seed obtained through a loan, advance, or sale made under this section shall, in the discretion of the Secretary of Agriculture, be deemed sufficient security therefor. The total amount of such advances, loans, or sales to any one farmer shall not exceed the sum of $200. All such advances or loans shall be made through such agencies as the Secretary of Agriculture shall designate. For carrying out the purposes of this section there is hereby appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $2,000,000, to be immediately available."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 116, and agrees to the same with an amendment as follows: In the first line thereof strike out "SEC. 2."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 117, and agrees to the same with the following amendment: Of the matter inserted by said amendment, strike out the following: "SEC. 3."

That the House recedes from its disagreement to Senate amendment numbered 118, and agrees to the same with the following amendment: Of the matter inserted by said amendment, strike out the following: "SEC. 4."

That the House insists upon its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 11, 12, 31, 32, 33, 79, 80, 82, and 119, and asks a further conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Ordered, That Mr. ANDERSON, Mr. MAGEE, and Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina be the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

Mr. GRONNA. I move that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate numbered 40, 48, 49, 92, 93, 107, 117, and 118.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I should like to have an explanation from the Senator in regard to those items. May I inquire if included in those items is the one which provides for the Department of Agriculture becoming a bank and loaning money on unplanted crops?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Utah that it is my intention not to ask for action on that particular amendment at this time. The amount has been reduced from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000. Furthermore, a mistake has been made in separating it into two different propositions numbered 115 and 116. The matter constitutes really one item, but has been separated into two sections. So that matter will not come up at this particular time. The House has requested a further conference on the free-seed amendment and on a few other items, and I shall request that the item referred to by the Senator from Utah go back to conference. It will not be disposed of this morning.

Mr. KING. Let me inquire of the Senator whether or not when the bill left the Senate it contained any provision under the terms of which the Secretary of Agriculture became a banker to loan money to farmers or agriculturists upon the security of unplanted crops or otherwise?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, this is not a new matter. During the war $5,000,000 were set aside to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to carry on the same work, although the money was handled then through the Federal reserve banks. Under the provisions of this item, the Secretary of Agriculture may make such rules as he sees fit, and he may make loans either through the banks or in accordance with any rules and regulations he may provide. The Senator knows this is only an emergency measure. The amount has been reduced to $2,000,000 by the House.

Mr. KING. That which was justified during the war in the exercise of the war powers of the Government ought not to become a precedent to guide the Government in days of peace. While we may all sympathize, and all do sympathize, with the demoralization in the agricultural industry—and I might add that there is a paralysis in many other industries in the United States—I can not conceive of any theory upon which the Government of the United States should invest the Secretary of Agriculture with the discretionary power to make advances to agriculturists, any more than I can conceive of the Government of the United States authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to loan money to retailers or other business men of the United States because they might experience hard times or difficulties in the execution of their undertakings. I think it is a very unwise precedent.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. If the Senator will pardon me, I have no objection if upon mature consideration the Banking and Currency Committee will report a measure under the terms of which more liberal credits may be extended to agriculturists, those credits being extended through the operations of the Federal reserve bank; but the Senator sees that if you establish a precedent of permitting executive agencies of the Government to loan money at their will to all industries or any industry in the United States you are going to convert the Federal Government into a sort of an eleemosynary institution, and the applications for loans will be so stupendous as to make it absolutely impossible to secure by taxation sufficient money with which to meet even a moiety of them.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senator from Utah and I do not disagree on most of these propositions.

Mr. KING. I hope we do not disagree on this.

Mr. GRONNA. But I want to remind the Senator from Utah that on yesterday the Supreme Court of the United States held that the Goevrnment of the United States had the right to establish fiscal agencies throughout the country, known as Federal farm loan banks. That was a proposition which was debated on the floor of this Chamber for weeks and for months by the very ablest of Senators. It was contended, of course, that it was unconstitutional. There were a few of us hayseeds who believed that we were living in a progressive age, and that it was not only right and just but in accordance with the Federal Constitution to make it possible to increase production through the cooperation of our Government and make it possible for our farmers to get cheaper money, which is in the interest of the consuming public.

Now, this is practically the same idea. If the State were able to do this, I will say to the Senator, or if it were possible to do it through individuals, I should be the last one to ask for legislation of this sort; but we have gone into the matter very carefully, we have made a thorough survey, and we have come to the conclusion—and any man who will study the question must come to the same conclusion—that the only way to solve the question is for the Federal Government to loan its credit to the farmers until they can raise a crop. It is not an appropriation intended as a gift; it is only a loan. The Government may lose a small amount in extending its credit in this way, but the amount will be infinitesimal, because I am sure that the Secretary of Agriculture will exercise the utmost care in the transaction of this particular business; and we can not afford to let eight or nine thousand farmers in my State alone let their farms lie idle, which means that they must leave those farms. It applies not only to my State, but to the eastern and northern part of Montana, where they have had droughts for the last three years.

As I said to the Senator, however, I do not wish to take up the time in discussing that matter now, because it is going back to conference anyway.

Mr. KING. That provision originated in the House, did it?

Mr. GRONNA. No; it originated in the Senate. A separate bill was introduced by me some time ago, and was passed by the Senate by a unanimous vote. It was found that the House did not take action. The same provision was then incorporated into the agricultural appropriation bill, and again passed the Senate by a unanimous vote. Now, the House has cut that down from $5,000,000 to $2,000,000. It has reduced the amount that each farmer may receive from $300 to $200. I believe the amount is too small. I believe that we should have had $5,000,000, and I also believe that we should have left the amount that each farmer could obtain at the amount of $300; but that is the action of the House, and it was taken upon a vote.

Mr. KING. Then does the Senator desire the Senate to disagree to that action?

Mr. GRONNA. The Senate will have to disagree, because a mistake has been made. Two propositions have been made of it, when there should be only one. Amendments numbered 115 and 116 should be one amendment. There are two sections in the bill as it passed the Senate.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether the action which he desires the Senate now to take will be susceptible of the construction by the House conferees, or by the House, that the Senate adheres to the original proposition as it passed the Senate?

Mr. GRONNA. Of course, personally, I should prefer to see the Senate provision agreed to, but the old saying that "Half a loaf is better than no bread" is true in this case. I hope that the House conferees will see their way clear to give us at least $3,000,000 to $3,500,000 for this purpose.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator whether the conferees, or his committee which reported the bill to which he refers, considered the proposition of making these loans through existing governmental agencies, to wit, the Federal Farm Loan Board, instead of committing this authority to the Secretary of Agriculture?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; that was considered very thoroughly, and the Secretary has the right now, and has the authority under the language of this item, to transact the business either through the Federal reserve banks or through the Federal farm loan banks.

Mr. KING. But, after all, he is the source of authority, and his determination of the modus operandi is a finality?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; he necessarily must be. It is an agricultural proposition.

Mr. KING. He may employ the Federal reserve bank, or, rather, the farm loan bank, if it will accept employment at his hands; or, if not, he may proceed and make the loans independently.

Mr. GRONNA. I will say to the Senator that this is an item in regard to which I believe all agencies of the Government will be glad to cooperate and assist. It is not done for profit in any way whatever. It is just to help out in an emergency.

Mr. KING. As it strikes me now, while I do not recall the other measure, I should prefer, if there is an exigency such as to call for aid by the Government, to make a direct gift rather than to permit executive agencies, such as a department or a bureau, to go out and extend credit to whomsoever they please within a certain class. I think it is a dangerous precedent and will provoke applications from almost every activity in our industrial and economic life to secure financial aid from the Government with respect to private activities. The broker, the stock raiser, the merchant, everybody that experiences some difficulty in making loans, will come to the Government of the United States and he will not apply through governmental agencies such as the Federal reserve bank or through the farm loan system, both of which are authorized to extend credit, but he will seek a direct appropriation from the Government of the United States. So the result will be that we shall be compelled to tax the people of the country millions and hundreds of millions of dollars every year to loan to all branches of trade and industry and to these various activities. The school-teachers and the lawyers and the doctors and the merchants and everybody else will want loans and will come to us for their loans at a low rate of interest, and Uncle Sam will either have to increase the taxes to levels of which we can scarcely conceive because of their altitude or be compelled to issue bonds and sell them upon a market where the price of the bonds will constantly go down, and we shall be further encumbering the Government with debt obligations.

The Senator is a banker; the Senator is a student of financial affairs, a man of sound judgment upon fiscal questions, and I am sure he must see the danger of the precedent which he seeks now to have established.

Mr. GRONNA. I agree with the Senator from Utah that if the matter were abused it would be better not to establish the precedent; but the precedents have been established on so many occasions that the matter is not a new one.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from North Dakota that the Senate agree to the amendments of the House to certain Senate amendments.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GRONNA. Now, I move that the Senate disagree to the House amendments to Senate amendments numbered 115 and 116 and request a further conference on those amendments.

Mr. KING. Will the Senator state what those two items are?

Mr. GRONNA. They are the matters we have just discussed, the seed-grain items.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from North Dakota.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. GRONNA. Now, I move that the Senate further insist, and agree to the further conference asked by the House, on Senate amendments numbered 11, 12, 31, 32, 33, 79, 80, 82, and 119, and ask that the Chair appoint the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from North Dakota.

The motion was agreed to; and the Presiding Officer appointed Mr. GRONNA, Mr. KENYON, Mr. MCNARY, Mr. GORE, and Mr. SMITH of South Carolina conferees on the part of the Senate.

COMMITTEE ON STANDARDS, WEIGHTS, AND MEASURES.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably Senate resolution 467, authorizing the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures to sit during the sixty-sixth Congress and to employ a stenographer to report hearings held by the committee, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Senate resolution 467, submitted by Mr. REED on February 28, 1921, was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-sixth Congress to send for persons, books, and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer at a cost not exceeding $1.25 per printed page to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that the committee or any subcommittee thereof may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate.

HEIRS OF A. R. VERMILLION, DECEASED.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate I report back favorably Senate resolution 446, to vote six months' pay to the family of a policeman in the employ of the Senate who recently died, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Senate resolution 446, submitted by Mr. SMITH of Maryland on February 11, 1921, was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay from the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate to H. M. Vermillion, Ella M. Nessmith, Viola Keppler, and Olga M. Hunter, son and daughters of A. R. Vermillion, late a policeman in the Capitol (authorized by the sundry civil act), a sum equal to six months' compensation at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ROSE SMITH DUDLEY.

Mr. CALDER. From the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, I report back favorably a resolution to vote six months' pay to the family of the late enrolling clerk of the Senate, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Senate resolution 465, submitted by Mr. PHIPPS on February 26, 1921, was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay, from the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate, to Rose Smith Dudley, widow of Charles R. Dudley, late enrolling clerk of the Senate, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

CONFIRMATION OF COAST GUARD AND OTHER NOMINATIONS.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I ask unanimous consent, as in open executive session, to report from the Committee on Commerce certain nominations in the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and the Department of Commerce, and ask for their confirmation. I will state that these are the nominations that were referred to the committee on yesterday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARRIS in the chair). Is there objection?

Mr. SMOOT. They are regular promotions, as I understand?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Regular promotions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask unanimous consent that the nominations be considered en bloc.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair hears no objection, and they will be so considered. The nominations will be stated.

The Assistant Secretary read the nominations, as follows:

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

Jack Senior, of New York, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Raymond Pugh Eyman, of Ohio, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Leo Cuthbert Dyke, of New York, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Chester Howard Ober, of Rhode Island, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

George Clay Jones, of Oregon, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Charles Shaw, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Carl Alexander Egner, of Indiana, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Leroy Preston Raynor, of New York, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Lyman Davis Graham, of Pennsylvania, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Max Orville Witherbee, of Colorado, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Payson Austin Perrin, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Roland Drew Horne, of Massachusetts, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

George Lawrence Bean, of New Hampshire, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Benjamin Haines Rigg, of New Jersey, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy.

Oliver Scott Reading, of Illinois, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy.

Charles Keith Green, of California, to be hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant in the Navy.

Charles Justus Iiter, jr., of Pennsylvania, to be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineer, with relative rank of lieutenant (junior grade) in the Navy.

SUPERVISING INSPECTOR STEAMBOAT-INSPECTION SERVICE.

William J. Macdonald, of Michigan, to be supervising inspector for the fourth district in the Steamboat-Inspection Service.

COAST GUARD.

Martin W. Rasmussen to be district superintendent in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from September 9, 1920, to fill an existing vacancy.

Ralph T. Crowley to be district superintendent in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from September 10, 1920, to fill an existing vacancy.

Cadet Noble G. Ricketts, to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 13, 1920.

Cadet Paul K. Perry to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 11, 1920.

Cadet Arthur G. Hall to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 11, 1920.

Cadet Irving W. Bucknlew to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 7, 1920.

Cadet Harold G. Bradbury to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 12, 1920.

Cadet Ephraim Zoele to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to rank as such from October 8, 1920.

Cadet Merlin O'Neil to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from date of oath.

Cadet Carleton T. Smith to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from date of oath.

Cadet Norman H. Leslie to be an ensign in the Coast Guard of the United States, to take effect from date of oath.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the confirmation of these officers? The Chair hears none, and they are confirmed, and the President will be notified.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I ask that the Senate resume the consideration of the naval appropriation bill.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Hale	McLean	Spencer
Ball	Harris	McNary	Sterling
Borah	Harrison	Myers	Sutherland
Brandegee	Heflin	Nelson	Swanson
Capper	Jones, Wash.	New	Thomas
Culberson	Kellogg	Overman	Townsend
Dial	Kendrick	Phipps	Trammell
Dillingham	Kenyon	Pittman	Underwood
Edge	Keyes	Poindexter	Wadsworth
Elkins	King	Pomerene	Walsh, Mass.
Fernald	Kirby	Ransdell	Walsh, Mont.
Fletcher	La Follette	Reed	Watson
France	Lenroot	Robinson	Williams
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Sheppard	Willis
Gerry	McCumber	Smith, Ga.
Gooding	McKellar	Smoot

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty-two Senators have answered the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington spoke frankly about the situation in his remarks this morning, and seemed to address his remarks particularly to the Senator from Idaho, and he desires to speak with equal frankness of the situation as he sees it. I say candidly to the Senator from Washington that I do not see how it is possible to pass this bill at this session. I do not say that in the sense that I propose to talk against time, or anything of that kind, but we have now been considering the bill since yesterday morning at 11 o'clock, and we have gotten to the second page. A number of other matters have interfered and interrupted the program, and that is what will be happening from now on until the 4th of March.

There are a great many things in this bill, at least four or five vital questions, any discussion of which will make it impossible to pass the bill, and I have not any doubt but what they will be discussed, not alone by the Senator from Idaho, but by a great many other Senators in the Chamber. So I say to the Senator with frankness that I do not think the bill can pass at this session, and so far as any responsibility for its not passing is concerned, under the present circumstances I am willing to assume that responsibility.

However, if the Senate proceeds with the bill, I shall simply content myself with a discussion of the committee amendments as they are taken up and the amendments which are to be proposed, and if the bill can pass under those circumstances, very well and good.

I would much prefer to see the bill pass, as I think it ought to be, within reason, than to see it fail. But I say with equal frankness that I would very much prefer to see it fail than to see it pass in its present form.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I submit to the Senator from Idaho that it will be impossible to attain the object he says he prefers, the passage of the bill in a different form, unless the bill is submitted to the Senate for a vote on its various features for amendment and Senators be given an opportunity to consider the amendments proposed by the Senate committee. Unless that is done, of course the bill can not be changed. You can not change a bill unless you vote on the amendments to it.

Mr. BORAH. I shall not interfere with the Senate voting on amendments, so far as I am concerned. While I am not charged openly with filibustering, it has been intimated that the result of my conduct is the same as it would be if I were filibustering. Mr. President, yesterday afternoon I occupied within eight minutes of the same length of time occupied by the able Senator from Washington this morning, and I am sure the Senator from Washington was not designedly seeking to interfere with the passage of the bill. But he felt there were some features of it which ought to be discussed, and with his usual sincerity and ability he discussed them. I felt yesterday afternoon that I should present some of the reasons why I thought the bill ought not to be urged at this time, and I took within eight minutes of the length of time occupied by the Senator from Washington this morning. I have not intended to do anything else but discuss it upon its merits.

The Senator called attention to the fact that my statements made upon yesterday with reference to the amount which the bill carries were erroneous. They were not erroneous, Mr. President, if the record be taken as a guide. I stated that the bill as it came from the House carried in round figures $400,000,000; the bill as it came from the House does actually carry $396,001,249.23. I stated that the Senate committee's increase was over a hundred million dollars. According to the report made by the Senate committee it is $100,518,686.74.

So, while I did not undertake to give the exact figures, I spoke with entire accuracy when I said that in round figures the bill carried $400,000,000 as it passed the House, and I spoke with most exact accuracy when I said that the committee had increased it over a hundred million dollars. There is no disparity between the statements which were made by the Senator from Idaho and the statements made in the report of the Senate committee. The increase of appropriations which I spoke of did not represent the increase which actually takes place under this bill. For instance, consider the Alameda proposition. The bill appropriates, I think, $1,500,000, but it means the expenditure, as has been estimated by different parties, of from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000. In other words, if we pass the bill with the amendments proposed by the Senate we shall be committed to the expenditure, not of a million dollars or a million five hundred thousand dollars but we shall be committed to a program which will cost not less than a hundred million dollars, according to the estimate of everyone I have talked with or whose estimate I have read in the RECORD.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I do not think I ought to allow to pass without comment the challenge which the Senator from Idaho has made to my statement this morning. I think the Senator from Idaho, if he recalls what I said, will admit that I made no mention of either one of the figures he has just quoted. I did not challenge the accuracy of those statements. I mentioned specifically the statements the accuracy of which I challenged, and I did not refer in any way at all to either one of the statements the Senator has just referred to.

The statement that I said was inaccurate was the statement of the Senator that this bill carried over $500,000,000. That is inaccurate. It carries under $500,000,000. It is true it is but a few millions under, but still it is under, and not over. And I want to say, if the Senator will kindly permit me, in regard to the matter he just mentioned, the appropriation for Alameda, I am not wedded to the Alameda proposition. I realize that it is a controversial question.

I think the Senate committee, as well as the joint committee of the Senate and the House, particularly the latter, have given that matter a great deal more study than the Senator from Idaho has, and many of them have given it much more study than I myself have given it. However, it is a question which involves an examination of a great many factors and considerations, and unless we reach the amendment and present it to the Senate, so that there shall be free debate and free opportunity to go into it, we can not consider those things.

If the Senator takes into consideration in his estimate of the bill the fact that authorizations of expenditures are provided for, he ought to take into consideration also the cancellation of authorizations that are provided for or authorizations that are proposed to be canceled by the bill. The authorized expenditures for the Navy are thereby reduced instead of increased.

Mr. BORAH. I am familiar with those. I shall come to them later.

Mr. POINDEXTER. That ought to be taken into consideration. I wish to say in regard to the Alameda proposition that there are no authorizations carried in the bill except an appropriation of $1,500,000, the purpose of which is stated in the bill, for dredging and filling in land to the extent of some 5,000 acres which is donated to the United States by the city of Alameda.

In so far as the statement of the Senator to the effect that no one has estimated the expenditures at Alameda at less than $100,000,000, that is entirely different from anything I have heard about it before. I have heard some one estimate that within 100 years there might be $100,000,000 expended there, but there will not be a dollar expended there unless the Congress appropriates the money.

If the Senator reads the bill carefully, he will find that the Alameda item is merely for a supply base, and he will find that the Joint Committee on Naval Affairs in its report upon the matter expressly recommended that it be confined to a supply base and that the construction and repair of ships as now carried on at Mare Island Navy Yard already established shall be continued.

Mr. BORAH. I understand perfectly the language of the bill, and I also understand what the report said, but I understand equally well that to do what we propose to do in the bill is to initiate a naval base at Alameda. It is thoroughly understood that this is the first step which must be taken in order to make it a naval base and to render it worth while, and to have done all the work contemplated in the bill will require an expenditure of $100,000,000.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Then we could submit an amendment on that, and if the Senate agrees with the Senator from Idaho it can be voted out of the bill.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; but it can not be submitted without discussion unless we propose to close our eyes to the situation. What I have said is of course that it ought to be submitted to the Senate, but how are we going to submit that question to the Senate, which will necessarily take a day or two of discussion in order to get the real facts in the record before the Senate? The Senator has stated that the joint committee gave this more consideration than the Senator from Idaho, and I have not any doubt that the committee has done so. Nevertheless the Senator from Idaho has imposed upon himself the task of reading the entire report, and I have it before me pretty well briefed, and I think I know what it means. It is impossible, unless we are just going to shut our eyes and accept upon the recommendation, if I may say so, not of the joint committee, but of the General Board of the Navy, and we must have debate upon it in order to get the facts before the Senate.

Mr. SWANSON. Mr. President, may I say just a word with reference to the Senator's idea about Mare Island. I think he is laboring under a misapprehension. There are two ideas about Mare Island. Some people advocate the abolition of the navy yard at Mare Island, on which I suppose $40,000,000 or $50,000,000 have been expended to perfect it. The Committee on Naval Affairs has never favored that. The difficulty about Mare Island is this: That San Francisco Bay is the chief base for the Pacific Fleet everybody admits except people interested farther north or south, and in order to maintain that fleet we shall be compelled to have a supply base there, and why? It is not the idea to abolish Mare Island. Battleships when equipped with armament and arms can not go up to Mare Island. The water is not deep enough without dredging the channel, at great expense, and then it is too narrow and a little dangerous for battleships with complete armament to go up there. Instead of abolishing Mare Island, the idea is to have a supply base so the fleet can come and get supplies, and nothing but supplies, get ammunition and fuel, and do what is necessary to supply the fleet, and continue to base it on Mare Island. We should continue to base the fleet on San Francisco Bay, which is the best and one of the safest harbors in the world, except Chesapeake Bay, and I am not speaking of the latter because I live in Virginia. They are safe there from the attack of submarines and all other attack.

I do not know of any other scheme we can adopt that will be economical and that will not involve the expenditure of a vast sum of money unless we spend the amount necessary to establish a supply base for Mare Island. We can continue to operate Mare Island and we can continue to build ships there. If we take off all the armament that goes with the ship, it can go up there. It is only when it is completely equipped that it can not get there.

We can spend $5,000,000 or $10,000,000 or whatever Congress desires to spend in the establishment of a supply base, but I think the idea is that this is merely a supplement to Mare Island and that it is the most economical proposition that could be devised, to have a supply base and also a great navy yard in the Pacific to take care of the Pacific Fleet.

Some people have advocated the sale of Mare Island, the demolition of it, the absolute creating of a new navy yard and supply base all in one, but that is not necessary. I have never favored that; I did not favor it when I was chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs and I do not favor it now. If we desire to have our fleet based on San Francisco, it is necessary to supplement Mare Island with a supply base. They gave this land to the Government absolutely without cost.

Mr. BORAH. Oh, yes; I understand that.

Mr. SWANSON. I do not believe in the expenditure, except for a supply base. We might later on want to have a dry dock there. There is no necessity for that now, because near there we have a dry dock that will take the largest ship in the fleet, where the Government has a preference by reason of a certain payment each year.

I think the exaggeration about Mare Island is simply by some naval officers who have favored more or less the absolute demolition of Mare Island, which I do not favor. I believe the matter ought to be discussed. The policy of Congress is fixed. The Senate will not permit any such waste there as some naval officers and other people contemplate. I know the Naval Committee has no idea of any vast expenditure of money there. I would like to have the Senator from Idaho devise some scheme by which Mare Island may be supplemented with a base where battleships can enter San Francisco Bay, and have a great supply base.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Virginia has suggested some things which will come up for discussion a little later.

The Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] referred to the resolution which I introduced some time ago seeking to bring the United States and Great Britain and Japan into conference on the question of naval disarmament and indicated the probable willingness of the committee that the resolution should be incorporated in the bill. Of course, I should be very glad to see that done. I realize, as the Senator from Washington said, that it does not mean anything conclusive upon the question of disarmament. It would be an expression of opinion upon the part of the Congress of the United States, which is a very powerful fact, and it would be the first step, and I should like very much to see it happen. But to be entirely frank with the Senator, I would not be willing to have the bill pass in its present form and carrying its present appropriation and its present program simply because we placed in the bill the disarmament resolution and turned it over to the tender mercies of the conferees, practically all of whom, from both Houses, are against it.

Mr. SWANSON. I presume I will be a member of the conference committee. I voted for the Senator's amendment in the Foreign Relations Committee. I favored it there. It is not as strong as the resolution which was included in the program of 1916, when I was in charge of the naval appropriation bill in the Senate. I said at that time, and I would say it in favor of the Naval Committee, that we would be glad to see an agreement for disarmament, but we felt that we were traveling the pathway of preparedness, because we were afraid we could not travel the pathway of peace and disarmament. I, as a member of the conference committee, favored it, and favored it earnestly, and voted for it in the Foreign Relations Committee. I believe it ought to be included in the bill.

I think the people of the country ought to understand that we are only for preparedness and only for a large Navy because other nations are preparing large navies, which might jeopardize our best interests. I favor the amendment going into the bill. I think we should have vision and make a most earnest effort to get an agreement for naval disarmament, and I would hail it with pleasure.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, may I ask a question of the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. Why does the Senator assume that consideration of the so-called disarmament amendment, if adopted, would prevent further consideration of any other amendment which he or any other Senators might have in mind, and how can we determine the feeling of the Senate unless we do have an opportunity to vote upon those amendments?

It seems to me the orderly way is not to assume that in three days we can not consider any other amendment but, as rapidly as possible and with all discussion necessary, we should proceed to vote upon the disarmament amendment.

Like the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON], I should be very glad to have an opportunity to vote on the disarmament amendment. If the possibility that it will not be included is one of the difficulties which stands in the way of the final passage of this very important bill, it would seem to me that those who particularly favor it, or at least have been responsible for the original introduction of such an amendment, should be the first to desire to have a vote of the Senate upon the amendment.

Mr. BORAH. I am very anxious to have it incorporated in the bill, but I did not want to have it understood, as was suggested this morning by the Senator from New Jersey, that in all probability that would relieve the bill from any further discussion or any further delay. These vast appropriations must be scanned. The taxpayers of this country are entitled to consideration. I do not want to enter into barter and trade my resolution in favor of unjust and extravagant expenditures. We ought to put in the disarmament resolution and also cut out some of the unnecessary appropriations.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I notice in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, in the remarks of the Senator from Idaho on yesterday, he made the following statement:

> I am myself for an adequate Navy, if I understand what the term means. One of the first important votes which I cast in this body after I came here was a vote in approval of what was known as President Roosevelt's naval building program. I think it was for four or five battleships; and I voted in favor of that program. I also voted for the great naval program of 1916, and supported it, and I am still unconscious of any modification of views in regard to this subject. I certainly desire a sufficient, adequate Navy; and it is not my purpose, now or at any other time, to change my position in regard to that important matter. Of course, in saying that, the adequacy of a Navy must be measured by the conditions and circumstances of the particular occasion when it is being built, and also the circumstances and conditions under which it is being built. If we should be so successful as to secure an agreement among the great naval powers of the world, that which would constitute an adequate Navy under such agreement would be one thing, while if we should fail to secure any such agreement, of course, what would constitute an adequate Navy would be an entirely different thing. I have no desire, however, to throw any vote of mine or any limited influence which I may have in favor of a weak Navy or an insufficient Navy or an inadequate Navy. I have in no sense modified my views as to the necessity of an adequate Navy.

The bill, in so far as the fleet is concerned, provides for nothing whatever but a moderated and slowed-up program or continuance of the construction of the very ships which the Senator from Idaho said he voted for, and which he says he is still in favor of, the only addition to it being a provision for an initial appropriation for two airplane carriers, of which the United States has none at the present time, in connection with the cancellation of authority for 12 submarines, which were authorized in the program for which the Senator from Idaho voted and which he says he still favors.

Furthermore, the Senator from Idaho at other times has urged upon the Senate the importance of the development of naval aviation. One of the items of increase in the bill is a provision for the procurement of airships. While there is no provision in the naval appropriation bill as passed by the House for the procurement of new aircraft, there was an authorization in a bill which was reported out of the Committee on Naval Affairs of the House, and is upon the House Calendar, providing for the procurement of aircraft. As the only means of adopting that legislation, the Senate Naval Committee, in accordance with the universal custom of the Senate, has added it to this bill. It seems to me that with the exception of this increase in the Navy which the Senator is opposed to, and which can be disposed of by a vote, if we are allowed to have a vote, or by conference, if we get to conference, the naval appropriation bill merely carries out those policies and purposes which the Senator says he has advocated and still advocates.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, as I said on yesterday, what constitutes an adequate Navy or an inadequate Navy depends entirely upon the circumstances which exist at the time the question of what is an adequate Navy is being determined. I have never suggested anything except a modification of the building program of 1916, a delay in building what are called the battleships of the Indiana type until it should be determined whether or not they ought to constitute a part of a modern fighting Navy, and to utilize the money which we were putting into those battleships, which cost from forty to forty-five million dollars each, for building those ships which are now conceded to be an essential and indispensable part of a modern, efficient fighting Navy. I have never suggested the discontinuance of the building of battle cruisers or of any of the ships which the World War has determined to be a part of a modern Navy; but there has been a very pronounced view upon the part of people who are just as earnestly for a big Navy as is the Senator from Washington that to spend $40,000,000 for a battleship at a time when the whole question is being determined as to whether or not the battleship is really of any avail in a modern fight is to waste the money. That is the only modification which I have suggested. It would be the same kind of a case as if the Senator from Washington should have brought in here a program to build pre-Jutland warships and I should say that we should cease to build pre-Jutland warships and build post-Jutland warships.

It would not be indicative of my position against an adequate Navy. It would be rather in favor of an adequate Navy. It is that feature of the situation, Mr. President, which constitutes the difference between the able Senator from Washington and myself as to these appropriations, and it is that kind of building which is going on to which I have heretofore objected.

The Senator from Washington found fault, as did the able Senator from Delaware [Mr. BALL], on yesterday with my statement as to what our Navy would be after we should have completed this program, and they stated it was not a question of opinion, but it was a question of fact, and that they were of an opinion that our Navy would be inferior to the Navy of Great Britain even after we should have completed our program. I observe that even among the most expert and ablest advocates of a big Navy there is a very great difference of opinion upon that question. I will read a paragraph or two from the speech of Representative BRITTEN, which he made in the other House, a man who has given a vast amount of study to this subject, who takes a great interest in it, and who took an active part in the debate. He gives his figures and then gives his conclusions. It was undoubtedly his particular figures—although I find they are supported by two other gentlemen of expert knowledge upon the subject—which I had in mind when I referred to the percentage of strength which our Navy would have over that of Great Britain. He says:

> Mr. Chairman, our Naval Intelligence has brought forth figures to show that we have 33 battleships and battle cruisers built and building while Great Britain has 35 of the same character. When we complete the program of 1916, authorized merely to give us a naval strength commensurate with our position in international affairs, we shall have an advantage of 8,638 tons per ship over the British. In main batteries we shall have 340 guns to 314 for them. Our guns will average 14½ inches in caliber as compared to 13⅝ inches for theirs. In a broadside we shall hurl 548,400 pounds, as against 452,000 pounds. In the secondary battery our guns will number 494 to Britain's 526; but ours have 5.4 inches caliber while theirs have 4.9 inches. We are to have 322 destroyers to 350 for Britain; but ours are to be superior in speed and more up to date. In submarines we are to be equal—150 apiece—and in this field American ingenuity is to throw the weight on our side.
>
> Our ships being more modern, larger, of heavier armor and armament, with superior muzzle velocity, and assuming the personnel aboard to be equal, we would have a net fighting superiority of from 31 to 50 per cent.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The statement to which I referred as having been made by the Senator and which he mentioned a moment ago, as I understood it, was that if the provisions carried in the House bill——

Mr. BORAH. No; I said the program which it indorsed.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Were adopted, we should have such a Navy as the Senator has described. I challenge that statement, if that was the statement, because that would simply leave us in the middle of the program with the ships but halfway completed.

Mr. BORAH. Of course, the Senator understood perfectly that I was speaking of the program which the House bill purports to carry out—the program of 1916.

Mr. POINDEXTER. But it will require a great many more appropriations in addition to the appropriation carried in this bill before that program is completed.

Mr. BORAH. Certainly; and the appropriations will come just as the night follows the day. If we proceed, for instance, with the six battleships of the Indiana type for another six months or a year, no one will have the hardihood to stand here and say, against the able Senator from Washington, that we should stop at that time.

Mr. POINDEXTER. But, of course, we shall not get them unless we are able to have a vote on the bill. If we can not get a vote on the naval bill at this session or at the next session or at some other session, these battleships will fall to pieces in their incompleted state.

Now, if the Senator from Idaho will permit me, I should like to say just a word in comment on the comparison which he has just quoted from the distinguished Member of the House of Representatives. I think I ought to call attention to the fact that his estimate is based upon the assumption that we are going to proceed building the Navy until we complete the program and that Great Britain is not going to do anything at all; it is a comparison between what we will have if we appropriate the necessary money for our Navy and what Great Britain has to-day. Great Britain would not have to add a ship or a ton to her naval forces to have the complement that the Senator from Idaho has described, while the United States would have to carry forward and complete the 1916 program, which is now only barely started.

I desire to say further in comment upon the estimate that while, of course, I do not challenge the view presented by those figures, there are many other views. That is an estimate of the strength of capital ships; but there are many other elements in a navy to consider besides that. If the program is carried out along the lines mentioned in the statement, the United States will have 13 scout cruisers with which to sweep the seas and attack the commerce of the enemy, while Great Britain will have 73. The United States at the present time has no battle cruisers at all, while Great Britain has 6, and if Great Britain acquires no more and we complete our program we will have 6 and Great Britain will have an equal number. But I think that not sufficient weight is given to the tremendous disparity in favor of Great Britain in the case of the swift scout cruisers which Great Britain will have in comparison with the small number which the United States will have.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator is correct, I presume, in his suggestion that the estimate made by Representative BRITTEN was based upon the present program of Great Britain, which is not a very ambitious one, and the Senator from Washington carrectly assumes that it is based upon the theory that Great Britain will stand still.

Mr. POINDEXTER. She is appropriating $500,000,000 this year for her navy.

Mr. BORAH. Precisely; and that brings me to the discussion for just a moment of a matter which really does not pertain here, but which will come up possibly later for discussion. I refer to the delusion which seems to control the minds of many in connection with competitive naval programs. We hear it said here and we hear it said elsewhere that the United States must continue to build until its Navy is superior, and when it is superior that then it can talk about naval disarmament; in other words, naval disarmament is based upon the proposition that the United States shall acquire the complete and undisputed dominancy. Of course, Mr. President, the very fact that, after signing the armistice, we are going ahead and building the 1916 program incites and excites Japan and Great Britain to the very highest nerve in building their navies, so that when in 1923 or 1924 we approach the completion of our program the proportion of naval strength of the United States will not be any greater then than it is to-day. Does anyone suppose, in the great contest which is going on in Pacific waters, that Japan is going to cease building if we continue our building for the next four or five years, or that Great Britain is going to cease building? Certainly not.

There is another assumption, and that is that Great Britain is unable to build. Great Britain is infinitely better prepared to build than she was at the close of the Napoleonic wars, and she never yielded for a single hour her supremacy of the sea even in those distressful days. If anyone supposes that Great Britain is not able to build or will not be willing to build when the very existence of her empire depends upon her naval supremacy, either secured by actual dominancy or by an agreement which renders her safe, he is, in my judgment, doomed to an awakening.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. Recognizing what the Senator from Idaho says as being undoubtedly correct, is not that all the more reason why we should, so far as it is possible without sacrificing principle, pass the disarmament resolution or add it as an amendment to this bill, and give and take on other items in order to pass the naval appropriation bill? Is it not all the more imperative, if the menace exists of which the Senator speaks, for the Congress at this time, before a special extraordinary session is called, to enact into law, if it is humanly possible to do so, the disarmament proposal which the Senator from Idaho has suggested, or something similar to it? Why, then, should we not, in a spirit of compromise, endeavor to put this bill through and make it a law during the next four days?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, we might, perhaps, make progress by being frank about the resolution referred to by the Senator from New Jersey, and which has had such enthusiastic support from this side of the Chamber since its introduction.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator from Idaho has very well directed attention to the fact that nobody with common sense would expect Great Britain to give up in the midst of a competitive naval building program, and he has stressed the fact that the defense of the British Empire is dependent upon it. I want to call the Senator's attention to the fact that there is something more than that which will motive a British Parliament to keep at the head of the procession, even to the point of bankruptcy, if necessary. It is not merely the defense of the British Empire but it is the fact that the British Islands are so situated that their people can neither be kept clothed nor fed without protecting all the avenues of the sea; and that is the reason why Great Britain would keep on building to the point of bankruptcy, if necessary.

Mr. President, it seems to me, if the Senator will pardon me just one further remark, not in the shape of a question, that to begin again what we had hoped we had finished—an endless emulation of armaments throughout the world, on land and on sea—is the very epitome of madness for those who hope for the peace of the world. Not only will Japan go on, not only will Britain go on, not only will we go on, but just as soon as Germany can recover she will go on; France will go on; everybody will. Are not we the people of all the world who are not afraid of the balance of the world? And can we not afford simply to build a Navy for defense? And in this mad war of emulation and competitive building we would enter it only with the idea of dominancy. Great Britain would enter it with a superior motive, calling for greater sacrifice, of protection of the home population of the British Isles, to keep them clothed and keep them fed.

The Senator from Washington knows that Great Britain, without being able to protect her oversea commerce, would starve in six weeks; and does the Senator imagine that she is going to give up the very foodstuffs upon which her people depend? What is to be the end of all this?

Mr. BORAH. Bankruptcy.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. BORAH. I do.

Mr. POINDEXTER. What does the Senator from Mississippi mean by "a Navy adequate for our defense"?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I mean simply what the phrase says—a Navy adequate for defense, and not intended for offense, not intended for dominancy of the sea, not intended for naval supremacy, but intended to defend America from any and all powers that might attack it.

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is the policy——

Mr. WILLIAMS. In that connection, let me say one more word. A navy adequate for defense means a navy that can meet any other navy that can be mobilized against us for attack. That is what it means. Now, we will have soon, if we have not now, a navy superior to the navy of Great Britain for defensive purposes——

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is what we are trying to get.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Because while Great Britain's navy must be spread in the Indian Ocean, must protect the Suez Canal, must be in the Pacific, and must be in the Mediterranean, we will need for purposes of defense only a navy in the Pacific and a navy in the Atlantic. That is all we need.

Mr. POINDEXTER. According to that, the Senator from Mississippi is in favor of abandoning the island possessions of the country and our maritime commerce upon the high seas. If he is, why, of course, we could get along with a comparatively small navy. I am not in favor of abandoning our commerce or of abandoning our possessions or of abandoning the rights of American citizens.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, Mr. President, everybody who knows the record of the Senator from Mississippi in the other House and in this House of course knows that he is in favor of abandoning the Philippine Islands at the very first decent opportunity we get, so far as that is concerned, but that has nothing to do with this discussion. That is not relevant, nor am I proposing to abandon the defense of our sea commerce at all. I am proposing that we shall have a navy sufficient to protect it, and sufficient to make the most redoubtable powers in the world hesitate forty times about attacking it; but I was merely drawing the picture of the unending and interminable race to mutual bankruptcy between the great powers of the world unless we quit this thing—that is all—and somebody has to quit first.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, recurring to the disarmament resolution which I introduced, and the suggestion made by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] as to taking it up and putting it in the bill, as I said before, I should be very glad to have it in the bill when the bill goes through; but there are other matters connected with the bill which are of great moment, and no agreement which could be reached here would prevent debate upon all of these other matters. I trust that when we reach the time that it is to be inserted in the bill the enthusiasm of the Senator from New Jersey and others will not have cooled, and that it will go into the bill.

But, Mr. President, let me say that this resolution was introduced weeks and weeks and weeks ago, and went to the Committee on Foreign Relations, and was finally reported out. As soon as it was reported out, and as soon as it came within the knowledge of the ex-Senator from New York, Mr. Root, he immediately wrote a letter which was made public in which he said no such step should be taken at this time; that we should wait until the incoming administration should develop its policy with reference to disarmament. That has been the program, either express or implied, upon the Republican side of the Chamber since that manifesto was issued. Any Senator who rises here to discuss the armament resolution generally says in the beginning that he is in favor of it, but that it is worthless; that it is ineffective; that it will accomplish nothing, and therefore we can afford to put it in the bill.

Mr. President, that is the kind of reception which the resolution has met over here; and I do not become at all enthusiastic when I am asked to turn the armament resolution over to those who are in favor of it, but who think it is absolutely worthless, and will never accomplish anything.

There has also been put out, for the benefit of the public press and for public opinion, by those who are supposed to be in touch with the incoming administration, the announcement that there is a program coming which will be a program of disarmament. A member of the Naval Affairs Committee said to me yesterday rather frankly, "We are going to put your resolution in the bill, because it will be like the resolution of 1916; it will never hurt anybody." So the Senator from New Jersey will excuse me if I do not become enthusiastic over his suggestion. I shall urge my resolution, but I shall watch the size of the appropriations.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS. I might remind the Senator of another precedent equally innocuous. When the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver act was repealed in 1893, a sop was offered to the silver producers in the shape of a resolution committing the United States to international bimetallism.

Mr. BORAH. Yes.

Mr. President, when we get to the proposition of limiting the building program of 1916, I will say to the Senator from Washington that I will take up further the question of the comparative strength of the navies. I do not desire to do so at this time. I only rose to say something in reply to his suggestion of this morning.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] has become very enthusiastic over this naval bill in the closing hours of the session of the Senate. This bill passed the House about 10 days ago. I wonder why it has been kept in hiding all this time? Why has it not been brought into this Chamber, so that discussion could be had and the bill perfected, if it needed perfecting? Why do they bring it in at this late hour, and then seem to grow impatient because they tell us that they fear they will not have the opportunity to get a vote on it?

Mr. President, last evening the Senator from Washington permitted the consideration of this bill to be halted. He yielded to a Senator on the other side of the Chamber for 30 minutes to consider a measure which was passed in the half hour yielded for that purpose. The Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH], on this side, a member of the Agricultural Committee, rose with a simple joint resolution, containing only five lines, which simply requested and directed the Federal Reserve Board, because of the distressed condition in which we find the farmers of the country, to allow and encourage member banks to renew loans, mark you, on sound farm paper, and the banks were to be the judges of the soundness of such farm paper, for such a time as in their judgment was in keeping with sound business.

The Senator from South Carolina realized that the farmers of the West and the farmers of the South, the great agricultural army, in fact, of the whole country, is in great distress, and he rose in his place as a Senator from a sovereign State in this body to ask the Senator from Washington to give him just a moment or two to consider this very important matter; but the Senator from Washington declined. He would not permit the joint resolution to aid our farmers to be considered at all. He said he would permit it to be read, but that he would not consent to have it considered at that time.

The Senator from South Carolina stated that the joint resolution was brief, and that in his judgment there would be no opposition to it. Mr. President, I know personally that the Senator from South Carolina had spoken to a number of Republican Senators who said that they were not going to oppose the joint resolution. He had spoken to a number on this side who were in favor of it, and no one over here, so far as I know, intended to oppose it; but the Senator from Washington, the chairman of this committee having this bill in charge, deliberately threw away two or three hours last evening by refusing to allow us to consider this resolution. We could have passed the resolution in five minutes and then gone on considering the naval bill until 12 o'clock last night; so the responsibility for the failure to consume two or three hours last night in considering the naval appropriation bill rests purely and wholly upon the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER].

When he refused to permit Senator SMITH, on this side, the author of this joint resolution, to have just a few moments I felt it my duty in the interest of legislation in behalf of millions of farmers in distress to make the point of no quorum, and that stopped the proceedings. I had no desire to filibuster against the naval bill. I want an adequate Navy. I am for a Navy big enough to properly protect the interests of our country at home and abroad. I am for an adequate Army, and my position last night was not, I repeat, inspired by any desire to block the passage of the naval bill; but I do not propose to sit here and permit a Senator who has a bill in charge to dispense favors to certain individuals and interests and halt his bill, making a gap of 30 minutes in its consideration, and then, when a proposition comes up that affects vitally millions and millions of American farmers, and only a few moments are requested to consider their interests, I do not intend to sit silent and permit such tactics to be employed if I can prevent it.

I recall, Mr. President, when the United States was involved in war with a foreign country, the President of the United States heard the cry from Great Britain, Belgium, France, and Italy, "Supply us with food or we die." Day by day German submarines were sending to the bottom of the sea merchant ships loaded down with food supplies. These desperadoes of the deep were starving, or threatening with starvation, the allied armies on the battle field.

Then it was that the President of the United States turned to the farmers of our country and said, "I summon you to the colors." They rallied to his call and marshaled themselves beneath the flag. He said to them "Go now and increase your acreage. Put forth greater efforts than ever before. You, by your industry and enterprise, may save the liberty of the world." I repeat, they answered the call. They went out and increased their acreage and by the increased use of their industry and enterprise they made the soil to produce as never before in our history. Be it said to their credit and praise they supplied food sufficient to feed our people at home, our Army, the allied armies, and the civilian populations back of the armies at home.

When the war was over, what happened? The President told the farmers, "You, by reason of your enterprise and industry in producing this great food supply, have enabled us and the Allies to win the war."

Now, Mr. President, that is not all that was told to the farmers of our country. We said to them, "The agencies of production in the Old World are paralyzed. They are stricken down and out of commission and you will be called upon for food supplies for four or five years to come. Go on with your increased production."

And our farmers with that understanding went on producing as before on a large scale. They bought fertilizers at a high price, everything that entered into the cost of production they bought at a high price, and not a word was said about deflating the currency or curtailing credits until the farmer's debts were due and he had to put his produce on the market.

Then what happened? The farmer whose debt-paying power was around $5,000 was reduced in almost the twinkling of an eye to less than $1,000 by the tremendous fall in the price of his products. In what condition did it leave him? He owed $5,000, his produce would bring only $1,000, and it left him owing $4,000, and this debt hangs over him now and the fruits of his investments and year's toil are all gone.

I heard the Senator from South Carolina [Mr. SMITH] appeal to the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] in behalf of this great army of distressed American farmers, but the Senator from Washington refused to permit him to have as much as five minutes to consider the joint resolution he offered, which would have given hope and help to despairing men and women on millions of American farms.

And yet the Senator from Washington complains that he is not allowed to get along with the naval bill. I am not trying to filibuster against the bill. I am simply insisting that American farmers in distress are entitled to at least a few minutes time in which to consider matters that affect their vital interests. I have not attacked this bill, even in its present form. I do submit that the management of it by the Senator from Washington is not helping it any on either side of the Chamber with those who really sympathize with the American farmer in this hour of distress. I do say, Mr. President, that it is infinitely better for this bill to go over for a few days to the next session than to permit this joint resolution to lie dead on the table in this Chamber. Men are committing suicide because of the darkness and gloom of large debts, and their debt-paying power is being reduced every day. Men are falling by the wayside under the heavy strain, and we are asking permission to consume only a few minutes to consider a measure intended to help them.

Mr. President, the Senator from Washington was not only opposed to considering the joint resolution by the Senate, but he opposed a proposition to refer it to a committee for consideration. The Presiding Officer said that the question was on referring the joint resolution to a committee. I want the Congress and the country to know just what occurred. The Senator from South Carolina said:

> Well, if there is objection to considering the resolution now, we will just refer it to a committee and let the committee either report it favorably or unfavorably.

Then what did the Senator from Washington do, the Senator who is so anxious to gain support for the Navy bill? What did he do then? He said:

> I make the point of order against the motion to refer it to a committee.

Then he undertakes to blame us for consuming a little time in urging legislation that will relieve millions of farmers in distress.

I submit, Mr. President, that the splendid leadership of the Senator from Washington in handling this bill reminds me of what was said by an old fellow of whom I once heard. They said, "How are you, Uncle Johnny?" He answered, "I am enjoying poor health, and getting worse every day."

Mr. President, I am sure that there are many Senators here who do not realize the distressing condition that burdens our farmers to-day. The farmers of the cotton-growing States produced the present crop on the 40-cent basis. Everything that entered into the cost of production was sold to them on that basis. They bought automobiles, with the idea that they would have 40-cent cotton with which to pay for them. They were justified in believing it, because everything they bought to make the crop held up on the 40-cent basis, until they commenced getting the cotton ready to put on the market.

Now, cotton has gone down from above 40 cents a pound to an average of about 7½ or 8 cents. It cost 30 cents a pound to produce that cotton. Senators, that means destruction to the farmers' business in the cotton-growing States. I have heard Senators talk time and again about how difficult it is for the Vice President to live upon the salary paid. I am in favor of paying him a salary sufficient to enable him to live in comfort. But I thought of a poor farmer of my State about whom I heard just a few weeks ago. He brought his cotton to market and sold it at a price far below the cost of production. He hauled his corn to town and sold that. The merchant said, "I do not want to take your corn; the price is low and unprofitable." He said, "I am worried over my debts. Cotton is selling at destructive prices and corn is falling in price. I don't know what to do. I can not stand the strain any longer, so I have decided to dispose of what I have and pay as far as I can on what I owe."

That farmer brought in his four mules, for which he had paid $250 each, and sold them for $75 apiece. All of the products of his farm went for almost nothing, and he left with $1,500 debt still hanging over him. He left the farm and went to town to work for wages. That is what happened in the case of a small farmer who was fairly prosperous.

Yet the Senator from Washington will not permit us to ask the Federal board to sympathize with that poor fellow and extend him a helping hand as he goes down beneath the waves of financial disaster, and then he accuses somebody of filibustering against his bill.

Again, let me say, I was talking to a young man who worked in a Government department in this city two or three years ago. He said, "I do not get enough to live on decently." I said, "How much do you get?" He said, "A hundred dollars a month. It costs me this much for room rent, that much for board, that much laundry bill, and this for wearing apparel, and that for other things." He said, "It just about takes my hundred dollars; sometimes a little more than a hundred." I said, "Yes; that is an embarrassing situation. You ought to have more, and I will help you to get enough to live on." But I have thought of that boy frequently in comparison with the farmer. Whatever may come to him this month he knows he has a month's living ahead of him, and that his salary is certain; it is fixed.

But I invite your attention, Senators, to the farmer who comes up and parts with all his cotton, corn, and other products and walks out of the market place with a debt still hanging over him, with a wife and children at home asking for shoes and clothes, and something to subsist upon.

But we can not get five minutes, under the objection of the Senator from Washington, in charge of the Navy appropriation bill, when he can give 30 minutes for other purposes. But the farmers of the West, of the State of Washington, and all the other western States, and the farmers of the cotton-growing States, ask in vain. We can not halt proceedings long enough for them to have just a few minutes. The Senator from Washington by his objection last evening tied up the proceedings. We failed to obtain a quorum in time to do anything, and he lost the evening, when he could have had the time used in considering the naval bill. He could have had three or four hours if he had granted the farmer five minutes so that we could consider the joint resolution of Senator SMITH.

What is the joint resolution? I want the country to know what the joint resolution is. It reads:

> Resolved, That the Federal Reserve Board is hereby authorized and directed to allow and encourage member banks to renew loans secured by safe agricultural paper for such a length of time as in the judgment of the board may be necessary to enable farmers to tide over the present demoralized and disastrous condition of the markets.

Think of it, Senators! Some of you were not here last night. Can you imagine that a joint resolution like that would be objected to? What good reason can be given to the farmers of the country for such treatment when they are crying out for aid in this hour of their great distress?

I shall not consume more time of the Senate now. But some of those farmers voted for you. Oh, if they could just withdraw those little ballots and take them and look at them now and watch the Senator from Washington as he refused to give them five minutes to consider a measure which would give them hope and help them along the way, how glad they would be to get their ballots back. They voted to send you to the Senate, and you are voting to send them to the poorhouse.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts in the chair). The question is on the committee amendment, which will be stated.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. On page 3, line 14, the committee proposes to strike out "$250,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$400,000."

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Maine [Mr. HALE] whether the committee insists upon swelling that amount?

Mr. HALE. The committee does insist upon the increased amount. I will state that the estimated cost of telephone rentals and tolls, telegrams, and cablegrams this year up to July 1 is something like $900,000. The estimated cost for handling them for the next fiscal year is five hundred and eighty-odd thousand dollars, and the committee cut the amount down to $400,000. This is the first year that the matter has been put in the bill in a separate item.

I may say that a good deal of the expense of telephone, telegraph, and cable rental is in connection with the radio service, and on the radio service the Government last year made a profit of over a million dollars. It also has saved to itself, in matters which it would otherwise have had to pay for, substantially $5,000,000 on radio service. The sum allowed in the bill is used in connection with that service and with the other expenses of the department, and the committee feel that it is proper to allow the amount.

Mr. BORAH. May I inquire what is the pending amendment?

Mr. HALE. It is the committee amendment, on page 3, increasing the amount for telephone rentals and tolls, telegrams, and cablegrams from $250,000 to $400,000.

Mr. BORAH. I am not particular about that specific amendment. There is one on the next page on which I desire to have a vote.

Mr. HALE. This is merely a limitation.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, before we take a vote upon the pending amendment I desire to submit a few observations. Last evening I was directing attention to the items in the bill and called attention to the fact that substantially every item as reported by the Senate committee was a material increase over the corresponding item reported in the House bill. I took up each of the items, beginning on page 1, and proceeded to direct attention to them until I reached page 17, at which time I yielded to the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING] to call up for consideration an important measure repealing certain war-time legislation. I think in order that the record may be quite complete and that we may know exactly the items of increase which have been reported by the Senate committee, I shall direct attention to the remaining provisions of the bill in which increases in the appropriations carried by the House bill have been made by the Senate committee.

On page 20 an appropriation was carried in the House bill for the Bureau of Ordnance amounting to $14,000,000. That has been increased to $15,000,000 by the Senate committee.

On page 22 the item for Bureau of Yards and Docks has been increased from $7,500,000 to $9,000,000. The appropriation for dredging at the navy yard in New York has been increased $100,000.

For the navy yard at Charleston there is carried in the bill as reported by the Senate committee an appropriation of $1,150,000 in excess of that carried by the House bill. For the naval station at Key West, Fla., $800,000 is made immediately available, and no appropriation was carried in the House bill for the item.

The navy yard, Puget Sound, Wash., is next. The appropriation in the House bill was $1,405,000, and the Senate committee proposes to increase it to $1,995,000. On page 25 of the bill the appropriation has been increased with respect to the hospital in California a considerable amount, and the Senate committee recommends an appropriation of $1,000,000. The aggregate cost has been increased to $1,975,000.

The next item is for a naval supply base at Alameda, and I called attention very briefly to that yesterday, $1,500,000. The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] a moment ago was interrogated by the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] concerning the item. I wish to say to Senators that that item will receive full consideration before this bill passes the Senate.

The plea made by the distinguished Senator from Virginia, former chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, is the same plea which has always been made for the purpose of initiating legislation of this character. A small appropriation is obtained under the most pressing appeals and assertions that it will not involve a very large expenditure, and when that appropriation is obtained the Government is committed to a policy from which it may not extricate itself except at very great loss. As a result, we have military and naval establishments in various parts of the United States greatly in excess of the legitimate needs of the Government, and many of them have been developed through these insinuating and innocent looking appropriations which in the beginning were represented to amount to but a few thousand or at most a few hundred thousand dollars.

The distinguished Senator from Virginia says that the Alameda appropriation will involve only a few million dollars and that $1,500,000 is carried by the bill to begin construction. The figures submitted to the joint committee, and which did not pretend to be complete, called for more than $50,000,000, and it was confessed that no provision for shops or for a construction plant which, as I read the testimony and the implications to be derived from it, would be essential if a modern and adequate naval base is established at Alameda, and it is purposed that such a plant ultimately will be constructed at Alameda if the base shall be established there.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator if he is in favor of the establishment of a naval base upon San Francisco Bay at all?

Mr. KING. Yes; I am.

Mr. PHELAN. Then he objects specifically to the Alameda site?

Mr. KING. I do, with the information which I now possess.

Mr. PHELAN. Then the Senator must favor one of the other sites.

Mr. KING. There is already a naval base established on San Francisco Bay at Mare Island. The Government has spent more than $32,000,000 at that point, and the replacement value of the plant and base, according to my information, would be approximately $35,000,000. Of course, the Senator will say that Mare Island is not a naval base. I admit that it is not complete and that to constitute a major naval base, modern and complete, additions will be required. But a naval base should possess a plant such as that now found at Mare Island; it is perhaps the best navy yard in the United States. A dry dock is also there now; and it possesses every advantage for a supply base, and the cost of constructing the supply features would be very small, measured by the amount required to construct one at Alameda. Moreover, at a very reasonable cost larger dry docks could be built and all needed berthing room for a figure much less than that suggested for similar improvements at Alameda.

Mr. PHELAN. If the Senator will allow me, I should like to say that I attended the hearings of the subcommittee of the Committee on Naval Affairs in California on all these matters and had a special hearing of the matter of the Mare Island Navy Yard. I endeavored to assume a disinterested position with respect to the three bases offered on San Francisco Bay, that they might make their cases before a competent tribunal.

There is a unanimity of sentiment in favor of having a base on San Francisco Bay, the greatest inclosed harbor which the United States possesses upon the western coast for such a purpose, but there has been a divergence of views as to which was the most meritorious site within the Bay of San Francisco. I assumed, I say, an impartial attitude, representing the whole State, and was willing to submit the case to the decision of naval experts. I still hold that position, and I assure the Senator that this is a neighborhood quarrel which he has taken up, and not the solution of a naval problem, because the vast preponderance of naval expert testimony is in favor of the Alameda site.

If there was any second choice—and it was a close second—it was opposite, 4 miles away, at Hunters Point, a site within the boundaries of the city of San Francisco, and not at Mare Island. No testimony of value or weight favors having a naval base expansion at Mare Island, notwithstanding the fact that the Government has an obsolete investment there of $35,000,000, the mere cost of a battleship.

Here is Alameda, the selected most eligible site, actually presented to the Government, lands worth, according to witnesses, in the neighborhood of forty or more million dollars, which otherwise could have been developed for harbor and private shipbuilding purposes.

I wish the Senator from Utah to be informed—and this is the first opportunity I have had to tell him—that this is not a question as between the relative value of a Government investment at San Francisco Bay at Mare Island running back through a period of 50 years, and a more suitable site. It is what the modern Navy needs that should govern us. The great ships of the Navy can not, according to expert testimony, utilize Mare Island and its waters, 30 miles north of the Golden Gate through a tortuous channel. If we had a naval engagement outside of the harbor and our ships should come in lame, the testimony of Admiral Rodman, commander of the Pacific Fleet, was that he could not bring those disabled ships for repair and refitting to the Mare Island Navy Yard, where there can not be and where there are no adequate facilities, and where, on account of the fact that the San Joaquin and Sacramento Rivers debouch into the bay at that point and constantly fill it up with silt, the depth of the channel would be difficult to maintain.

These are practical problems which I am discussing. As I said, I entered into this in a disinterested frame of mind to try to find a site for the benefit of the United States and not for the benefit of a particular locality, and I was forced, according to the expert testimony submitted to the joint committee, to the belief that the Alameda site is the most desirable one, and that a base should be established, not for the benefit of localities but for the benefit of the United States Navy, upon San Francisco Bay. Our Pacific Fleet is of no value unless we have such a base. There is danger on the trail. I will warn the Senator from Utah, who lives in the West and who understands the phrase, that there is danger on the trail to-night, and we must have the facilities to keep our fighting craft in condition if we are going to meet the enemy even on equal terms.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from California speaks of expert testimony in connection with the contention which he has just made. What expert testimony does the Senator refer to in the hearings that were had before the joint committee of Congress on the naval bases on the Pacific coast? To what particular expert does he refer?

Mr. PHELAN. I refer to Admiral Coontz, Admirals Parks and Capps and Taylor. I have listened to the testimony even of Capt. Cox, who was called by the proponents of Mare Island, and who admitted that he was merely discussing the matter of Mare Island as a civilian engineering expert and not as a military expert. There is a nice differentiation. He will tell you that he can build dry docks at Mare Island, but he will not tell you in a military sense that is the best place to build a dry dock. Admiral Rodman said that he could not maneuver his fleet in those waters; that in time of war he would have 500 craft under his command in San Francisco Bay, and he could not turn them around in the waters afforded by Mare Island. If that is so, if all these things are true, then it is idle for us as laymen to discuss them. That is what I have told the people of Mare Island and Vallejo. But I am thinking of the American Navy and not of the destiny of Vallejo, whose agents have been here and whose only accomplishment will be to defeat the military purpose of having a naval base upon San Francisco Bay. It is village politics, I will say to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. KING. The Senator speaks of San Francisco as a village.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. BORAH. I am not interested in village politics, but I am interested in knowing who the experts are to whom the Senator from California has referred. I have read this entire report and gone over it the second time.

Mr. PHELAN. The experts were Admiral Parks and Admiral Coontz, whom I consider to be the highest authorities, as well as Admirals Capps and Taylor, who are leading authorities on these subjects.

Mr. BORAH. Did they testify before the committee?

Mr. PHELAN. They testified in my hearing. There were three hearings in California where they conferred and consulted and I know they testified before the committee here, because I was present.

Mr. BORAH. I know they made a report, but I have been unable to find their testimony.

Mr. PHELAN. Excuse me, I did not understand the Senator. They made a report which was illuminated by their conversation when interrogated by the members of the committee here, and that would be equivalent to testimony. Much of it was not taken down.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I am astonished at my good friend from California. He arose, as I understood, for the purpose of giving us light. I listened with attention to the forceful, passionate appeal made by the Senator who comes from "a village" called San Francisco.

Mr. PHELAN. I beg the Senator's pardon. When I referred to villages, I referred to the town of Vallejo, which is fostering the claims of Mare Island, which is immediately opposite, within 500 yards. When a ship was launched at Mare Island the other day it ran into the docks at Vallejo. Such are the facilities for launching ships at that yard.

Mr. KING. The Senator from California speaks of it as a "neighborhood quarrel." I suppose, of course, he includes San Francisco in the neighborhood. He also spoke of it as being a village quarrel. Vallejo could not quarrel with itself; if this question of determining where the naval base shall be is a quarrel, then it quarrels with San Francisco and Oakland, who are the other parties to the quarrel.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. I yield to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I understand the Senator is opposing the establishment of a supply base at Alameda. I am simply asking the position of the Senator.

Mr. KING. Yes; and I am opposing the appropriation of $1,500,000 carried by the bill as reported by the Senate committee for what is alleged to be a "supply base." The plan is to have a major naval base which will cost tens of millions of dollars. The Senate committee report calls for docking, showing that the plan calls for more than a supply base.

Mr. POINDEXTER. The Senator from Utah evidently has not read the bill as reported by the Senate committee, if he maintains that it calls for more than a supply base.

Mr. KING. The Senator from Utah has read the bill as reported by the Senate committee.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Then the Senator's statement is not correct, for the item does not call for more than a supply base; it calls for a supply base. But what I desire to ask the Senator is will he not allow us to take a vote on it and vote it out, if the majority of the Senate is opposed to it?

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah would have no other alternative than to allow a vote to be taken upon this item if the bill is under consideration sufficiently long, but I can assure the Senator from Washington that there will be no vote taken upon it until there is a full discussion of the subject.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I suppose that is to enable the Senator from Utah to discuss it sufficiently?

Mr. KING. As well as other Senators, including the able Senator from Washington, who will, of course, have much to say in defense of this provision of the bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. In order that the Senator from Utah may have full opportunity to discuss the item, I will give notice that I shall request the Senate to remain in session to-night for that purpose.

Mr. KING. Oh, Mr. President, the Senator does not advise us of anything new. We were advised yesterday that his purpose was to do that.

Mr. President, I was diverted by the impassioned address of my good friend from California [Mr. PHELAN], and I am compelled to return to his observations. I deduce from what the Senator has said, Mr. President, that when the possibility of appropriating $100,000,000 is presented to the Senate and there are two claimants in a given State for the locus where the money shall be expended it is a mere "neighborhood quarrel" in which the Senate of the United States has no concern. Certainly the Senator from California does not mean to take the position that we are not concerned as to whether $100,000,000 or any lesser sum shall be taken from the Treasury of the United States for the purpose of establishing a naval base; whether it is called a supply base or a major naval base is immaterial for the purpose of the argument.

Mr. President, this is more than a "neighborhood quarrel." The Senator has alluded to the fact that there are "agents here." I presume he meant that residents of Vallejo or those who are interested in Mare Island are in Washington to present their views. I have been advised that there are "agents" here who have been here for some time in behalf of the program to establish a naval base at Alameda at a cost of $100,000,000.

While I am on that point may I call attention to the propaganda which has been carried on in the Senator's home town and in Oakland and vicinity for this stupendous appropriation? During the naval base referendum campaign in the city of Alameda the Oakland Inquirer, in advising the people to vote in favor of the proposition, stated that—

> The city of Alameda risks nothing in this matter, with the exception of a few hundred dollars to pay for the cost of the election, and stands—

I want Senators to remember this language—> to gain from the Federal Government a hundred-million-dollar plum.

Of course, I can understand the alacrity with which the distinguished Senator from California, a resident of San Francisco, rushes to the defense of the proposition to spend $100,000,000 in the vicinity of San Francisco. It is, indeed, "a hundred-million-dollar plum," a plum so luscious and inviting that I can not wonder at the zeal of the people of Oakland and vicinity. But it is to be extracted from the Treasury of the United States, to be paid for by the taxpayers of the United States, a plum which will impose additional burdens upon the people of the United States who are already groaning beneath the heavy exactions wrung from them by the Government of the United States. The following article is from the Oakland Inquirer of February 3, 1921:

> WAIT APPROPRIATION BEFORE THE TUBE QUESTION.
>
> Not until the Congress appropriates funds for the construction of the hundred-million-dollar naval base at Alameda will the Alameda council take definite stand on the question of the construction of a tube under the estuary. This was decided at a meeting of the board last evening. Councilman Probst asked for action on the matter, saying that too much is being left to others. Probst's proposal was met with objections immediately, and the matter was laid over until a later date.

Mr. President, as further evidence of the propaganda and the campaign which have been carried on and are still being carried on by the city of Oakland to secure this hundred-million-dollar plum, I call attention to this advertisement appearing in the Oakland Inquirer:

> The coming of the naval base with a hundred million dollars to be spent and 15,000 men to be employed means a tremendous increase of the population and the wealth of Oakland. The beautiful home sites we have for sale in the lake district are sure to double in value. Buy now and save this money. Prices will never be so low again.

The Oakland Inquirer, permit me to state, Mr. President, is owned and edited by Mr. Chapin, who is the chairman of the naval base committee of the Oakland Chamber of Commerce. I am not criticizing Mr. Chapin; I am not criticizing my friend, the Senator from California; I am not criticizing the people of Alameda and Oakland for the earnestness and ability with which they are pushing their campaign to secure this $100,000,000 plum. It is merely confirmatory evidence of the alertness and progressiveness of the people of those cities. Undoubtedly the building of a great naval base at Alameda would be of advantage to San Francisco and Oakland and Alameda; but the important question is: What is best for the United States and for the people of the entire country? This is more than a local question. It involves a national expense and is related to governmental policies.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. KING. I yield.

Mr. PHELAN. The Senator bears out what I said awhile ago, that this is in some respects, so far as it is being discussed here to-day by the Senator from Utah, a neighborhood quarrel.

Mr. KING. Oh, I will get to the merits of it; the Senator need not fear.

Mr. PHELAN. It involves the rivalry of hopeful villages or cities. San Francisco itself is eliminated, but there is Oakland with 150,000 population on the other side of the bay and growing with portentous rapidity. It sees the advantages, of course, of having the Government establish a naval base within its limits. It will add greatly to the employment of the people and necessarily increase the population; and so the Senator quotes from a local paper saying that this "million-dollar plum" will be of such great advantage to Oakland that it behooved the people there to support the project. To support what project? To support the gift to the Government of the United States of 5,340 acres of land in the cities of Oakland and Alameda, valued by their experts at approximately $60,000,000.

So the newspaper is preparing the minds of its readers to give away to the Federal Government $60,000,000 in land value!

I think that is perfectly legitimate for the newspaper, not only in the interest of the town but in the interest of the United States Government, to cajole or to induce those good people to give away $60,000,000 of value. I was utterly astonished that Oakland, holding by expert advice the best site for a naval base upon the western coast of America, should have been so foolish as to offer to give anything to the Government of the United States, which is well capable of paying for what it needs in coin of the realm. But these good people—I would call them villagers, they are so bucolic—give $60,000,000 worth of property to the United States in order to locate a naval base there.

If there were no chance for them to get a naval base they might well have done that as an investment, because they could well afford to pay $60,000,000 to have the Government establish a naval base which would give employment, possibly—it is the largest estimate I have heard—to 6,000 people. To secure 6,000 workers in a village even of that respectable class is well worth the investment of $60,000,000 in land value; but there is no prospect that I can see of the Government investing $100,000,000 there within the lifetime of this or the next generation. All that the committee has asked is $1,500,000; and the Senate should be advised that this $100,000,000 is merely a figment of the imagination of the Senator from Utah, reinforced by the exhortations of a local newspaper, which was trying to cajole $60,000,000 worth of land out of the pockets of its constituents for the very worthy purpose of getting an added advantage in the competition between Oakland and San Francisco.

"They are not giving anything, but we give $60,000,000"—a very cogent argument in some courts and before some juries, but I do not think it weighed in the balance with the officers of the Navy of the United States. They made the decision, not because they were getting free land. Naval officers are not concerned in expenditures. You all know that. They are looking for results, and they are seeking the best, and they generally get it. They were not moved by the offer of $60,000,000. So it becomes a mere gratuity; and if Oakland did not give her $60,000,000 in land value we would have to appropriate this money anyhow, because I tell you, Senators, that there is a real need for a naval base upon the west coast, and the experts have given us this one. It is not for us as laymen to say it is not the best base. It is not for us as trustees, perhaps, to reject this munificent gift of the city of Oakland. It is for us, however, to decide that there should be a naval base, and that a beginning should be made.

One million five hundred thousand dollars represents the beginning of the construction of this base, if you approve of a naval base at all, and not $100,000,000. Leave that for future Senates, when the Senator and I will not be here to curb extravagance. Future Senates may vote $100,000,000, but I doubt very much if they will vote $100,000,000 unless there is an actual need proved by the Navy for its expenditure, and then, perhaps, not in a hundred years.

This land can be made available—500 acres of it—at a cost of $6,000 an acre, according to the committee report. That would be $3,000,000—500 multiplied by $6,000 is $3,000,000. That is the estimate here made by the report for preliminary work, and this year $1,500,000 is asked, or one-half that amount. It seems to me a very moderate request, in view of the fact that the Secretary of the Navy asked for $6,500,000.

Everything has been done to begin this great work with diligence and with economy, and $1,500,000 is the only amount that is asked now of the Senate by this bill. The $100,000,000 upon which the Senator has eloquently dwelt exists only in his own imagination. Is not that so, I will ask the Senator from Utah? Has he any authority for saying that this base is going to cost, within his lifetime, $10,000,000, not to speak of $100,000,000?

Mr. KING. When the Senator has concluded in my time I shall be happy to reply.

Mr. PHELAN. I have concluded.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, the Senator says that at a remote period from now neither he nor I will be here to "curb extravagance." I am delighted to know that the Senator during the few days he remains in this Chamber is to be a champion of "economies" on the part of the Government; but he is manifesting his desire for economy by urging an appropriation of $1,500,000 for a project which in the end will cost the United States seventy-five to one hundred million dollars.

The Senator says that total exists only as a figment of my imagination. I wish that were true. I wish there were no foundation for the statement which I have made that this project will cost, if we do not have disarmament, from seventy-five to one hundred million dollars. Why, Mr. President, Admiral Parks has already furnished the committee estimates, which have been printed, calling for more than $50,000,000, and those estimates do not involve the expenditure of a single dollar for the building of a suitable plant, such as is indispensable, I aver, at a major naval base. I shall come to that when we reach this item in the bill, and I shall convince the Senator, notwithstanding he is from San Francisco, and notwithstanding he is a dispassionate judge in this case in favor of Alameda, that he is wrong and that the proposition which I have made will be realized within a very few years.

The Senator says that Oakland is making a present to the Government of land worth $60,000,000. There is a swamp covered with from 12 to 20 feet of water. No one uses it; no one can use it without great improvements are made. The city of Alameda has an inchoate title granted by the State of California, and there is some question whether it can give a legal title or any title for the purposes contemplated by this bill. When the Senator said that it is valuable land, worth $60,000,000, and speaks of this munificent gift of a generous and patriotic people, my mind unconsciously reverts to the desolate sight presented by the swamp and turgid waters which are to be given to the United States for a naval base; and I hoped that when the Senator went beyond the fetid atmosphere of this Chamber and breathed the vitalizing breezes of the Pacific, and basked in the sunlight of glorious California, he would pay a visit to this $60,000,000 proposed gift and then recall his words uttered upon this occasion. It consists of a few hundred acres of mud and water, and to which no bottom has yet been found, though, Mr. President, borings to the number of 32 or more have been made to the depth of 50 feet. Since the Senator is so afraid of Japan and China and the Orient, I suggest that they keep on boring, and they may find their traditional enemy at the end of the hole.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, does the Senator object to interruptions?

Mr. KING. Not at all, if the Senator can throw any light upon this subject, rather than wit.

Mr. PHELAN. I will simply correct the Senator in the fact that it is not a few hundred acres that is involved.

Mr. KING. Oh, well, if the Senator will pardon me, 500 acres is what they propose to reclaim now.

Mr. PHELAN. Yes.

Mr. KING. But there is a proposed grant of a larger amount.

Mr. PHELAN. The grant is 5,340 acres.

Mr. KING. Oh, I understand.

Mr. PHELAN. And it costs, to reclaim this "bottomless pit," $6,000 an acre. That would be sufficient evidence to prove that it is not a bottomless pit. Furthermore, in the greater part of it there are only 2 or 3 feet of water, and not 20 feet of water; so by excavating here you make land there. That is the process of all governmental work under such conditions. So by one motion of the dredge you make deep water on one side and solid land on the other—a most excellent and economical plan.

The borings by Admiral Parks have been subject to scrutiny by the committee; and it is his opinion and the opinion of all other experts that while it is difficult to find bedrock there, there is no question at all about their ability to construct even dry docks, which are considered very heavy, while as to all other construction there is no difficulty at all. So they can construct dry docks where the borings at a depth of several hundred feet do not show bedrock. That is a mere matter of scientific detail. It is the availability of this land, which can easily be made both a deep channel and solid land for the purpose of the Navy, giving facilities for every possible activity of the Navy on these 5,340 acres, that makes it so attractive.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret that my distinguished friend is so unfamiliar with this subject and that he has not read all the hearings, as the Senator from Idaho has done, and as I have done. I regret that he has not read the testimony that has been given upon this particular matter. If so, I am inclined to think that my friend would not make all the statements he has so forcefully expressed here to-day.

I was just stating that the "generosity" of Alameda has found expression in the attempt to convey to the Government of the United States a considerable tract of land which belonged to the State, but some sort of a title to which—and I have the act here before me—has been acquired by the city from the State of California; but I repeat that there may be some question as to whether or not power rests within the corporation to make conveyance of this land for the purpose for which it is to be used. But I am not urging that question, and would not have alluded to this matter except for the statement of the Senator that Mare Island has its "agents here" in their behalf.

Mr. President, I have met two agents, to wit, the son of a Congressman from the State of California and a resident of the city of Vallejo. If there are other "agents" here, the Senator knows them, I do not. They are his constituents. The Senator seems to condemn the representatives from Mare Island or Vallejo for trying to give light to the Senate of the United States upon a matter which involves the expenditure of $100,000,000. The Senator ought to be glad if the patriotic people of Vallejo or vicinity come here for the purpose of enlightening Senators and Congressmen before they are committed to a policy which will involve the expenditure of from fifty to one hundred million dollars. Instead of his rebuking them, he ought to be expressing his commendation of their course.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President——

Mr. KING. The only regret I have is that I have not had an opportunity to see more residents from that vicinity who could supply further information, because the only interest I have in this matter is the good of the country. I have no interest in Alameda. I have no interest in Mare Island. I was never there but once in my life, and then to examine the navy yard. I have not a friend or an acquaintance there, and I am here speaking only as a public servant for what I conceive to be the public good. I am not in the embarrassing situation of the distinguished Senator from California, because I can appreciate that with two "villages" in the same neighborhood, with their conflicting claims, there must be some little embarrassment, unless he is a tremendously brave man, in taking sides upon this question.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, I have just announced that I approached this question before the election disinterestedly, taking no sides. The Senator will probably acquit me now of being at all interested, since the elections have been concluded. I have no personal interest in the matter at all, and I do not wish the Senator's remark to remain unchallenged. He says I have rebuked the agents of these several interests for coming to Washington. I have always encouraged the visitation of agents interested in the advocacy of measures pending before Congress, whether related to harbors or otherwise, because, by bringing about a conflict between neighborhoods, you are very apt to elicit the truth. So the president of the Chamber of Commerce of Vallejo, who is in Washington, and is a friend of mine, has advocated the cause of Vallejo with very considerable zeal, and Vallejo stands or falls upon the decision, he believes, of the Congress of the United States. His theory, which has some weight, is that if this great naval base is established on the deep waters of San Francisco Bay, close to the Golden Gate, all the business of Mare Island will ultimately be drawn there, both great and small. But they are assured by the committee report, and the language of the bill itself, that Mare Island shall be maintained as a yard for construction and other purposes; and I believe it must always so remain, and it will be barred simply from the larger work brought about by the great size of our modern naval craft. So Mare Island has a future of its own within its natural limitations.

What I resent is that these agents, after there has been an adjudication by the experts of the Navy, by the subcommittee which visited the ground, and by the whole Committee on Naval Affairs, should come here and prevent the Navy from enjoying a naval base at all upon the Pacific, unless it be a naval base established at Mare Island. It is that narrow and selfish and unworthy spirit which I condemn.

So I told my friends from Vallejo, constituents of mine, upon whose good favor I may subsist, as the gentleman intimates, that it is unworthy Californians to stand in the way of the acquisition by the Federal Government of a naval base because it has not been located at a particular spot. I do not see that they have a leg to stand on, unless it be the leg of selfishness and local advantage. The Navy must have a base; the great weight of testimony gives it to Alameda; the emergency is great; we should therefore get together to get it, not delay nor defeat it.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, I regret to hear the chastisement which my friend, the Senator from California, administers to his own constituents. I regret to hear him rebuke them as being "selfish" because they are doing what I conceive to be a patriotic act. I do not think it becomes the distinguished Senator from California to indulge in the expression to which he gave utterance, that he "resented" the action of the people from his State, after there had been an "adjudication," in coming to Congress to present the facts which they believe to exist in regard to this matter.

I know, Mr. President, that my good friend from California, who is soon, I am very sorry to say, to leave us, and whom I know will always be welcome back in this Chamber, in his calmer moments will regret having said that he expresses "resentment" because people from Vallejo have sought to present to Congress their views upon a question which involves an appropriation of from fifty to one hundred million dollars. The question of a naval base in San Francisco Bay is not involved in any question now at issue. Everybody concedes that there should be a naval base in San Francisco Bay. Indeed, many of us believe that a naval base not complete, however, is there now. It requires additional docking facilities and a larger dry dock for the accommodation of the tremendous battleships which the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] is pleading for, and, of course, which we will have to have if no disarmament shall come.

But why should the Senator "resent" the efforts of men to present to Congress the facts concerning a matter in which the whole Nation is interested? Are we bound by what the Senator denominates as an "adjudication" because some alleged experts and some entitled to the name give their opinion that a given place is the desirable spot for the establishment of a naval base? Experts, Mr. President, have been variously characterized by those who have encountered them in the courts. Mr. President, I shall not indulge in language which might call for expurgation, but there is a progressive idea expressed in the sentence which will readily suggest itself to lawyers who are here in this body.

Mr. President, there is no infallibility in the opinion of experts, and expert testimony is to be weighed with caution.

The greatest expert who has testified upon this question is Capt. Beach, and the next best expert is Commander Cox, a man who is in the service of the Government, and who has been at Mare Island for many years. The latter has built dry docks at Pearl Harbor and other places, and knows the conditions at San Francisco Bay, and where a suitable naval base should be established.

I believe that dispassionate perusal of the testimony of Capt. Beach and Commander Cox will bring conviction that the proper place for a great naval base in the San Francisco Bay is Mare Island, and not upon the swamp lands contiguous to Alameda.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, to keep the record straight, of course the Senator refers to the borings as indicating that the ground is not the best ground for the construction of dry docks?

Mr. KING. I did not discuss it particularly in connection with that; but I will aver, Mr. President, that because of the character of the ground it is not the best place for dry docks.

Mr. PHELAN. When on the opposite side of the bay, 4 miles away, there are two great docks, the greatest on the Pacific coast.

Mr. KING. Hunters Point?

Mr. PHELAN. Hunters Point; which dry docks are available for the Government, and where the dry docks may be further extended. But the testimony is there will be no trouble in building dry docks on the Alameda shore.

Mr. KING. I agree with the Senator, and if I may be pardoned for digressing for a moment, I think there is much evidence in the record in favor of Hunters Point as against Alameda. Indeed, Mr. President, the conclusion which I reached when I first read the testimony was that Hunters Point was very much superior to Alameda, and I was somewhat in doubt as to whether it was not a superior place to Mare Island, if it were not for the great expenditures already made at Mare Island—more than $35,000,000.

Mr. PHELAN. Of course, the $35,000,000 improvements at Mare Island are not to be scrapped.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, there is where my good friend is in error. That is what is said now. That is what is said, and, of course, it is said in good faith; I am not impugning the motives of any man. But, Mr. President, we know that the overhead of maintaining in one harbor two great naval bases would be so great as to forbid such a course. It would be the height of unwisdom and unfair to the Government to have a great naval base at Mare Island employed in constructing battleships and all sorts of craft, and having 20 to 30 miles away another naval base in the same harbor, and from which naval base the ships, if they needed repairing, would have to proceed for repairs. If we establish a naval base at Alameda, we will scrap the naval base at Mare Island, and the $35,000,000 which have been expended there will have been wasted.

Mr. President, I have scarcely entered upon the discussion of this bill, but I understand that the Senator from Massachusetts has a matter to bring to the attention of the Senate, and I shall now yield to him.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I feel a very profound interest in the naval appropriation bill and its provisions, and I am very anxious that it shall be enacted into law. There is an aspect of the case in regard to the naval bill and the action of the Senate committee which I feel unwilling to discuss in open session, and I therefore take the liberty of moving that the Senate go into secret legislative session.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I think it is very important that the motion should be carried, and I second it.

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator——

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is not debatable. The motion is that the Senate go into secret legislative session.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	McLean	Smith, Ariz.
Ball	Gronna	McNary	Smith, Ga.
Beckham	Hale	Moses	Smith, Md.
Borah	Harris	Myers	Smith, S. C.
Brandegee	Harrison	Nelson	Smoot
Calder	Heflin	New	Spencer
Capper	Jones, Wash.	Overman	Sterling
Cummins	Kellogg	Owen	Sutherland
Curtis	Kendrick	Phelan	Swanson
Dial	Kenyon	Phipps	Thomas
Dillingham	Keyes	Pittman	Townsend
Edge	King	Poindexter	Trammell
Elkins	Kirby	Pomerene	Underwood
Fernald	Knox	Ransdell	Wadsworth
Fletcher	La Follette	Reed	Walsh, Mass.
France	Lenroot	Robinson	Walsh, Mont.
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Sheppard	Williams
Gerry	McCumber	Shields	Willis
Glass	McKellar	Simmons	Wolcott

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-five Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present. The Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] has moved, and the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] has seconded, the motion to close the doors for the discussion of certain business which, in the opinion of the Senator from Massachusetts, requires secrecy. The Sergeant at Arms will clear the galleries and close the doors.

The Senate thereupon (at 4 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) proceeded to deliberate with closed doors.

After 2 hours and 30 minutes the doors were reopened.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by W. H. Overhue, its assistant enrolling clerk, announced that the House insisted upon its amendment to Senate amendment No. 113 to the bill (H. R. 15543) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, agreed to the further conference requested by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and that Mr. WOOD of Indiana, Mr. WASON, and Mr. SISSON were appointed managers at the further conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 13225) providing for the allotment of lands within the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation, Mont., and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 5030) authorizing the city of New Orleans, La., to extend Dauphine Street in said city across the United States military reservation known as the Jackson Barracks.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 10074) to enlarge the jurisdiction of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, and to regulate appeals from the judgments of said court, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

H. R. 8067. An act to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia; to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia; and for other purposes; and

H. R. 16100. An act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, and for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the following concurrent resolutions, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

H. Con. Res. 76. Concurrent resolution to print the Journal of the Fifty-fifth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic; and

H. Con. Res. 77. Concurrent resolution to correct the enrolled bill (H. R. 10074) to enlarge the jurisdiction of the municipal court of the District of Columbia, and to regulate appeals from the judgments of said court, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the enrolled bill (H. R. 15275) imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes, and it was thereupon signed by the Vice President.

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVAL.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had to-day approved and signed the bill (S. 3225) for the relief of bona fide settlers who intermarry after having complied with the homestead law for one year.

NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT, GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 76) to print the Journal of the Fifty-fifth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic was referred to the Committee on Printing, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there shall be printed as a House document 1,500 copies of the Journal of the Fifty-fifth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic for the year 1921, not to exceed $1,700 in cost, with illustrations, 1,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House and 500 for the use of the Senate.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBINSON in the chair). The Senator from Idaho suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The roll was called, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Glass	Lodge	Smith, Ariz.
Ball	Gooding	McCumber	Smith, Md.
Borah	Gronna	McKellar	Smith, S. C.
Brandegee	Hale	McLean	Smoot
Calder	Harris	Moses	Spencer
Capper	Harrison	New	Sutherland
Curtis	Heflin	Overman	Townsend
Dial	Jones, Wash.	Phelan	Trammell
Dillingham	Kellogg	Phipps	Underwood
Edge	Kenyon	Pittman	Wadsworth
Elkins	Keyes	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Fernald	King	Pomerene	Warren
Fletcher	Knox	Ransdell	Williams
France	La Follette	Robinson	Willis
Frelinghuysen	Lenroot	Sheppard	Wolcott

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Sixty Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, in view of what has been said, I shall ask that the naval appropriation bill be kept before the Senate until some action is taken on it, and I shall be compelled to decline to yield for other matters.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] has upon several occasions, if I got the right impression, said in relation to the pending bill—the naval appropriation bill—that he does not think that in the three remaining days of the session it can possibly pass. While I am heartily in favor of this bill, I know it is impossible to drive the bill through simply by holding the Senate in night sessions here, if the Senator and any others who feel as he does, intend to consume the entire time in the discussion of the bill. In view of that, I desire to ask him whether he and those who feel as he does, or, if he can not speak for the others, whether he can make any statement to the Senate in the interest of economy of time in the transaction of the public business which would lead us to decide upon a course?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I stated in my opening remarks on the bill, before the motion to take it up was voted upon, that I did not believe it was possible to pass the bill at this session, and I am satisfied now that it is not possible to pass the bill at this session. I am perfectly willing to assume any responsibility which may rest upon me individually in saying that, and I am particularly convinced of that fact since this secret session. In addition to that, I have had some conversations with Members of the House, and I know that we are wasting time in passing the Senate bill. I can say to the Senator no more than the fact that it is my opinion that it is impossible to pass the bill at this session.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, if I were required to interpret the statement of the Senator, I should conclude that his reason for thinking it impossible to pass the bill if we stay here all night and day for the next three days was because he did not intend to let it pass.

Mr. BORAH. I do not intend to let it pass in its present condition if I can help it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course, the Senator and others who think as he does would have a right to vote against all the amendments they did not believe in and all the provisions of the bill they did not believe in, and I should not object to that.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, let us take one proposition alone, the question of Alameda. We will have to go into the testimony, and there is not a Senator here, I presume, outside of the members of the Naval Affairs Committee, with the exception of myself, who has read the testimony. It is not a question of having a sufficient naval base upon the Pacific coast; it is a question as to which is the best naval base. That of itself, if it is insisted upon, would take the remainder of this session to discuss.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Connecticut yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I yield.

Mr. PHELAN. If that item is eliminated, do I understand that the Senator from Idaho will not object to the passage of the naval appropriation bill by the Senate?

Mr. BORAH. No; I did not say that. But I was calling attention to the particular item.

Mr. PHELAN. It may be possible to eliminate what the Senator disapproves of.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Idaho has had considerable prominence in this discussion, but there are other Senators, on both sides of the Chamber, who feel just as sincerely against this bill as I do, and I could not make any agreement which in my judgment would mean the passage of the bill. But I do not care to shoulder the responsibility upon anybody else. In my opinion, the bill can not pass at this session.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I want to relieve the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] from a little burden which seems to be resting upon his conscience; and I want to relieve the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] from the burden he thinks he is responsible for. I shall not voluntarily vote for nor allow to pass a bill which inaugurates naval armament emulation among the nations of the earth, and that is what this bill does. I do not plant myself upon the narrow basis the Senator from Idaho did, as to some question of Alameda, or San Francisco, or some other consideration like that. I think, when this bill passes, the American Republic will have announced to the world that it is seeking sea domination, and every other nation will say about the same thing back to us, and that will begin an endless war of finance to build and rebuild and continue to build ships of every description to enable the nations to fight one another and cut one another's throats.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, as I have followed the debate of the Senator from Idaho and others, particularly the Senator from Idaho, it seems there is one important feature which must be disposed of before the bill can be considered in detail, and when I say in detail I mean specific provisions which provide for certain activities of the Navy Department. There is one general feature which comes out in the debate as a matter which every Senator I have heard express himself seems to favor but upon which we are not permitted to have an opportunity to vote. It occurred to me that if the desire for disarmament is entirely sincere—and I have no reason in the world to question the sincerity of the movement, and in fact I do not—it might to some extent relieve the objections which seem to be developing on both sides of the Chamber to the consideration of this bill if the Senate could have an opportunity to express itself directly on this matter. So I offer an amendment to the bill covering the subject, and ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration. I will ask the Secretary to read the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from New Jersey to the fact that under an arrangement heretofore entered into committee amendments are first to be considered. What is the request of the Senator?

Mr. EDGE. I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the amendment I am sending to the desk. Of course, I thoroughly appreciate that without unanimous consent I can not proceed further, and I want to have the amendment stated so that I can get a decision on the request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the proposed amendment.

The READING CLERK. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] proposes the following amendment:

The President is authorized and requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which conclusion is to be reported to their respective Governments.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I want to suggest to the Senator that his request is a bit too narrow. He has confined it to the three countries of Great Britain, the United States, and Japan. I will not insist upon including all the great maritime powers of the world, but if he is going to submit it, unless I object, I must insist upon its including at least France and Italy.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, in reply to the Senator from Mississippi, he has a perfect right to extend it if he desires. I am asking unanimous consent, under the rules, for the consideration of this amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Then I object to the unanimous consent, if the Senator will not agree to extend it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is made.

Mr. EDGE. I did not hear that objection was made, Mr. President. I had concluded my remarks, in which I expressed a willingness to have it extended, and I thought that met the objection of the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I beg the Senator's pardon; I thought the Senator said that I had a right to object if I wanted to, but that he would not change the wording.

Mr. EDGE. No; I think the Senator misunderstood me. I am entirely ready, for the purpose of securing unanimous consent, if it is possible, in order to get the sentiment of the Members of this body, to extend the amendment to include those two nations.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That will obviate my objection, at any rate. All I want to accomplish is to have included the chief maritime powers of the world.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. EDGE. I will ask the Secretary to add those two countries.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. What is the request of the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. EDGE. The request of the Senator from New Jersey is that unanimous consent be given to consider at once the amendment I have sent to the desk, adding the countries of France and Italy to the wording as I submitted it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the amendment which was reported a moment ago, and as modified, according to his statement just made.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Reserving the right to object, I desire to ask a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from New Jersey yield?

Mr. EDGE. I yield.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Mr. President, the first part of that amendment, as it was read, suggested the language used in a resolution which the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] has pending here, or has had printed. The latter part of the proposed amendment, however, as nearly as I can follow it, if I caught the meaning of it correctly, simply provides that these delegates, if they agree upon a plan of proportionate disarmament, shall report it to the Governments, but does not provide that their agreement shall not go into effect until the Governments have approved. Is that correct?

Mr. EDGE. That is correct. I modified the original amendment so that it would carry out that meaning.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator proposes to give the delegates, whom we do not know, without future consideration by the Senate, the right to bind the country to such disarmament as the delegates may think proper?

Mr. EDGE. Absolutely not. I am endeavoring, through this amendment, to have accredited delegates appointed by those respective Nations to consider the question of disarmament, and, if possible, to come to an agreement among themselves, and then report to their respective Governments the agreement they have arrived at, but in no way acticipating, by the wording of the amendment, that the countries themselves must abide by that agreement until the countries have an opportunity to consider the agreement.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I ask that the amendment may be again reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will read the amendment again.

The READING CLERK. The Senator from New Jersey proposes the following amendment:

The President is authorized and requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to invite the Governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which conclusion is to be reported to their respective Governments.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. If I can understand the English language, that certainly gives the delegates authority to make the agreement.

Mr. EDGE. Among themselves.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. And bind all the countries which they represent, and then report to them what they have agreed upon.

Mr. EDGE. The amendment would be a little clearer if we added three words at the end, "for their action," or "for their approval."

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It would be a great deal clearer to me, and much more satisfactory.

Mr. EDGE. I thank the Senator from Connecticut for his suggestion, and, if I may, before the request is put for unanimous consent, I will add the words "for their approval."

Mr. WILLIAMS. The amendment says they shall report to their respective Governments. Of course, that involves the idea that it must be left to their respective Governments to act. Still, in order to make it perfectly plain, it would be very well to put in the words "for the action of those Governments."

Mr. EDGE. I think the objection of the Senator from Connecticut is met by adding the three words I have already suggested, "for their approval," and I ask for unanimous consent with those words added.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. It would be more satisfactory. I think the subject-matter warrants a little more attention to the drafting of it, because where you give the delegates authority to make an agreement, I would want it specifically provided that the agreement shall not bind the powers concerned until reported to their Governments and approved by their respective Governments. In other words, I would want them to make a recommendation, subject to the approval of the powers which appointed them. Before the Senator gets through, he will be able to modify it, I suppose.

Mr. EDGE. Of course, but I feel reasonably confident, with all due regard to the superior legal knowledge of my good friend from Connecticut, that the amendment I have suggested and sent to the desk would accomplish the very thing he wants to have done. I think we can at least get the sentiment of the Senate on the question of trying to do something toward removing the obstacles to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, if we can secure a vote on this particular proposition, which seems to be the crux of the opposition, as far as I have been able to follow the debate. So I will again ask for unanimous consent for the consideration of the amendment.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. The Senator feels sure that it satisfies him. I do not feel sure that I am quite satisfied about it.

Mr. EDGE. I would be glad to withdraw it temporarily, then.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. No; I shall not ask that. Of course, if I do not like it, I shall not vote for it; but I have no objection to its consideration.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I have no objection to its consideration; that is to say, if we want to waive the rule which we have heretofore established and take up now the question of disarmament. I, of course, am very glad to do that, and I shall not object to it. But it is understood that after we take it up it is subject to amendment and subject to debate, just the same as if it came up in the regular course of business. In other words, I am utterly opposed to putting France and Italy in, and I shall want to be heard upon that. I am willing to take up the amendment, however, and now proceed to the question of what we will insert in this bill on the question of disarmament.

I wish to say to the Senator from New Jersey, however, that I have studied the situation in the Senate, and know it, and there are some four or five amendments waiting on his amendment which will make the rest of the evening very entertaining.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I am entirely satisfied to see the evening consumed if it will be consumed on a direct question before the Senate, and I think one of the most direct questions in connection with the naval appropriation bill is the question of disarmament. I simply presented an amendment for the purpose of having something definite to debate rather than to talk all over the map, which seems to be the usual custom when objection is raised to a pending question. This amendment can be amended in any other way any Senator wishes to suggest if he can get a majority of the votes. However, it is sufficiently comprehensive, in my judgment, as it appears to present a definite question before the Senate, and if we are sincere on the question of disarmament, then I assume I will have unanimous consent and we can take up the consideration of this amendment and modify it in any way found desirable.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I assume that the unanimous consent already entered into—that the committee amendments shall be considered first—may be modified by this other unanimous consent. I think the rule so provides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks that under the rules and practice of the Senate the Senate can agree to this unanimous consent, if it chooses to do so, and the Chair therefore submits the request for unanimous consent presented by the Senator from New Jersey.

The Senator from New Jersey asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the amendment which has already been reported. Is there objection?

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, I wish to propound a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state it.

Mr. HEFLIN. If the resolution is taken up now, that sidetracks the consideration of the naval appropriation bill until this question is disposed of?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The inquiry of the Senator from Alabama hardly presents a parliamentary inquiry. It is not a resolution. If unanimous consent be given for the present consideration of the amendment, it is in order to amend the amendment and to debate the amendment and the amendments thereto.

Mr. HEFLIN. I beg the pardon of the Chair. I got the impression that it was a resolution. I did not know that it was an amendment offered to the pending bill. I could not hear what the Senator from New Jersey said when he sent it to the Secretary's desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is proposed as an amendment to the pending bill. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Jersey? The Chair hears no objection. The Senate, therefore, will now proceed to the consideration of the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE].

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the amendment is the same as the amendment which I offered to the bill, with the exception of adding France and Italy.

Mr. EDGE. And with an addition at the end.

Mr. BORAH. No; the way it has been restored, the word "conclusion" is used instead of the word "understanding." It reads now:

The President is authorized and requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to invite the Governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which conclusion is to be reported to their respective Governments for their approval.

Mr. EDGE. The words "for their approval" have been added, and also the words "if not incompatible with the public interest."

Mr. BORAH. The words "if not incompatible with the public interest" are an addition to my resolution, but the words "for their approval" are in my resolution. There is really no difference except in the question of adding the Governments of France and Italy.

The same question as to adding France and Italy was before the Committee on Foreign Relations and was there considered. Some Senators, including among others the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], were very urgent that they should be included. All are agreed that the only three nations which are engaged in a competitive naval-building program are Great Britain, Japan, and the United States. France has practically no navy or a navy of very little moment, Italy has no navy of any consideration or any moment, that is of any moment so far as the question of disarmament is concerned. As stated by Mr. Hurd, the great naval expert of England:

Indeed, as first-class naval powers, France and Italy have already disappeared below the horizon.

So we are including two nations which can not be included upon any theory of naval competition or upon any theory that it is necessary for them to disarm. They are disarmed. Neither one of them has laid down a capital ship for the last several years and neither one of them is proposing to lay down any capital ships. They are not proposing to add to their navy in any way of any moment whatever that is of any consideration to us. To include them, therefore, is necessarily to bring another element into the question of disarmament, and that is disarmament by land or the reduction of military forces on land.

I ask the Senator from New Jersey to bear in mind that at Geneva, when the question of disarmament came up, France was the nation which led in opposition to any program of disarmament whatever. She stated that she was not in a position even to consider the principle of disarmament at this time, and it was upon her objection that even the pious resolution that we should sometime—a far-off and most elusive sometime, the sometime which is so often spoken of by those who pay lip service to disarmament, but who are not hard and fast in that resolution—consider disarmament, when offered in the Geneva assembly, was not adopted. France was compelled to object to it and vote against it. If we are acting in good faith, as I know the Senator from New Jersey is, what is the use of calling into the conference the nation which has said within the last few months that she could not and would not take up the question of disarmament even for the purpose of manifesting a desire to disarm under present conditions? The same might be said of Italy. We are bringing about a situation which absolutely precludes the possibility of our making any progress toward disarmament. I am sure the Senator from New Jersey does not desire to do that.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. I have no intention of entering into a debate on the merits of adding the countries of France and Italy. I did it mainly, as my remarks at the time could well be interpreted, to secure unanimous consent in order that the actual question of disarmament could come directly before the Senate, subject to further amendment as the debate develops.

However, as a brief answer to the suggestion of the Senator from Idaho, I assume that his original resolution and my amendment, worded similarly, would, of course, contemplate the possible additional building program of other countries, France and Italy. Is it not just as well, inasmuch as we are considering the question of general disarmament, and representatives meeting in conference to discuss how it can be brought about, to have the representatives of those great nations, France and Italy, also around the council table even though their navy is negligible and even though they have no definite program for the next five years as contemplated under the amendment? I can not see any real objection to having them considered when the question of disarmament is being considered, rather than not having them in any way a part of the conference.

Mr. BORAH. We know that France has announced her policy relating to disarmament. She announced it at Geneva just a few weeks ago at the time when the Geneva assembly had up the question of disarmament. I regret that I have not before me the resolution which the Geneva assembly desired to pass on the question of disarmament. It was a most inconsequential resolution. It consisted of nothing more, in the language of Lord Cecil, than a pious desire to be in conference, and yet France announced her opposition to it and voted against it.

Mr. McCUMBER. Was that naval or military?

Mr. BORAH. It was disarmament.

Mr. McCUMBER. General disarmament?

Mr. BORAH. Yes, general disarmament; that is, the resolution related to general disarmament. But in her discussion there, through her representatives, France seemed to indicate that at the present time it would have an unfortunate effect upon the military spirit of her own people, and that, owing to the situation in which she was placed with reference to Germany, she had to keep up the military morale or the armament morale of her own people, and therefore her leaders refused even to cast a vote in favor of the principle of disarmament.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. I can well understand that France, under existing conditions, most naturally is very determined to maintain an army and a very effective army, but I still do not see why, in a conference absolutely confined to lessening a naval program and in no way referring to an army program, it would not probably be possible to have France and Italy acquiesce to some extent in such a program. It does not necessarily commit them; it does not in fact commit them in the slightest degree, as contemplated by the resolution, to any reduction of their army. I suppose they would naturally feel the same, very likely, that they did at the peace conference. But I can not see any objection to having them participate. We have all to gain and nothing to lose.

Mr. BORAH. Then, why not include Brazil?

Mr. EDGE. There is a limit to all such conferences when you commence them. Naturally you wish to have an assembly of the five great maritime nations of the world.

Mr. BORAH. There is no reason in the world to include Italy and leave out Brazil.

Mr. EDGE. It is a matter of judgment.

Mr. BORAH. Yes; it is a matter of judgment, but I wish to say to the Senator that he is providing a method here by which he will kill the principle of disarmament by simply imposing upon France the burden which she has been willing to assume at Geneva of opposing any program whatever.

Mr. EDGE. The Senator is assuming that she will oppose a naval-reduction program when I see nothing, following his argument, whereby he is justified in making such an assumption as it refers to a navy.

Mr. BORAH. Has the Senator read the debates of the conference representatives? If he has, he will see in a moment that the question of disarmament in whole or in part was covered and discussed, and that France refused to take a stand in favor of the principle, whether applied to a part or the entire question of disarmament. That has only been two weeks ago.

Mr. EDGE. In a general way the Senator from New Jersey followed the discussions of the meeting. However, the pending amendment should not necessarily be confined to the three nations originally contemplated. France originally was not even invited. France was thus encouraged to maintain any contrary position she may have had about general disarmament, either military or naval. The Senator is interested in what I think is a wonderful movement, but he deliberately tells a great nation of the world that we do not even want them to participate in the deliberations, that we assume in advance they will not in any way join the other three nations in bringing about real disarmament.

Mr. BORAH. The French press has said, and one of the public men of France who is now in the peace conference has said, that they would be very glad to see Japan, the United States, and Great Britain proceed with their program of naval disarmament, that France was not in a position to be committed upon the problem. The Senator will recall there was a discussion at the time I offered my resolution that it might be offensive to France because she was not included, and, if the Senator will further recall, the correspondent of the New York Herald printed a number of statements from public men of France to the effect that they did not consider it offensive.

Mr. EDGE. If France has no navy worthy the name, which I think is probably correct compared to the navies of other nations, she has nothing to lose when this is confined absolutely to naval reduction, so I still can not understand why the Senator should assume, confined to that one question in no way of direct interest to her, that she should refuse to be a party to it.

Mr. BORAH. As France has no navy, why does the Senator from New Jersey want her in the conference?

Mr. EDGE. To keep her from having a larger navy in the future if she joins with the rest of the world.

Mr. BORAH. There is no possible chance for France to have a navy in the next five years which would disturb us. She is not proposing to do anything for the next five years. When the Senator brought the resolution into the Senate Chamber he did not have France and Italy included in it. The Senator evidently had reflected upon this resolution before he drew it. He certainly did not write it as he would write a telegram on his way to the depot, and bring it in here without any reflection whatever. He had certainly reflected that it was not proper to include France and Italy in the resolution at all, because he did not include them.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey has reflected for a long time upon the general subject of disarmament, and he is very much in favor of it. The amendment which I have introduced was patterned very much after the amendment which was originally introduced by the Senator from Idaho, as the Senator well knows; it is practically a copy of his amendment.

I have already stated in answer to a similar question by the Senator from Idaho that I included France and Italy primarily to secure unanimous consent to bring the subject before the Senate, which was otherwise denied. I am not so unreservedly committed to the necessity of including those two countries as might be inferred from my statement, but I do not agree that the inclusion of those two nations is the menace that the Senator from Idaho apparently attempts to make it appear. I do not consider that their inclusion would in any way reduce the possibility of world-wide action; I do not assume that it would in any way destroy the possibility of a world understanding on disarmament. I think it would help it and strengthen it by having representatives of those nations, whether they have any navy or have not any navy. I can hardly consider that a proposition such as this, which is so interesting to every class of citizenship, could be interfered with by the inclusion of the representatives of other great nations, especially when the Senator from Idaho admits that they would not be directly affected, as they have not any navy and, so far as he states, have no large program for a navy in the future.

Mr. BORAH. The Senator from Idaho repeats that it has been but a few weeks since the nations which the Senator from New Jersey wishes to include have expressed themselves in opposition to this proposition. They did so with great deliberation and stated their reasons for their action. To include them at this time is simply to play with the subject; it is to make no progress whatever; it is to brand the action upon its face with insincerity. If France had not declared herself within the last few weeks, and declared herself so broadly that there can be no mistake about her position, there might be some basis for the argument of the Senator from New Jersey; but we know her attitude; it is a settled proposition now. To put into a naval appropriation bill here, which provides for a program of $500,000,000, a resolution which includes two nations, one of which has already objected within a few weeks to even considering the principle, is, in my judgment, to brand the entire transaction with insincerity before the entire country.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. FRANCE. I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland offers an amendment to the amendment, which the Secretary will state.

The READING CLERK. At the end of the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey it is proposed to add the following:

That the President shall advise an agreement which looks to disarmament on the following plan:

First. That a commission made up of three naval experts from the United States, three from Great Britain, and three from Japan, and three from France and Italy shall make a survey to determine and to tabulate the strength and tonnage of the navy of each of the said powers as on July 1, 1921.

Second. That the United States shall enter upon no agreement which does not look to the speedy reduction of naval armament, particularly on the part of those nations having the greatest naval strength and tonnage.

Third. That any agreement shall provide—

(a) That on January 1, 1923, no nation entering upon such agreement shall have a navy of greater strength and tonnage than that of the nation having the navy of greatest strength and tonnage on July 1, 1921, as determined by the commission heretofore provided.

(b) That on January 1, 1925, no nation entering upon such agreement shall have a navy with a total strength and tonnage in excess of 75 per cent of the total strength and tonnage of that nation having the navy of greatest strength and tonnage on July 1, 1921, as determined by the commission heretofore provided.

(c) That on January 1, 1930, no nation entering upon such agreement shall have a navy with a total strength and tonnage in excess of 50 per cent of the total strength and tonnage of that nation having the navy of greatest strength and tonnage on July 1, 1921, as determined by the commission heretofore provided.

(d) That on January 1, 1935, no nation entering upon such agreement shall have a navy with a total strength and tonnage in excess of 25 per cent of the total strength and tonnage of that nation having the navy of greatest strength and tonnage on July 1, 1921, as determined by the commission heretofore provided.

Fourth. That those nations with navies of lesser strength and tonnage than that of the nation having the greatest strength and tonnage on July 1, 1921, as determined by the commission heretofore provided, shall have the right to increase the strength and tonnage of their navies provided that they do not exceed the limits herein prescribed.

SEC. 2. That it is the sense of the Congress, in case such an understanding can be had, that it will conform its appropriation and building plans to such agreement.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi will state his inquiry.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland, being an amendment to an amendment submitted by unanimous consent, I take it requires unanimous consent, does it not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks not. The Chair thinks that the Senate having consented to the consideration of the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE], it is in order to amend his amendment.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Then, Mr. President, I merely wish to remark that instead of looking like an amendment to an amendment which is being considered by unanimous consent, it looks like a codification——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair calls the attention of the Senator from Mississippi to the fact that unanimous consent has already been given to consider the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I understand that; but I am now talking about the amendment to the amendment. I have already asked the parliamentary inquiry and the Chair has responded to it. I wish simply to say that this amendment to the amendment looks like the codification of a disarmament proposal, instead of being merely an amendment to an amendment designed to forward the movement for disarmament. It goes into infinite detail, and it commits all sorts of people to a measure to which nobody will consent, so far as I can see. I hope, therefore, that the amendment to the amendment will be rejected.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss at length the amendment to the amendment.

It is very simple. It provides for a just and equitable disarmament, one which is just to our own country. In a word, it provides that on July 1 next a committee of naval experts from the powers interested shall meet to determine the tonnage and the strength of the various navies; that the navy of the greatest strength on July 1, 1921, shall be considered to be the maximum of naval armament which shall be permitted, and that, taking that as a maximum, there shall after that be a gradual reduction in naval strength. It does, however, provide that those of lesser naval strength than that nation showing the greatest naval strength on July 1, 1921, may be allowed to build up, whereas those of the greatest strength shall not be allowed to continue their building programs.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, will the Senator pardon a question there?

Mr. FRANCE. Yes.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Am I right or not in the supposition that the Senator's proposition involves saying to the remainder of the world that we shall start with the biggest Navy in the world and we shall proportionately decrease?

Mr. FRANCE. I think that is hardly a fair interpretation of the meaning of my proposal. It does, however, say to the world that we do not care to subscribe to the doctrine that we shall perpetually be inferior in naval strength to some other nation.

Mr. WILLIAMS. To any other nation.

Mr. FRANCE. To any other nation.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator means that, then, of course, he means to submit to the nations of the world a proposition which involves the idea that the United States shall have the biggest navy in the world.

Mr. FRANCE. Not necessarily.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Absolutely necessarily.

Mr. FRANCE. On the contrary, a careful reading of my plan—and it has been before the Senate I will say to the Senator for some time——

Mr. WILLIAMS. If the Senator will pardon me, it is absolutely necessarily so in view of his answer to the last question. He has just said that we would not enter into an agreement where we did not have the whip handle. He did not use the words "whip handle," but it amounts to that.

Mr. FRANCE. The purpose, I will say to the Senator, of my amendment is to bring all nations to an equality. Great Britain, for example, having on July 1, 1921, the greatest navy, would be relieved from any further building. The other nations could build up to the point, not to exceed, however, the total maximum strength of Great Britain on July 1, 1921. Then, on July 1, 1923, no nation shall have a navy exceeding the strength of the British Navy—it would be the British Navy—on July 1, 1921.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator means the strength of our Navy in 1923?

Mr. FRANCE. On January 1, 1923, no nation will be permitted to have a navy of greater strength than that nation having the navy of greatest strength on July 1, 1921.

Mr. WILLIAMS. That would be ourselves, of course.

Mr. FRANCE. No; that would be Great Britain. Great Britain would be shown to have the navy of greatest strength on July 1, 1921.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If it be that our Nation would not have the greatest Navy in 1923, then everything that has been said in advocacy of this bill is false, because it has been said all the time that by that date we would have the biggest Navy in the world.

Mr. POINDEXTER. That is a mistake.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am glad to be told by the Senator from Washington that I have made a mistake. I so seldom find myself corrected by him that I am willing to be corrected at almost any moment.

Mr. FRANCE. Mr. President, I do not care to discuss the amendment. I think it speaks for itself. It provides for an equitable plan; it would result in the navies of the great powers coming gradually to a point where they would be equal, and then there would be a rapid reduction of the navies on an equitable basis; so that they would be equal at a certain date and they would be immediately reduced. That is the only equitable plan for naval reduction.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, of course in the last remark made by the Senator he has made a psychological mistake. If he really were trying to reach a point where all nations would be equal, then there would be no reason for any nation to contend in spending money in order to become superior; but of course that is all they are spending money for.

Mr. President, I think this matter involves so many points of detail, and it is a matter of so much importance not only to the Senate but to the people of the United States, that there ought really to be a quorum to consider it. I therefore ask before a vote be taken upon this amendment——

Mr. POINDEXTER. Let us vote on it now.

Mr. FRANCE. Will the Senator from Mississippi yield for a moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Mississippi yield to the Senator from Maryland?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yield.

Mr. FRANCE. I will say that I do not contemplate asking for a yea-and-nay vote upon my amendment to the amendment, so that it will not be necessary to call for a quorum.

Mr. WILLIAMS. If it were to be passed without a yea-and-nay vote, we would involve the United States Government in an endless program of detail; we would be instructing commissioners from our country and from Great Britain and Japan and France and Italy about matters of detail that ought to be left to the common sense of the commissioners, and we would do it without a yea-and-nay vote. We ought at least to have a yea-and-nay vote upon it, and before we can have a yea-and-nay vote, of course, we must have a quorum.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I ask for a vote.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey. Did the Senator from Mississippi suggest the absence of a quorum? The Chair did not understand him.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Yes; I suggested the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The reading clerk called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ball	Gronna	McLean	Smith, S. C.
Borah	Hale	Moses	Smoot
Brandegee	Harris	Overman	Spencer
Calder	Heflin	Phelan	Sutherland
Capper	Jones, N. Mex.	Phipps	Thomas
Curtis	Jones, Wash.	Pittman	Townsend
Dial	Kenyon	Poindexter	Trammell
Dillingham	Keyes	Pomerene	Underwood
Edge	King	Ransdell	Wadsworth
Fernald	Knox	Robinson	Walsh, Mont.
France	Lenroot	Sheppard	Warren
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Shields	Williams
Gerry	McCumber	Smith, Ga.	Wolcott
Gooding	McKellar	Smith, Md.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-five Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Maryland [Mr. FRANCE] would seem to be subject to the criticism that while it provides for the appointment of a commission for the purpose of considering the very important subject of reduction of armaments, it assumes to prepare a program for that commission after it is appointed with such minuteness that it might result in defeating itself. Of course, no commission appointed to dispose of so important a subject would presume to act except upon the fullest information, and we of the Senate have not that information and have no way of securing it. There might be and probably would be very potent reasons for adopting some other method, or perhaps some other proportion of relative strength, due to the differences between the geographical boundaries, sea-coast lines, colonial possessions, and other subjects, all of which would necessarily affect the main proposition.

I am heartily in favor of—I will not say disarmament, because that is perhaps an impossible thing. I am heartily in favor, however, of a reduction of armaments, and I should love to see the United States take the lead in that policy, either through negotiation with other maritime powers or by initiating the movement and setting the example on its own account.

I opposed the program of 1916, Mr. President, and attempted at that time to give reasons for my opposition, some of which I think have been verified by results, and none of them have been in anywise adversely affected by the events of the interval between 1916 and 1921. At that time it was asserted that the United States should have a Navy second in power to any in the world. We did not then aspire to supremacy in naval armaments. The reason for limiting our ambitions at that time to a second place were entirely due to the strides that Germany had been making and was then making in the matter of naval construction.

At that time ours was, in fact, the second Navy in the world, but the extent of construction in Germany was not entirely known, and particularly after the empire was virtually cut off from communication after the war by the British blockade.

Just before that time this administration was opposed, or perhaps I should say was lukewarm, upon the subject of an expanded navy. Shortly before the naval program of 1916 its representatives became satisfied that naval expansion was essential, and the German menace was the inspiring motive to the policy of that year. I contended, and so did many of my associates upon this floor, although they were in the minority, that the program announced for that year would inevitably inspire competition and result in increasing expenditures for armaments by every maritime power in the world, and particularly by Japan and Great Britain. The naval bill of that year carried the largest appropriations for a navy ever made by a nation in time of peace, yet it was not one-half the amount which this bill carries, and we are still practically in a time of peace.

The war seems to have transformed the United States from a peace-loving and peace-pursuing people into a potential military power. Prior to the European war armament, whether by land or by sea, was an affair of comparative unimportance. Our isolation from the great powers of the world doubtless had much to do with it; but we prided ourselves upon our capacity to take care of ourselves in the event any exigency requiring it should arise, and upon our reputation as a law-abiding country, enjoying the blessings of freedom, unambitious as to territorial extension, and cultivating the arts of peace with all mankind.

We were told when we entered the war that our purpose was to make the world safe for democracy and were congratulated after the armistice upon having accomplished that benign purpose. But it would seem that it is now necessary for us to bankrupt the Nation in order to make democracy safe for the world, and with a large standing army on land and the largest Navy in the world on sea—both, of course, designed for defensive purposes only, because no army and no navy was ever organized in the world for offensive purposes if the nations engaged in maintaining large armaments are to be believed—instead of making democracy safe for the world we proposed to make the greatest of democracies a menace to the world. We can not build a great navy without using it, nor establish an enormous army without increasing the military spirit. When your neighbor arms himself for defense and goes about the street with a gun in each pocket it is only a question of time when he will utilize his arsenal either upon the pretense of self-defense or because his habits both of mind and of conduct necessarily bring him in conflict either with authority or with the individual. So with nations. Shortly before Germany declared war against France the Crown Prince asked his father what his army was good for if he did not use it—a most pertinent query and one which the Kaiser very shortly afterwards answered effectually, to his own ultimate undoing.

Mr. President, I shall not to-night attempt to discuss the practical, and to my mind the unwise, methods of naval expansion which this bill contemplates, but I do for a few moments want to direct the attention of the Senate to the enormously increasing public expenditures for naval and military purposes in the United States, an increase which is progressive and must soon absorb all of the public revenues, even though they are increased by increase of taxation.

It is not generally known—at least, I do not believe it is—that 93 cents of every dollar paid by the people in Federal taxes is expended for wars we have heretofore waged, and in preparation for wars which we anticipate, leaving 7 cents of every dollar to be devoted to civil administrative purposes. The proportion between the expenditure of our revenue for military purposes and the expenditure for other purposes is a constantly increasing one. Before we entered into the last war about 76 per cent of the public revenues were thus devoted. The difference, of course, has resulted from our engagement in the last war, the burden of which will rest upon the shoulders of the American people for the next four or five generations, to say the least of it, and longer if some spirit of frugality or practice of economy does not overtake succeeding Congresses.

One of the most illuminating articles recently published upon the subject is found in the Saturday Evening Post of February 26, from the pen of Edward G. Lowry. His article is accompanied by two circles, the first showing the relation between the appropriations for obligations arising from recent and previous wars, and for those which are anticipated, and against which we are preparing, and those moneys which are devoted to all other governmental purposes. Less than one-fifteenth part of the circle indicates that part of the revenues which go for what may be termed civil expenditures and needs, and all of the remainder represents appropriations for military and naval purposes.

Another circle represents the average of such expenditures from 1910 to 1919, and the exhibit is a startling one. I read one or two quotations from the article:

About 93 per cent of the money spent by the Government during the last year was on account of past and future wars. So long as we wish to maintain a Military Establishment of 300,000 officers and enlisted men, so long as we feel the necessity of building and maintaining a Navy of the first rank, high taxes are inevitable.

A Government scientist—of whom more later—thought that he could prove to me that—

The cost of all the civil-service activities of the Government during the 10 years from July 1, 1909, to July 1, 1919, averaged $2.15 a year per capita for the population of the country, and during this period the cost increased barely as rapidly as the population of the country increased. At the same time the cost of commodities more than doubled, the cost of living doubled, and the cost of doing private business increased in proportion. Put in other terms, the cost of the civil side of the Federal Government in 1920 was only a little more than half of what it was in 1910, if measured in commodities or if measured in money of equal purchasing power.

The author of this article determined to verify that statement, and therefore obtained all the statistical information possible from the various departments, and particularly the Department of the Treasury, and after obtaining his data, desiring to condense it into proper form, he was greatly embarrassed because it was almost impossible for him to find any machinery, in the way of adding machines, and so forth, which could be used for the accomplishment of such a huge task. He states in the article:

When I got all the figures before me I couldn't add them up. They were staggering.

I went to the biggest bank in Washington and said, "Please total those columns on one of your adding machines."

The assistant cashier took one look at them and replied: "I'm sorry; we can't. Our machines only work up to tens of millions. We never have any need to go above that. Why don't you go round the corner to the adding-machine company and ask them?"

I did, and was told: "You will want an expert operator and one of our 17 bank machines for that job. Try the Treasury and see if they will do it for you."

THE MOUNTING COST OF WAR.

In the Bureau of Internal Revenue they loaned me a machine and an operator.

The only place where he could be accommodated; and here is the important conclusion:

And so I know and can tell you that from 1834 to and through 1919 the War Department actually disbursed $23,002,390,008.65. In the same period the Navy spent $6,907,369,032.84, and pensioners of past wars got $5,634,079,694.23.

That is a thundering total of $29,909,759,041.49 for the Army and Navy alone and leaves out of account the $5,634,079,694.23 for pensions.

Put in another form, the tax burden of 1920 was $37.40 per capita, of which $2.50 was expended for the ordinary affairs of the Government and $34.90 upon our Military and Naval Establishments, plus the pensions, interest upon the public debt, and preparations for future wars, as I have stated.

Mr. President, I think the question which confronts the Congress, and the Nation as well, is this, Is military and naval preparation, whose magnitude leads us inevitably to bankruptcy, worth the price? If it is necessary to carry on a continually increasing military and naval program in order that the Government may live, is it worth preserving if that program leads to inevitable bankruptcy? That is the situation before the country, for this program is constantly extending.

It was stated to-day from several sources that this bill comprises very much more than the program of 1916, and it is insisted that the extension is necessary to meet prevailing conditions. I did not believe it then, and I do not believe it now.

We are at peace with the world. Is there anyone mad enough to believe for a moment, after sober second thought, that such a crime against civilization as a war between the two great English-speaking powers of the world is possible, or that if such a calamity should occur it would not mean the ultimate supremacy of the other races? Does anyone seriously contemplate armed conflict with Japan? Oh, Mr. President, there be differences between nations, serious ones at the present time, but if we who have gone through our recent baptism of blood and sacrifice, the world not yet on its feet after the staggering war of 1914, assume that another World War, or any war between two great modern powers, is the only manner in which their disputes can be adjusted, it is to set aside all our experiences and to belie the civilization of which we proudly boast.

If a government of the people, for the people, and by the people can only exist by having the greatest navy in the world and one of the largest armies, it may be a question whether it has not outlived its usefulness and some change in its form of government should not occur. Militarism and aristocracy or autocracy are not synonymous terms. Militarism can exist in a republic and has done so, and flourished quite as effectively as in monarchies, whether limited or despotic, and unconscious militarism is calculated to grow unseen with every display of military and naval power, and even now I question whether the advocacy of this huge program is not due to that constantly expanding spirit, fed as it is upon hatreds and animosity, all of which might well be avoided, either through the exercise of diplomacy or by other forms of negotiation.

Mr. President, it has been said once or twice here in the debate, and before the bill was reported it was iterated and reiterated upon the floor, that a great Navy is essential for the promotion and protection of our foreign commerce, and that if we are to perform our part in the commercial development of the world and conduct successfully competition with our rivals, we must have behind it the force and the fact and the prestige of the greatest Navy in the world. If that were true, I would doubt the value of our international commerce. It certainly is not worth having if to promote and protect it we must bankrupt ourselves in the construction of a huge naval force. But it is not true. There was a time in the history of the world when America had the greatest merchant marine afloat. It not only required no Navy to enable it to prosper, but, as a matter of fact, we had none worth mentioning.

The great seafaring nations of the world outside of Great Britain are Holland, Norway, Sweden, Japan, and one or two others. Japan has a navy, but she had her merchant marine before her navy was born.

The Norwegian marine fleet is scarcely second to that of Japan or the United States, but she has no navy. Holland is one of the ancient maritime nations. Her navy is negligible. I might assert with equal confidence that a navy is an obstacle rather than a help to the expansion of foreign commerce, and that in that respect we are as well off, and perhaps better off, without than with it. I am very free to confess that if the argument were a sound one it would be the best which has been presented for our consideration, because then the end of our naval armament would be peaceful and commercial rather than militant or aggressive.

But the point which I rose to emphasize and which I will repeat and then yield the floor, is the enormously increasing expenditures of the public moneys in a mad race with other nations for supremacy in naval armament, based upon appeals to the warlike spirit of the people, also to their fears and their apprehensions, enlarged and exaggerated by rumors and gossip concerning the intentions, the purposes, and the animosities of nations with whom we are at peace. If this is to continue, then the war which we have recently fought and fought successfully will have been fought in vain, and the United States which we have preserved has been saved only to be bankrupted by armaments that were never dreamed of before it was fought. The whole system and policy is fundamentally wrong, and it is manifest that as long as it is continued no limitation can be placed upon it.

Everyone says we want a reduction or limitation in armaments, but we must continue as long as the other nations persist in expansion. Japan says the same thing and Great Britain likewise, and soon Italy and France will join in the mad competitive race. Just as long as that spirit persists, just so long will these increasing armaments continue, until some little spark will set the magazine afire and the world will be wrapped again in the flames of war.

Germany was ostensibly ready to limit her military forces if France would, France if Germany would, and both if Russia would do likewise. While these expressions were glibly passed from one to the other, armaments continued until they became so huge and overwhelming that the nations had to resort to war to escape that financial collapse which such expanding conditions necessarily produced. Singular, is it not, that three or four years ago we were denouncing the militarism of Germany as a menace to the world, and having destroyed that menace we are imitating her example upon the seas? The way to diminish our armaments is to diminish them, and I think it is a safe prediction to make that if this the greatest power in the world will have the magnanimity to set the example, other nations of the world will gladly imitate it.

Mr. PHELAN. Mr. President, I had not expected to address the Senate at this time on the Japanese question, but the debate has been precipitated by the opposition to the Senate bill providing for an adequate Navy. The speakers seem to dwell upon the point that the only reason why there should be an adequate Navy would be to meet the menace of Japan. Then they argue that there is no menace and therefore we need not provide adequately for a Navy. If their premises were correct, they would be doubtless right in their conclusions, but the menace of Japan is so manifest that he who runs may read, especially in these later months when Japan, a member of the League of Nations, has cast off all disguise, allied herself with the powers of Europe, where we are not represented, and has apparently assumed an unfriendly position.

It reminds me that, not long ago, was it not a cardinal sin in the Senate to frankly speak in open session of the hostile attitude of other nations toward our own, lest it mar international good neighborhood and friendly relations? But secrecy and silence are poor weapons with which to contend—and so they have been condemned—and now there is between nations a fuller, if not a better, understanding. But ultimately a fuller will lead to a better understanding, and, as Carlyle says, all warfare is misunderstanding. Let us by all means hereafter have the facts elicited by open discussion. I used the word "hostile" advisedly, because there is such a thing as the invasion of a land without the beat of drum and call of fife, and there are manifestations of hostility in other respects without the commission of overt acts.

Japan has risen in 70 years to a position of first-rate importance in the family of nations. I doubt if in all history there is another example of a nation attaining such stature in so short a time. It is a deplorable fact that the United States is responsible for it. Commodore Perry, about 70 years ago, at the mouth of our cannon, forced the opening of Japan to the world; but when the commodore opened Japan he did not know what was in it. A warlike people, they had been engaged from time immemorial in internecine struggle; a people of quick intelligence, they soon adapted themselves to modern methods, and while lacking in the inventive faculties and in initiative, so imitative are they that during this very short period they have attained a high position in manufactures and in the arts of peace.

Their manufactures, from simple textiles to giant dreadnaughts, are capable of meeting in the open market the products of the more refined and advanced nations.

They are still a young and a rude nation, and it is the history of the world that such nations, rising from small beginnings, have overcome the great and the proud nations, because the great and the proud nations, having enjoyed leisure by reason of their great accumulations of wealth, become enfeebled. The men lose their fighting fiber; they lose their taste for conflict; they lose their national spirit; they become what are called rather contemptuously "pacifists." When the Spaniard entered the Caribbean he found some of the natives there willing to accept Spanish domination and to bow their necks to the cruel and galling yoke, and so the Spaniards called them contemptuously "pacificos." So have old nations become pacific—submissive. Fighting is distasteful. Japan, now rising, is one of the young nations of the world, and if we could only get the perspective, projecting ourselves into the future and looking backward, we should see her coming forward—for what purpose? For conquest.

Egypt, Greece, and Rome have all passed through the stage of growth, civilization, leisure, and decay; and the great nations of Europe are in mortal peril now because, devastated by war and enervated by luxury, they find that the only intact peoples of the world are the Asiatics. That great work, The Rising Tide of Color, shows that the Asiatics have always pressed upon European civilization. They have been driven back here and there, as at Vienna by Sobieski, and at Tours by Charles Martel; but the pressure continues, and now Europe is in no position to resist that rising tide of color. This young nation in the Orient, doubtless, will marshal the troops of Asia, including the 400,000,000 population of China, some day, and, making common cause, will not only overwhelm the Pacific and the Pacific littoral, but will overwhelm Europe itself. Hence we should be advised in time. Shall we make a stand?

Charles Martel put off disaster for hundreds of years; so did Sobieski. In the Battle of Marathon, which was one of the decisive battles of the world, the Greeks held back the Asiatics.

So it is a world problem and not a local problem that looms before us. The manifestations in California are merely symptomatic of the general disease. California has taken the same stand that the Europeans took at Marathon, at Vienna, and at Tours in trying to hold back this tide; but the Nation at large does not realize it. We are told by good, easy gentlemen that we shall not need a Navy or an Army because, forsooth, the Japanese menace is a bugaboo; that there is no real substance to it.

In 1910, when the census was taken, there were 20,000 Japanese in California; there are now 100,000. At that time the orientals owned or controlled 70,000 acres of land; now they control or own 624,000 acres out of a total of 3,900,000 acres of the irrigable lands in my State. They control 1 in 6 of these the best tillable acres in California. Yet, numerically, they stand in the proportion of 100,000 to 3,400,000. Those who do not look upon it as a danger say, "Why, there are 3,400,000 of the Caucasian population and only 100,000 Japanese." But the Japanese cluster in colonies, and wherever they go they displace the white man. The white man disappears, and—

> The fell disease, which must destroy at length,
> Grows with its growth and strengthens with its strength.

I happen to have here a comment of Dr. Elwood Mead on that very point. Dr. Elwood Mead is the professor of rural institutions at the University of California and chairman of the State land-settlement board. He gives this as an example—and it is a pertinent example—which will at once inform the Senate of the dangers which are present and imminent:

> In Placer County, for example—

That is one of the central counties in the State, adjoining the county of Sacramento, where is located the State capital.

> In Placer County, for example, 15,000 out of the 19,000 irrigated acres are leased or owned by Japanese. The fine homes of the former tenants are empty; they shelter rats and owls. So far as white people are concerned, the towns are socially dead. The irrigated part of Placer County is practically a little Japan. The people from Nippon dominate its life. Controlling the land, they can perpetuate the ideals, habits, religion, and loyalties of the mother country, and do this indefinitely.

The Japanese, on the acreage they now control, produced last year nearly all the vegetables and a large portion of the small fruits to the value of $67,000,000, and they, contrary to sound economic laws, send the bulk of this money, which they do not leave in trade with their own compatriots, to Japan, constituting an economic drain. How long can this last?

But is not immigration restricted? Partially; yes; but the birth rate is not. One out of every thirteen children born in California is Japanese. The percentage of births to white women is 9.9 per cent; to Japanese women 28.8 per cent.

In the rural portions of Los Angeles County, of which we hear so much, in that very rich and fertile land 33 per cent of all the births to-day are Japanese and in rural Sacramento County as high as 49 per cent.

We may stop Japanese immigration, but that does not cure the evil, because with their enormous birth rate it is estimated that in 90 years there will be more Japanese children born in California than white children. In 7 years the Asiatic children born in Hawaii, taking citizenship under the Constitution of the United States by reason of their birth, will control the political institutions of that Territory. That is the danger. We have an immigration problem. We can settle that by an act of Congress or by treaty, but how can we settle the problem which presents itself to us when, admitted under the forms of law or otherwise, we have a population such as I have described of orientals perpetuating themselves with frightful rapidity. Wallace Irwin, who has just written The Seed of the Sun, a book describing in the form of a romance the conquest of California by the Japanese, says it is an interesting but horrifying thought that when the sun is descending in California it is rising in Japan.

There is an instinctive fear throughout the Pacific among the native tribes, as well as among the Caucasians in California, in Washington, Oregon, New Zealand, Canada, and Australia that their very life is threatened; and in the position they are taking they are simply maintaining the ancient law of self-preservation; that is all there is to it.

I have shown you that there has been a peaceful conquest going on by reason of the lax and generous laws of the United States. We are seeking to put an end to it, and in seeking to put an end to it we are affronting, if you please, Japan. What will Japan do? Theodore Roosevelt was so impressed with the military prowess of this people, after they had whipped China and Russia, that he would not allow California, acting within her jurisdiction, to segregate Japanese and white school children. I have seen in Placer County 70 per cent of all the children in a public school Japanese, and outside the door I could see, pointed to by the teacher of those children, the Shinto temple where all the Japanese children were herded after school hours to be taught the Japanese language, ideals, traditions, and the worship of the Emperor. Shintoism is the worship of the Emperor; he is God given; and the loyalty of the people of Japan is of a religious character and can not be eradicated. The Emperor holds in loyalty all the sons of Nippon, no matter where they may go.

We have heard much of dual allegiance; it is a single allegiance in the case of the Japanese. They go through the forms of respecting American laws and customs and even seeking citizenship, but their allegiance is to the Emperor. If we became involved in war with Japan, they have a garrison of 100,000 in California and 120,000 in Hawaii Territory, where float the Stars and Stripes over 12,000 Americans. What would become of the military garrison in the Hawaiian Islands, the key of the Pacific, should Japan make an unexpected and determined move? When she moves, she gives no notice; she does not inquire if the Senate is ready to pass upon the naval bill to provide greater strength and security for this country. When she struck at Russia, she was in a state of peace with Russia, but she entered Port Arthur and there began her treacherous yet successful campaign. She could take to-morrow the Philippines and Guam and go armed to Hawaii, and we would be without adequate power to offer immediate resistance.

Only since last year, under the administration of Secretary Daniels, have we had a Pacific Fleet at all. As has been told you by others more competent, our west coast is not defended. The Pacific coast is exposed.

Japan is the German of the Pacific. German trained are her troops. German ideas have been implanted in the Japanese mind during that period—formative—when she was seeking a position in the world, and she has planned to acquire the Pacific piecemeal diplomatically, not necessarily by waging war but nevertheless effectively, if she is given her way. In evidence of this, I need but remind you that she has taken a mandate for the Marshall, Mariana, and the Caroline and other groups of islands north of the Equator, including the island of Yap, bringing her advanced line 2,000 miles nearer Hawaii, and she holds as mandatory those islands to-day. Notwithstanding the fact that the United States, through the President, has made a reservation in favor of Yap, saying it was a necessary link in cable communication, Japan will not yield. The United States had a German concession before the war for cable purposes. The United States seeks to hold that poor privilege in common with other nations, and to internationalize—not to seize, possess, own, and control, but to internationalize—that island in order that we might exercise a right which had been granted to us by Germany before the war. Japan has, however, issued her defi. "The council of the League of Nations," she says, "has given us Yap, and Yap we propose to hold." What are you going to do about it? Are you going to submit to it?

Well, there are those who say, "What is Yap worth? Why fight over Yap?" Well, what is Guam worth? What is the key of the Pacific, the Territory of Hawaii, worth? What of the nose of the camel? "Is it worth a drop of a soldier's blood?" That sounds very well. Nothing is worth a drop of a soldier's blood in times of profound peace. That is the way we talk to mothers and daughters. It is the language of pacifism; but the soldier is willing to give his blood to defend the honor of his country at any time and anywhere, in any land. And so these platitudes are vain. Blood letting will follow wrongdoing. All the mothers and all the daughters and all the old women, let us say, of both sexes, as pacifists have been described, may plead in vain to the young American soldier not to go to the front in defense of the cause of his country.

He will go, and in the late war he went, after it had been made manifest that a great power was trespassing upon our rights, with the ultimate purpose of controlling the destiny of our country. I tell you that Japan has modeled herself after the German high command, the German autocracy, and unless she is restrained, and if we show no disposition to protect rights which we are informed by our own Government are ours lawfully and legally, she will make other trespasses until she will gain the control she seeks without striking a blow, and the world will hold the great American Republic in contempt.

Japan is very much wiser than her neighbors. Do you know that the great Herbert Spencer was drawn into this discussion? When Japan organized her Government she asked Herbert Spencer, the great economist and an accepted authority, whether she should admit foreigners. Herbert Spencer said, "Emphatically, no." I will write you this letter, said he to the learned statesmen of Japan who sought his advice, to be published, however, after my death. I dare not have it published in my lifetime, because it would irritate my countrymen who have been seizing the countries of the world, wherever they were not opposed, and subjugating and destroying the native populations, and he pointed to the example of India, and he pointed to the example, as he might have, of other countries, and he deprecated infiltration by Caucasians into Asiatic countries, not for the benefit of the Asiatics alone but for the benefit of the Europeans as well, because as a biologist he knew the impossibility of these people assimilating. He said: Grant to the foreigners only bare commercial privileges. Do not permit them to own lands. Do not permit them to lease lands. Hold them at arm's length, and make no attempt at intermarriage with them, because it is biologically impossible to produce under such circumstances a race that will not be of a deteriorated character, and he instanced the case of all half-castes, the mestizos and the mulattoes and the mongrels of other countries, where, as was pointed out in certain nameless countries, the Indian and the white man and the black man, each good within his limitations, have been ruined by an attempt at amalgamation.

It has been said that God made the white man, God made the black man, but the devil made the half-caste. So it is impossible to consider the Japanese as capable of coming into our country as the nationals of other lands and assimilating with us, and the Japanese know it. They have refused foreigners all the privileges which I have described—land ownership, intermarriage, land leasing. They have granted, as they were advised by Herbert Spencer, only bare commercial privileges, and it has inured to their great advantage, because they have preserved the purity of their race, and they are in the arts and in manufactures triumphant, and as a fighting people they rank with the best.

I will read this paragraph from the letter of Herbert Spencer, and then ask, if there be no objection, that it be published in full in the RECORD, because it is not generally known. He says:

> I have, for the reasons indicated, entirely approved of the regulations which have been established in America for restraining the Chinese immigration.

You see, the Chinese immigration was an older problem than the Japanese immigration. We barred the Chinese about 1879, and the Japanese did not come along until about 1885, and then they came by way of Hawaii, and they have crept in, making but little noise; and in a land where the Chinese were barred the Japanese were permitted to come until their character was determined, and then there was this opposition upon the west coast to the Japanese as well as there had been in a previous generation to the Chinese; so Herbert Spencer says:

> I have, for the reasons indicated, entirely approved of the regulations which have been established in America for restraining Chinese immigration, and had I the power I would restrict them to the smallest possible amount. my reasons for this decision being that one of two things must happen: If the Chinese are allowed to settle extensively in America, they must either, if they remain unmixed, form a subject race standing in the position, if not of slaves, yet of a class approaching to slaves, or, if they mix, they must form a bad hybrid. In either case, supposing the immigration to be large, immense social mischief must arise, and eventually social disorganization. The same thing will happen if there should be any considerable mixture of European or American races with the Japanese.
>
> You see, therefore, that my advice is strongly conservative in all directions, and I end by saying, as I began, keep other races at arm's length as much as possible.

Japan followed that advice; and when we bar Japanese from the land, when we restrict their immigration, we are simply doing what Japan herself is doing and has successfully done during the last half century. She will not admit Koreans nor Chinese where they compete with her own people, and if we but follow Japan's example we shall be absolutely right. And how can Japan consistently object? But she does.

As I said, even Theodore Roosevelt—who had no love for the Japanese as a people, nor did he desire to see them attempt assimilation with us—was so impressed by their diplomacy and their prowess that he stopped California from regulating the schools; and then what happened? When we undertook to settle the land question Mr. Bryan came, representing the present administration, and interposed his objection, of course at the instance of the Japanese ambassador; but California did not listen at that time to the advice of Mr. Bryan and passed a statute, and subsequently, when it was found inadequate, she passed by initiative—one of the processes we may enjoy under our State constitution—a law which closed all the gaps, so we have to-day a practically perfect law. Ah, if there is anything perfect to resist the chicanery and cunning of the oriental, we have a perfect law which bars Japanese from owning or leasing the soil, also Chinese, and also Hindus, because it relates simply to those who under our Federal naturalization laws are ineligible to citizenship.

I said if there is anything that would bar an oriental it is that law; but since it was enacted this thing has happened, which is very interesting:

In order to prevent the Japanese from changing his form and incorporating himself as a corporation and thus owning land, the Japanese were also barred by the law from forming corporations for land ownership in California. By one of the war statutes, intended to facilitate the naturalization of those otherwise eligible who had enlisted for the war, the courts in the Hawaiian Islands, particularly, have admitted Japanese to citizenship because they had been in the service of the Navy and Army as stewards or waiters or mess boys, and they have actually, to the number of perhaps a thousand or more, become citizens of the United States, in the very face of the Federal law which limits citizenship to those of the white race or of the Negro race or of Negro descent; and so they have slipped cunningly under the door, using a mistaken interpretation of a war statute to become citizens.

If that were all there were to it, it might not interest California; but the Japanese, desiring to own land, have brought these so-called naturalized citizens of Japanese origin to California and used them as dummies to organize corporations, and such corporations have bought the lands. That is history. I will submit for the RECORD, without reading, documentary evidence.

Then there was another question raised quite recently, when the legislature met for the purpose of perfecting its laws with respect to orientals, and asked the advice of Mr. Lansing, then in Paris, as to whether the time was opportune. Of course, the Federal Government always says the time is not opportune. Their business is to maintain "friendly relations" at any cost, and they are seemingly quite willing at any time to sacrifice California and Oregon and Washington and Arizona in the cause of international peace. That is diplomacy. They do not want to disturb the people of the Middle West or the Atlantic seaboard by having an unseemly quarrel with Japan. So they throw California to the wolf in order to satisfy his hunger.

Mr. Lansing advised that no action be taken, and he had probably more reasons than other representatives of previous administrations, because he was negotiating there with the Japanese on the subject of racial equality. But I believed, and still believe, that if California had taken a strong position at that time he could have pointed to this rebellious State which would not heed his advice, and therefore it would have appeared to Japanese diplomatists that the Federal Government did not control the question at all where the question lay entirely within the scope of the State. But we did not pursue that course. So the California Legislature hesitated to cure the defects of the law until the initiative of last year, which was precipitated by the very refusal of the legislature to act. The people acted.

At Paris the Japanese were denied racial equality. This is a point I wish to make in order further to emphasize the necessity of a navy. At the conference in Paris the Japanese asked for racial equality. They wanted recognition by the allied nations, with whom they had fought side by side on terms of equality, of the essential equality of their nationals in the world's field; that is to say, Japan asked that her nationals be given every right and privilege enjoyed by the nationals of every other nation, and on its face it sounded very plausible to those who did not understand its deep significance.

We gladly give the Italians, the French, the Dutch, the English, the Irish, the Scotch, and the Scandinavians all certain privileges, that they may become American citizens by naturalization, and, acquiring citizenship, they may own land, and at any time they may intermarry, and enjoy all the privileges embraced in our American citizenship. If the Japanese were granted those privileges, they would then be free to come into this country, just as the nationals of other lands; they would be free to control our soil by ownership or lease or otherwise, as the nationals of other lands, free to intermarry, free to engage in every pursuit, to enter the Army, the Navy, run for office, and enjoy the elective franchise. When I show you that in California they live in colonies; that they are unassimilable; that they do not intermarry; that they have a great greed for the acquisition of land; that when once they establish themselves they destroy the white man, and are incapable of making a homogeneous American population, you will see the dangers that would flow to the State if we had conceded the principle of racial equality at that Paris conference.

Why was it not conceded? It was because Great Britain, at the instance of her overseas colonies of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and Canada, refused to concur, and the United States refused to concur. The President, we are told, was in the chair, and when the motion was put, it was carried by a majority vote of 12 to 6, when the President ruled that the motion was lost; and when the Japanese representative demurred, the President said, "Matters of large importance, under our rules, require unanimity," although but a moment before they had fixed the seat of the League of Nations at Geneva by a majority vote, to which his attention was called by the Japanese; but he said that was a matter of small importance, a mere matter of procedure.

So the ruling of the President requiring unanimity at Paris, backed by Great Britain and her colonies, saved us from having to recognize the principle of racial equality, which would have brought untold disaster upon this country. See how close we were to danger. But the Japanese representative protested the ruling and announced that he would again bring it up for action.

The island of Yap has been given by the council of the League of Nations to Japan, and we have protested that we had prior rights there; but our protest is unheeded. So these allied nations in council, being the functioning League of Nations of the world, are denying the United States her international rights. Does not that indicate that there is need for a larger police force in our front yard, when our house is threatened? Shall we refuse to carry out the naval program of 1916, which gives us superior strength over Japan, and almost equal strength with England, when there are these great questions pending, critical in character? It would be the quintessence of folly to abandon our established position. We now have a great Navy; we now have an invincible Army; and now is the time to sit down at the table and settle these questions with our truculent friend on the other side of the ocean. There is no longer any disguise. Professions in diplomatic terms of friendship mean nothing, because their acts are acts of hostility.

Therefore I believe, not wishing to delay the proceedings of the Senate to-night by unnecessary debate, that the naval appropriation bill as reported by the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs should be passed; that it would be the answer of the United States to the League of Nations, which does not stand in great favor on the other side of the Chamber; it would be the answer of the United States to Japan as to our attitude on the subject of Yap; it would be the answer of the United States to the barring of our trade from those great insular lands in the neighborhood of Guam, where we used to trade, even under German rule, freely in copra and commodities of American manufacture, and where now our merchants are denied. The open door has been the traditional policy of the United States in the Orient, and now, after a World War, which our boys won for the nations of the world, we are least in the scale of nations. Shall we lose our rights and prestige enjoyed before we entered that struggle? We are insolently told to mind our own business. Shall we remain isolated in our aloofness and abandon our trade and our security? These nations have organized and have issued their decree, and if we persist in our folly of opposing the wishes of the united nations of France, Great Britain, Italy, and Japan, functioning as a League of Nations, we will have to do what?

Either pocket our pride and suffer our loss, or assert ourselves. Nobody wants to fight if it can be avoided. That is a concession which I will make to pacifists. I am for peaceful solution where possible, but we have no peace standing if we have no war standing. There is no sane person who will willfully enter into a fight if there is any other way of solving a problem. But it looks to me that with this hostile alliance against us, with no disposition to treat or to act either in justice or in liberality, we must have an armament, and always have an armament, until the conditions of the world change and a chastened human nature becomes more conciliatory. But human nature is one of those things which can not be easily changed. A philosopher has said, "You can drive nature out with a club, but she will surely come back." The most conspicuous thing about us, as well as the meanest thing, it is said, is our human nature, and unless and until by act of Congress we can change human nature—civilizing processes may bring it about—or by act of Congress persuade the League of Nations to surrender the advantages they have seized—negotiation may accomplish it—we will have to maintain a formidable armament, in order that in a selfish and predatory world our voice may be heard.

Confident of the justice of our cause, we only seek a platform from which we may speak. How vain is the unsupported word addressed to the aggressive and ruthless foe. The Liberty on the Dome of the Capitol is an "armed Liberty."

I submit certain papers and ask that they may be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There being no objection, the matter referred to is ordered printed in the RECORD.

The matter referred to is as follows:

LETTER OF HERBERT SPENCER AGAINST ASSIMILATION OF RACES.

FAIRFIELD, PEWSEY, WILTS, August 26, 1892.

MY DEAR SIR: Your proposal to send translations of my two letters to Count Ito, the newly appointed prime minister, is quite satisfactory. I very willingly give my assent.

Respecting the further questions you ask, let me, in the first place, answer generally that the Japanese policy should, I think, be that of keeping Americans and Europeans as much as possible at arm's length. In presence of the more powerful races your position is one of chronic danger, and you should take every precaution to give as little foothold as possible to foreigners.

It seems to me that the only forms of intercourse which you may with advantage permit are those which are indispensable for the exchange of commodities—importation and exportation of physical and mental products. No further privileges should be allowed to people of other races, and especially to people of the more powerful races, than is absolutely needful for the achievement of these ends. Apparently you are proposing by revision of the treaty with the powers of Europe and America "to open the whole empire to foreigners and foreign capital." I regret this as a fatal policy. If you wish to see what is likely to happen, study the history of India. Once let one of the more powerful races gain a point d'appui and there will inevitably in course of time grow up an aggressive policy which will lead to collisions with the Japanese; these collisions will be represented as attacks by the Japanese which must be avenged, as the case may be; a portion of territory will be seized and required to be made over as a foreign settlement; and from this there will grow eventually subjugation of the entire Japanese Empire. I believe that you will have great difficulty in avoiding this fate in any case, but you will make the process easy if you allow of any privileges to foreigners beyond those which I have indicated.

In pursuance of the advice thus generally indicated I should say, in answer to your first question, that there should be not only a prohibition of foreign persons to hold property in land, but also a refusal to give them leases, and a permission only to reside as annual tenants.

To the second question I should say decidedly prohibit to foreigners the working of the mines owned or worked by Government. Here there would be obviously liable to arise grounds of difference between the Europeans or Americans who worked them and the Government, and these grounds or quarrel would be followed by invocations to the English or American Governments or other powers to send forces to insist on whatever the European workers claimed, for always the habit here and elsewhere among the civilized peoples is to believe what their agents or sellers abroad represent to them.

In the third place, in pursuance of the policy I have indicated, you ought to also keep the coasting trade in your own hands and forbid foreigners to engage in it. This coasting trade is clearly not included in the requirement I have indicated as the sole one to be recognized—a requirement to facilitate exportation and importation of commodities. The distribution of commodities brought to Japan from other places may be properly left to the Japanese themselves, and should be denied to foreigners, for the reason that again the various transactions involved would become so many doors open to quarrels and resulting aggressions.

To your remaining question respecting the intermarriage of foreigners and Japanese, which you say is "now very much agitated among our scholars and politicians," and which you say is "one of the most difficult problems," my reply is that, as rationally answered, there is no difficulty at all. It should be positively forbidden. It is not at root a question of social philosophy. It is at root a question of biology. There is abundant proof, alike furnished by the intermarriages of human races and by the interbreeding of animals, that when the varieties mingled diverge beyond a certain slight degree the result is inevitably a bad one in the long run. I have myself been in the habit of looking at the evidence bearing on this matter for many years past, and my conviction is based on numerous facts derived from numerous sources. This conviction I have within the last half hour verified, for I happen to be staying in the country with a gentleman who is well known and has had much experience respecting the interbreeding of cattle; and he has just, on inquiry, fully confirmed my belief that when, say of the different varieties of sheep, there is an interbreeding of those which are widely unlike, the result, especially in the second generation, is a bad one—there arise an incalculable mixture of traits, and what may be called a chaotic constitution. And the same thing happens among human beings—the Eurasians in India, the half-breeds in America, show this. The physiological basis of this experience appears to be that any one variety of creature in course of many generations acquires a certain constitutional adaptation to its particular form of life, and every other variety similarly acquires its own special adaptation. The consequence is that, if you mix the constitution of two widely divergent varieties which have severally become adapted to widely divergent modes of life, you get a constitution which is adapted to the mode of life of neither—a constitution which will not work properly, because it is not fitted for any set of conditions whatever. By all means, therefore, peremptorily interdict marriages of Japanese with foreigners.

I have for the reasons indicated entirely approved of the regulations which have been established in America for restraining the Chinese immigration, and had I the power I would restrict them to the smallest possible amount, my reasons for this decision being that one of two things must happen. If the Chinese are allowed to settle extensively in America they must either, if they remain unmixed, form a subject race, standing in the position, if not of slaves, yet of a class approaching to slaves; or if they mix they must form a bad hybrid. In either case, supposing the immigration to be large, immense social mischief must arise, and eventually social disorganization. The same thing will happen if there should be any considerable mixture of European or American races with the Japanese.

You see, therefore, that my advice is strongly conservative in all directions, and I end by saying as I began—keep other races at arm's length as much as possible.

I give this advice in confidence. I wish that it should not transpire publicity, at any rate during my life, for I do not desire to rouse the animosity of my fellow countrymen.

I am sincerely, yours,

HERBERT SPENCER.

P. S.—Of course, when I say I wish this advice to be in confidence, I do not interdict the communication of it to Count Ito, but rather wish that he should have the opportunity of taking it into consideration.

—

OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL,
Washington, D. C., February 1, 1921.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I beg to acknowledge your letter of December 29, 1920, which has received careful attention in this department and necessitated some investigation as to the methods of handling naturalization cases, particularly those claims for naturalization under the Army act.

I have arrived at the conclusion that the present method of representing the United States in all naturalization cases by the naturalization examiners of the Department of Labor will serve in each instance to call to the attention of the court, wherein naturalization is claimed, the views of the Commissioner of Naturalization as to the meaning of the act of May 9, 1918, and as to those eligible to naturalization thereunder. Such department having trained examiners who appear in every case, I deem it necessary to circularize the several district attorneys and impose upon them the duty of appearing in all such cases and opposing such applicants for naturalization. This department has not rendered any opinion on the construction of the act in question.

I am informed that the case of Richard Sato, who applied for naturalization under the Army act in the district of Oregon, will probably go to the circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit for a construction of his eligibility under this act, and in that way a judicial determination of the true meaning of the act will be secured, it is hoped, within the near future.

Very respectfully,

A. MITCHELL PALMER,
Attorney General.

—

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, February, 1921.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Your letter of the 1st instant, to the Commissioner of Naturalization, with reference to the naturalization of subjects of Japan under the act of May 9, 1918, has been considered by the officer named and has been called to my personal attention by him.

I note that you state that Judge Bledsoe had told you that one of the naturalization examiners requested favorable action in the case of a Japanese, and that the same thing happened in San Francisco and Honolulu. A report has this day been made of the chief naturalization examiner at San Francisco concerning this matter, and instructions have been given which will leave him in no doubt that it is the administrative view that Congress has made no provision for the naturalization of other than free white persons and persons of African nativity and descent, with the exception of the Filipinos referred to in the seventh subdivision of section 4 of the act of June 29, 1906, as amended by the act of May 9, 1918.

It is the duty of the Naturalization Service to bring all facts to the attention of the court in any case pending before it, leaving the court, in whom alone is vested the power to authoritatively decide the question of the admissibility of any alien, to determine whether or not Congress has made provision for the naturalization of such an applicant.

Instructions have been given that in view of the conflict in the decisions regarding this subject every effort should be made to have some case carried to the Supreme Court for ultimate decision.

Very truly, yours,

W. B. WILSON, Secretary.

[Excerpt from CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of Apr. 12, 1918, p. 5009.]

NATURALIZATION OF ALIENS IN MILITARY SERVICE.

"Mr. HARDWICK. From the Committee on Immigration I report back favorably with amendments the bill (H. R. 3132) which I send to the desk, and I submit a report (No. 388) thereon. I wish to make a brief statement to the Senate about the bill after the Secretary reads the title.

"The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JONES of New Mexico in the chair). The Senator from Georgia submits a report, which the Secretary will state.

"The SECRETARY. Mr. Hardwick, from the Committee on Immigration, reports favorably with amendments the bill (H. R. 3132) to amend section 2171 of the Revised Statutes of the United States relating to naturalization.

"Mr. HARDWICK. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill reported from the Committee on Immigration.

"The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

"Mr. GALLINGER. I shall not object now, but I should like to hear the Senator make his statement before the question is put.

"Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President, I was about to explain why it is necessary, in my judgment, that the Senate should proceed immediately to consider and pass this proposed legislation. We have in the first draft army of the United States 123,277 alien soldiers, some of whom undoubtedly might have claimed exemption but did not. Of these soldiers, 46,732 hold their first naturalization papers and 76,545 have no naturalization papers whatever.

"It is impossible, or at least it is unfair, to send these soldiers to the battle line in Europe until they have been naturalized and made citizens of this country, so that they will not be subjected to charges of treason against the Governments and princes of whom they were formerly subjects. The War Department is not willing to subject these men to that sort of danger. It is not fair to them and it is not just to the country. They are scattered practically through every command in the Army, or in the new draft army, and it can not be moved as it ought to be moved until these soldiers can be put in a position where this difficulty will be eliminated.

"Now, it seems to me that more important than any debate on any domestic question, more important than any dispute about labor, or more important than any bill about presidential powers over executive departments is a proposition to get the Army of the United States so that it can move to the battle line. This is the paramount reason why I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of this bill as amended by the Senate committee. It is to give the authorities of the country, the War Department, and the Navy Department full power.

"Mr. THOMPSON. Mr. President, may I ask the Senator a question?

"The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Georgia yield to the Senator from Kansas?

"Mr. HARDWICK. I do.

"Mr. THOMPSON. Are these the men who are already drafted into the service?

"Mr. HARDWICK. Yes; they are soldiers wearing the uniform already.

"Mr. THOMPSON. And already trained?

"Mr. HARDWICK. There are 123,000 of them already trained, under the flag, and wearing the uniform, who can not justly be sent over to Europe until this legislation is passed.

"Mr. THOMPSON. There ought not to be any debate on that question.

"Mr. HARDWICK. No; there will not be. Now, in order to be fair, let me state that there is more than that involved in this legislation. When the United States declared war, on April 6, 1917, of course, aliens who came from Germany—and subsequently, when we declared war against Austria-Hungary, the same thing was true with reference to that country—could no longer become naturalized in this country. They became alien enemies, so that petitions that had already been filed under the naturalization laws and were already pending in court could not be prosecuted to a successful conclusion in court. The House of Representatives, realizing the injustice of this, passed, some days ago, a bill which provided that where naturalization petitions were pending and the first papers had been taken out prior to the declaration of the war with these countries the court could allow these people to become naturalized upon proper showing of loyalty and good citizenship."

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT,
SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA,
Los Angeles, Calif., February 18, 1921.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In the Associated Press dispatches of February 10, I noticed a statement emanating from the Department of Labor purporting to quote from a letter written by you to Secretary Wilson to the effect that I "had told you that one of the naturalization examiners requested favorable action in the case of a Japanese," etc. I remember the occasion when we discussed this matter very well—coming down on the train with you from San Francisco, and my statement then made to you was not precisely as you seem to have recited it to the Secretary of Labor, or else I failed to indicate to you with precision just what I had in mind.

The circumstances were these: On March 18, 1919, a Japanese named Myamoto, who had been in the United States Navy as a steward under Admiral Fullam for a number of years, applied for citizenship. The naturalization examiner here, Mr. Frederick K. Jones, was then in receipt of a memorandum from the Deputy Commissioner of Naturalization, Mr. Crist, to the general effect that the act of May 9, 1918, providing for the naturalization of "every alien" who was serving in the Army or Navy, etc., was applicable to Japanese as well as other races. Mr. Jones, the examiner, acquiesced in the suggestion emanating from his superior and stated that in the light of the statements contained therein, he saw no reason to oppose or question the propriety of granting the application. I read the memorandum and glanced rather hastily at the act above referred to, and after adverting to the fact that the act was somewhat complicated in its phraseology, indicated that I saw no reason to question the correctness of the conclusions entertained or the attitude assumed by the department in the premises, and thereupon I proceeded to admit the Japanese to citizenship.

Thereafter, having occasion myself independently to give careful consideration to the statute, I came to the conclusion that it was not the intention of Congress to let down the bars in favor of the Japanese or any other people denied admission under the terms of section 2169 of the Revised Statutes, save Filipinos, and so expressed myself, declining thereafter to admit aliens of the proscribed category.

I did not go into all these details with you in our conversation on the train, but was endeavoring merely to indicate that my first action in the premises was induced by the affirmative attitude and representations of the Department of Labor and of the naturalization examiner here. I did not, however, intend to indicate that the local naturalization examiner had "requested favorable action in the case." The examiner in no case coming before me has ever "requested favorable action." He simply presents the application, together with the Government's attitude, whether favorable or adverse, and awaits the judgment and action of the court.

I am writing at this length merely as a matter of justice to Mr. Jones, the local examiner, and that I myself may be set right in your own mind.

I am, as ever,

Very cordially, yours,

BENJAMIN F. BLEDSOE,
Judge of the United States District Court.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, D. C., February 7, 1921.

Hon. JAMES D. PHELAN,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Replying to your letter of January 24, 1921, requesting information regarding the admission to citizenship of a Japanese person now stationed on the U. S. S. Mayflower, and whether there was a general dismissal of Japanese from the Navy immediately before or after the declaration of war with Germany, you are informed that by order of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia one Tsurusaki Shiro, steward to the President, was admitted to citizenship on February 18, 1919. He has now applied to the court for permission to change his name from Tsurusaki Shiro to Shiro Tsurusaki, claiming the latter to be correct.

You are also informed that there was no general dismissal of Japanese from the Navy immediately before or after the declaration of war, but at the present time no person of Japanese descent is being enlisted in the Navy unless he can prove United States citizenship.

Sincerely, yours, JOSEPHUS DANIELS.
Secretary of the Navy.

[Statistics prepared by the Board of Control of the State of California showing Japanese land control and birth rate.]

"RELATIVE FECUNDITY.

"As to the relative fecundity of Japanese and white women, the figures following are submitted:

Married white women in California (in age groups).

[United States census—1910.]

Age.	Women.
15 to 24 years	54,773
25 to 44 years	258,503
45 years and over	132,315
Total	445,593

"The above figures show 313,281 married white women in California in 1910 under 45 years of age, of the usual child-bearing ages.

MARRIED JAPANESE WOMEN IN CALIFORNIA.

(Special census in 1919 by Japanese Association of America.)

Northern California (married Japanese women)	8,704
Southern California (Japanese women)	6,507
Total	15,211

"The marital condition of the 6,507 Japanese women in southern California was not shown, but they were enumerated in a separate class from the children of both sexes ranging from 1 to 19 years of age. Inasmuch as these Japanese women are classified as above 19 years of age, it will be assumed, for purposes of comparison, that they are all married and of child-bearing ages. In so doing the possibility of overstating the birth rate is practically eliminated, and the results of such comparison would be favorable to the Japanese.

Births.

Race.	Births, 1910.	Births, 1919.	Total for 10 years 1910–1919.
Japanese	719	4,378	28,037
Chinese	277	432	3,822

"(b) In 1910 Japanese births represent 1 out of every 44 children born in the State. In 1919 Japanese births represent 1 out of every 13 children born in the State.

"(c) In 18 selected agricultural counties of the State the average births of Japanese have risen from 3.2 per cent of the total births in 1910 to 12.3 per cent in 1919.

"In the rural parts of Sacramento County 49.7 per cent of all births in 1919 were Japanese.

"CALIFORNIA ALIEN LAND LAW.

"[Enacted by State legislature in 1913.]

"[Chapter 113.]

"An act relating to the rights, powers, and disabilities of aliens and of certain companies, associations, and corporations with respect to property in this State, providing for escheats in certain cases, prescribing the procedure therein, and repealing all acts or parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict herewith.

"(Approved May 19, 1913.)

"The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

"SECTION 1. All aliens eligible to citizenship under the laws of the United States may acquire, possess, enjoy, transmit, and inherit real property, or any interest therein, in this State in the same manner and to the same extent as citizens of the United States, except as otherwise provided by the laws of this State.

"SEC. 2. All aliens other than those mentioned in section 1 of this act may acquire, possess, enjoy, and transfer real property, or any interest therein, in this State, in the manner and to the extent and for the purposes prescribed by any treaty now existing between the Government of the United States and the nation or country of which such alien is a citizen or subject, and not otherwise, and may in addition thereto lease lands in this State for agricultural purposes for a term not exceeding three years.

"(The above paragraph refers to the treaty of commerce and navigation of 1911 between America and Japan. See full text as part of this report, p. 115.)

"SEC. 3. Any company, association, or corporation organized under the laws of this or any other State or nation, of which a majority of the members are aliens other than those specified in section 1 of this act, or in which a majority of the issued capital stock is owned by such aliens, may acquire, possess, enjoy, and convey real property, or any interest therein, in this State in the manner and to the extent and for the purposes prescribed by any treaty now existing between the Government of the United States and the nation or country of which such members or stockholders are citizens or subjects, and not otherwise, and may in addition thereto lease lands in this State for agricultural purposes for a term not exceeding three years.

"SEC. 4. Whenever it appears to the court in any probate proceeding that by reason of the provisions of this act any heir or devisee can not take real property in this State which, but for said provisions, said heir or devisee would take as such, the court, instead of ordering a distribution of such real property to such heir or devisee shall order a sale of said real property to be made in the manner provided by law for probate sales of real property, and the proceeds of such sale shall be distributed to such heir or devisee in lieu of such real property.

"SEC. 5. Any real property hereafter acquired in fee in violation of the provisions of this act by any alien mentioned in section 2 of this act, or by any company, association, or corporation mentioned in section 3 of this act, shall escheat to, and become and remain the property of the State of California. The attorney general shall institute proceedings to have the escheat of such real property adjudged and enforced in the manner provided by section 474 of the Political Code and title 8, part 3, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Upon the entry of final judgment in such proceedings, the title to such real property shall pass to the State of California. The provisions of this section and of sections 2 and 3 of this act shall not apply to any real property hereafter acquired in the enforcement or in satisfaction of any lien now existing upon, or interest in such property, so long as such real property so acquired shall remain the property of the alien, company, association, or corporation acquiring the same in such manner.

"SEC. 6. Any leasehold or other interest in real property less than the fee, hereafter acquired in violation of the provisions of this act by any alien mentioned in section 2 of this act, or by any company, association, or corporation mentioned in section 3 of this act, shall escheat to the State of California. The attorney general shall institute proceedings to have such escheat adjudged and enforced, as provided in section 5 of this act. In such proceedings the court shall determine and adjudge the value of such leasehold, or other interest in such real property, and enter judgment for the State for the amount thereof together with costs. Thereupon the court shall order a sale of real property covered by such leasehold or other interest in the manner provided by section 1271 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Out of the proceeds arising from such sale the amount of the judgment rendered for the State shall be paid into the State treasury and the balance shall be deposited with and distributed by the court in accordance with the interest of the parties therein.

"SEC. 7. Nothing in this act shall be construed as a limitation upon the power of the State to enact laws with respect to the acquisition, holding, or disposal by aliens of real property in this State.

"SEC. 8. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

"CALIFORNIA ALIEN LAND LAW OF 1913—HOW EVADED.

"The intent of this law was to prevent aliens who are ineligible to citizenship from owning land in California. This, however, does not prevent American-born children of 'ineligible' alien parents from owning land, and such ineligible aliens soon resorted to the expedient of purchasing land in the names of their American-born children, thereby acquiring the entire control of the land thus owned, as though purchased direct by such aliens.

"Inasmuch as very few of the American-born children of such alien parents have attained legal age, it is necessary to secure the appointment of a guardian of lawful age, or a properly qualified trustee, to act for each of such minor property holders. In many instances the ineligible alien parent has applied for guardianship and has been appointed. Recently, however, superior courts of this State have denied petitions for guardianship filed by ineligible aliens as involving evasions of the land laws of the State. Consequently many of these minor children are now owning and holding land in their own names without guardian or trustee, subject, of course, to the limitations of minors as to transfer, etc., of real property. (Records of superior courts for the counties of Sutter, Los Angeles, Tulare, and Fresno.)

"For the purpose of acquiring alien control of land without the limitations imposed by guardianship or the difficulties of reconveyance by minor children the Japanese resorted to the formation of corporations. The law requires that a majority of the stock be held by American citizens. To overcome this provision 51 per cent of stock is issued to an American citizen, usually the attorney for the corporation or some employee in his office, who acts as trustee for the real owner of the stock, who may be an ineligible alien or a minor child, American born, of alien parents.

"It is a source of deep regret that there are attorneys in the State who, despite their oath to support the constitution and the laws of this State, nevertheless sell their legal talent in aiding this breach of the spirit and purpose of the alien land law.

"In all these cases the acquisition, development, operation, and control of the farms are entirely in the hands of the ineligible alien, the American trustee being almost invariably merely the holder of a naked trust without any personal investment and without participation in either the management or profits.

"WASHINGTON ALIEN LAND LAW.

"The ownership of lands by aliens, other than those who in good faith have declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, is prohibited in this State, except where acquired by inheritance, under mortgage, or in good faith in the ordinary course of justice in the collection of debts; and all conveyances of land hereafter made to any alien directly, or in trust for such alien, shall be void; provided that the provisions of this section shall not apply to lands containing valuable deposits of minerals, metal, iron, coal, or fire clay, and the necessary land for mills and machinery to be used in the development thereof and the manufacture of the products therefrom. Every corporation the majority of the capital stock of which is owned by aliens, shall be considered an alien for the purpose of this prohibition. (Constitution of Washington, art. 2, sec. 33.)

"An effort was made to amend this section to make inapplicable to the conveyance of lands within cities to resident aliens. In the election of November, 1914, the proposal was voted down by a vote of 55,080 to 212,542.

"ARIZONA ALIEN LAND LAW.

"No person, other than a citizen of the United States or who is eligible to citizenship under the existing laws of the United States, and no corporation more than 30 per cent of whose stock is owned by persons other than citizens of the United States or who have declared their intention to become such, or who are eligible to citizenship under existing laws of the United States, shall hereafter acquire any land or title thereto or interest therein, other than mineral lands, or such as may be necessary for the actual working of mines and the reduction of the product thereof; provided that no alien shall acquire title to any land or real property within this State, except as hereinafter provided; and provided further, that this chapter shall not prevent an alien from leasing any land or real property within this State for a period of not exceeding five years; and provided further, that this chapter shall not prevent the holder (whether aliens or nonresidents) of liens upon real estate or any interest therein heretofore or hereafter acquired from holding or taking a valid title to the real estate in the enforcement of such lien; nor shall it prevent any such alien from enforcing any lien or judgment for any debt or liability now existing, or which may hereafter be created, nor from becoming a purchaser at any sale made for the purpose of collecting or enforcing the collection of such debt or judgment, nor preventing widows or heirs who are aliens, or who have not declared their intention to become citizens of the United States, from holding lands by inheritance; but all lands acquired as aforesaid shall be sold within five years after the title thereto shall be perfected in such alien, and in default of such sale within such time, the title of such real estate shall revert and escheat to the State of Arizona; and any person who has, under his declaration to become a citizen, acquired the title to or the right to possession of lands in this State and who fails to complete his citizenship shall be subject to all the provisions of this chapter relating to aliens.

"The provisions of this chapter shall not be construed in any way to prevent or interfere with the ownership of mining lands or lands necessary for the working of mines and the reduction of the products thereof; nor shall the provisions of this chapter be so construed as to conflict in any manner with any rights existing under and by virtue of any treaty of the United States with any other country. (Stats. 1917, p. 57.)

"SOME COUNTRIES HAVING ALIEN LAND LAWS, WITH A DIGEST OF SAME.

"Mexico: Only Mexicans by birth or naturalization and Mexican companies have the right to acquire ownership in lands, waters, and their appurtenances, or to obtain concessions to develop mines, waters, or mineral fuels in the Republic of Mexico. The nation may grant the same right to foreigners, provided they agree before the department of foreign affairs to be considered Mexicans in respect to such property, and accordingly not to invoke the protection of their Governments in respect to the same, under penalty, in case of breach, of forfeiture to the nation of property so acquired. Within a zone of 100 kilometers from the frontiers, and of 50 kilometers from the seacoast, no foreigner shall under any conditions acquire direct ownership of lands and waters.

"Australia: The matter of land ownership is one affecting the individual State governments. In the States of New South Wales, South Australia, and Tasmania restrictions are imposed upon the tenure of lands by aliens. In Victoria and Western Australia there are no such restrictions. Following is a summary of the State laws:

"(1) New South Wales. Under the Crown lands consolidation act, 1913, an alien is not qualified to apply for an original homestead selection, original conditional purchase lease, settlement lease, original homestead lease, or original conditional purchase, unless he has resided in New South Wales for one year, and at the time of making application lodges a declaration of his intention to become naturalized within five years. If he fails to become naturalized within that period, the land is forfeited. This residential limit of 12 months does not, however, apply to applicants for homestead farms, Crown leases, suburban holdings, and leases within irrigation areas, but any alien who becomes the holder of any of these tenures must become naturalized within three years after his becoming such holder. Failure to comply with this regulation involves forfeiture of such holding, together with all improvements thereon.

"(2) Victoria. Under the supreme court act, 1915 (sec. 3), every alien friend resident in Victoria may acquire, either by grant from the Crown or otherwise, both real and personal property.

"(3) Queensland. Under the land act, 1910 (secs. 59b and 62), an alien can not apply for any land in Queensland unless he obtain a certificate that he is able to read and write from dictation words in such language as the minister for lands may direct. If he acquire a selection he must within five years of such acquisition become a naturalized subject.

"(4) South Australia. In South Australia, Asiatics are disqualified from holding perpetual leases of lands in irrigation areas under section 19 of the irrigation and reclaimed lands act, 1914.

"(5) Western Australia. In this State aliens are under no disability as regards the acquisition of the freehold of lands already alienated. Every applicant to acquire Crown lands, whether by a British subject or an alien, is subject to the approval of the minister for lands, with an appeal to the governor in council.

"(6) Tasmania. Under the aliens act, 1861 (sec. 2), aliens can not hold real estate. An alien, if the subject of a friendly State, may, however, occupy lands for any term not exceeding 21 years.

"Pacific Islands. (1) North Borneo: 'Any alien desirous of purchasing land from a native shall address his application to the collector, who, if he sees fit to sanction such purchase, shall, if the native owner consents, acquire the land on behalf of the government and shall fix the premium and quitrent at which the land shall be leased by the government to the applicant, and such new lease shall be issued under Part II or III hereof.' (Ordinances of North Borneo, 1881–1914, p. 349.)

"(2) For New Guinea, New Caledonia, the Society Islands, and other small islands in the South Pacific, statutes or ordinances are not available.

"Japan: There are three ways in which foreigners may hold land in Japan: (1) By ordinary lease, running for any convenient term and renewable at the will of the lessee. The rent of such leased property is, however, liable to a review by the courts, after a certain number of years, on the application of either party. (2) A so-called superficies title may be secured in all parts of Japan, save what may be called colonial areas, running for any number of years. Many such titles now current run for 999 years, and so far as appears they might run for 5,000. These titles give as complete control over the surface of the land as a fee simple title would do. (3) Foreigners may form joint-stock companies and hold land for the purposes indicated by their charters. Some of these charters contain provisions practically limiting membership to foreigners. They are juridical persons formed under the civil code of Japan and are regarded as just as truly Japanese legal persons as though composed solely of Japanese. Foreigners are excluded from membership in corporations subsidized by the Japanese Government.

"Aside from the three classes of holdings mentioned above, in the concessions of the old extra-territorial days, permanent leases are obtainable by purchase, from time to time. The rental on this property is fixed by the terms of the original deeds, at yen, 28 per hundred tsubo (400 square yards) per year for the business sections and considerably less for the residence sections of the concessions. In Yokohama the rental on the Bluff lots is yen, 12.00 per hundred tsubo. This rental is in lieu of all other taxes, and The Hague Tribunal has decided that this stipulation gives immunity from taxation to all buildings or other improvements on such lots.

"These permanent leases have been the subject of much controversy, but many of the lots have already passed into Japanese hands, and it is probable that this special form of ownership will ere long disappear.

"A new foreign ownership law was passed in 1910, but has never been placed in operation. By this law ownership is permitted to those foreigners who maintain a household or lodging in the country, or to those foreign juridical persons who keep an office in Japan. It compels any foreign landowner who may leave the country, and thus fail to maintain a household or lodging, to sell his property within five years, on penalty of its reversion to the national treasury. Ownership is limited to certain geographical sections.

"This law has not been placed in force, because, it is claimed, it is unsatisfactory to the Government, which desires a more liberal measure. According to press dispatches a new law is now pending before the Imperial Parliament.

"United States—Philippine Islands.—The fourth Philippine Legislature, special session of 1919, in act No. 2874, H. No. 1194, H. Con. Res. No. 37, passed an act which is now in force in the Philippine Islands, and which became a law with the sanction of the Federal Government of the United States and is very specific in all of its sections in confining ownership and leasing of land to citizens of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, except that citizens of countries whose laws grant to citizens of the Philippine Islands the right to acquire land may acquire in the Philippine Islands a parcel of agricultural land not in excess of 100 hectares. Chapter 4, section 12, reads in part as follows: 'Any citizen of the Philippine Islands or of the United States over the age of 18 years * * * may enter a homestead * * *.'

"Chapter 5, section 23, reads as follows: 'Any citizen of lawful age of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, and any corporation or association of which at least 61 per cent of the capital stock or of any interest in said capital stock belongs wholly to citizens of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, and which is organized and constituted under the laws of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of any State thereof, and authorized to transact business in the Philippine Islands, and corporate bodies organized in the Philippine Islands authorized under their charters to do so, may purchase any tract of public agricultural land disposable under this act, not to exceed 100 hectares in the case of an individual and 1,024 hectares in that of a corporation or association * * *: Provided, That citizens of countries the laws of which grant to citizens of the Philippine Islands the same right to acquire public land as to their own citizens may while such laws are in force, but not thereafter, with the express authorization of the legislature, purchase any parcel of agricultural land not in excess of 100 hectares, available under this act, upon complying with the requirements of this chapter.'

"Chapter 6, section 34, relating to leasing, reads as follows: 'Any citizen of lawful age of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, and any corporation or association of which at least 61 per cent of the capital stock or of any interest in said capital stock belongs wholly to citizens of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, and which is organized and constituted under the laws of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of any State thereof, and authorized to transact business in the Philippine Islands, may lease any tract of agricultural public land available for lease under the provisions of this act not exceeding a total of 1,024 hectares: Provided, That citizens of countries the laws of which grant to citizens of the Philippine Islands the same rights to lease public land as to their own citizens may, while such laws are in force, but not thereafter, with the express authorization of the legislature, lease any parcel of agricultural land not in excess of 1,024 hectares, available for lease in accordance with this act, * * *.'

"Chapter 7, section 41, relating to free patents of lands, reads as follows: 'Any native of the Philippine Islands * * * shall be entitled under the provisions of this chapter to a free patent * * *.'

"SEC. 120. No land originally acquired in any manner under the provisions of this act, nor any permanent improvement on such land, shall be encumbered, alienated, or transferred, except to persons, corporations, associations, or partnerships who may acquire lands of the public domain under this act; to corporations organized in the Philippine Islands authorized therefor by their charters, and upon express authorization by the Philippine Legislature, to citizens of countries the laws of which grant to citizens of the Philippine Islands the same right to acquire, hold, lease, encumber, dispose of, or alienate land, or permanent improvements thereon, or any interest therein, as to their own citizens, only in the manner and to the extent specified in such laws and while the same are in force, but not thereafter.

"SEC. 121. No land originally acquired in any manner under the provisions of the former public land act, or of any other act, ordinance, royal order, royal decree, or any other provision of law formerly in force in the Philippine Islands with regard to public lands, terrenos baldios y realengos, or lands of any other denomination that were actually or presumptively of the public domain, or by royal grant, or in any other form, nor any permanent improvement on such land, shall be encumbered, alienated, or conveyed, except to persons, corporations, or associations who may acquire land of the public domain under this act, to corporate bodies organized in the Philippine Islands whose charters may authorize them to do so, and upon express authorization by the Philippine Legislature to citizens of countries the laws of which grant to citizens of the Philippine Islands the same right to acquire, hold, lease, encumber, dispose of, or alienate land or permanent improvements thereon or any interest therein as to their own citizens, and only in the manner and to the extent specified in such laws and while the same are in force, but not thereafter: Provided, however, That this prohibition shall not be applicable to the conveyance or acquisition by reason of hereditary succession duly acknowledged and legalized by competent courts, nor to lands and improvements acquired or held for industrial or residence purposes while used for such purposes: Provided further, That in the event of the ownership of the lands and improvements mentioned in this section and in the last preceding section being transferred by judicial decree to persons, corporations, or associations not legally capacitated to acquire the same under the provisions of this act, such persons, corporations, or associations shall be obliged to alienate said lands or improvements to others so capacitated within the precise period of five years, under the penalty of such property reverting to the government in the contrary case.

"SEC. 122. Any acquisition, conveyance, alienation, transfer, or other contract made or executed in violation of any of the provisions of sections 116, 118, 119, 120, and 121 of this act shall be unlawful and null and void from its execution and shall produce the effect of annulling and canceling the grant, title, patent, or permit originally issued, recognized, or confirmed, actually or presumptively, and cause the reversion of the property and its improvements to the Government."

"HAWAII OPPOSED TO JAPANESE LAND OWNERSHIP.

"Press dispatches from Honolulu, dated April 28, 1920, read as follows:

"'Robert W. Shingle, Territorial senator and member of the legislative commission which recently returned from Washington, in an open letter to the Pacific Commercial Advertiser published here to-day declared that many Congressmen opposed opening of public lands in Hawaii to homesteading because of increasing number of Japanese in the Territory obtaining American citizenship.

"'The United States Congress is almost unanimously averse to the granting of homestead privileges on highly developed public lands in the Territory of Hawaii, because it is by no means satisfied of the complete sincerity of Americanism in the growing class citizenship in these islands,' the letter said.

"'I allude to Hawaiian-born Japanese, thousands of whom annually come into the sacred inheritance of Amercian citizenship.

"'Neither Congress nor I have any intention of calling into question the loyalty of Hawaiian-born Japanese in this Territory. However, America learned a bitter lesson of nationalization during the past five years, one which cost dear in blood and ideals.

"'The problems involved in efforts to obtain a homesteading law were based upon a desire of the Territorial legislature to provide some means for restoration of public lands to Hawaiians. Public lands have been leased and control obtained by others than Hawaiians. To secure a return of these lands, as expiration of leases, to Hawaiians, a rehabilitation bill was submitted to Congress and urged by the commission.'"

NOTE.—Since the above article was published the House of Representatives has passed a homestead law for the Hawaiian Islands, in which the privilege of acquiring a homestead is confined strictly to native Hawaiians who are descendants of the original natives of the islands.

"ALIEN LAND LAW OF JAPAN.

"Japanese law, like the alien land law of California, prohibits aliens from owning land in fee, but permits leaseholds for varying terms of years, confined to industrial and residential purposes—no agricultural lands leased.

"Legislation broadening land ownership by foreigners was attempted in 1910, following representations made by a number of foreign Governments, and was favorably acted upon by the Japanese Diet, but the law has never been promulgated, and is therefore not in force.

"A similar fate attended the more recent efforts of the Japanese Parliament in the same direction, induced apparently by a desire to overcome Mexican arguments against granting Japanese the right to own land.

"MILLIONS OF ACRES AVAILABLE IN JAPAN.

"The impression quite generally prevails in this country that the Japanese are compelled to emigrate to other countries out of sheer necessity of making a living. It is alleged that the population of Japan is increasing so rapidly that the producing lands are not capable of supporting the population. That this is an erroneous impression is evidenced by the following announcement concerning available farm lands in Japan, which was published in the Japanese American News, January 6, 1920, and dated as a dispatch from Tokyo, December 15, 1919:

"'New farm villages opened all over the country—Land untaxed for 40 years—Great inducements to farmers—Japan's big reclamation scheme—5,000,000 acres new farm land.

"'For the past 10 years the department of agriculture and commerce has been conducting an investigation of all arable lands in the different municipalities and Prefectures. The investigation, which was completed two years ago, has shown that there are 2,000,000 cho (5,000,000 acres) of farm land which can be reclaimed under the waste-land reclamation law. Work has already begun this year (1919) for the opening up of 1,500,000 cho (3,250,000 acres) for rice and vegetable fields. The Industrial Bank is to supply the necessary capital, and the scheme extends over 30 years * * *.

"'The Government is to encourage agricultural settlers by grants of aid, low rates, easy payments, and practical exemption of newly opened land from taxation for 40 years.'

"This same erroneous impression is corrected by the statements of Carl Crow, in his book entitled 'Japan and America,' issued in 1916, from page 20 of which we quote the following:

"'It is frequently asserted that every square foot of arable land in Japan is under intensive cultivation. Doubtless this is the impression one gets on coming from America, where, in some places at least, the owners still count their possessions by the section and the quarter section rather than the acre. But a closer study of the area of the country and its development reveals the fact that the present area under cultivation might be appreciably increased. Though theirs is a mountainous country, the Japanese are not mountaineers, but dwellers of the plains and valleys. There they live, contented with their narrow fields; the sides of hills and mountains which would be terraced by Chinese or Igorots remain uncultivated and unproductive. The Government authorities, after a careful survey of the entire country, have reached the conclusion that simply by reclaiming and putting under cultivation the land which is inclined at an angle of less than 15 degrees the area of arable land may be doubled.'

"In this same connection we quote from the April, 1920, issue of Outlook Magazine, the organ of the Interchurch World Movement, which published the following in an article by Mr. Young, of the Japan Chronicle, entitled 'What the World Wants to Know About Japan':

"'Japan is, of course, just becoming an industrial nation. While on the other hand the shortage of labor is becoming a serious question the growth of population is now beyond the ability of the country to feed itself. However, the claims that Japan must go elsewhere to find room for her people is sheer nonsense, for she has the whole of the Hokkaido (the north part of the main land) which is hardly populated.'"

"INITIATIVE, AMENDING CALIFORNIA ALIEN LAND LAW.

[Adopted Nov. 2, 1920.]

"PROPERTY RIGHTS AND DISABILITIES OF ALIENS IN CALIFORNIA.

[Initiative measure to be submitted directly to the electors.]

"Alien land law. Initiative act. Permits acquisition and transfer of real property by aliens eligible to citizenship, to same extent as citizens except as otherwise provided by law; permits other aliens, and companies, associations, and corporations in which they hold majority interest, to acquire and transfer real property only as prescribed by treaty, but prohibiting appointment thereof as guardians of estates of minors consisting wholly or partially of real property or shares in such corporations; provides for escheats in certain cases; requires reports of property holdings to facilitate enforcement of act; prescribes penalties and repeals conflicting acts.

"An act relating to the rights, powers, and disabilities of aliens and of certain companies, associations, and corporations with respect to property in this State, providing for escheats in certain cases, prescribing the procedure therein, requiring reports of certain property holdings to facilitate the enforcement of this act, prescribing penalties for violation of the provisions hereof, and repealing all acts or parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict herewith.

"The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

"SECTION 1. All aliens eligible to citizenship under the laws of the United States may acquire, possess, enjoy, transmit, and inherit real property, or any interest therein, in this State, in the same manner and to the same extent as citizens of the United States, except as otherwise provided by the laws of this State.

"SEC. 2. All aliens other than those mentioned in section 1 of this act may acquire, possess, enjoy, and transfer real property, or any interest therein, in this State, in the manner and to the extent and for the purpose prescribed by any treaty now existing between the Government of the United States and the nation or country of which such alien is a citizen or subject, and not otherwise.

"SEC. 3. Any company, association, or corporation organized under the laws of this or any other State or nation, of which a majority of the members are aliens other than those specified in section 1 of this act, or in which a majority of the issued capital stock is owned by such aliens, may acquire, possess, enjoy, and convey real property, or any interest therein, in this State, in the manner and to the extent and for the purposes prescribed by any treaty now existing between the Government of the United States and the nation or country of which such members or stockholders are citizens or subjects, and not otherwise. Hereafter all aliens other than those specified in section 1 hereof may become members of or acquire shares of stock in any company, association, or corporation that is or may be authorized to acquire, possess, enjoy, or convey agricultural land, in the manner and to the extent and for the purposes prescribed by any treaty now existing between the Government of the United States and the nation or country of which such alien is a citizen or subject, and not otherwise.

"SEC. 4. Hereafter no alien mentioned in section 2 hereof and no company, association, or corporation mentioned in section 3 hereof, may be appointed guardian of that portion of the estate of a minor which consists of property which such alien or such company, association, or corporation is inhibited from acquiring, possessing, enjoying, or transferring by reason of the provisions of this act. The public administrator of the proper county, or any other competent person or corporation, may be appointed guardian of the estate of a minor citizen whose parents are ineligible to appointment under the provisions of this section.

"On such notice to the guardian as the court may require, the superior court may remove the guardian of such an estate whenever it appears to the satisfaction of the court:

"(a) That the guardian has failed to file the report required by the provisions of section 5 hereof; or

"(b) That the property of the ward has not been or is not being administered with due regard to the primary interest of the ward; or

"(c) That facts exist which would make the guardian ineligible to appointment in the first instance; or

"(d) That facts establishing any other legal ground for removal exist.

"SEC. 5. (a) The term 'trustee' as used in this section means any person, company, association, or corporation that as guardian, trustee, attorney in fact or agent, or in any other capacity has the title, custody, or control of property, or some interest therein, belonging to an alien mentioned in section 2 hereof, or to the minor child of such an alien, if the property is of such a character that such alien is inhibited from acquiring, possessing, enjoying, or transferring it.

"(b) Annually on or before the 31st day of January every such trustee must file in the office of the secretary of state of California and in the office of the county clerk of each county in which any of the property is situated, a verified written report showing:

"(1) The property, real or personal, held by him for or on behalf of such an alien or minor;

"(2) A statement showing the date when each item of such property came into his possession or control;

"(3) An itemized account of all expenditures, investments, rents, issues, and profits in respect to the administration and control of such property with particular reference to holdings of corporate stock and leases, cropping contracts, and other agreements in respect to land and the handling or sale of products thereof.

"(c) Any person, company, association, or corporation that violates any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

"(d) The provisions of this section are cumulative and are not intended to change the jurisdiction or the rules of practice of courts of justice.

"SEC. 6. Whenever it appears to the court in any probate proceeding that by reason of the provisions of this act any heir or devisee can not take real property in this State or membership or shares of stock in a company, association, or corporation which, but for said provisions, said heir or devisee would take as such, the court, instead of ordering a distribution of such property to such heir or devisee, shall order a sale of said property to be made in the manner provided by law for probate sales of property and the proceeds of such sale shall be distributed to such heir or devisee in lieu of such property.

"SEC. 7. Any real property hereafter acquired in fee in violation of the provisions of this act by any alien mentioned in section 2 of this act, or by any company, association, or corporation mentioned in section 3 of this act, shall escheat to, and become and remain the property of the State of California. The attorney general or district attorney of the proper county shall institute proceedings to have the escheat of such real property adjudged and enforced in the manner provided by section 474 of the Political Code, and title 8, part 3, of the Code of Civil Procedure. Upon the entry of final judgment in such proceedings, the title to such real property shall pass to the State of California. The provisions of this section and of sections 2 and 3 of this act shall not apply to any real property hereafter acquired in the enforcement or in satisfaction of any lien now existing upon, or interest in such property, so long as such real property so acquired shall remain the property of the alien, company, association, or corporation acquiring the same in such manner. No alien, company, association, or corporation mentioned in section 2 or section 3 hereof shall hold for a longer period than two years the possession of any agricultural land acquired in the enforcement of or in satisfaction of a mortgage or other lien hereafter made or acquired in good faith to secure a debt.

"SEC. 8. Any leasehold or other interest in real property less than the fee, hereafter acquired in violation of the provisions of this act by any alien mentioned in section 2 of this act, or by any company, association, or corporation mentioned in section 3 of this act, shall escheat to the State of California. The attorney general or district attorney of the proper county shall institute proceedings to have such escheat adjudged and enforced as provided in section 7 of this act. In such proceedings the court shall determine and adjudge the value of such leasehold or other interest in such real property, and enter judgment for the State for the amount thereof, together with costs. Thereupon the court shall order a sale of the real property covered by such leasehold, or other interest, in the manner provided by section 1271 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Out of the proceeds arising from such sale, the amount of the judgment rendered for the State shall be paid into the State treasury, and the balance shall be deposited with and distributed by the court in accordance with the interest of the parties therein. Any share of stock or the interest of any member in a company, association, or corporation hereafter acquired in violation of the provisions of section 3 of this act shall escheat to the State of California. Such escheat shall be adjudged and enforced in the same manner as provided in this section for the escheat of a leasehold or other interest in real property less than the fee.

"SEC. 9. Every transfer of real property, or of an interest therein, though colorable in form, shall be void as to the State and the interest thereby conveyed or sought to be conveyed shall escheat to the State if the property interest involved is of such a character that an alien mentioned in section 2 hereof is inhibited from acquiring, possessing, enjoying, or transferring it, and if the conveyance is made with intent to prevent, evade, or avoid escheat as provided for herein.

"A prima facie presumption that the conveyance is made with such intent shall arise upon proof of any of the following groups of facts:

"(a) The taking of the property in the name of a person other than the persons mentioned in section 2 hereof if the consideration is paid or agreed or understood to be paid by an alien mentioned in section 2 hereof;

"(b) The taking of the property in the name of a company, association, or corporation, if the memberships or shares of stock therein held by aliens mentioned in section 2 hereof, together with the memberships or shares of stock held by others but paid for or agreed or understood to be paid for by such aliens, would amount to a majority of the membership or the issued capital stock of such company, association, or corporation;

"(c) The execution of a mortgage in favor of an alien mentioned in section 2 hereof if said mortgagee is given possession, control, or management of the property.

"The enumeration in this section of certain presumptions shall not be so construed as to preclude other presumptions or inferences that reasonably may be made as to the existence of intent to prevent, evade, or avoid escheat as provided for herein.

"SEC. 10. If two or more persons conspire to effect a transfer of real property, or of an interest therein, in violation of the provisions hereof, they are punishable by imprisonment in the county jail or State penitentiary not exceeding two years or by a fine not exceeding $5,000, or both.

"SEC. 11. Nothing in this act shall be construed as a limitation upon the power of the State to enact laws with respect to the acquisition, holding, or disposal by aliens of real property in this State.

"SEC. 12. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent or in conflict with the provisions hereof are hereby repealed: Provided, That—

"(a) This act shall not affect pending actions or proceedings, but the same may be prosecuted and defended with the same effect as if this act had not been adopted;

"(b) No cause of action arising under any law of this State shall be affected by reason of the adoption of this act whether an action or proceeding has been instituted thereon at the time of the taking effect of this act or not and actions may be brought upon such causes in the same manner, under the same terms and conditions, and with the same effect as if this act had not been adopted;

"(c) This act in so far as it does not add to, take from, or alter an existing law shall be construed as a continuation thereof.

"SEC. 13. The legislature may amend this act in furtherance of its purpose and to facilitate its operation.

"SEC. 14. If any section, subsection, sentence, clause, or phrase of this act is for any reason held to be unconstitutional, such decision shall not affect the validity of the remaining portions of this act. The people hereby declare that they would have passed this act, and each section, subsection, sentence, clause, and phrase thereof, irrespective of the fact than any one or more other sections, subsections, sentences, clauses, or phrases be declared unconstitutional."

CROPS.

California crop production, 1919. United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Crop Estimates.

Crop.	Value.
Corn	$4,908,312
Wheat	33,080,107
Barley	42,561,875
Oats	4,912,201
Potatoes (white)	18,288,960
Hay	75,889,000
Beans	21,322,252
Grain sorghums	6,747,242
Sugar beets	10,632,852
Rice	20,877,770
Cotton	21,011,000
Onions	2,635,000
Truck crops	11,710,000
Cantaloupes	5,587,000
Sweet potatoes	1,997,000
Apples	12,538,000
Peaches	25,901,000
Pears	8,098,000
Apricots	13,564,000
Prunes	31,344,000
Plums	2,575,200
Cherries	1,860,000
Walnuts	14,840,000
Almonds	2,998,600
Figs	2,537,500
Oranges	45,833,000
Lemons	11,359,000
Raisins	35,658,000
Grapes (wine and table)	16,485,000
Total	507,811,881

Japanese farm products—1909 and 1919.

[Figures for 1909 compiled by State bureau of labor statistics; figures for 1919 compiled by Japanese Agricultural Association of California.]

Kind of crop.	Acreage.		Value of products.
	1909	1919	1909	1919
Berries	4,587	5,949	$729,731	$3,629,400
Celery	.....	3,518	.....	1,105,400
Asparagus	.....	10,027	.....	1,804,860
Seeds and nursery	652	16,847	206,770	3,369,400
Onions	.....	9,883	.....	3,459,050
Tomatoes	.....	7,916	.....	1,068,660
Sugar beets	5,653	51,224	271,050	4,800,360
Cantaloupes	.....	13,481	.....	2,822,150
Green vegetables	33,467	44,188	2,517,160	10,997,000
Potatoes	.....	17,663	.....	5,298,900
Hops	273	1,260	46,000	743,400
Grapes	9,657	54,246	435,350	8,136,900
Beans	.....	41,500	.....	2,525,000
Fruits and nuts	23,139	46,930	1,753,210	8,457,400
Hay, grain, corn	910	43,984	28,530	2,611,100
Rice	.....	24,000	.....	3,600,000
Cotton	193	13,000	17,100	1,950,000
Miscellaneous	4,722	3,011	230,955	766,750
Unimproved	.....	18,402	.....	.....
Total	83,253	427,029	6,235,856	67,145,730

Increase from 1909 to 1919 in lands occupied by Japanese—412.9 per cent.

Increase from 1909 to 1919 in value of crops raised by Japanese—976.8 per cent.

NOTE.—In 1909 their activities were centered in 23 counties; now in 29 counties, the additional counties being Butte, Colusa, Glenn, Yuba, Merced, and Stanislaus. The only additional crops are rice, cotton, and cantaloupes, the remaining crops not specifically tabulated in 1909 being included in the groups "Green vegetables" and "Miscellaneous."

PERCENTAGE OF TOTAL OF EACH CROP DELIVERED TO CANNERIES THAT IS SUPPLIED BY JAPANESE GROWERS.

Tomatoes.

	Per cent.
Sacramento district	80
(Fully 50 per cent is operated exclusively by Japanese, while another 30 per cent is dependent on Japanese labor with whom the American owners are in partnership on a share basis. These two, taken together, make up the 80 per cent.)
Turlock district	79
Santa Clara Valley district	60
Kings County district	50
Suisun district	31

Asparagus.

Sacramento district	61

Spinach.

Sacramento district	78
Kings County district	90
Santa Clara County district	82
Modesto district	100

Other vegetables.

Sacramento district	90
Santa Clara Valley district	100

Peaches, pears, apricots, plums, cherries.

Sacramento district	7
Turlock district	6
Graton district	2
Kings County district	45
Suisun district	14
Yuba City district	9
Alameda district	8
Santa Clara Valley district	3
Modesto district	2
Contra Costa district	1

"LAND.

"The preceding statistics show 3,893,500 acres now being irrigated in California, which comprise very largely the best lands in the State. Of this total, orientals, on December 31, 1919, occupied 623,752 acres, approximately 16 per cent of the total, of which 88,944 was owned in fee or under contract of purchase and 534,808 acres was held by lease or crop contract. Japanese and Japanese corporations occupy 458,056 acres of the whole total.

"While it is not absolutely true that all lands occupied by orientals are irrigated, this is so nearly the fact that for all practical calculations the figures given for oriental holdings may be taken as irrigated lands. A few counties, notably San Luis Obispo and Solano, show orientals occupying considerably more acreage than the total number of irrigated acres given in the schedule for these counties. However, the very nature of the crops raised by the orientals necessitates irrigation.

"With this slight qualification in mind, it is interesting to note that in some of the richest counties in the State orientals occupy a total acreage ranging from 50 to 75 per cent of the total irrigated area, notably San Joaquin County, with a total of 130,000 irrigated acres, with orientals occupying 95,829 acres; Colusa County, with a total of 70,000, with orientals occupying 51,105; Placer County, with 19,000 total, orientals occupying 16,321; and Sacramento County, with 80,000 total, orientals occupying 64,860.

"It is but fair to state again that this comparison is not absolutely accurate, because the total irrigated areas given on land schedeule No. 2 are actual irrigated lands, whereas the totals of acreage occupied by orientals in each county include all acreage irrigated and unirrigated occupied by orientals. However, very little grain crops or other unirrigated crops are raised by orientals and a very small percentage of the total acreage occupied by orientals is uncultivated and without crops of any kind, the total idle acreage uncropped being about 6½ per cent of the total acreage occupied by orientals.

"Under the schedule of Japanese Farm Products the figures compiled by the State bureau of labor statistics for 1909 show the total acreage occupied by Japanese at that time to be 83,252, and the acreage shown for the year 1919 by the Japanese Agricultural Association of California is 427,029—does not include about 31,000 acres being bought under contract by Japanese-controlled corporations—an increase in the 10-year period of 412.9 per cent. The report for crop valuations for 1909 shows $6,235,856, and for the year 1919 a total of $67,145,730, a total increase in value of crops raised by Japanese during the 10-year period of 976.8 per cent. Because of the character of the crops raised by Japanese their activities are confined almost entirely to 29 counties in the State, these being the highly developed agricultural sections.

"According to the Japanese Association of America in their memorial address to the President of the United States upon his visit to the coast in 1919 'the Japanese in agriculture constitute the most important element in number as well as in other respects,' this statement having been made in reference to Japanese in California.

"Mr. Toyoji Chiba, managing director of the Japanese Agricultural Association of California, says, in his Truth of the Japanese Farming in California, that 58 per cent of the Japanese living in California are settled in agricultural production in the country.

"Should the American farmer view with alarm this rapid increase in agricultural lands occupied by orientals, with the attendant increase in total annual crop valuations?"

STATE LAND LAWS.

[California State Library Law and Legislative Reference Department. Dec. 30, 1920.]

ALIEN PROPERTY RIGHTS.

"I. Aliens have the same rights as citizens.
"Alabama (Const. 1, sec. 34).
"Arkansas (Const. 11, sec. 20).
"Colorado (Const. 11, sec. 27).
"Connecticut (resident aliens and citizens of France) (Gen. Stats., 1918, sec. 5164).
"Delaware (26 Del. 1, chap. 251, secs. 1-3).
"Florida (Const. D. of R., sec. 18).
"Georgia (friendly aliens) (Code, 1911, sec. 2172).
"Idaho (C. S., 1920, sec. 5327).
"Iowa (Const. 1, sec. 22).
"Maine (Rev. Stats., chap. 78, sec. 2).
"Maryland (Ann. Code).
"Massachusetts (R. L., 1902, p. 1267).
"Michigan (Const. xvl, sec. 9).
"Mississippi (resident aliens) (Ann. Code, sec. 2272).
"Nebraska (Const. 1, sec. 25).
"New Hampshire (Pub. Stats., 1901, p. 438).
"New Jersey (1 Comp. Stats., p. 37, sec. 1).
"New Mexico (Const. 11, sec. 22).
"New York (alien friends) (Bird, p. 7269).
"North Carolina (Rev. Stats., 1905, sec. 182).
"North Dakota (Rev. Stats., 1913, sec. 5256).
"Ohio (4 P. & A., sec. 8589).
"Oregon (L. O. L., sec. 7172).
"South Dakota (Const. vl, sec. 14).
"Tennessee (Ann. Code, 1917, sec. 365).
"Texas (resident aliens) (Comp. Stats., 1914, art. 16).
"Virginia (friendly aliens) (Code, 1919, sec. 66).
"West Virginia (Const. 11, sec. 5).
"Wisconsin (Const. 1, sec. 15).
"Wyoming (Const. 1, sec. 29).

"II. Limitations on rights of aliens to hold property.
"Arizona (Stats., 1917, p. 57). No alien or corporation with more than 30 per cent of stock owned by aliens may own land; property acquired by operation of law must be sold within five years unless owner becomes naturalized, or escheat to State; five-year leases permitted. Exception, mining lands.

"II. Limitations on rights of aliens to hold property.—Contd.

"Illinois (1 J. & A., sec. 284). Alien may hold land for six years, at which time, if he is not naturalized, property is forfeited.

"Indiana (2 Burns, sec. 3943, 3944). Alien owning over 320 acres must become naturalized within five years or property is forfeited.

"Kansas (Const., B. or R. sec. 17). Legislature has right to determine alien property rights. In absence of legislation, common-law rule holds. (Johnson v. Olson, 92, K., 821.)

"Kentucky (Stats., 1915, chap. 19, art. 3, secs. 334, 339). Aliens may hold for 25 years for business; other property acquired by operation of law may be held for 8 years.

"Minnesota (Gen. Stats., 1913, sec. 6697). Alien ownership limited to 90,000 square feet, except in cases of citizens of counties whose rights are secured by treaty. Corporation with over 20 per cent of stock owned by aliens prohibited from owning property.

"Missouri (L. Rev. Stats., 1909, secs. 750–752). Ownership permitted only in cases where right is guaranteed by treaty. Corporations with over 20 per cent of stock owned by aliens prohibited from owning property, except in restricted cases.

"Oklahoma (Const., xxii, sec. 1). Absolute prohibition; lands acquired by operation of law must be disposed of in five years.

"Pennsylvania (1 Purd., p. 300, sec. 11). Limited to 5,000 acres of property, with net annual income not exceeding $20,000.

"Washington (Const., 11, sec. 33). Aliens and corporations with majority of stock owned by aliens prohibited from owning property. Exception, mineral lands.

"III. States with no legislation on alien ownership:

"Louisiana.

"Utah.

"FISHING INDUSTRY.

"The fishing industry of the State has grown to enormous proportions, and as a source of food supply is becoming increasingly important every day. In 1916 the total catch of fish, exclusive of shellfish, was 86,490,392 pounds, while in the year 1919 the total catch had increased to 250,453,244 pounds. As to the money value of this product we quote from the report of the State fish and game commission, as follows: 'The wholesale value of the fish marketed fresh at 10 cents per pound would add $5,000,000 to the total value of fishery products (canned and dried) for the year 1919, making a total valuation of $26,417,743 for the year 1919.'

"NATURAL RESOURCES.

"It is contended that food fish is a natural resource, and in common with the other natural resources of the State is regarded as primarily and inherently belonging to the citizens of the State rather than to outsiders or aliens. The report of the State fish and game commission places the total value of the investments in fish canneries alone in California at $7,708,871 up to December 31, 1919, and in these fish canning and packing establishments there are employed 8,242 persons, of whom 1,751 are Japanese. Besides, there are about 200 Japanese employed in wholesale fresh-fish markets in California.

"The orientals, particularly the Japanese, have recognized the importance of this industry and have entered the fishing business in ever-increasing numbers, until to-day there are more Japanese fishermen operating on the coasts of California than any other nationality. On the pages following there is given the total number of commercial fishermen in California, divided into nationalities, for the fiscal years 1915–16, 1917–18, and 1918–19, as compiled by the State fish and game commission during their licensing periods. These records will show that in the 1915–16 license year there were 491 Japanese fishermen out of a total of 3,758, or approximately 13 per cent. The year 1919–20 shows 1,316 Japanese out of a total of 4,671, or 28 per cent of the total.

"From the foregoing it is noted that within a period of about four years the Japanese fishermen have increased in number until they now outnumber any other nationality, having increased about 168 per cent. They also increased from 13 per cent of the total number of fishermen to 28 per cent. Of the total number of fishermen's boats operated from the coasts of California, 355 of them are manned by Japanese and 796 are operated by all other nationalities combined, the total value of the Japanese boats being $1,397,000 and the value of all the other boats being $2,055,000.

"FINANCING JAPANESE FISHERMEN.

"As to the method of financing the Japanese fishermen, we quote from the report of Mr. E. M. Nielsen, of the San Pedro office, State fish and game commission, concerning the Japanese in southern California:

"'In most cases Japanese-owned boats are under obligation to some cannery. The cannery furnishes the Japanese with boat and equipment, turning ownership over to him but holding a mortgage on same until paid for by the Japanese. Each catch the Japanese brings in a certain per cent is taken out and credited on the mortgage of the boat. Investigations show that very few Japanese have their boats paid up in full. Japanese boats are registered with the United States customhouse as Japanese-owned boats. That shows Japanese ownership, according to the registration, but in most cases mortgages are held by some cannery.

"'Located at Fish Harbor (East San Pedro) is a Japanese boat-building plant. This firm employs 14 Japanese. They have cut into the white boat builders considerably, according to information received. Plants operated by Americans claim the Japanese underbid them because they pay their help less and do not turn out as good work. This Japanese firm is now building purse-seine boats both for white and Japanese fishermen.'

"It is clear to be seen that American canneries by financing the Japanese fisherman make possible his operations in competition with American citizens.

"VIOLATION OF FEDERAL NAVIGATION LAWS ALLEGED.

"The State fish and game commission in its report calls attention to the fact that there appear to be many violations of the Federal navigation laws. Page 18, section 9, Revised Statutes 4311, covering the Federal navigation laws, requires vessels of 20 tons or over, engaged in coastwise trade or fisheries, to be enrolled and licensed, and boats of 5 to 20 tons to be licensed only. This latter class—5 to 20 tons—includes, according to the report of the State fish and game commission, 'practically all of the fishing boats at San Pedro and San Diego,' which the commission states are between 5 and 20 tons. The Federal navigation laws require these vessels to be licensed, and the master of the vessel must swear that he is a citizen of the United States, as indicated by the following quotation from the United States Revised Statutes:

"'The master of a licensed vessel shall swear he is a citizen of the United States, and if the vessel is less than 20 tons burden "the husband or managing owner shall swear that she is wholly the property of citizens of the United States." (P. 43, sec. 50, R. S. 4320.) If a licensed vessel is transferred in whole or in part to any person who is not a citizen of the United States, the vessel with her equipment and cargo shall be forfeited.' (P. 260, sec. 281, R. S. 4377.)

"If all of the Japanese fishermen's boats are manned and mastered entirely by Japanese, regardless of whether native-born citizens or not, it seems apparent that in many instances these laws are being violated. Press reports of April 14, 1920, contain the statement that the United States Attorney General has instructed the United States district attorney for the southern district of California to proceed in strict enforcement of these laws, and to prosecute vigorously any violations. It is stated in the same dispatches that an investigation is being made of this matter."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Maryland [Mr. FRANCE] to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE].

The amendment to the amendment was rejected.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by W. H. Overhue, its assistant enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

S. 4554. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to create a Federal power commission; to provide for the improvement of navigation; the development of water power; the use of the public lands in relation thereto; and to repeal section 18 of the river and harbor appropriation act, approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes," approved June 10, 1920;

S. 4710. An act to authorize the Commissioner of the General Land Office to dispose of certain trust funds in his possession; and

S. 5023. An act to provide for the closing of Cedar Road between Quincy Street and Shepherd Street NW., in the District of Columbia.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12045) to provide for the conveyance of lots on the low grounds of Washington, D. C.

The message further announced that the House had passed with an amendment the bill (S. 4039) to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes," in which the concurrence of the Senate was requested.

LEGISLATIVE, ETC., APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. WARREN. I wish to bring before the Senate at this time the matter of the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the one remaining item in dispute, which, if disposed of, will pass one of the large appropriation bills, namely, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Does the Senator from Wyoming expect to ask for the consideration of the matter.

Mr. WARREN. I had expected to do that, and I did not anticipate that it would take any considerable length of time to dispose of it. As the Senator knows, it is a rather important matter to conclude.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I hope the Senator will not ask to interrupt the consideration of the pending bill for any length of time.

Mr. WARREN. There is only one item in disagreement, and I hardly think it will take very long to dispose of it.

Mr. KING. Let me inquire of the Senator from Wyoming whether that item is of such importance as to require the presence of Senators? If so, I shall ask for a quorum.

Mr. WARREN. That must rest with the Senator. The item in disagreement is amendment No. 113, which is the amendment providing for the so-called bonus.

Mr. KING. I do not care enough about that to call for a quorum.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I ask that the pending bill be temporarily laid aside for the purpose indicated by the Senator from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, that will be done. The Chair hears no objection.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, as there is but one item still in disagreement, the only report I have to make is to move that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the House amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Wyoming that the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate numbered 113, and agree to the amendment of the House.

Mr. FRANCE. I have been informed that there seems to be some misunderstanding on the part of certain Members of the House in reference to the conference report, they having adopted it without an understanding that they were receding from the Senate amendment.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, the RECORD itself shows that the House voted on this question knowing every angle of it and took action on it by an aye-and-no vote, which developed a majority of 98 or 99 against the Senate amendment. Furthermore, when it went back to-day they had a very full attendance because of the Wickersham election case; the matter was brought up, and there was a very large majority for the House proposition, probably not a dozen votes being cast against it.

Mr. FRANCE. There seems to be a misunderstanding on the part of some concerning it.

Mr. WARREN. A misunderstanding is easy on the part of some man who might not have been attending to his duty, but the fact is as I have stated to the Senator.

Mr. FRANCE. I am sure of that.

Mr. WARREN. I have merely stated the facts as they are.

Mr. BORAH. Is the effect of this report to abandon the bonus proposition?

Mr. WARREN. It abandons nothing except the contention of the Senate that the employees of the Woman's Bureau should have the bonus. The House was not willing to include them in the provision, as the employees of that bureau are paid from a lump sum. There is also involved the question of whether per diem employees, such as those who are working in the navy yard and whose wages are fixed by wage boards according to agreement to correspond to the wages paid to similar class of labor in private employment, should receive the bonus in addition to their regular wages.

Mr. BORAH. At any rate, I suppose it is the best that could be done?

Mr. WARREN. I will say that the matter has received all the attention that our subcommittee could give it. We have gone to the last ditch, and the question now is whether we will pass the bill or not.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Wyoming whether a yea-and-nay vote was had in the House on this amendment?

Mr. WARREN. A yea-and-nay vote on this matter was shown in the RECORD of two days ago. As to the vote to-day, nobody asked for it, because it was so nearly unanimous, I assume, that nobody cared to call for the yeas and nays.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Was not the yea-and-nay vote that appeared in the RECORD——

Mr. WARREN. The yea-and-nay vote showed some 98 or 99 majority.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. Permit me to finish my question, please. Was not that yea-and-nay vote upon some subsidiary matter and not upon this direct issue?

Mr. WARREN. It was on this direct matter.

Mr. WALSH of Massachusetts. My information is not in accord with what has been stated; I suppose, however, it is useless to discuss this matter any further, but I want to have my position clearly understood, and I want to make one final protest and the RECORD to show just what is happening here; and I am going to insert in the RECORD, with the permission of the Senate, a letter from a member of the Naval Wage Board who clearly and emphatically sets forth the fact that the failure of the Congress to include naval employees in the bonus this year amounts to a reduction in their wages. So far as I am informed, I want it known that this vote amounts to a reduction in the wages of the naval employees, the arsenal employees, and other employees, and this not only upon the word of the Secretary of the Navy but upon the word also of a member of the Naval Wage Board that adjusted the wages of some of these employees.

I ask that this letter may go in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, leave will be granted. The Chair hears no objection.

The letter is as follows:

THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF THE NAVY,
Washington, March 1, 1921.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I am very glad to give you such information as lies in my power in reply to your letter. I would like, before answering specifically your questions, to clear up what seems to be a general misunderstanding as to the effect of the new adjustment of wages made by the Secretary of the Navy in accordance with the recommendations of the Navy Wage Board, of which I was a member. The situation briefly was this:

The Navy Department, jointly with the Shipping Board, had entered into a definite written agreement at the beginning of the war with the representatives of the employees in navy yards and private shipyards, by which an adjustment of wages was to be undertaken by a special board, which consisted of a representative of the Federation of Labor, a representative for the two departments to the agreement, and a representative of the public, appointed by the President. The two Government departments agreed to this board, which was officially sanctioned, and which established rates of wages as nearly as possible conforming to the current rate of wages for such work existing throughout the United States at the time.

This is the real story of the inception of the Shipbuilding Labor Adjustment Board—the so-called Macy board—organized as a war measure to prevent turnover of labor and extortionate wages and high cost of construction of our war-built shipping.

Furthermore, it was definitely and formally agreed that there should be later adjustments at six months intervals based upon any difference in the cost of living as officially determined by the Statistical Bureau of the Department of Labor—that is, if the cost of living was found by this bureau to have increased, the rates of wages paid by or for the Navy and Shipping Board would be automatically increased proportionately; if decreased, wages would doubtless have been decreased as well.

To this award the Shipping Board and the Navy formally committed themselves. We were thus bound during the war to make three adjustments, each one of which would be more or less automatic, depending upon the figures given us by the Department of Labor Statistical Bureau as to the cost of living. As could not be foreseen, however, there were at the time the first adjustment came due temporary and fictitious increases in the cost of living, which, presumably, would only exist for a short time. To make a six months' adjustment on such data seemed to risk an excessive wage scale in the event the situation changed in a brief time.

The matter was taken up with the representatives of the employees of the yards, and it was agreed to defer any adjustment under the abnormal situation, although it was obvious that such adjustment would have been favorable to the employees of the yards. The same procedure was adopted when the other two periods arrived. Wages, in spite of the increased cost of living, were therefore maintained as of the original award for a period of over one year and a half. After this lapse of time it was felt that we could in justice no longer assume that the cost of living had not become more or less stabilized, and the necessity of adjustment was admitted by the Navy Department, and the recent Navy Wage Board was convened.

While the signing of the armistice resulted in the abolition of the board which originally fixed these wages, and while perhaps technically the department could have avoided using the cost of living in this last adjustment, the good faith of the department required that adjustment should be made under the terms of the agreement entered into, as, having postponed every adjustment of this kind, and to have taken advantage then of the dissolution of the board in making the postponed adjustment would have shown extremely bad faith. The cost of living was therefore taken as the basis for the adjustment rather than the rates of labor outside for similar work, with a statement that this was the last adjustment that should be made on that basis.

What I would like to point out is that had the men been unwilling to waive their undoubted right to the three adjustments provided by the original signed agreement, taking the official cost of living as secured from the Department of Labor at that date, which would have been the figures we would have been obliged to use, the increased expense to the Government for wages would have amounted to $11,641,303 additional. These figures are beyond dispute as the figures of living costs which would have been presented by the Labor Department at the various adjustment periods were taken from official records and effect of changes consequently involved were computed by the statistical experts of the Navy Department.

Having thus made clear that there was a great saving in adopting this policy, I would be more than glad to specifically answer your questions.

The wage board, having finally determined to make its adjustment on the basis of the original agreement and entirely upon the cost of living, proceeded to apply the figures as to such cost of living and the existing rate of wages.

In applying the justified percentage of increase based on cost of living, the board took into consideration that subsequent to the original award under which the men had worked during the war. Congress, in the form of a bonus, had increased the wages of certain classes of employees to the extent of $240 per annum, and that in making such increase had inserted the following clause in the law:

"Provided further, That the increased compensation provided in this section to employees whose pay is adjusted from time to time through wage boards or similar authority shall be taken into consideration by such wage boards or similar authority in adjusting the pay of such employees."

It seemed clear to the board that it must consider in making any increases that an increase of $240 a year in these cases had already been made, but must be considered a part of the total increase to be awarded by the board; and in naming a further amount to be awarded them, the $240 should be deducted from the figures arrived at. I think this will make clear that the $240 was considered as part of the justified increase awarded by this board.

The answer to your next question naturally follows. The effect of taking away the bonus is to reduce the wages of the employees by the amount of the bonus taken away from the sum ascertained by the wage board to be a proper current wage.

I would like to call attention to another situation which will arise when the bonus is taken away. There were some cases entitled to an increase, based on the cost of living, where the bonus did not apply. These men were undoubtedly entitled to the full amount of the increase found fair, and therefore have been awarded a greater increase than the others by an amount equivalent to the $240 bonus (which bonus they did not receive). If the bonus is taken away from those now entitled to it, it will leave the other employees receiving that much more than the men who came under the bonus provisions. In other words, the difference between the highest paid men and the regular mechanic will be increased by the amount of the bonus that you take from the mechanic. Of course, this is not a proper nor a fair method of reducing wages, as it does not equally apply to all employes, but only to those receiving the lowest wage.

In regards to the effect in any one trade of taking off the bonus can be best answered by the general statement that the removal of the bonus will reduce the wages, as found justified under the circumstances by the Wage Board, by an amount of $240 a year for all employees now entitled to it.

For confirmation of statements that I have made you in this letter I invite your attention to a statement made by Assistant Secretary Woodbury, which may be found on page 888 of the hearings before the subcommittee of House Committee on Appropriations, third session, Sixty-sixth Congress, on the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill relating to the Navy Department, and particularly to the paragraph in this statement on page 890, which reads as follows in quoting the findings of the Wage Board:

"The board finds that the cost of living has increased since the period of the last wage adjustment 5 per cent more than the partial provision therefor provided by the congressional bonus."

Also to the paragraph on page 891:

"The readjustment in wages recommended by this board took full account of the congressional bonus, and as has previously been reported to you in the case of machinists, this bonus no longer can be considered entirely as a gratuity, as it has become an essential part of the wage necessarily granted by the Navy to fulfill its pledge to labor to readjust wages in accordance with the change in the cost of living."

I trust this letter fully answers your questions.

Yours, very truly,

LOUIS MCHENRY HOWE,
Civilian Member Navy Wage Board.

Hon. DAVID I. WALSH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. President, before the question is put, I desire to say, following what the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. WALSH] has stated, that the men employed in the navy yards, naval stations, and arsenals of the United States will on July 1 receive a reduction in pay of $240 annually because of the contemplated action by this motion. Whether or not the Congress of the United States wishes to go on record as reducing the pay of its mechanics and laborers is the question involved in the vote we are about to take. I propose to vote against concurring in the House amendment, because I am not willing that this Congress shall reduce the pay of its workingmen without more complete and definite information on the subject.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming yield to me for a moment?

Mr. WARREN. I yield.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand the proposition that is now before the Senate, the committee has made a full and complete report except on one item.

Mr. WARREN. And we are reporting on that. This is a final report.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And that item is the bonus to the naval employees?

Mr. WARREN. While it does not read that way, that is the fact of the matter; not that it affects them exactly, as my friend from New York has stated, however.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. As I understand the proposition, the Senate has twice insisted on the item; it has gone to the House, and the House has twice refused it?

Mr. WARREN. It has.

Mr. SMOOT. Absolutely, overwhelmingly.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to say that I have supported this item both times when it was before the Senate; but we have only a few hours left of this Congress, and although we may be earnestly in favor of an item and believe in the justice of it, when you come to passing the bills that must run the Government there must be a limitation as to how far you can go; and I feel now that the Senate on this item, a minor item in the bill, has pressed its point to the extreme limit. If it could be accomplished, I should be glad to see it accomplished; but, as the House of Representatives has refused to yield, I feel that the bill should become a law, and I shall therefore vote to yield in the matter.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Mr. President, I desire to ask the Senator in charge of the bill, if this item fails to become a law, if this provision in the bill is stricken out, what effect will it have upon the wages of the employees in the navy yards, as compared to other Government employees who get this bonus, as to the comparative amount that they get?

Mr. WARREN. The wage board fix the entire wages of these per diem men, and they will get their wages, which are based upon what the same line of service receives in trades of similar nature, so that they get the highest wages that are allowed for that class of work.

This difference of opinion arises out of overindulgence and generosity on the part of the Senate and as recommended to it by the committee, and I must say that it is a case of ingratitude with which I do not feel very well satisfied. At the beginning it was represented to us that when these various wage boards were in session they had not kept up with the rising wages, and that where the men had demanded perhaps a 15 or 20 per cent advance they had been accorded only a 10 or 15 per cent advance, and the statement was then made by a representative of those men that we ought to allow the bonus for one year to make up for this seeming inattention, or, as they felt, injustice upon the part of the wage boards. Now, that one-year bonus they have, and it ends on the 1st day of July, and it was so understood perfectly.

There is no reason to expect that the wage boards are undertaking to do injustice to these men. There is nothing that would indicate it. They hire the men, and the men accept their wages; but the point seems to be to work the wage board for what they are worth and then come to Congress, and upon misrepresentation—which, I am sorry to say, seems to have influenced my friend from New York—they undertake to have us pay an additional bonus of $240, which would carry them $240 a year above other employees of the Government. That is in the RECORD in the statement of the Assistant Secretary of War.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Do I understand the Senator to say that in each class of employment in the navy yards the employees receive an amount similar to that paid for the same kind of work in private life?

Mr. WARREN. They receive, according to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, more, and have been receiving more.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I want to get at this: There must be, according to the statement of the Senator, then, a standard by which the wage board is governed, and it is not just a question of hiring these laborers at what they can get them at.

Mr. WARREN. Let me submit for the RECORD a quotation from the evidence of the Secretary of the Navy before the Appropriations Committee of the House—Mr. Woodbury—as follows:

HIGH WAGE SCALE OF THE NAVAL ESTABLISHMENT.

Mr. WOOD. Mr. Woodbury, I want to call your attention to a certain position taken by the Secretary on September 4, 1920, in a communication to all the chiefs of bureaus. Section 1 reads as follows:

"The labor wage adjustment board appointed to consider the question of a readjustment in the wages for employees under the Naval Establishment finds that the existing wage scale for the Naval Establishment is higher, the $240 per annum congressional bonus considered, than the wage scale of any other industry as a whole in the United States of which it has information. The present wage scale of the shipbuilding industry is lower than that of the railroad industry. The difference between the navy-yard scale and the shipbuilding industry is practically the congressional bonus of $240 per annum, which was granted to all employees under the Naval Establishment on July 1, 1920, who are receiving less than $2,740 per annum."

Now, that is what has caused all this trouble, and this statement you have submitted does not cover that.

Mr. CURTIS. That statement is the entire history, and covers that point.

Mr. WARREN. There is, as I understand, an arrangement made between the employees and their employers that their wages are from time to time adjusted by this wage board.

Mr. SMOOT. They are adjusted, I will say to the Senator, by law, and the wage board gives them whatever are the rates prevailing outside, just as the Senator says. Whatever the outside industries are paying for similar work the wage board pays these men.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. Do I understand, by "similar wages outside," that the Senator means that they are paid for like work in the same community?

Mr. WARREN. Oh, now, I know the Senator does not want to heckle me; I do not care to go on with the discussion if it can be avoided, because of the pressure of the Navy appropriation bill now before the Senate.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. No; I am seeking information.

Mr. WARREN. My information is that which I have taken pains to ascertain during the time this matter has been under discussion, and before that time.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I want the Senator to understand that I have received some communications in reference to this matter.

Mr. WARREN. Undoubtedly.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. And I want to vote intelligently on it. I have not gone into the matter. I thought that the employees of the navy yards would come under the bonus, just as the employees here in Washington did, and I wanted to know why they were denied the bonus while the employees of the Government here were given one.

Mr. WARREN. The employees of the Government employed in the same way do not receive the bonus. Other employees do not. We have various lump sums as to this bill and the others in which the wages are made by common understanding or by some wage board, and those are especially excepted from receiving these bonuses, which are the only additions that have been made to various employees—those of class 1, class 2, class 3, class 4, and so forth, and the other statutory places in our Government—and they are the only increases that that line of employment have received during the entire period of the war.

Mr. SMOOT. Last year was the first year that the bonus was given navy yard employees, and last year it was given for the very reason that the Senator from Wyoming has stated, with an absolute understanding and agreement that it would not be asked for this year.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I should like to ask one other question, so that the RECORD may show it. How do the wages received by the employees in the navy yards compare with the wages received, plus the bonus of those employed by the Government here?

Mr. WARREN. As I have shown, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy, who has this particular matter in charge, testified before the committee of the House at considerable length that they were receiving at least $240 per year more than the same class of mechanics were receiving in any other line of industry.

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. And this other class of mechanics got the bonus?

Mr. WARREN. They got the bonus this one year, as I say, to make up what was a fancied or real injustice to these men before.

Mr. WOLCOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator from Wyoming please repeat briefly what he stated with respect to the bonus allowed the employees in the Women's Bureau? I did not exactly understand how that matter had been disposed of.

Mr. WARREN. So far as the Women's Bureau is concerned, last year, if the Senator will remember, was the first year of the formation of that bureau, and we provided only $8,500 for it, $5,000 of which went to one woman who was in charge, and $3,500 to another as secretary. This year we appropriate in a lump sum $75,000 for that service, and out of that they make their own salaries, with certain maximums, which are that none of the employees shall receive more than $1,800, except those specified, and then they except the $5,000 and the $3,500 and the $2,000, and so forth, so that they are provided for in that way.

Mr. WOLCOTT. What was done with the bonus in the Children's Bureau?

Mr. SMOOT. That is the same as it is now. That is all right.

Mr. WOLCOTT. That is left undisturbed by the report?

Mr. WARREN. That does not appear at all, and it has not been disturbed in this legislation.

Mr. SMOOT. They are appropriated at statutory rates.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion.

The motion was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is passed.

MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair lays before the Senate a concurrent resolution from the House of Representatives, which will be read.

The concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 77) was read, as follows:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in the enrollment of the bill (H. R. 10074) entitled "An act to enlarge the jurisdiction of the municipal court of the District of Columbia, and to regulate appeals from the judgments of said court, and for other purposes," the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to incorporate the following amendment:

On page 9, line 1 after the word "and" strike out the following: "(fuel,' approved August 10, 1917.)" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "fuel,' approved August 10, 1917, and to regulate rents in the District of Columbia."

Mr. KELLOGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the concurrent resolution may be considered and agreed to. It is simply for the purpose of correcting the enrollment of a bill where a mistake was made in reciting the title of another act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the House concurrent resolution which has just been read. Is there objection?

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. GRONNA. I submit a conference report on the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and I ask that it may be read and considered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota presents a conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill, which is in order and which the Secretary will read.

The reading clerk read the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the conference report. Is there objection?

Mr. JONES of Washington. Mr. President, is it a full agreement?

Mr. GRONNA. It is a full agreement.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Did the Senate conferees recede on the seed provision?

Mr. GRONNA. I will say to the Senator from Washington that the Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON], who is a member of the conference committee, has not signed the conference report.

Mr. JONES of Washington. But the majority of the Senate conferees receded?

Mr. GRONNA. A majority of the Senate conferees receded from the amendment of the Senate striking out the provision.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I ask my colleague if he is willing for this conference report to come up for consideration? In view of the fact that the seed amendment was receded from by the Senate conferees, it is likely to take quite a bit of discussion.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I can not yield for that purpose. I had no objection to the presentation of the report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator now is asking for present consideration.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I object to that.

Mr. GRONNA. Then I ask leave to withdraw the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, leave will be granted.

Mr. KENYON. Does the Senator think it will take much time to dispose of the report? I want to discuss the seed proposition a moment or two; it is a matter of such tremendous importance to the people that they get the fake Government seeds.

Mr. GRONNA. I do not believe it will take very much time. I do not know of very many Senators who want to discuss the provision for the purchase and distribution of valuable seeds. I will say to the Senator that very reluctantly the Senate conferees agreed to recede, but the House has on two occasions by a record vote—and I might say the last time by an overwhelming vote—insisted that the so-called free-seed provision shall stay in the bill. So far as a majority of the Senate conferees are concerned, we did not feel that we wanted to defeat this legislation just because of that one item. There are only two items in dispute—the purchase and distribution of valuable seeds and the seed-grain proposition. I hope the Senator from Washington will let us go on at least for a few minutes with the conference report. I am very anxious to have it disposed of.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I know the Senator was opposed to the inclusion of that item in the bill. I appreciate the situation that confronted the conferees. I feel this way about it: This seed provision means an expenditure of five hundred thousand to a million dollars altogether.

Mr. GRONNA. Three hundred and fifty thousand dollars for the seeds and whatever the administrative work would cost.

Mr. JONES of Washington. That is what I mean. It will cost the Government from five hundred thousand to a million dollars, and I think we could well afford to save that amount by putting off the passage of the bill for about a month, because in the next Congress I am satisfied that the seed provision will go out and stay out. If we can save from five hundred thousand to a million dollars by postponing the passage of the bill for a month, I think we would be doing a mighty good service to the country.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. President, I have just been listening to what the Senator from Washington has said, and it carried me back to the days when he and I served in the House together. He is now predicting that if we defeat a great supply bill, and cut out the seed item, the House of Representatives will change its mind next April and change the complexion of the bill in the matter of seeds. I ask the Senator from Washington if, in the long years we served over there together, he ever heard of anything like that happening.

Mr. JONES of Washington. Yes; I think so.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to know the incident.

Mr. JONES of Washington. I do not believe we had a condition just like the one now since the Senator and I served there together. The House has been getting a little more against the free-seed distribution. I noticed, when the bill was up a short time ago, the House cut out the provision on one vote, but a short time after it was reinserted. But the next House will have 169 Republican majority, and that 169 majority is not going to retain seeds in the bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. They will all want seeds.

Mr. POINDEXTER. It is evident that this seed question is a very fertile subject of debate and will probably occupy the entire night. I regret very much to object, but I ask the Senator from North Dakota to withhold his application and let us proceed for a while this evening with the naval appropriation bill. I understand the Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON] desires to speak on the conference report.

Mr. KENYON. Does not the Senator from Washington think that the problem of getting these little seeds and these little packages to the people of the country is more important than any question of a navy?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Evidently that is the idea which underlies the whole thing. I ask for the regular order.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. President, surely the Senator from Washington [Mr. POINDEXTER] is not trying to take from the people the garden and field seed now being sent to them by the Government?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I have asked leave to withdraw the conference report.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota asks leave to withdraw the conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill, and, without objection, leave is granted.

ASSISTANT CLERK TO COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LANDS.

Mr. SMOOT submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 468), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Public Lands be, and it is hereby, authorized to employ an assistant clerk during the Sixty-seventh Congress at the rate of $2,000 per annum, to be paid out of the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by W. H. Overhue, its assistant enrolling clerk, announced that the House had passed the following bills:

S. 4826. An act to amend section 5 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American National Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905;

S. 5000. An act directing the Mississippi River Commission to make an examination and survey of the Atchafalaya, Red, and Black Rivers, and to report plan for protection of their basins from flood waters of the Mississippi River; and

S. 5032. An act for the construction of a bridge across Rock River at or near Shirland Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis.

The message also announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11572) for the relief of the John E. Moore Co.

The message further announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12634) for the relief of Wilhelm Alexanderson.

The message also announced that the House agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 382) declaring that certain acts of Congress, joint resolutions, and proclamations shall be construed as if the war had ended and the present or existing emergency expired.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills:

H. R. 8067. An act to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia; to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia; and for other purposes;

H. R. 11572. An act for the relief of the John E. Moore Co.;

H. R. 12045. An act to provide for the conveyance of lots on the low grounds of Washington, D. C.;

H. R. 12634. An act for the relief of Wilhelm Alexanderson; and

H. R. 16100. An act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, and for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

NAVAL APPROPRIATIONS.

The Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 15975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator from Montana desires to address the Senate, I presume, upon an amendment which he has offered or proposes to offer. I would like to ask the Senator from New Jersey, in order to simplify the debate and to make progress as rapidly as we can, if he is not willing to modify his amendment so that it will read as it read when he first offered it, by striking out Italy and France?

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I am entirely ready to modify the amendment I offered, which we are now considering through unanimous consent, by striking out the words "France" and "Italy."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey modifies his amendment by striking out the words "France" and "Italy."

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I was absent from the Chamber when the particular matter under discussion assumed a status which entitled it to consideration. I ask the Chair what the question now before the Senate is?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is proceeding by unanimous consent, heretofore agreed to, to consider the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE].

Mr. WALSH of Montana. May the amendment of the Senator be read?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Secretary will report the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey now under consideration.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] has offered the following amendment:

The President is authorized and requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to invite the Governments of Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, France, Italy, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which conclusion is to be reported to their respective Governments for their approval.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, I offer the following amendment to the amendment just read.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana offers an amendment, which the Secretary will state.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, may I inquire whether the proposal of the Senator from New Jersey is offered as a substitute for that of the Senator from Idaho, or is it entirely independent of that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey is, in substance, the amendment printed at the instance of the Senator from Idaho, and which he announced it was his intention to offer. The Senator from New Jersey offered the pending amendment. The Secretary will now state the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana to the pending amendment.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The Senator from Montana proposes to add, at the end of the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey, the following words:

The President is further requested to express to the Council of the League of Nations the earnest desire of the Government of the United States to cooperate with the commission by the said council appointed charged with the formulation of plans looking to a general reduction of armaments, for submission to the several Governments for their consideration and action, and that he be, and he hereby is, further requested promptly to designate with due authority representatives to sit with such commission in a consultative capacity pursuant to the invitation heretofore extended by the said council to the Government of the United States.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, it will be observed by those who have followed the discussion of the subject to which it relates that the amendment now offered by me is in substance the same as the resolution introduced by me on the 11th day of December last, four days before a resolution dealing with the same subject was offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] in substance, as it was reported from the Committee on Foreign Relations, like the amendment now offered by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE].

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. EDGE. I am not prepared to accept the addition offered by the Senator from Montana. I feel that it would greatly complicate an earnest desire on the part of many Senators to really obtain action.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. It had not occurred to me to ask the Senator to make my amendment part of his own.

Mr. EDGE. If the Senator desires of course to discuss his amendment, I have nothing further to say at this time.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I appreciate, as has been expressed here, that the League of Nations is not in very high favor upon the other side of the Chamber, and if any of the Members should be indisposed to vote in favor of a conference on general disarmament assembled on its initiative and should therefore vote against the amendment which I have tendered, I shall offer such another opportunity, should it be rejected, by tendering an equivalent of the following resolution reported favorably by the House Committee on Foreign Affairs some 10 days ago, namely:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered at his discretion to invite the Governments of all nations to send accredited delegates to an international convention to be held in the United States to consider ways and means of bringing about joint disarmament.

I desire to submit some observations on the general subject of the several resolutions.

I am sure it will be wholly unnecessary to address to the United States Senate, as it ought to be to any audience in America, any argument on the desirability of a substantial reduction of armaments and of an agreement among the leading nations at least to that end. We are told, with reasonable accuracy, I dare say, that the countries ranked as civilized are spending $8,000,000,000 annually on their military and naval establishments and are maintaining armies aggregating 2,000,000 men. If the one-half that stupendous sum were saved—and more would be were the forces maintained in anticipation of international war disbanded, as urged by Gen. Bliss—there were no need to call upon the charity of our generous people to save three and a half million children in the war-torn areas of Europe and Asia from starvation. If the one-half that sum were devoted to the rehabilitation of industry and business ruined by the war, there would be no economic crisis to tax the ingenuity of statesmen or the talents of financiers to ward off world-wide commercial paralysis, unemployment, and want. We have been counseling Europe to go to work. If that is the appropriate remedy for her ills, she could recover fast by releasing 1,000,000 men now under arms without any occasion whatever, except for aggressive warfare or to meet aggressive warfare on the part of some other nation similarly armed. France, with a population of 40,000,000, is now maintaining an army of 800,000 men, the while she is staggering under a national debt of over $40,000,000,000; while our country, with a population of nearly 110,000,000, is restive under the burden of supporting its land forces, now numbering less than one-third that number—238,000 men, to be exact.

You were reminded by the public press some months ago that 93 per cent of the enormous sum wrung from the American people as Federal taxes for the year ending June 30, 1920, aggregating approximately $5,000,000,000, went to pay either for the cost or obligations of past wars or to prepare for future wars. But for war costs the revenue derived from tobacco and cigars alone would have taken care of the total expenditures of the Government for the past 10 years. Approximately $1,500,000,000 is the modest sum estimated as necessary by the departments involved for the Army and the Navy for next year, and the pending appropriation bills for these two branches of the service carry almost $900,000,000.

I refrain from further comment on the folly, not to say the crime, of the policy of competitive armaments, and address myself to the more practical question of how to accomplish reduction. As to our Army, we may safely reduce without awaiting action by any other nation or making our action dependent upon that of any other nation, and we may safely reduce to a figure as low as would be proposed in any plan that might be devised pursuant to international agreement.

A force of 280,000 men is now authorized by law and recruiting to the limit is urged by the Secretary of War under the counsel, presumably, of his military advisers. Action has already been taken under which a reduction to 175,000 will be made, and it is not improbable that the number may be limited to not more than 150,000, a course which commands strong support in both Houses of Congress. Though 42,000 men are now serving outside of continental United States, 15,000 of whom are in Germany, we should still have an Army greater than we had in 1916 when it approximated 100,000, including all men in the service beyond seas. I know of no such change in conditions as to render it either necessary or expedient to maintain any greater force than 150,000 in the aggregate.

If the radical cut proposed is made, as seems likely, a reduction in our Army of almost 50 per cent will have been accomplished, a most salutary example to the impoverished nations of Europe that still persist in being armed to the teeth while we are solicited almost daily to relieve the distress of their citizens and subjects rendered destitute or made helpless by the war. Such a course would be a further and more emphatic assurance of good faith on our part in connection with any movement looking to an international agreement for a general reduction of armaments. To that end there are now pending before the Senate two resolutions—the one introduced by myself on December 11, 1920, the other by Senator BORAH three days later. They are as follows:

Whereas pursuant to article 8 of the covenant of the League of Nations, wherein it is recited that "the members of the league recognize that the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligations," the council of the league has appointed a commission with authority to formulate plans for such reduction, to be, when approved by the said council, submitted for the consideration and action of the several Governments; and

Whereas it is reported that the said commission labors under some embarrassment in its work by reason of the fact that the United States is not represented either on the said commission or the said council; and

Whereas the people of the United States have long hoped for some international agreement for the reduction of armaments, not only to preserve peace but that the labor of the world may not be unnecessarily burdened with the ever-mounting cost of maintaining armed forces in accordance with the policy of the powers in the past; and

Whereas the said council of the League of Nations has addressed to the President of the United States a communication inviting it to designate a representative to sit with such commission in a consultative capacity during the study by the commission of the question of the reduction of armaments: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That the President be, and he hereby is, requested to express to the council of the League of Nations the earnest desire of the Government of the United States to cooperate with the commission so by the said council appointed and with the said council in the formulation of plans looking to a general reduction of armaments, for submission to the several Governments for their consideration and action, and that he be, and he hereby is, further requested promptly to designate, with due authority, such representative.

Whereas a representative and official of the Japanese Government has advised the world that the Japanese Government could not consent even to consider a program of disarmament on account of the naval building program of the United States; and

Whereas by this statement the world is informed and expected to believe that Japan sincerely desires to support a program of disarmament, but can not in safety to herself do so on account of the attitude and building program of this Government; and

Whereas the only navies whose size and efficiency requires consideration on the part of this Government in determining the question of the size of our Navy are those of Great Britain and of Japan, two Governments long associated by an alliance; and

Whereas the United States is now and has ever been in favor of a practical program of disarmament: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, etc., That the President of the United States is requested, if not incompatible with the public interests, to advise the Governments of Great Britain and Japan, respectively, that this Government will at once take up directly with their Governments and without waiting upon the action of any other nation the question of disarmament, with a view of quickly coming to an understanding by which the building naval programs of each of said Governments, to wit, that of Great Britain, Japan, and the United States, shall be reduced annually during the next five years 50 per cent of the present estimates or figures.

Second, that it is the sense of the Congress, in case such an understanding can be had, that it will conform its appropriation and building plans to such agreement.

Resolved further, That this proposition is suggested by the Congress of the United States to accomplish immediately a substantial reduction of the naval armaments of the world.

The resolution last above recited was recommended by the Committee on Foreign Relations in the following form:

That the President of the United States is requested, if not incompatible with the public interests, to advise the Governments of Great Britain and Japan, respectively, that this Government will at once take up directly with their Governments and without waiting upon the action of any other nation the question of naval disarmament, with a view of promptly entering into a treaty by which the naval building programs of each of said Governments, to wit, that of Great Britain, Japan, and the United States, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon.

SEC. 2. That this proposition is suggested by the Congress of the United States to accomplish immediately a substantial reduction of the naval armaments of the world.

These resolutions paraphrased have become the pending amendment by the Senator from New Jersey and the proposed amendment thereto offered by myself as follows, respectively:

THE EDGE AMENDMENT.

The President is authorized and requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which conclusion is to be reported to their respective Governments.

THE WALSH AMENDMENT.

The President is further requested to express to the council of the League of Nations the earnest desire of the Government of the United States to cooperate with the commission by the said council appointed charged with the formulation of plans looking to a general reduction of armaments, for submission to the several Governments for their consideration and action, and that he be, and he hereby is, further requested promptly to designate with due authority representatives to sit with such commission in a consultative capacity pursuant to the invitation heretofore extended by the said council to the Government of the United States.

It will be noticed that the Borah resolution looks to an agreement affecting naval strength alone, while the other contemplates a reduction in both the land and naval forces of the several Governments. Moreover, the Borah resolution contemplates retrenchment only in the building program—not in the total expenditures on the navies of the countries named.

That the nature and scope of the resolution introduced by me may be the better understood, let me remind you that by article 8 of the Covenant of the League of Nations the Council is charged with the duty of formulating plans for the reduction of national armaments for the consideration and action of the several Governments, and that it, at its meeting in the month of May last, charged the permanent advisory commission on military, naval, and air questions, appointed by it, as provided in article 9, with the preparation of such plans for its consideration in much the same way as it appointed the commission on which Senator Root served to prepare a plan for a world court. This commission consists of three representatives from each of the eight nations represented on the Council—Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan, Greece, Spain, Belgium, and Brazil—one of whom is a military officer, one a naval officer, and one an air-service officer, except, however, that Brazil is represented by but one negotiator who speaks for all three branches of the service.

Now, though this commission was appointed by the Council of the League of Nations nominally, the members were undoubtedly nominated and in effect appointed by the Governments of the countries from which they respectively come and whose interests it must be plainly understood they represent.

I wish to impress upon you that they must be regarded as much the representatives of their respective Governments as though they had been appointed directly by such Governments, pursuant to some international agreement, to undertake the task with which they are charged. They look to their Governments, respectively, for instructions and not to the Council of the League, or any member of it, except as he may be the conduit through which the wishes and policies of the home Government are conveyed.

This commission, proceeding with its work, was embarrassed by reason of the fact that the United States was not represented. Obviously any plan for a general reduction must embrace this country, and it was quite likely deemed that a plan would have small chance of acceptance by this country in the formulation of which its representatives had had no part, and it was equally obvious that at least some of the nations participating would not and could not agree to any plan which did not contemplate a corresponding reduction in our national armament. Reporting its difficulties to the Council, the president thereof, at its direction, sent a message to President Wilson requesting that our Government send representatives to sit with the commission in a consultative capacity during its consideration of the subject with which it had been specially charged. This message is interesting enough to justify its being read in full. [It was read from the desk, and is as follows:]

The council of the League of Nations, acting on a unanimous recommendation of the permanent military, naval, and air commission of the league, passed at its meeting in Geneva on November 25, invites the Government of the United States to name representatives to sit on that commission in a consultative capacity during the study by the commission of the question of the reduction of armaments, a study which the council has requested the commission to undertake forthwith.

The permanent advisory commission was constituted by the council of the league at its meeting in Rome last May and held its first session at San Sebastian in August. The commission is at present composed of military, naval, and aerial officers of States represented on the council of the league. Its decisions are purely advisory and not in any sense binding, but they represent the common technical judgment of the experts of many countries.

It would, of course, be perfectly understood that the presence of the representatives of the United States would in no way commit the American Government to whatever opinions may be finally put forward in the report of the commission. Nor indeed can that report itself be more than a basis for the consideration by the members of the league of the measures of reductions in armaments which united action may enable them to achieve. Nevertheless, just as in the case of the financial conference at Brussels the presence of an American representative, whose function was only that of giving and receiving information, was an important factor in the success of the work of the conference, so it can not be doubted that the general consideration of the subject of the reduction of armaments will be greatly facilitated if the Government of the United States can see its way to be represented in a similar manner at the meetings of the permanent advisory commission.

The problem is one to which public opinion in all countries attaches the highest importance.

It is unnecessary to point out that the reduction of armaments is essential for the well-being of the world, and that unless some measures of relief can be found by international cooperation for the excessive taxation due to armaments the general economic situation must become increasingly worse.

The council in extending this invitation can not but hope that the Government of the United States, particularly in view of the attitude of America toward the question of the competition in armaments, will not refuse to associate itself with the Governments of the members of the league in beginning the preliminary work necessary for ultimate success and to lend to the present effort an assistance which can in no way encroach upon its own perfect liberty of action.

It was received December 1, 1920. Four days later the President replied declining the invitation thus extended, through the following brief note [read from the desk]:

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your cablegram of December 1 inviting the Government of the United States to name representatives to sit with the military, naval, and air commissions of the league in a consultative capacity during the discussion by the commission on the reduction of armaments, the consideration of which is to be undertaken by it forthwith at the request and on behalf of the council.

The Government of the United States is most sympathetic with any sincere effort to evolve a constructive plan for disarmament, which is necessary for the economic rehabilitation, peace, and stability of the world. The President of the United States is deeply interested in this question and is most desirous of cooperating to this end, but as the Government of the United States is not a member of the league he does not feel justified in appointing a commission to take even a de facto participation in the deliberations of the council or of the commission acting on behalf of the council in the execution of provisions in the covenant of the League of Nations.

I remind you that the communication from the Council necessarily implied that the United States was not a member of the League—the invitation came as to a nation outside the League. Had the United States been a member, no invitation would have been necessary, none would have been sent. It has always seemed to me that to decline upon the ground that the United States is not a member of the league, or that not being a member of the league it does not feel justified in sending representatives to sit with the commission appointed by the Council of the League to frame a plan, is to offer no reason at all for declining to join in this apparently bona fide attempt to solve the difficult problem of world disarmament. The reason assigned, if, indeed, it might be called a reason, is so insubstantial as readily to excite the suspicion that our Government does not care to disarm or to enter into any agreement to that end, because it entertains imperialistic designs attainable only through an incomparable military organization. I confess that this probability gave me no little concern and I must admit some surprise that it did not arouse more apprehension throughout the country.

Ever since 1899 we have been cherishing the belief that the well-meant efforts of the Czar in respect to disarmament in connection with the first Hague Conference were balked by Germany, wedded to the policy of "blood and iron," which eventually brought her to grief. Apprehensive that popular opinion in the peace-loving nations would raise us to the evil eminence heretofore occupied by Germany touching disarmament, and that history would confirm the impression to which our conduct had given rise, I introduced the resolution which you have heard read. It is to be regretted that the President did not see fit to transmit the invitation promptly upon its receipt to the Congress or to the Senate for its advice, or at least attempt in some informal manner to ascertain the temper of the representatives of the people with reference to it, a course which the result of the late election might reasonably have impelled him to take.

Let us now contrast these two proposals, representing the efforts on which it is proposed our Government shall embark with a view to secure relief from the frightful burden of world armament.

The Borah resolution, as heretofore stated, deals only with expenditures in connection with navies, the other with all branches of the military service.

The bulk of the burden of national armaments originates in the land, not in the naval forces. The nations least able to bear the burden are those that maintain or attempt to maintain relatively huge, if not disproportionate, armies. The danger to the peace of the world from a great army is obviously more imminent than from a navy, however formidable. Fortifications can not serve the purpose of offense, or only feebly serve, as observed by Gen. Bliss, and navies that can at best only hover about the coast are somewhat similarly limited.

No great conquest was ever achieved by a navy, though it may serve as a useful auxiliary to an invading army. Concerned, as we are, about the peace of the world as the ultimate to be attained and the reduction of the frightful cost of the prevailing system of alleged national defense as the immediate end to be achieved, we can not be content with accomplishing a reduction in naval expenditures. It is popularly believed that the huge estimates for purposes of war upon which Congress is asked to make appropriations for the ensuing year attain the startling magnitude which characterize them because of extraordinary expenditures contemplated in connection with our naval building program; but despite the fact that they are large—the estimate for the Army still outruns that for the Navy by over $20,000,000—the current estimate for the Army exceeds the appropriation made last year by 75 per cent, while the estimate for the Navy exceeds the last appropriation by but 57 per cent. Moreover, the Navy building program calls for but $184,000,000, of the total of $679,000,000 asked for the Navy. The total carried in the pending bill as reported by the committee is $496,519,935.97, of which $105,000,000 is for new construction, $90,000,000 toward carrying out the 1916 building program, and $15,000,000 toward the new airplane carriers.

This brings me to the question of the reduction in our war expenditures to be accomplished by the Borah resolution or the pending amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey. Bear in mind, the former, as introduced, does not contemplate a 50 per cent cut in the expenditures for the Navy but a 50 per cent cut of the building program. If the international conference should be held as proposed and the appropriate agreement entered into and the cut accomplished, a saving would be effected, assuming that the entire amount recommended by the committee should be voted, of not to exceed $52,500,000, or about 6 per cent of our total expenditures for or on account of our Army and Navy, assuming the pending appropriation bills pass, an inconsequential sum, less by $60,000,000 than has been saved by our own voluntary action in reducing the Army from 280,000 to 175,000 men. Well might the overburdened taxpayer groan, "The mountain labored and brought forth a mouse."

It seems scarcely of sufficient importance to warrant the calling of an international conference, for, bear in mind, competitive building would not be eliminated, but the expense of it merely curtailed. It is by no means an improbability that such a proffer upon our part would be rejected for that reason while an exposition of the actual figures in the diplomatic exchanges might subject us to the inference of having proposed, to save our faces, a reduction too inconsequential to be taken seriously after having rejected an invitation on no valid ground to participate in an effort to accomplish a general and substantial reduction.

Neither is it unlikely that such a proposal would be rejected for other reasons felt or feigned. It is maintained on behalf of some nations strong on the seas, that disarmament must go on simultaneously in both of the main branches of the military service—that a nation which relies for its prestige and its defense mainly on its ships can not disarm while a neighbor, powerful in its land forces, maintains an inordinately large army. Though Great Britain took heed of Germany's attempt to rival her naval establishment, she did not look with unconcern on the dominating influence of the Kaiser in the affairs of Europe arising from the gigantic and efficient army he commanded, or on the possibility of realizing through it on the "Berlin to Bagdad" dream.

I can not attach to that rivalry the importance as a factor in the bringing on the Great War that is assigned to it by the able and eloquent Senator from Idaho, though through it the strained relations between the two nations concerned grew more tense. Germany believed that England would not enter the war; indeed, claimed that English statesmen had given assurances of Britain's purpose to remain neutral, and that she was thus guilelessly tricked. It was in the great army which she had developed that her confidence rested, believing that by one fell stroke she could annihilate France, then deal leisurely with Russia, and make herself master of Europe. It was because Germany had what she believed to be an irresistible army that she leveled her lance at civilization.

When President Wilson in his letter to Senator HITCHCOCK referred to certain European powers in which the militaristic and imperialistic spirit was recrudescent, if not in full flower, French statesmen, with the sensitiveness that attends a guilty conscience, hastened with marked asperity to exculpate their country from the charge. Considering the opportunities for controversy between France and Great Britain over territory in Asia, now occupied by them in the domain over which the Turk formerly held sway, the present mistress of the seas may be pardoned if she is unwilling to abate to any substantial degree her navy unless France is limited in the land forces she may maintain. If she advanced in general terms such a reason for declining to enter upon the naval holiday proposed, who could assert that she was not acting in entire good faith? If she does not desire to disarm, as is stoutly asserted, meaning, of course, to reduce her naval establishment, we afford her an easy opportunity to evade the issue by tendering her such a proposal as the Borah resolution contemplates. And both she and Japan might diplomatically reply that they are already participants in a plan to reduce armaments generally through the Council of the League of Nations in a way and to an extent that would, if successful, really give relief to the world, and that they could not in good faith toward the other nations associated with them in that effort enter into a new and independent negotiation on the subject in which such other associated nations were not participants. In short, we run the risk of being met with a declination of an invitation extended pursuant to the Borah resolution, involving the chance of a widespread suspicion with respect to our good faith in extending it, intensifying and aggravating the unfavorable impression that must have been made by President Wilson's inconsiderate action on the request of the Council of the League, transmitted through President Hymans.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I have been reading the Senator's proposed amendment and I notice that it provides for the sending of American delegates to act in a consultative capacity. Will the Senator outline what he means by that? What would be the difference between the status of our delegates and the delegates of other nations? Would they be on a par? Would they have any more or less power than the delegates from other countries?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. There could be no question of power in the matter. The other delegates are appointed by the Council. They are the officers of the Council charged by it with the duty of preparing this plan. Obviously representatives from the United States would be on a somewhat different footing. They would not be responsible to the Council at all. They would simply sit in with the commission thus appointed by the Council, consulting with them concerning the preparation of a plan to be submitted to the Council.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I understood the Senator to say that the commission would not report to the Council, but that the result of their deliberations would be reported to the various Governments.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; the Senator evidently misunderstood me. I said that their instructions would undoubtedly come directly from the various Governments, but of course if they succeeded in devising a plan, that plan would undoubtedly be reported to the Council of the League, and then the Council of the League, if it approved the plan, would submit it to the various Governments for their consideration.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. That is, submit the plan to the forty-odd Governments that are members of the league?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. That, of course, would involve a considerable delay. Does not the Senator see that much more immediate results could be obtained by means of the simple proposition of bringing the three great naval powers of the world together for immediate action, and is not something to be gained by taking an immediate step, even if it is not so large a step?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator will understand that my amendment is offered as a supplement to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey, and not as a substitute for it. I am perfectly agreeable to the idea that pending the disposition of the larger question, those three nations should attempt to agree upon a limitation of naval armament. Such a course would be quite in keeping with the general plan, and thus the two need not be antagonistic at all. They could both be carried out harmoniously.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I have another question that I would like to have the Senator elucidate. If the commission is able to agree upon a plan of general disarmament, that plan is submitted to the various Governments.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. If it is approved by those Governments, they agree that they will not thereafter change that plan without the consent of the Council. Now, does the Senator believe that the United States, not being a member of the Council because not a member of the League, would ever enter into such an agreement?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do not take that view at all. The United States is bound by no provision of the Covenant of the League, not having ratified the treaty, and would not be bound by the provision to which the Senator refers. The plan would really amount to a draft of a treaty, and would be a treaty which would have to be ratified by the United States Senate to be obligatory on us. Our obligations would be such only as would be set out in the treaty.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. But the Senator has just said that this commission is not appointed by the Government, that it is the creature of the Council, that it reports to the Council, and therefore we must follow the language of the Covenant of the League in ascertaining what is then the result. In article 8 I find this paragraph, which is of course familiar to the Senator:

> After these plans shall have been adopted by the several Governments the limits of armament therein fixed shall not be exceeded without the concurrence of the council.

If this is a creature of the Council that the Senator proposes the United States to sit in with, as he expresses it, then naturally the proceedings must follow the line laid down in the Covenant of the League, and whatever plan is adopted must remain fixed and can not be changed by any Government agreeing to it without the consent of the council.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I shall make no attempt to dispossess the Senator from Nebraska of that idea, but I am perfectly clear that no such result would follow, because that provision of the Covenant of the League of Nations could bind no nation except a nation which had subscribed to it, and this country has not subscribed to that provision or any provision of the Covenant of the League.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. It seems to me, however, that while theoretically the Senator from Montana is correct in his proposition, the Senator from Nebraska would be correct for this reason, that the members of the League of Nations would be bound by the 10-year proposition; and, of course, they would not make a contract to enter into an agreement or program which did not bind any of the other nations to that 10-year proposition if they had to go in for 10 years.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Undoubtedly it would have to be the subject of provision in the plan. The United States might or might not be willing to bind itself for 10 years. That would be an essential feature of the plan. The United States might be willing to bind itself for five years. If the other nations could not consistently with the provisions of the Covenant bind themselves to less than 10 years, it would then be impossible for them to agree upon the plan. That would be all there would be to that.

The United States would be bound only by such provisions as were incorporated in the treaty which it ratified, if it ever did ratify the plan thus proposed.

There is, however, a stronger reason than any yet urged why the Borah resolution in the form in which it was introduced should not be passed. It proposes that the naval building programs of the United States, Great Britain, and Japan be cut 50 per cent. The present building program of the United States is exceedingly ambitious, while that of Great Britain is most modest. If each country should continue its present program without modification our Navy would surpass that of Great Britain by 1924, if not by 1923. We should, for instance, by that time have 27 battleships of the first line to her 26. We are building 11 such ships; she is building 9. We are building 6 battle cruisers and 10 light cruisers; she is building 1 light cruiser; we are building 35 destroyers, she 11; we shall construct 41 submarines, she 18. Obviously to cut the building program of the three nations mentioned would prolong, if it did not perpetuate, Great Britain's mastery of the seas. From time to time the suggestion is made that there should be a proportionate reduction of the navies of the great maritime nations. Manifestly such a course would have a similar culmination, and the advocacy of it leaves the uncomfortable impression that it is advanced with that end in view rather than to promote peace and to curtail expenditures for naval purposes.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. What different result would be obtained by a conference such as the Senator from Montana suggests with all the nations of the world? Would not that same situation result?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. No; a conference with all the nations in the world would take into consideration the entire strength of each—not only ships that are building, but those which have been built. It would take into consideration the relative situation of all the nations; and a reduction accordingly could be made, and the due relative strength of each be established. It need not necessarily, as would this plan, preserve the superiority of the navy of Great Britain.

It need not be said that I know neither the Senator from Idaho nor the Senator from New Jersey harbors any such purpose, but the boast that "Britannia rules the waves" finds an echo, strangely enough, in some American breasts. Some exult in it from a weakened national spirit, others unreflectingly. "The English Navy saved civilization in the Great War," say these apologists for British supremacy on the seas. Though they saw only as through a glass darkly at its outset, the real significance of the war and the consequences of the triumph of Germany, our people were overwhelmingly friendly to the cause of the Allies from the first and were disposed to endure patiently the manifold violations of our rights as neutrals by the British Admiralty against which our Government made repeated protests. International law as to the rights of neutrals on the high seas, even as it had been worked out by English courts, ceased to exist. A learned Italian writer late in 1914, in a communication breathing the most friendly spirit toward Britain, wrote that "Strictly speaking, no foreign vessel can leave a port without England's consent." It so happened that we were sympathetic with Great Britain in the late war as against the Central Empires. We may be moved by sentiment and interest to incline to her enemies in the next, or be wholly indifferent as to the outcome. In any case, we can not look with equanimity on her supremacy over us as a naval power, now that the United States is the only nation that is singly in her class in a military sense, however we may be gratified or content that she surpasses all the other nations. If it be true that she saved civilization in the late war, through her incomparable navy, it is equally true that she will never save civilization by overpowering the Navy of the United States. I have no sympathy with the view expressed in an editorial in a late number of the New Republic, that we should have a Navy greater than that of Japan, but second to that of Great Britain. If any nation must rule the seas, that nation should be the United States, which covets no new territory, seeks no commercial advantages, exacts no monopolistic concessions, whose "policy is the open door."

Moreover, Mr. President, a fact that must not be overlooked is that in addition to our great coast line upon the Atlantic and the Pacific, our interests demand, our people insist, that we maintain the Monroe doctrine, which requires us to defend all of Central and South America upon both oceans. Our coast line in that sense extends from the Gulf of St. Lawrence around Cape Horn and up to Puget Sound, with some thousands of miles more contributed by Alaska, rivaling, if it does not exceed, that of Great Britain and her colonial dependencies.

But if there are specific objections to or if there are any prejudices even against the amendment which I have tendered, what can be said in opposition to an amendment in substance like that which had the approval of the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives, praying that the President, as is provided in the act of 1916, shall ask the nations of the earth to enter a conference for the purpose of devising a plan for general disarmament? The Senator from Idaho urges that it is useless to take that course, because France has served notice that she will not disarm. Mr. President, we can not take the statement of some particular French statesman made at Geneva in respect to what France will do or what France will not do. She joined officially in the invitation which came to us to participate in the movement already inaugurated. Unanimity being required, she must have concurred through her representative on the Council in authorizing the commission to prepare a plan and in the resolution to invite the United States to join. I undertake to say if any kind of a report reasonable in its character came back to the United States from such a commission, we being represented, which proposed a general reduction in armaments in which due regard to our rights and needs was exhibited, operating to save the people of this country, as it might readily save them, $500,000,000 a year, no political party would dare take the responsibility of rejecting the plan.

The total appropriations, as I said in opening this discussion, for the Army and the Navy for the present year amount to $859,000,000, or within $150,000,000 of a billion dollars. Save half of that to the people of the United States, and we would have saved approximately $500,000,000. Make the same proposal to the people of France. If France had an opportunity under such a proposition submitted to her people to save an equal amount, what would the tax-burdened people of that country say? France is to-day expending a sum equal, under the ordinary rate of exchange, to at least $1,000,000,000 for the support of her army alone, not to speak of the cost of her navy.

Italy, with a national debt almost equal to her total wealth, has in the field an army of 350,000 men. Put up to the people of impoverished Italy the prospect of saving one-half of the amount which is required to maintain their military establishment, and what will the answer be?

But, Mr. President, if it is true that in the face of these conditions France will decline to enter into a conference, will decline to agree to a reasonable reduction when the opportunity is before her, let France face the odium of the world for perpetuating the present unbearable conditions.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Montana yield to the Senator from Oklahoma?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I do.

Mr. OWEN. May I be permitted to remind the Senator that at The Hague conventions in 1899 and in 1907 all the nations of the world there assembled except the Teutonic allies were ready to agree to disarmament.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Exactly; and that is the question which will address itself to every nation to which this invitation is tendered: "Are you willing to assume the place that Germany occupied in 1899, when she was invited to join in an international agreement to limit or reduce armaments, and declined, while the invitation was accepted by every one of the other great powers of the earth?"

Mr. President, it is a matter of entire indifference to me which of these amendments offered as supplementary to that of the Senator from New Jersey shall be adopted; but, I pray you, do not content yourselves with an amendment such as that offered by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE]. In the first place, if it were successful the economy that would be effected, the saving that would result, would be an inconsequential amount. In the second place, so inconsequential is it that in all probability the invitation would be declined, and thus the evil impression which must have been created throughout the world by the declination by the President of M. Hymans's invitation would be accentuated.

Mr. President, if when I introduced this resolution it had been promptly acted upon and approved by the Senate, the representatives would have been appointed, if he had yielded to the request, by President Wilson. Time flies and it is no longer to be contemplated that he will or can select them. If this amendment should express the views of the Congress or of the Senate, the negotiators for our Government will be appointed by the incoming President. I am as earnestly in favor of this amendment as I was the day the resolution out of which it came was introduced. I am no less ardent in its support that the representatives of our country are to be appointed by President Harding rather than by President Wilson, confident that either of them charged with the duty would act in the premises only as a patriotic American citizen. I trust that none of the controversies and animosities of the past concerning the League of Nations will operate upon the mind of any Senator so as to cause him to decline to give his assent to joining in the movement already inaugurated; but, if they should, I trust, at least, that the Senate will give its approval to an amendment in substance like the resolution which has already received the approbation of the House committee.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. FLETCHER. I desire to make this inquiry: The Senator has several times alluded in his splendid address to our present naval program. Do I understand the Senator to mean the program decided on in 1916?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I mean the program decided upon in 1916, as modified by the bill which is before us. We are asked by the pending bill to make an appropriation of $90,000,000 toward the building program of 1916. That contemplates expenditures each year until it is completed, and for the ensuing year we are asked to provide funds to the amount of $90,000,000. Now it is proposed—and that meets my entire approval—that we shall also authorize the construction of two airplane carriers, each to cost $26,000,000, in the aggregate, $52,000,000, and toward that expenditure $15,000,000 more is appropriated by the present bill, making an aggregate appropriation for the building program for the present year of $105,000,000, one-half of that or some fractional part of that being the total saving that can be effected by this international conference which is proposed.

Mr. EDGE. Mr. President, I wish to speak very briefly in reply to the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] and in support of the amendment that I have introduced.

No great reform—a reform which contemplates practically the curtailment of the great physical power of nations—can be accomplished overnight. I take it from the argument of the Senator from Montana that he is in sympathy with this general movement and this desire for international disarmament if it can be accomplished with safety, and I can not conceive, therefore, why he would confuse an earnest effort to accomplish something positive in this direction.

He confuses it by suggesting that we recognize machinery of which we are absolutely no part, the League of Nations; and if I can correctly interpret the verdict of the men and women of this great country as recorded last November, they do not seem to be very anxious that we should ever be a part of the League of Nations. He suggests, through his amendment to the amendment that I have offered, that we confuse this great opportunity by participating in machinery of which, as I said, we form no part, and thus practically put the entire movement in a chaotic condition, with no possible chance for practical results.

We could not, in my judgment, adopt that amendment and proceed practically under the conditions which have already been partially brought out by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK]. It would absolutely result in no positive, affirmative action.

On the other hand, the amendment as offered by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], somewhat modified and reoffered by myself, is, I believe, a practical effort to secure the viewpoint of accredited representatives from the three great maritime powers of the world on the subject of a gradual reduction of naval programs consistent with national safety and to report back to their respective countries and to endeavor to mold a public sentiment which will thus in time save billions in taxes, proceeding in a logical way in an endeavor to accomplish something concrete.

The idea of friends of the movement confusing it to such an extent as to make results impossible appeals to me as being very unfortunate, to say the least. So I feel that if we are earnest in endeavoring to ascertain whether it is practical to bring about some type of international disarmament we can only proceed at this time as far as provided under that amendment. If we take the initiative in that way, and that is concurred in by the great countries of Japan and Great Britain, there will be an accredited convention or conference of the representatives of these nations, from which may be evolved something really tangible, affirmative, and worth while.

So I sincerely hope that the amendment to the amendment will not meet with the approval of the Senate.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, in order to meet some objections to the form of the amendment offered, I ask leave to withdraw it, and offer the amendment which I send to the desk as a substitute for it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana withdraws the amendment that he heretofore offered, and submits in lieu of it the amendment which will be stated by the Secretary.

The Assistant Secretary read as follows:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, empowered, and requested, at his discretion, to invite the Governments of the leading nations to send accredited delegates to an international convention, to be held in the United States or elsewhere, to consider ways and means of bringing about joint disarmament.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, the printed text is the resolution as offered in the House and reported favorably by the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. I have made just a slight modification. I will ask the Secretary to read it as it reads in the print, and then to read it as it is changed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. In the absence of objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. As in print, the amendment reads as follows:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered, at his discretion, to invite the Governments of all nations to send accredited delegates to an international convention, to be held in the United States, to consider ways and means of bringing about joint disarmament.

As modified, it reads as follows:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, empowered, and requested, at his discretion, to invite the Governments of the leading nations to send accredited delegates to an international convention, to be held in the United States or elsewhere, to consider ways and means of bringing about joint disarmament.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. This is offered as a supplement to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE], not as a substitute, so that the two stand together.

Mr. KING. Mr. President, may I inquire of the Senator from Montana what change that makes in his former amendment?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The former amendment proposed that representatives be sent to sit with the commission appointed by the Council of the League of Nations. This contemplates an invitation to the various nations of the world to send representatives to an international conference. The invitation will go directly to the leading nations of the earth, and will not go through the League of Nations at all.

Mr. KING. The Senator does not propose to abandon his proposition to appear with the representatives of the league in a consultative capacity?

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Yes; this is a substitute for that.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana, as I understand it, abandons the proposition of accepting the invitation extended by the council of the League of Nations, and simply provides for an invitation upon the part of the President to the leading nations that they may come together for the purpose of considering the proposition of general disarmament.

Of course, Mr. President, if that should be adopted, it would be incongruous to adopt another amendment along with it saying that you should call three of the nations together.

If you are going to call all the leading nations to conference, you certainly would not want to make a second call for three of the nations to come together to consider the same question. Either the amendment of the Senator from Montana should prevail, or the amendment offered by the Senator from New Jersey should prevail. They should not both go into this bill. They are in a measure contradictory. They show a lack of purpose and a lack of policy upon our part.

I would much prefer to have the Senator from Montana offer his amendment as a substitute for the amendment which has been offered by the Senator from New Jersey, which is the same language as the resolution which I offered a few days ago, because I would not want to have two invitations provided for—one to three nations, and one to all the nations—to come into conference, one for naval disarmament and the other for general disarmament. I hope the Senator will offer his amendment as a substitute, so that we may have the matter presented in its proper form.

But let me say a word why I think his amendment ought not to be adopted. Of course, Mr. President, if we could have general disarmament, that is what we would all like to have. If there were any hope of our securing such a program at this time, that would undoubtedly be what we would all strive for, and I know that the Senator from Montana urges the proposition in the sincere belief that we may accomplish something along that line. But, in my opinion, any step toward general disarmament is utterly impossible so long as the present conditions in Europe prevail, by reason of the obligations imposed by the Versailles treaty. I am thoroughly satisfied that the situation as it prevails in Europe is such that France can not consider the question of land disarmament, and that Italy can not consider the question of land disarmament, and that therefore an invitation to a general disarmament conference is simply to reassemble the nations of the earth which met at Geneva, with one addition, and have precisely the same thing happen that happened at Geneva.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, will the Senator have the kindness to specify for us why Italy, for instance, can not consent to the reduction of her army of 350,000 men?

Mr. BORAH. I am going to specify the reasons as briefly as I can. But let us take an illustration——

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Pardon me. While the Senator is doing that, will he explain also why France can not possibly reduce her army of 800,000 men, with Germany limited to 100,000?

Mr. BORAH. It does seem as if she could, upon the face of it. But let me call the Senator's attention to the fact that it has been but a few weeks since these nations to which he refers were assembled at Geneva, and that there, when 43 nations of the world assembled, they took up the question of disarmament, and France stated with no lack of certainty or clarity that she was not in a position to consider the question of disarmament at this time. She stated it rather fully, and declared that so long as the Versailles treaty was unexecuted she would not consider and could not consider the question of disarmament. She has made her military alliances throughout Europe. She has undoubtedly her military alliance with Poland. She, in all probability, has her military alliance with Hungary, and she undoubtedly has her military alliance with those other two Republics which we have created since the war. While Germany's army has been reduced to 200,000, day by day and week by week and month by month the press of Paris carries the news and feeds it to the people of Paris and of France that Germany is secretly arming and is clandestinely preparing herself for a renewal, at the very first opportunity, of her attack upon France.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, let me inquire of the Senator whether one of the first duties devolving upon such an international conference would not be to determine the exact facts about such a matter as that and publish them for the information of the world?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, it might be the duty of the meeting to determine that fact, but the Senator knows that France will take nobody's word for that except that of France herself. The League of Nations, or a conference, might come absolutely to the conclusion that there was no danger from Germany at all, but under the psychological conditions which exist in France, and by reason of her experience since 1870, no nation can advise France as to the danger which confronts her from Germany. That is a question which France will determine for herself.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. We are advised that the relations between France and Italy are by no means as cordial as they might be, and as we hope they may be, and I inquire of the Senator whether he does not think Italy is maintaining an army of nearly 400,000 men because France has such an enormous army?

Mr. BORAH. Possibly so; but that is all the more reason, Mr. President, why neither one of those nations will consider the question of land disarmament. The psychological conditions in Europe, as I have said, are such, yet so near to the war, that it is yet impracticable as they view it for those nations to disarm. The fact is, Mr. President, that France is bending every energy to build up her army, and she is doing so because she is in constant dread of what may happen her again from Germany.

Take another situation: As a distinguished lecturer in this country said a few days ago, speaking upon this subject, it is utterly useless to talk to Europe—over which he had been traveling for months and months—about land disarmament, until the Russian question is settled. Until that great people shall find poise and contentment land disarmament will not be admissible. We must get a little further away from the conflict. Thus the moment you invite all the great nations of the world into a conference for general disarmament, you proceed at once against those conditions which at this time it is impossible to deal with from the standpoint of disarmament. You have Germany facing France, you have Russia facing the entire situation, and none of those nations were willing at Geneva even to consider the question of disarmament.

You remember that the question of disarmament came before the assembly, and the first resolution presented had some substance to it. It received very little support. It involved the question of general land disarmament, as well as naval disarmament. They whittled it down and down, until, as Lord Cecil said, it consisted of nothing more than an expression of a pious desire to enter upon an investigation as to whether disarmament could be had. I thought I had that resolution in my papers, but I have not. But if you will turn to the resolution upon the morrow, and read it, you will find that it is the most insubstantial, inconsequential resolution that could possibly be written upon the subject.

Yet what did France say? She would not even cast her vote in the Geneva assembly in favor of the principle of disarmament, because France considers that the morale of her people is to a certain extent undermined, and that they are ready to believe that the danger is disappearing the moment that France takes a position in favor of land disarmament, and so France led the fight against the resolution and carried 6 votes with her against a mere expression of a desire at some future time to disarm.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from Idaho yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. BORAH. In just a moment. To call these same nations back to Geneva into a general conference, of course, means that that will happen again which happened before at Geneva, and it is more likely to happen now, because the situation in Europe with reference to France and Germany and Russia is more acute than it was even at the time they were meeting at Geneva, before the council of the League of Nations, which went forward to settle the difficulty at Vilna, had returned in disgust and unable to adjust it.

Now I yield to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. Mr. President, for 20 years it has been useless to propose a general conference for the purpose of accomplishing disarmament by reason of the attitude of Germany. How long does the Senator think we would be obliged to wait until that convenient time shall arrive when every nation will be glad to accept such an invitation?

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I am trying to deal with what I conceive to be the practical side of the question of disarmament. There is utterly no use to go up against a situation such as exists in France at this time. The Senator said a few moments ago, "Let France take the odium, or let some other nation take the odium, of refusing to disarm under these circumstances." France took the odium at Geneva, advertised it to the world, and the world offered no criticism upon France, and the world will not offer any criticism upon France until the "German peril," as she sees it, has been eliminated entirely from the European situation. The world will not ask France to disarm until that situation is relieved, and to call France back into a conference within 60 days and ask her to disarm is to suggest to France that she must disarm in the face of a situation which she thinks is perilous to her. It may well be there is no longer a "German peril"; it may be the Senator from Montana so believes, but we know France does not accept that view.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. The Senator will bear in mind that in the month of May last, France, represented upon the council of the League of Nations, gave her vote to a resolution instructing the commission to proceed to devise a plan for disarmament.

Mr. BORAH. Precisely so.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. What has resulted in the change of opinion? What are the circumstances now which did not exist last May?

Mr. BORAH. So far as France is concerned, it is well known that France considers herself in a more dangerous condition than she was last May. France is every day building up her military strength, and nobody criticizes France for doing it. Besides, it is one thing to suggest that some one devise a plan; it is another thing to accept it.

Mr. President, take another situation in Europe. What is France going to do with her Syrian situation if she is asked to disarm? How is she going to govern Syria under her mandate, when Syria is now in a state of rebellion against France? How are they going to deal with Mesopotamia, where England is now expending $40,000,000 a month in the way of maintaining an army for the purpose of governing Mesopotamia? Think, also, of the fact that all Islam is restless and resentful. So you may take any situation which arises under the Versailles treaty in Europe at the present time and it is impossible to get anywhere on land disarmament.

Mr. President, let us turn a minute to the other proposition, the question of whether it is worth while to try to do something upon the question of naval disarmament. I repeat that if we could have what the Senator from Montana wants I would infinitely rather have it than what I have proposed. I have only suggested the proposition which has been before the Senate for some time, because I thought it was the only possible practical step to take.

Let us consider it for a moment. There are now three great nations which are really girding themselves for a race in naval supremacy. We may deal with it as we will, in the words of courtesy or concealment, but we all know in practical effect that is what it amounts to, that they are now entering upon a vast program for the purpose of building up their naval strength, because they feel that the relative situations of these three powers demand it. If those three powers, Mr. President, which are really entering upon this naval competition could be brought together, that would practically include all the nations concerned in naval supremacy and in naval building. I regard France and Italy as of no consequence so far as this program is concerned. There is no reason why these three nations should not disarm, so far as their relationship is concerned, on the matter of the navy.

They have been associated together in the late war; they profess to be friendly with one another, and if they are friendly, then there is no reason why they should not disarm. On the other hand, if it be true that any one or both of these powers professing friendship to the people of the United States and to the Government are unwilling to disarm, then I do not want them in a general conference so they can throw the responsibility upon France or some other nation; and if they do refuse to disarm, the United States is warned in advance as to why they can not disarm.

There is no nation in the world that Japan should be building against, if she is arming against any nation at all, except either England or the United States. She is certainly not arming on the sea against Italy, she is not arming against France, she is not arming against Germany, or Austria-Hungary, or Turkey, or any other nation. So I would bring together the three great powers which are now getting ready for a great naval race and say to them, "Let us enter into an agreement to stop naval competition." There we would have a possible practical step toward disarmament. It may not work; but if it does not work, the insincerity of the nation which refuses to go into it will no longer be a matter of discussion in the public opinion of the world.

The Senator from California [Mr. PHELAN] said a few minutes ago that Japan is a menace to the United States. That has been stated to-night upon the floor of the Senate at a time when we are considering a great naval bill. I am not going to indulge in any criticism of a Senator. I think it was a little unfortunate, however, to say in the discussion of a great naval bill that Japan is a menace, which is to advertise to Japan that we are building this Navy because we regard her as a menace. I do not regard Japan as a menace in any such sense as used.

I realize, of course, the difficulties between these two great nations, or rather differences of view between the nations as to vital questions, might lead to a situation where one would be a menace to the other or where they would be antagonistic to each other, but those difficulties are not insurmountable. They can be settled without war, in my judgment, by bringing Japan and the United States into a conference upon the question of naval competition. They are not questions which should turn us to talk of threats, menace, and war. Wise and considerate action, it seems to me, can adjust these questions without sacrificing our rights or our dignity.

So far as immigration is concerned or the race question or the land question, they are questions that ought to yield to a conference, and until they are brought into a conference I do not think we ought to assume that they are not to be settled except in the processes of war.

What does naval competition between the United States and Japan mean? Suppose we do not go into the conference. Suppose we do not have an understanding. Suppose that we never meet together to get acquainted with each other's situation face to face and try to settle it; but that we go on building a navy and they go on building a navy, and that every time they add to their navy in their Diet they say the United States is a menace to them, and that every time we add to ours it is said here that Japan is a menace to us, what is going to happen? That, Mr. President, is the menace. Let us seek to keep our poise and make an honest, sincere effort to avoid war. I think war with Japan could easily come within the next quarter of a century should we get into a great naval competition, accompanied by threats and denunciation; that is, indeed, the path to war.

That is the thing which will bring on the trouble. Let me give an illustration: From the time of Elizabeth until the beginning of the reign of Edward VII Germany and England were closely associated in international affairs. They were upon the friendliest terms. We recall that England subsidized Frederick the Great in his great struggle in Europe which laid the foundation of the Prussian Empire, loaning him some $3,500,000 a year—not very much now, but very large then. We know that in 1870, during the Franco-Prussian War, England's sympathy was not with France but was with Prussia; that the English Government refused to take any step whatever which would even lead to a manifestation of sympathy upon the part of the Government for France.

It was during the Franco-Prussian War that Prussia and England entered into an understanding by which they agreed that they would take joint action against France if France invaded Belgium. It was in 1887 that Germany and England consulted together when it was thought there was going to be another war between France and Germany. At the Congress of Berlin Bismarck and Disraeli worked hand in hand and glove in glove for the interests of their respective nations. It was under the leadership of a German prince, Prince George of Hesse, supported by the English Navy, that Gibraltar was captured and that great gateway turned over to England. When Bismarck was engaged in his great task of confederating the German States he had the active sympathy of England. So on down until the fatal year of 1900 these two great powers were upon friendly relations to each other, notwithstanding the fact that all during those years Prussia was building up the great land force—that military power which was to make her the dominant nation of all Europe.

What happened in 1900? Before I go into that, however, let me say that it must not be understood that England was not informed as to what was taking place in Germany in the way of building up a great army. I have upon my desk, which I am not going to take the time to read, the articles written by the elder Harrison in 1870 and 1871, in which he plead with the Government of England to give some expression of sympathy to struggling France and to prevent France from being subjugated and despoiled by Germany. He pointed out the fact that Germany was building up a great military power which would in time lead to trouble with England herself. He pictured in graphic and living language the brutality, the inhuman practices of the military forces of Germany in France in 1870, just as they were pictured again in 1915 and 1916. The real truth and extent of these practices time must determine, but they were no different in 1916 than in 1870, when Germany and England were on friendliest terms.

Notwithstanding the fact that England was advised of the growth and expansion of the military power of Germany, England retained still the friendliest feeling for the German people and the German Government.

But what happened in 1900? In 1900 Germany put out her first naval program. Really in 1898 it was formulated, and in 1900 it was put out. From the day that naval program was provided by Germany the ill will between the two nations began to grow apace. Immediately following the program put out by Germany, England enlarged her naval program. In 1903, three years after Germany's program was put out, the Entente was formed at the instigation or upon the initiative of Edward VII. Then there began that competition in naval building between the German Empire and the English Government which will be found recorded year by year in the story as it was given by Mr. Hurd, the English historian. If I had the time I should read from those volumes showing the arguments which were presented each and every time that naval program was increased in the respective countries. They were to the effect that one country was a menace to the other, and that the negotiator of peace would be a great and dominant navy. Thus they both started out to build a navy sufficiently large to enable them to negotiate through diplomatic channels to a peaceful conclusion. We hear the same argument now.

What happened? The naval competition between Germany and England really, in my judgment, was the underlying cause of the Great War of 1914. If one will read Lord Haldane's book, entitled "Before the War," describing his visit to Germany, the conclusion will be reached that he fully understood that if Germany and England could not sit down together and adjust their differences the naval competition between them must inevitably lead to war. Everybody felt this would be the result, and yet the mad race continued.

What is the situation between Japan and the United States? There is no reason in the world why the United States should have a war with Japan. If we will keep in friendly touch and friendly relation with her, there is no reason why our difficulties should not be adjusted. But bear in mind that we are of a different race, we are of a different language, and when we have nations of different languages that means a vast obstacle in coming to friendly relations. Bear in mind that we have our competition upon the Pacific, that we are both struggling for commercial supremacy on that great ocean. Add to that the constant increasing of our Navy and the constant increasing of the Japanese Navy, and the fear and suspicion which it engenders. It will inevitably lead to trouble with Japan as Germany and England had trouble by reason of the same program. Let us turn from that course, that old road over which the statesmen of Germany and Europe wended their way to the great deluge of 1914. Though we were children we ought to be able to appreciate that fearful example.

I am not one of those who believe that war with Japan is at all necessary, but I do firmly believe that if we enter upon this competitive naval program with Japan, with the differences which already exist, and refuse to come into conference with Japan or refuse to lead the way to a conference, that we as the leaders in this hour are doing precisely what the leaders of Germany and England did from 1900 to 1914. It is for that reason that I offered the resolution to bring together those who are now in competition for the seas, those who are pursuing a policy which leads to war, to see if it is possible that we could have an understanding. If we can not have an understanding, I am willing to go along with any program that prepares for the future.

Mr. President, the Navy, as a negotiator for peace, has never been a success; as a negotiator for war, it has had no equal. From the time of the Armada until the great drama of war was played to a close in the North Sea, naval competition has invariably engendered suspicion, jealousy, hate, and ended at last in broken friendships and discarded treaties and war. No nation has ever come forward to dispute with England the supremacy of the sea and escaped unchallenged and unchastized. Spain, Holland, France, and Germany, each and all, were ambitious at different times to divide with her her authority, and the story is now written out in full, and so plainly it speaks that no one need be mistaken as to the lesson it teaches. Whether in obedience to the law of self-preservation which applies alike to nations and to individuals, or in obedience to a less exalted, but scarcely less commanding, passion, an inherent and indomitable desire to govern, the fact remains she has in the end brought condign punishment to every nation, people, or power seeking to weaken her rule of the Seven Seas.

Now, sir, if the supremacy of the sea must rest with any single power, I want that power to be the United States. When it shall be determined that there is no alternative but this, I will go along with the program which will make the source of authority for the ocean this Capital and no other. But you know and I know what it will cost in treasure and probably in blood. You know and I know that it is in the interest of humanity, of civilization, and of peace that naval competition cease—that that which nature's God has dedicated to the use of all nations and peoples should have no exclusive title in any power. This can only be brought about by the frankest and fullest understanding by the three nations now girding themselves for a race for supremacy. Before we deliberately resolve to enter this race to pin our faith to the rule of force, and to rest the future happiness of our children and our children's children upon the result of a mad contest of dominancy, let us exhaust in good faith every known method and means compatible with honor to get an agreement or an understanding. Let us make haste to confer rather than make haste to build. The latter course has been tried. Poverty, pauperism, bankruptcy, and crime and war have followed in its wake. Let us sincerely, openly, and perseveringly see if we can not lead in the former course.

There has not been much hope for such an agreement until since the war. Prior to that the fateful march of events seemed to exclude the possibility. England and Germany were building against each other, and ambition and commercial rivalry mixed with ancient feuds in adjacent countries, together with the fact that force had been the basis upon which Europe had built civilization from the beginning, seemed to make conciliation and agreements impossible. While England and Germany were thus engaged the rest of the world was compelled to await the fearful outcome—an outcome with which we are now all familiar. Its lessons have sunk deep into the heart of humanity.

But Germany has at present no navy. She has no means nor will she have an opportunity for years to build one. Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and all the Central Powers lie buried in an almost irretrievable ruin, seeking with dim hope to dig themselves from under the débris of a world cataclysm. In fact, it has so come about through fearful cost and sacrifice that England, Japan, and the United States have it within their power to disarm the sea, to rededicate it in complete freedom to all who would travel its highways, and to the uninterrupted commerce of all nations. Milton, with his unfettered imagination, could not picture the paradise regained should these great powers sincerely and unreservedly summon their forces to this great achievement. And I venture the opinion, furthermore, that Dante, though his genius were still instinct with the old spirit, could not paint the hell which awaits an overburdened, discouraged, and tortured world if these nations turn from this task and take up again the old, beaten, and bloody paths leading to war and bankruptcy. The key to the world's peace lies here. The first step to permanent peace is a disarmed sea. It lies within the power of these peoples to achieve this beginning. If we can not succeed now, with the scourge of war still fresh upon us, with the people petitioning their Governments in every clime under the sun for relief from the burdens of conflict, and with the whole matter completely within the direction of the English-speaking race—for what the United States and England decide to do Japan will do, must do—if we can not succeed now, when shall we hope to succeed?

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order; that the amendment of the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] be laid before the Senate and a vote be taken on it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Montana to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE].

Mr. KING. May I inquire of the Senator from Washington how long he desires to continue the session this evening?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I think that if we sit until 12 o'clock and then take a recess, it would be as much as we could expect, perhaps.

Mr. KING. May I say to the Senator from Washington I think there are a number of Senators who would like to vote upon the amendment which has been offered? Could we not take a recess now and take a vote to-morrow, not later than 12 o'clock, upon the amendment?

Mr. POINDEXTER. I think, in view of the fact that the amendment has been so ably and so fully discussed to-night, that now is the proper time to take the vote upon it.

Mr. KING. Personally I have no objection to voting now, but I know that a number of Senators——

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

Mr. KING. A number of Senators went home upon the understanding that there would be no vote this evening. I do not feel like calling for a quorum, but I do feel that it is rather unfair to those Senators who left understanding that a recess would be taken at 11 o'clock to take a vote at this time.

Mr. LODGE. Who so understood, and why?

Mr. KING. I think it was a general understanding that we should take a recess at 11 o'clock.

Mr. LODGE. There was nothing said by me or by the Senator from Washington, I believe, that would give ground for any such understanding. I said that I thought that after 11 o'clock we could take a recess.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Vote!

Mr. KING. I shall not call for a quorum, but I repeat that I think it is unfair to take a vote upon this important question in the absence of so many Senators.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Montana to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Assistant Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gooding	Moses	Smith, Ga.
Ball	Gore	Myers	Smith, Md.
Borah	Gronna	New	Smith, S. C.
Brandegee	Hale	Overman	Smoot
Calder	Harris	Owen	Spencer
Capper	Heflin	Phelan	Sutherland
Curtis	Jones, N. Mex.	Phipps	Underwood
Dial	Jones, Wash.	Pittman	Wadsworth
Edge	Kellogg	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Elkins	Kenyon	Pomerene	Walsh, Mont.
Fletcher	King	Ransdell	Warren
France	Lenroot	Reed	Willis
Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Robinson	Wolcott
Gerry	McKellar	Sheppard
Glass	McNary	Simmons

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Fifty-eight Senators have answered to their names. A quorum is present. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from Montana to the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey, on which the yeas and nays have been ordered.

Mr. WADSWORTH. I ask that the amendment to the amendment be stated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Secretary will state the amendment to the amendment.

Mr. REED. I ask that the original amendment be read and be followed then by the amendment to the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, both amendments will be read.

The ASSISTANT SECRETARY. The amendment proposed by the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] reads as follows:

The President is authorized and requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference, which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval building program of each of said Governments, to wit, the United States, Great Britain, and Japan, shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which conclusion is to be reported to their respective Governments for their approval.

To that the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] proposes an amendment in the following words:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, empowered, and requested, in his discretion, to invite the Governments of the leading nations to send accredited delegates to an international convention to be held in the United States or elsewhere to consider ways and means of bringing about joint disarmament.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Assistant Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BRANDEGEE (when his name was called). I am paired with the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. Not knowing how he would vote on this question, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "nay."

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN]. I transfer my pair to the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. STANLEY] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. MOSES (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Louisiana [Mr. GAY], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the Senator from California [Mr. JOHNSON] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH of Maryland (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM]. In his absence, and being unable to obtain a transfer, I withhold my vote. If at liberty to vote, I should vote "yea."

Mr. SUTHERLAND (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Kentucky (Mr. BECKHAM). As he is absent, I transfer that pair to the senior Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. WOLCOTT (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. WATSON] to the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. KIRBY] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina. I have a general pair with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. STERLING]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Tennessee [Mr. SHIELDS] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I am informed by the secretary of my pair that were he present he would vote in the same way that I desire to vote. I therefore vote "nay."

Mr. JONES of Washington (after having voted in the negative). Has the senior Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.

Mr. JONES of Washington. He is necessarily absent, and I have promised to take care of him with a pair, but I find that I can transfer that pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS]. I do so, and will allow my vote to stand.

Mr. MYERS. I have a pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN], who is absent. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. GRONNA. I have been requested to announce that the senior Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] is necessarily absent, and that if present he would vote "nay."

Mr. CURTIS. I have been requested to announce the following pairs:

The Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] with the Senator from Florida [Mr. TRAMMELL];

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. KENDRICK];

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] with the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH];

The Senator from Vermont [Mr. PAGE] with the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON];

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. KNOX] with the Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN];

The Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] with the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS];

The Senator from Illinois [Mr. MCCORMICK] with the Senator from Nevada [Mr. HENDERSON];

The Senator from Maine [Mr. FERNALD] with the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. JOHNSON]; and

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. MCCUMBER] with the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS].

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 30, as follows:

YEAS—28.

Ashurst	Harrison	Owen	Sheppard
Dial	Heflin	Phelan	Simmons
Fletcher	Jones, N. Mex.	Pittman	Smith, S. C.
Gerry	King	Pomerene	Underwood
Glass	McKellar	Ransdell	Walsh, Mass.
Gore	Myers	Reed	Walsh, Mont.
Harris	Overman	Robinson	Wolcott

NAYS—30.

Ball	France	Lenroot	Smoot
Borah	Frelinghuysen	Lodge	Spencer
Brandegee	Gooding	McNary	Sutherland
Calder	Gronna	Moses	Wadsworth
Capper	Hale	New	Warren
Curtis	Jones, Wash.	Phipps	Willis
Edge	Kellogg	Poindexter
Elkins	Kenyon	Smith, Ga.

NOT VOTING—38.

Beckham	Hitchcock	McLean	Stanley
Chamberlain	Johnson, Calif.	Nelson	Sterling
Colt	Johnson, S. Dak.	Newberry	Swanson
Culberson	Kendrick	Norris	Thomas
Cummins	Keyes	Page	Townsend
Dillingham	Kirby	Penrose	Trammell
Fall	Knox	Sherman	Watson
Fernald	La Follette	Shields	Williams
Gay	McCormick	Smith, Ariz.
Henderson	McCumber	Smith, Md.

So the amendment of Mr. WALSH of Montana to Mr. EDGE's amendment was rejected.

Mr. WALSH of Montana. I announce that I shall request a further vote on the amendment offered by me when the bill reaches the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question now recurs upon the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE].

Mr. BORAH. Upon that I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from New Jersey whether he will accept a modification of his amendment by striking out, in line 4, the word "an" and inserting the words "a proposed," so that the language will read:

The duty of promptly entering into a proposed understanding or agreement.

Mr. EDGE. I have no objection to the modification. My object is to get this thing started, if possible; and I can not see that that will in any way interfere with the greater object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment will be modified as suggested. The yeas and nays are demanded on the amendment as modified.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. What is the question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. EDGE] as modified.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Assistant Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the previous roll call, I vote "yea."

Mr. JONES of Washington (when his name was called). In view of the votes of members of the minority, I am going to assume that the Senator from Virginia [Mr. SWANSON], if present, would vote as I shall vote, and I therefore take the liberty of voting. I vote "yea."

Mr. MOSES (when his name was called). Repeating the announcement which I made on the previous roll call, I vote "yea."

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. MCLEAN] to the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK], and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH of Maryland (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Vermont [Mr. DILLINGHAM]. I understand that if he were present he would vote as I shall vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina (when his name was called). Making the same announcement that I made before, I vote "yea."

Mr. SUTHERLAND (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as before, I vote "yea."

Mr. BORAH. I desire to state that the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] is detained from the Senate on account of illness. If present, he would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 58, nays 0, as follows:

YEAS—58.

Ashurst	Gooding	McKellar	Simmons
Ball	Gore	McNary	Smith, Ga.
Borah	Gronna	Moses	Smith, Md.
Brandegee	Hale	Myers	Smith, S. C.
Calder	Harris	New	Smoot
Capper	Harrison	Owen	Spencer
Curtis	Heflin	Phelan	Sutherland
Dial	Jones, N. Mex.	Phipps	Underwood
Edge	Jones, Wash.	Pittman	Wadsworth
Elkins	Kellogg	Poindexter	Walsh, Mass.
Fletcher	Kenyon	Pomerene	Walsh, Mont.
France	King	Ransdell	Warren
Frelinghuysen	La Follette	Reed	Willis
Gerry	Lenroot	Robinson
Glass	Lodge	Sheppard

NAYS—0.

NOT VOTING—38.

Beckham	Hitchcock	Nelson	Sterling
Chamberlain	Johnson, Calif.	Newberry	Swanson
Colt	Johnson, S. Dak.	Norris	Thomas
Culberson	Kendrick	Overman	Townsend
Cummins	Keyes	Page	Trammell
Dillingham	Kirby	Penrose	Watson
Fall	Knox	Sherman	Williams
Fernald	McCormick	Shields	Wolcott
Gay	McCumber	Smith, Ariz.
Henderson	McLean	Stanley

So Mr. EDGE's amendment was agreed to.

OSAGE INDIAN LANDS.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 4039) to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes," which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That all that part of the act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. L., p. 539), entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes," which reserves to the Osage Tribe the oil, gas, coal, or other minerals covered by the lands for the selection and division of which provision is made in that act is hereby amended so that the oil, gas, coal, or other minerals covered by said lands are reserved to the Osage Tribe for the period ending April 7, 1946: Provided, That all valid existing oil and gas leases on the 7th day of April, 1931, are hereby renewed upon the same terms and extended, subject to all other conditions and provisions thereof, until the 8th day of April, 1946, and as long thereafter as oil or gas is found in paying quantities, and the Secretary of the Interior and the Osage Council are hereby authorized and directed to offer for lease for oil and gas purposes all of the remaining portion of the unleased Osage land prior to April 8, 1931, offering the same annually at the rate of not less than one-tenth of the unleased area.

SEC. 2. That the bona fide owner or lessee of the surface of the land shall be compensated, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior in connection with oil and gas mining operations, for any damage that shall accrue after the passage of this act as a result of the use of such land for oil and gas mining purposes or out of damages to the land or crops thereon occasioned thereby, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to deny to the surface owner or lessee the right to appeal to the courts without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior, in the event he is dissatisfied with the amount of damages awarded him.

SEC. 3. That all members of the Osage Tribe of Indians are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States, but this shall not affect their interest in tribal property or the control of the United States over such property as is now or may hereafter be provided by law, and all restrictions against alienation of their allotment selections, both surplus and homestead, of all adult Osage Indians of less than one-half Indian blood, are hereby removed, and the Secretary of the Interior shall, within four months after the passage of this act, determine what members of said tribe are of less than one-half Indian blood, and their ages, and his determination thereof shall be final and conclusive. The homestead allotments of the members of the Osage Tribe shall not be subject to taxation if held by the original allottee prior to April 8, 1931.

SEC. 4. That from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be paid at the end of each fiscal quarter to each adult member of the Osage Tribe having a certificate of competency his or her pro rata share, either as a member of the tribe or heir of a deceased member, of the interest on trust funds, the bonus received from the sale of leases, and the royalties received during the previous fiscal quarter, and so long as the income is sufficient to pay to the adult members of said tribe not having a certificate of competency $1,000 quarterly except where incompetent adult members have legal guardians, in which case the income of such incompetents shall be paid to their legal guardians, and to pay for maintenance and education to the parents or natural guardians or legal guardians actually having minor members under 21 years of age personally in charge $500 quarterly out of the income of said minors all of said quarterly payments to legal guardians and adults, not having certificates of competency to be paid under the supervision of the superintendent of the Osage Agency, and to invest the remainder after paying all the taxes of such members either in United States bonds or in Oklahoma State, county, or school bonds, or place the same on time deposits at interest in banks in the State of Oklahoma for the benefit of each individual member under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That at the beginning of each fiscal year there shall first be reserved and set aside out of the Osage tribal funds available for that purpose a sufficient amount of money for the expenditures authorized by Congress out of the Osage funds for that fiscal year: Provided further, That all just existing individual obligations of adults not having certificates of competency outstanding upon the passage of this act, when approved by the superintendent of the Osage Agency, shall be paid out of the money of such individual as the same may be placed to his credit in addition to the quarterly allowance provided for herein.

SEC. 5. That the State of Oklahoma is authorized from and after the passage of this act to levy and collect a gross production tax upon all oil and gas produced in Osage County, Okla., and all taxes so collected shall be paid and distributed, and in lieu of all other State and county taxes levied upon the production of oil and gas as provided by the laws of Oklahoma, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay, through the proper officers of the Osage Agency, to the State of Oklahoma, from the amount received by the Osage Tribe of Indians as royalties from production of oil and gas, the per cent levied as gross production tax, to be distributed as provided by the laws of Oklahoma: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay, through the proper officers of the Osage Agency, to Osage County, Okla., an additional sum equal to 1 per cent of the amount received by the Osage Tribe of Indians as royalties from production of oil and gas, which sum shall be used by said county only for the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges therein: Provided further, That the proper officials of Osage County shall make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior showing that said fund has been used for road and bridge construction and maintenance only.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present disposition of the amendment. It will take no time.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President——

Mr. OWEN. I merely want to make a motion to concur in the House amendment.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Will it lead to discussion?

Mr. OWEN. None whatever.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I will withhold the motion I was about to make so that the Senate can take that action.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the amendment. Is there objection? The Chair hears none.

Mr. OWEN. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

BONUS FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I move that the Senate take a recess until to-morrow morning at 11 o'clock.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I will withhold the motion temporarily.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, on yesterday the Finance Committee made a report on the soldier bonus bill——

Mr. POINDEXTER. I yield only until we hear what the purpose of the Senator from New Mexico is.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator announced that he would state a parliamentary inquiry. The Chair has not yet heard his statement.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I do not yield the floor.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. On yesterday the report of the Finance Committee on the bill (H. R. 14157) to provide adjusted compensation for veterans of the World War, to provide revenue therefor, and for other purposes, known as the soldiers' bonus bill, was presented to the Senate, and at that time, or some time during the afternoon or evening an objection was made to a motion for the consideration of that report because of the second paragraph of Rule XXVI. The Chair ruled, and I think properly ruled, that under the second paragraph of Rule XXVI the report had to lie over one day. I desire to read that rule and get the view of the Chair upon it.

Mr. POINDEXTER. If the Senator will state his parliamentary inquiry, I have no objection.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Mr. President, I am trying to do that as clearly and briefly as I can, and if the Senator will not disturb me, I think I will do it in just a few minutes.

The second paragraph of Rule XXVI reads as follows:

All reports of committees and motions to discharge a committee from the consideration of the subject, and all subjects in which the committee shall be discharged, shall lie over one day for consideration, unless by unanimous consent the Senate shall otherwise direct.

The parliamentary inquiry is, does the day referred to in that rule mean a legislative day or a calendar day?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair thinks it means a legislative day.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Then, Mr. President——

Mr. POINDEXTER. Mr. President, I decline to yield further, and insist upon the Chair putting the motion which I have made, to take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington moves that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. That motion, as I take it, is debatable?

Mr. POINDEXTER. It is not debatable, Mr. President.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I submit that it is debatable.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President——

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. I will yield for a question, if anyone desires to ask a question.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I understood that I had the floor. I did not understand that the Senator from New Mexico had the floor, except as I yielded to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That is true, and the motion is not debatable.

Mr. LODGE. I demand the regular order.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. Then I move that the Senate adjourn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico moves that the Senate adjourn. That motion takes precedence of the motion of the Senator from Washington.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I hope the motion will be voted down.

Mr. JONES of New Mexico. On the motion I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. LENROOT. Was there not a unanimous consent agreement that when we recessed, it should be until 11 o'clock to-morrow?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No; there was a motion to take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow. There was no request for unanimous consent, and pending the motion to take a recess the Senator from New Mexico moved to adjourn.

Mr. POINDEXTER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will state his inquiry.

Mr. POINDEXTER. Can the Senator from New Mexico make a motion to adjourn pending a motion to take a recess?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By the express provision of the rules of the Senate a motion to adjourn takes precedence of a motion to take a recess.

Mr. POINDEXTER. In order that we may proceed with the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, I trust the motion to adjourn will be voted down.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. A motion to adjourn is not debatable. The question is on the motion of the Senator from New Mexico that the Senate adjourn, and on that motion the Senator from New Mexico demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Assistant Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GLASS (when his name was called). Making the same announcement as on the previous roll call, I vote "yea."

Mr. LODGE (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH]. Not seeing him in the Chamber, I transfer my pair to the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. KEYES] and vote "nay."

Mr. MOSES (when his name was called). Repeating the announcement which I made on the last vote, I vote "nay."

Mr. MYERS (when his name was called). I make the same announcement as to the transfer of my pair and vote "nay."

Mr. SMITH of South Carolina (when his name was called). Making the same announcement I did before, I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. KELLOGG. Has the senior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not.

Mr. KELLOGG. I transfer my pair with that Senator to the senior Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] and vote "nay."

Mr. ELKINS. Has the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] voted?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. He has not voted.

Mr. ELKINS. I transfer my pair with that Senator to the junior Senator from Iowa [Mr. KENYON] and vote "nay."

Mr. WARREN. I am paired with the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Michigan [Mr. TOWNSEND] and vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas, 15, nays 28, as follows:

YEAS—15.

Ashurst	Jones, N. Mex.	Ransdell	Underwood
Glass	King	Robinson	Walsh, Mass.
Harris	La Follette	Sheppard	Walsh, Mont.
Heflin	McKellar	Smith, S. C.

NAYS—28.

Ball	Elkins	Kellogg	Phipps
Brandegee	Fletcher	Lenroot	Poindexter
Calder	France	Lodge	Smoot
Capper	Frelinghuysen	McNary	Spencer
Curtis	Gooding	Moses	Wadsworth
Dial	Gronna	Myers	Warren
Edge	Hale	New	Willis

NOT VOTING—53.

Beckham	Hitchcock	Norris	Smith, Md.
Borah	Johnson, Calif.	Overman	Stanley
Chamberlain	Johnson, S. Dak.	Owen	Sterling
Colt	Jones, Wash.	Page	Sutherland
Culberson	Kendrick	Penrose	Swanson
Cummins	Kenyon	Phelan	Thomas
Dillingham	Keyes	Pittman	Townsend
Fall	Kirby	Pomerene	Trammell
Ferrald	Knox	Reed	Watson
Gay	McCormick	Sherman	Williams
Gerry	McCumber	Shields	Wolcott
Gore	McLean	Simmons
Harrison	Nelson	Smith, Ariz.
Henderson	Newberry	Smith, Ga.

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

DRAINAGE OF INDIAN ALLOTMENTS OF THE FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES.

Mr. OWEN. I report back from the Committee on Indian Affairs the message of the President of the United States returning without approval the bill (H. R. 517) amending an act to provide for drainage of Indian allotments of the Five Civilized Tribes, approved March 27, 1914, and recommend that the bill do pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding, and submit a written report (No. 825) thereon and ask that the report may be printed in the RECORD.

The report is as follows:

The Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 517) amending an act to provide for drainage of Indian allotments of the Five Civilized Tribes, approved March 27, 1914, together with the objections of the President thereto, having reconsidered said bill and objections thereto, report the same back to the Senate with the recommendation that said bill do pass, the objections of the President to the contrary notwithstanding. The bill as passed made only the following amendments to the existing statute: On page 2, line 10, it struck out the words "or the United States." This language is surplusage and does not change the law. On page 2, line 25, it struck out the words: "Provided further, That in any event such assessment on any Indian allotment shall not exceed $15 per acre, and no such assessment shall be made unless the Indian allottee affected or his legal guardian shall consent thereto: And."

The President withheld his signature solely on the following ground, without explanation:

"Because it seems to me to reduce the number of safeguards from around the property of our Indians when there is no apparent necessity for doing so."

The necessity for the change in the existing law is to permit the assessment of a higher rate than $15 per acre because of the increased cost in constructing drainage since the passage of the original act, approved March 27, 1914, and to take away the right of an allottee to veto a drainage district by refusing his assent.

The amendment does not subject the land of the Indian to assessment, but only moneys in the hands of the Interior Department, and then only after the Secretary of the Interior shall have caused a review of the schedules of assessment against the tract of land and reviewed the land assessed to ascertain whether such Indian allottee, or his lands, not subject to taxation, have been assessed more than their pro rata share as compared with other lands allotted in said district similarly situated and deriving like benefits. These overflow lands are of very little value, but after proper drainage is established thereon their value is materially enhanced, and the drainage district is of benefit alike to the Indian allottees and the white citizens who own lands intermingled with the Indian lands. The necessity for drainage districts is well known and the Indian is fully protected. This bill was passed by the House of Representatives and the Senate upon favorable reports of the Secretary of the Interior.

Your committee recommends the passage of the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the bill pass, two-thirds of the Senators present having voted in the affirmative."

RECESS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I renew my motion that the Senate take a recess until 11 o'clock to-morrow morning.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock midnight) the Senate took a recess until Wednesday, March 2, 1921, at 11 o'clock a. m.

CONFIRMATIONS.

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate March 1 (legislative day of February 24), 1921.

COAST GUARD.

To be district superintendents.

Ralph T. Crowley.
Martin W. Rasmussen.

To be ensigns.

Harold G. Bradbury.
Irving W. Buckalew.
Arthur G. Hall.
Norman H. Leslie.
Merlin O'Neil.
Paul K. Perry.
Noble G. Ricketts.
Carleton T. Smith.
Ephraim Zoole.

STEAMBOAT-INSPECTION SERVICE.

To be supervising inspector.

William J. Macdonald.

COAST AND GEODETIC SURVEY.

To be hydrographic and geodetic engineers.

Jack Senior.
Raymond Pugh Eyman.
Leo Cuthbert Dyke.
Chester Howard Ober.
George Clay Jones.
Charles Shaw.
Carl Alexander Egner.
Leroy Preston Raynor.
Lyman Davis Graham.
Max Orville Witherbee.
Payson Austin Perrin.
Roland Drew Horne.
George Lawrence Bean.
Charles Keith Green.

To be junior hydrographic and geodetic engineers.

Benjamin Haines Rigg.
Oliver Scott Reading.
Charles Justus Itter, jr.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, March 1, 1921.

The House met at 10.30 a. m.

The Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., Chaplain Emeritus, offered the following prayer:

O Thou great Father Soul in whom we live and move and have our being, draw near to us as we draw near to Thee, and fill our hearts with the holy spirit of truth to fit us for the arduous duties of the hour. Be with these, the people's Representatives, in these closing hours of the Sixty-sixth Congress, that their work may stand as a record in the history of this great country.

Our hearts go out in deepest sympathy and love to the Member who is now at the point of death and his beloved family. Be with him, O God, and help him through this hour of transition, and bring him finally to Thee, in the spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ, our Savior. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

ELECTION OF A CHAPLAIN.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I move the election of Rev. Dr. James S. Montgomery as Chaplain, to fill the unexpired term caused by the resignation of Dr. Couden, for the remainder of this session.

The motion was agreed to.

Rev. Dr. James Shera Montgomery appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office prescribed by law.

GEN. STEPHEN D. RAMSEUR.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a unanimous-consent request. Our colleague, Maj. STEDMAN, delivered an address, together with Col. Du Pont, at the unveiling of a tablet at Winchester, Va., recently to the memory of Gen. Ramseur, who was mortally wounded in the Battle of Cedar Creek. Gen. Ramseur was a very young man, I believe the youngest major general commissioned on either side. He was an intimate friend of a great many of the Union generals, among them Col. Du Pont. When he was mortally wounded at Cedar Creek he was taken to the headquarters of Gen. Sheridan, and was there treated by his own surgeon as well as the Union surgeon, and given the utmost consideration. These two men, one a Confederate officer, our own colleague, and the other a Union soldier who himself had been a fellow student with Gen. Ramseur and who was at his bedside and received his last words when he died—these two men under the circumstances form such an illuminating, pathetic, and admirable scene of what is really American recognition of worth, and the whole transaction in which a Confederate general was received with such distinction and care and tenderness in the headquarters of a Union general, under the most tender solicitude of those with whom but a few hours before he was in deadly conflict—the whole thing is in such striking contrast to the brutality shown by the Germans and their allies in the late war to the prisoners when they were captured that it seems to me it merits calling the special attention of Congress and others to this wonderful, striking, and pathetic scene.

Besides that, this Winchester campaign and Gen. Sheridan's final victory are reviewed by both of these men briefly; the Battle of Cedar Creek is also described, so that it is of historical worth.

For that reason I ask unanimous consent that these two addresses may be inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Iowa?

There was no objection.

The addresses are as follows:

"MAJ. GEN. STEPHEN D. RAMSEUR.

"(By Maj. CHARLES M. STEDMAN.)

"(The following address, by Maj. CHARLES M. STEDMAN, Congressman from the fifth North Carolina district, was delivered last week near Winchester, Va., at the unveiling of a bronze tablet on the spot where Gen. Ramseur died.)

"In remote ages far removed from the era in which we dwell, in the centuries of the Roman and Grecian Empires, when their civilization was in the meridian splendor of its greatness, monuments were erected to their illustrious dead to mark their resting place or to perpetuate in the memory of mankind some epoch in their history, or to designate some spot made sacred by deeds of patriotic valor, that the traveler from other lands may halt his footsteps as he approaches the sacred shrine and realize that he is treading on hallowed ground.

"In Egypt in the days of her ancient glory, when renowned in arms and art, the pyramids were reared more than 2,000 years before Christ. These wonderful monuments were erected by the Shepherd Kings or Caphtorim as tombs for themselves and descendants, that their reign might not be forgotten. These facts have been established by their exploration in recent years and the deciphering of Egyptian writings confirming the statements made by the Grecian historians Herodotus, Diodorus, and Strabo.

"The erection of monuments can not be said to have been transmitted by any one people to another. It is a custom born of lofty sentiment. It is an intuitive idea which now prevails amongst all nations. The higher their ideals the more universal is the custom. Everywhere throughout this broad land of ours monuments dot the landscape. They are the memorials of the love and gratitude of a great people for those who have contributed to their glory in war and preeminence in peace.

"The beautiful bronze tablet to be unveiled to-day and the granite column to be erected are intended to mark the house in which Maj. Gen. Stephen D. Ramseur died. I have been invited to deliver an address upon this occasion. I know full well how inadequate I am to do justice to so splendid a theme as the portrayal of the life and career of Gen. Ramseur. My heart has prompted me, however, to accept the invitation tendered me. In the biographical sketch of the life of one whose character will ever be resplendent in the galaxy of great names which North Carolina has furnished to the world, I am necessarily restricted to-day. If in the poor tribute to his memory which I shall render I shall say aught of praise which any may ascribe to that love for the great deeds of the Confederate soldier which shall ever remain with those who marched under the same banner during the storm of war, I call to witness every surviving comrade who was with him in those days when character was put to its test and with one accord they will answer: 'All you have spoken is true. Much that belonged to his noble spirit has been left unsaid.'

"In the preparation of my address I have been greatly assisted by the admirable sketch of his life made by Gen. William R. Cox, who was with him in his valley campaign, as well as to the beautiful memoir of his early days and his military career prepared by the Rev. Dr. E. H. Harding, who was his chaplain and connection, and also to the personal recollection of Gen. Ramseur by Hon. David S. Schenck, his brother-in-law, which were furnished me through the kindness and courtesy of Judge Schenck's family, all of which I have read with great pleasure. I have quoted from them freely. They should be filed and preserved in every household in our southern land, that those who follow after us may learn from the life of Maj. Gen. Stephen D. Ramseur the lesson of courage, of truth, of morality, of virtue in its broadest sense. His life was heroic, picturesque, and exalted. It appeals to all who read the pages of history.

"He was born on the 31st day of May, 1837, in the village of Lincolnton, the county seat of Lincoln County, N. C., amongst a people who have ever been distinguished for their refinement as well as their attachment to lofty ideals.

"He was the second child of Jacob A. and Lucy M. Ramseur. He inherited from his ancestors patriotic sentiment, loyalty to and attachment for the land of his birth. They fought at Kings Mountain and Eutaw Springs. To his mother, who was a lady of rare excellence of character, he was indebted largely for the mental and moral training which made up a character seldom equaled in those great qualities essential to success and lasting renown. Hon. David Schenck, who married Miss Sallie Wilfong, her second daughter, thus speaks of Mrs. Lucy M. Ramseur:

"As a young lady she was said to have been beautiful and attractive. I knew her intimately from 1849 to her death. She was a woman of great force of character. To a judgment clear and firm she united gentleness, tenderness, and sympathy. Her manners were courteous and fascinating. She was an active and devoted member of the Presbyterian Church, and brought up her children in the teachings of the shorter catechism from their early youth. It was to her that Gen. Ramseur owed the mental and moral foundations of his character.

"His elementary education was received in the schools of Lincolnton and Milton in his native State. At an early age he manifested a strong inclination for military life, but, being unable to secure an appointment to the Military Academy at West Point, he entered the freshman class in Davidson College, North Carolina, where he remained about 18 months. Gen. D. H. Hill, who was at that time professor of mathematics in the college, became interested in his aspirations and mentioned his splendid qualities to the Hon. Burton Craige, who gave him the appointment he had so much at heart. He was graduated at West Point in 1860.

"A large majority of young men in Army life at first prefer the Artillery service, and such was his choice.

"He was commissioned second lieutenant by brevet.

"Lieut. Ramseur was in the United States Army only a few months before the breaking out of hostilities between the States—from June, 1860, to April, 1861. During that period he was occupied in the performance of his duties at Fortress Monroe. In April, 1861, he resigned his commission in the United States Army and tendered his services to the government of the Confederate States at Montgomery. He did not leave the United States Army without pain and distress. He loved the flag of his fathers. But actuated by a supreme sense of duty to the State of his birth, to which he believed his first allegiance due, he hesitated not a moment, but hastened to a conflict whose echoes have reverberated around the world.

"On the 22d of April, 1861, he was commissioned first lieutenant of Artillery and ordered to the Mississippi Department. But before reaching his post of duty he received a telegram stating that he had been elected captain of the Ellis Light Artillery.

"This battery was being organized in Raleigh and had within its ranks young men who represented the very elite of the young men of North Carolina. It was named in honor of the very efficient and beloved governor, whose early death thereafter brought sorrow to all the people of the State he served so well.

"Its officers were Manly, Saunders, Guion, and Bridgers. They were entirely ignorant of Artillery drill. They knew that the membership of their battery was of the very highest order and they desired to see it the pride and glory of the State. They thought not of themselves, but of their country. Their wish was fulfilled.

"They requested Gov. Ellis to furnish them a commander who would bring the battery to the highest state of efficiency. He immediately without hesitation named Lieut. Ramseur. The wisdom of the choice was afterwards made apparent to all. The battery under the training of Capt. Ramseur attained an excellency in drill and an esprit de corps which was surpassed by none other in the incomparable army of northern Virginia.

"Late in the summer of 1861 Capt. Ramseur's battery was sent to Virginia and stationed at Smithfield, on the south side of the James, and received unlimited praise from all who witnessed its wonderful proficiency in every requirement of the Artillery service.

"In the spring of 1862 Capt. Ramseur was ordered to report with his battery to Gen. J. B. Magruder, at Yorktown, who, with a force of less than 15,000 men, confronted McClellan, who was advancing up the peninsula with more than 100,000 men for the capture of Richmond. Gen. Magruder was fully aware of the great worth of Capt. Ramseur. He had known him in the old Army. He was promoted to the rank of major, and all the Artillery of the right wing of Magruder's forces was placed under his command. Here was his first active service in the field.

"McClellan was delayed more than a month by the strategy of Magruder. In the meanwhile Capt. Ramseur was elected lieutenant colonel of the Third North Carolina Regiment of Volunteers, but declined the position. Afterwards he accepted the colonelcy of the Forty-ninth North Carolina Regiment of Infantry.

"He had become greatly attached to his battery and left it with regret, but with complete confidence that Manly and its other officers would maintain its splendid standard of efficiency. He was not mistaken.

"Soon thereafter the Battle of Williamsburg was fought. The battery commanded by Capt. Manly won the applause of all who witnessed its superb conduct. Its fame extended throughout the Army. Years ago I heard Col. D. K. McRae, who commanded the Fifth North Carolina Regiment at Williamsburg, whose charge gave him immortality, speak more than once of the heroism of Capt. Manly upon that field and the destructive fire of his battery.

"With eager joy the historian gilds his pages with the great achievements of artillery and lingers long over their recital. Can no son of the South be found to tell of the deeds of Pegram, of Pelham, of Raskell, and Manly, who reversed the ancient method of fighting with artillery at a long and safe distance and brought it to its highest perfection, always advancing to the front line of battle when the occasion demanded?

"The Forty-ninth Regiment, of which Col. Ramseur assumed command, had just been enlisted, and had been assembled at Raleigh at the camp of instruction. The men were entirely ignorant of infantry tactics and other requirements requisite for active service in the field. Col. Ramseur soon placed the impress of his character as a soldier upon the regiment, and at an early day it was ready to go to the front. This regiment participated in the "seven days fighting" around Richmond and at Malvern Hill. Whilst leading it Col. Ramseur received a severe wound, from which he never fully recovered. He was shot through the right arm above the elbow and was carried to Richmond to the house of Mr. M. S. Valentine. Every possible kindness and attention was shown him, but his wound was of such a serious nature that he was unable to go to his home in North Carolina for more than a month. Whilst at home, and before he was able to return to the field, he was commissioned a brigadier general. This high honor for one so young in years was doubtless due to the conspicuous bravery and reckless daring displayed by him at Malvern Hill, which elicited unstinted praise from the brave but unfortunate Magruder. With that modesty which was so attractive to his friends, he hesitated to accept the honor tendered him. In October, 1862, although entirely unable to use his right hand, he went to Richmond and called upon President Davis and told him of his doubts as to the propriety of accepting the high position conferred upon him.

"President Davis told him to accept the commission and return to his home in North Carolina and remain there until his health was restored. Gen. Ramseur, however, did not return to his home, but went directly to the Army, and was assigned to the command of the brigade of Gen. George B. Anderson. Gen. Anderson was an officer of great merit, and his place could not be properly filled by any ordinary man.

"The eminent qualifications of Gen. Ramseur for the duties devolving upon him, his chivalrous nature, his pure character without a blemish, his considerate care for the comfort of his men, at once won not only their respect and confidence but the enthusiastic love of all.

"The brigade at the time he assumed command consisted of four North Carolina regiments—the Second, Col. William R. Cox; Fourth, Col. Bryan Grimes; Fourteenth, Col. R. Tyler Bennett; and Thirtieth, Col. Francis M. Parker, an array of names which recalls the memories of the marshals of the Empire when Napoleon was in the zenith of his glory. It was in Rodes's division of Jackson's corps. No event of importance connected with his history transpired until the Chancellorsville campaign.

"On Friday, May 1, Ramseur's brigade left a point near Hamiltons Crossing, where they were in camp, and marched in the direction of Chancellorsville, leading the advance of Gen. Rodes's division. About 7 miles from Fredericksburg the brigade was detached from Rodes's division and ordered to report to Maj. Gen. Anderson. Soon thereafter the enemy was encountered and driven back in great disorder by Ramseur's brigade, with Gen. Posey on its right and Gen. Wright on its left. Night closed the advance, Ramseur's brigade sleeping on their arms with a strong picket line in the front.

"The advance of Ramseur's brigade on Friday afternoon was witnessed by Stonewall Jackson and Gen. A. P. Hill, who thanked Gen. Ramseur on the field for the splendid conduct of his men.

"On Saturday, May 2, about sunrise, Ramseur's brigade marched by a circuitous route to the rear of the enemy, and about 5 o'clock in the afternoon were ordered to attack. The brigade was directed to support Brig. Gen. Colquitt, with orders to overlap his right by one regiment, and it was so placed.

"Saturday night Rodes's division, with Ramseur's brigade, occupied the last line of battle within the entrenchments from which the corps of Siegel had been driven in abject terror.

"On Sunday morning, May 3, Ramseur's brigade advanced about 9 o'clock to the support of the second line. The charge of the brigade upon the last stronghold of the enemy was made in view of Maj. Gen. J. E. B. Stuart and Maj. Gen. R. E. Rodes, who pronounced it the most glorious charge of that most glorious day.

"The Battle of Chancellorsville is considered by many well-informed military critics as the most brilliant of the many victories won by Gen. Robert E. Lee. In this fight Gen. Ramseur won the admiration of all who witnessed his splendid conduct and established forever his reputation as one of the ablest commanders of his rank in the Army of Northern Virginia.

"As he rode along the line of battle dressed in full uniform, the enthusiasm of his men knew no bounds. Many of them threw their hats in the air and cheered for North Carolina.

"In this battle Gen. Ramseur, although severely wounded, refused to leave the field, and was especially mentioned by Gen. Rodes, as well as by Gen. A. P. Hill, who was also wounded, and by Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, who succeeded Gen. Hill in command.

"His marked ability and reckless exposure of his life created a profound impression upon Stonewall Jackson, which he made manifest when mortally wounded by sending a special message to Gen. Lee commending to his notice Gen. Ramseur. Nor did his high qualities escape the attention of Gen. Lee himself, as will be seen by reference to a letter from Gen. Lee to Gov. Vance, of North Carolina, in which he names the brigade and regimental commanders of Ramseur's brigade as among the best of their respective grades in the army:

"HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
"June 4, 1863.

"His Excellency ZEBULON B. VANCE,
"Governor of North Carolina, Raleigh.

"GOVERNOR: I have the honor to call the attention of your excellency to the reduced condition of Brig. Gen. Ramseur's brigade. Its ranks have been much thinned by the casualties of the battles in which it has been engaged, in all of which it has rendered conspicuous service. I consider its brigade and regimental commanders as among the best of their respective grades in the army, and in the Battle of Chancellorsville, where the brigade was much distinguished and suffered severely, Gen. Ramseur was among those whose conduct was especially commended to my notice by Lieut. Gen. Jackson in a message sent to me after he was wounded. I am very desirous that the efficiency of this brigade should be increased by filling its ranks, and respectfully ask that, if it be in your power, you will send on recruits for its various regiments as soon as possible. If this can not be done, I would recommend that two additional regiments be sent to it if they can be had. I am satisfied that the men could be used in no better way to render valuable service to the country, and win credit for themselves and their State.

"I am with great respect,
"Your obedient servant,

"R. E. LEE, General.

"The pages of history will be searched in vain for any higher tribute paid to any soldier in that age of glory than was rendered to Gen. Ramseur by Gen. Robert E. Lee and his great lieutenant, Stonewall Jackson.

"Gen. Ramseur was with Lee when he invaded Pennsylvania and in all the engagements of that campaign fought with his accustomed valor and added renown to the glory won by him at Chancellorsville.

"In the first day's fight at Gettysburg the Confederate forces drove the Federal troops before them in utter rout and pursued them through the town.

"When Ramseur's brigade with Rodes's division occupied a high ridge known as Oak Hill, he urged and most earnestly insisted that the pursuit be continued and Cemetery Heights be captured.

"With the eye of a born soldier he discerned the necessities of the situation at a glance.

"Had his advice been followed, Gettysburg would have told a different tale.

"When our army went into winter quarters near Orange Courthouse after its return from Pennsylvania and there was no possibility of a renewal of active hostilities at an early period, he obtained leave of absence and went to North Carolina to consummate the most cherished wish of his heart—his marriage to Miss Ellen E. Richmond, of Milton, N. C., to whom he was devotedly attached and to whom he had been long engaged. Their marriage had been delayed by the exigencies of his service in the army.

"They were married on the 22d of October, 1863. The world became all sunshine and happiness to both in their mutual affection.

"The constant and uninterrupted defeats of the Army of the Potomac by Lee had caused great dissatisfaction in the North and restless apprehension as to the final result of the war.

"Gen. Grant had met with success in the West and he was made commander of all the armies of the United States, with unlimited resources of men and every appliance of war.

"He crossed the Rapidan on the 4th of May and on the morning of the 5th, with more than 100,000 men, advanced into the dense thickets of the wilderness. Here, to his amazement, he was attacked by Lee and badly worsted.

"In this battle, as always and everywhere, Ramseur's brigade measured up to the full extent of its duty.

"From the battle field of the Wilderness Grant moved to the right of Lee, in the direction of Spotsylvania Court House, hoping to place his army between Lee and Richmond.

"Again, to his surprise, he found Lee in front of him. Here was fought one of the most sanguinary battles of war. Ramseur won laurels which shall never fade so long as the love of chivalric courage and devotion to duty appeals to the hearts of mankind.

"There was severe fighting on the 11th, when Ramseur crossed our works and drove the enemy from our front on the right.

"During that night the guns in front of Johnson's division, at a point known as the 'Salient,' were withdrawn by order of Gen. Lee, who apprehended that Grant would withdraw and continue his march toward Richmond. In some way this fact became known to Gen. Hancock, who commanded the Federal troops in front of that part of our line.

"Early in the morning, before it was entirely light, he assaulted our lines and captured our works, taking many prisoners. It was an hour of peril. To Ramseur was intrusted the grave responsibility of reestablishing the line of our original works.

"I have been unable to find anywhere a description of the conduct of Ramseur's brigade in this terrific contest more graphic or more true than that given by a correspondent of the London Morning Herald, who was allowed free admission to Lee's headquarters. It appeared at the time in the London papers and in other papers elsewhere, but it can not be published too often. It reads as follows:

"The Federalists continued to hold their ground in the salient and along the line of works to the left of that angle within a short distance of the position of Monoghan's (Hays's) Louisianians. Ramseur's North Carolinians of Rodes's division formed, covering Monoghan's right, and being ordered to charge, were received by the enemy with a stubborn resistance. The desperate character of the struggle along that brigade front was told terribly in the hoarseness and rapidity of its musketry. So close was the fighting there for a time that the fire of friend and foe rose up rattling in one common road. Ramseur's North Carolinians dropped in the ranks thick and fast, but still he continued, with glorious constancy, to gain ground foot by foot. Pressing under a fierce fire, resolutely on, on, on, the struggle was about to become one of hand to hand when the Federalists shrank from the bloody trial. Driven back, they were not defeated. The earthworks being at the moment in their immediate rear, they bounded on the opposite side, and, having thus placed them in their front, they renewed the conflict. A rush of an instant brought Ramseur's men to the side of the defense; and, though they crouched close to the slopes, under enfilade from the guns of the salient, their musketry rattled in deep and deadly fire on the enemy that stood in overwhelming numbers but a few yards from their front. Those brave North Carolinians had thus, in one of the hottest conflicts of the day, succeeded in driving the enemy from the works that had been occupied during the previous night by a brigade which, until the 12th of May, had never yet yielded to a foe—the Stonewall.

"For 20 hours without intermission the men of Ramseur's Brigade fought to reestablish the line of our works. Wherever the strife was most deadly and the carnage greatest there could be seen their heroic leader. He had three horses shot under him and was again severely wounded but refused to leave the field.

"In recognition of his splendid conduct he was promoted to the rank of major general and assigned to the command of Early's division, receiving his commission in June, 1864.

"The green fields of the beautiful Valley of Virginia will ever be associated with the name of Ramseur, whose wondrous deeds have invested them with a new and unfading charm.

"When Gen. Early was ordered to the Valley of Virginia to arrest the march of Hunter, who was advancing in the direction of Lynchburg and devastating the entire country through which he passed, he carried with him Ramseur's, Rodes's, and Gordon's divisions.

"Early united with Breckinridge at Lynchburg. Hunter, who was in camp near that city, learning of the reinforcements to Breckinridge, became panic stricken and retreated during the night. He was pursued by our troops and overtaken at Liberty, where Ramseur's Division attacked and drove him through that place. Hunter continued his precipitate retreat and escaped.

"Early crossed the Potomac into Maryland and entered Frederick, where the Federal troops made a slight show of resistance, Ramseur driving them before him. The Federal authorities at Washington now became greatly alarmed and ordered Gen. Wallace to place such troops as were available between Gen. Early and Washington.

"Wallace confronted the Confederate forces at Monocacy Bridge. Gen. McCausland, with our Cavalry, crossed the river and was promptly assisted by Gordon.

"Gen. Ramseur, with his division, passed over the railroad bridge and engaged Wallace, who was badly defeated with a loss of many prisoners besides his killed and wounded. The Confederate troops continued to advance until they were within 5 miles of Washington. The arrival of additional troops to reinforce those defending Washington caused Gen. Early to retreat to the lower valley, where he remained until ordered to rejoin Lee.

"On the 19th of September at Winchester Gen. Early was defeated by Sheridan, his defeat being largely due to the dislocation of his divisions. Here Ramseur, with 1,700 men, fought the whole of Sheridan's army from early dawn until nearly 10 o'clock. His splendid ability and unrivaled courage cast a radiance upon that field of disaster. With his division unaided he halted Sheridan's advance in the morning for hours, and again later in the afternoon he repelled Sheridan's advance. Upon this field he exhibited the highest order of ability as a commander.

"The conduct of Ramseur at Winchester as well as the marked ability exhibited by him bears a striking similarity to that of Marshal Lannes at Aspern, who conducted the retreat of the French Army and who was mortally wounded and afterwards died in the arms of his Emperor.

"There was no event during his entire military career which could even suggest a mistake or error of judgment on his part, unless it be his moving out from Winchester, where he had been left by Early, and attacking Averill near Stephenson's depot. In so doing he committed no error. He acted just as Gen. Robert E. Lee or Stonewall Jackson or any enterprising officer of courage would have done. He had been informed by Gen. Vaughn, commanding the Cavalry, that Averill, with a small force, was at Stephenson's depot and could be surprised and captured. Relying upon this information Gen. Ramseur advanced against Averill, who, with a large force of both Infantry and Cavalry, repulsed his attack with considerable loss to Ramseur. The error or mistake, if any, was due entirely to information furnished by Gen. Vaughn, who is credited by all properly informed as to the facts with the responsibility for Gen. Ramseur's attack.

"Gen. Rodes, a most efficient officer, having been killed at Winchester, Gen. Ramseur was assigned to the command of his divisions.

"After his defeat at Winchester, Gen. Early retreated to Fishers Hill. Sheridan followed, and on the 22d of September attacked. In this engagement Ramseur's brigade maintained its high reputation.

"Gen. William R. Cox, under order from Gen. Ramseur, withdrew his brigade from the line and went in the direction of the firing. His brigade was formed across the turnpike over which our forces were retreating and had a desperate conflict with a portion of Sheridan's army, repulsing them in a severe encounter.

"After the fight at Fishers Hill Gen. Early fell back to the lower passes of the Blue Ridge, Sheridan following him as far as Staunton.

"After destroying the Central Railroad, he retreated up the valley and occupied a strongly entrenched camp. Gen. Early pursued him.

"Sheridan's camp was plainly visible from our signal station, and it was discovered that the Federal left flank could be easily surprised and overwhelmed, but it required a long and circuitous march.

"This movement was intrusted to Gen. Gordon, who, with Ramseur's division, moved under the darkness of the night and with great secrecy. Gordon attacked early in the morning.

"Sheridan's headquarters were captured by our cavalry and practically his entire army was demoralized. Before 9 o'clock our forces had captured most of their artillery and over 1,500 prisoners.

"Sheridan was at Winchester on his return from Washington. He met his soldiers retreating along the road without the semblance of order—their panic, to some extent, had subsided. Sheridan knew that Longstreet was not with Early and that his army was nearly three times the number of the force opposed to him. By the aid of Gen. Wright with his division, who alone of all of his army retained an organization, he rallied his men and ordered an attack about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Ramseur chose the line of his defense with great skill and successfully resisted the advance of the Federal forces. Kershaw's division, however, gave way and Ramseur's line being outflanked, his troops also became alarmed and in his effort to hold them firm he fell mortally wounded.

"Gen. Early in a letter to Brig. Gen. Bryan Grimes thus speaks of his conduct on that day:

"HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
"October 31, 1864.

"Maj. Gen. Ramseur has often proved his courage and his capacity to command; but never did these qualities shine more conspicuously than on the afternoon of the 19th of this month, when, after two divisions on his left had given way and his own was doing the same thing, he rallied a small band and for one hour and a quarter held in check the enemy, until he was shot down himself in endeavoring to stop those who were retiring from the field. I had occasion to point them to the gallant stand made by Ramseur with his small party; and if his spirit could have animated those who left him thus battling, the 19th of October would have had a far different history. He met the death of a hero, and with his fall, the last hope of saving the day was lost. Gen. Ramseur was a soldier of whom his State has reason to be proud—he was brave, chivalrous, and capable.

"Respectfully,

"J. A. EARLY,
"Lieutenant General.

"Brig. Gen. BRYAN GRIMES,
"Commanding Division."

"On the day preceding the Battle of Cedar Creek Gen. Ramseur learned of the birth of his little girl. His face was radiant with joy as he appeared upon the field of battle in full uniform with a small bouquet fastened upon the lapel of his coat. Death had no terror for him. He was the cynosure of all eyes as he rode over the field wherever his presence was necessary. He had two horses killed under him and was mortally wounded when mounting a third late in the afternoon. He was captured and carried to Sheridan's headquarters, where he received both attention and kindness.

"Maj. R. R. Hutchinson, acting adjutant general, was with him when he received his fatal wound and was also captured whilst having him removed from the field.

"He wrote to Mrs. Ramseur after the death of her heroic husband the following letter, full of pathos and giving a graphic account of events and scenes connected with his last hours:

"NEAR STRASBURG, VA., October 20, 1864.

"Mrs. S. D. RAMSEUR,
"Milton, N. C.

"DEAR MADAM: I do not know how to write to you; how to express my deep sympathy in your grevious affliction; but the Christian soldier who has gone before us to that other world has asked me to do it, and I must not shrink from the performance of this duty, however painful. I am writing by the side of him whose last thought was of you and his God, his country and his duty. He died this day at 27 minutes past 10 o'clock a. m., and had at least the consolation of having by his side some who wore the same uniform and served in the same holy cause as himself. His last moments were peaceful, his wounds were painful, but his hope in Christ led him to endure all patiently. He received his mortal wound yesterday afternoon (October 19) between the hours of 5 and 6 p. m. at the post of honor and of danger, where he always was. Our troops had fallen back a short distance but had re-formed and were stubbornly contesting a position on a hill which the enemy attacked from three sides. He exposed himself to every shot, cheering and encouraging all. I was not far from him when I saw his horse shot; he procured another, which was shot also, and immediately after he received his fatal wound (the second), all in the space of a very few minutes. I ran over to him, got some men, and bore him to the rear, your brother joining us on the way. I then went off after an ambulance, found it, but saw on returning with it that he had been left, as I thought, in the enemy's line. This fear was soon after dissipated, however, by seeing him on Capt. Randolph's horse, the captain running alongside and supporting him. We got him then to the ambulance I had brought up. I thought he was safe then, not knowing how dangerous was his wound, and remained with the rear guard. When I was subsequently captured by the enemy's cavalry, I was carried to Gen. Sheridan's headquarters, and learning that Gen. Ramseur had been captured, asked and obtained permission to remain with him. The road had been blocked up by wagons, causing a delay that gave the enemy time to get up and take him prisoner, just south of Strasburg. Many of his former friends (West Pointers) called to see him yesterday and to-day and offered every assistance in their power, Gen. Sheridan among the number. He was taken to Gen. Sheridan's headquarters and made as comfortable as circumstances would permit. Dr. James Gillespie (Cutshaw's Battalion of Artillery), a Confederate surgeon, assisted by the enemy's surgeon, attended to him and did all that could be done under the circumstances. He suffered a good deal from his wound, the ball having entered his right side, penetrating the right and left lungs and lodging near the left side. But the end was peaceful and quiet. He spoke continually of you and sent very many messages to his family, but above all to his wife. He told the ambulance driver to tell Gen. Hoke that he 'died a Christian and had done his duty.' He told me to 'give his love and send some of his hair to his darling wife,' and often wished he could 'see his wife and little child before he died.' He told me to tell you he had a 'firm hope in Christ, and hoped to meet you hereafter.' He died as became a Confederate soldier and a firm believer.

"I inclose the lock of hair he desired sent you.

"Respectfully,

"R. R. HUTCHINSON,
"Major and A. A. G. P. A., C. S."

"Wolfe died upon the heights of Abraham the death of a hero, and as his spirit took its flight to another world, left as a legacy to his countrymen words which will forever live.

"Nelson at Trafalgar illustrated by his conduct and speech his supreme sense of duty to England and her glory.

"The Scotchman who died at Waterloo with his bagpipe in his hand, by the saber of the Cuirassier of the Guard, whilst thinking of Ben Lothian and playing an air of his native land, has been immortalized by Victor Hugo. But which of these three—aye, who of those who live in song and story is more worthy of the crown of immortality than the young hero from North Carolina, who died in the house where we are assembled to-day?

"The kind treatment extended to him after having been carried to Sheridan's headquarters can not be forgotten. He was attended by a Confederate surgeon assisted by the surgeons of Sheridan's command. Sheridan, Custer, and many of his former friends, who were with him at West Point, gathered around the bedside of the dying soldier and rendered all possible assistance. His conduct on the battle fields of the valley had won the admiration of friend and foe alike.

"His body was embalmed by friends in Winchester and sent through our lines and afterwards carried to Lincolnton and buried in the Episcopal churchyard beside his father and mother.

"His wife, who ever carried his image in her heart, died in Concord, N. C., in 1900, and was buried beside him. His last thoughts on earth were of her. Visions of the fields of his glory faded from his memory. Her face was before him and lighted up his dying bed. 'Tell my darling wife I die with a firm faith in Christ and trust to meet her hereafter,' were his last words. They dwell together in the realms of the blessed.

"Wonderful as were his achievements as a military commander, more attractive than the glory won upon the fields of his renown was his Christian character and his faith in the Providence of God. His life was as stainless as that of a pure woman.

"On the 22d day of April, 1858, he was received into the communion of the Presbyterian Church of Lincolnton. He loved the church of his choice. Rev. Dr. E. H. Harding, in his sketch of his life, says:

"The writer of this sketch passed the last two years of the war in close intimacy with Gen. Ramseur. He saw much of his Christian character, and had many conversations with him on religious subjects. During this period he always expressed himself as trusting in Jesus. He read his Bible, and was regularly at church, and always promoted religious observance among his troops. The last winter of his life Mrs. Ramseur spent with him in camp. He had prayers regularly in his family, and read religious books. He spoke particularly of his enjoyments of Jay's 'Christian Contemplation,' a book on the Christian character. He also read his Bible a great deal, and his faith gradually became brighter, more fixed, and calmer. The last sermon he heard was in New Market from the text, 'To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna and will give him a white stone.' He enjoyed it and spoke of his satisfaction in it.

"He thus describes his personal appearance:

"In person Gen. Ramseur was of medium height, his figure was slender but well proportioned, very erect, and of fine martial bearing. His brow was large, prominent, well-rounded; his eye large and black and the whole expression open, winning, and striking. His face indicated in a most remarkable manner loftiness of character and purity of sentiment. He was a fine horseman, sitting upon his horse with grace and managing him with skill.

"The military ability of Gen. Ramseur has been questioned by none. Every field upon which he fought bears tribute to his genius. If the history of the era in which he lived is truthful and impartial, upon its pages it will be recorded that he had no superior in skill and capacity as a soldier amongst all those of his own rank in the Army of Northern Virginia, and that few officers of any grade in the Confederate service equaled him in those qualities requisite for high command.

"He was endowed by nature with a type of personal courage which made him absolutely indifferent to danger. He sought upon every battle field the place where the strife was most severe, and was as calm amidst a hurricane of fire as when seated at his breakfast table.

"He made all around him brave and imparted to troops under his command the highest order of esprit de corps.

"He was absolutely impartial and just, otherwise he could never have obtained the control over the hearts of his men to the extent wielded by him.

"He was a rigid disciplinarian, yet not one murmur was ever heard in his command against his most stringent orders.

"Gen. Ramseur's estimate of men was singularly accurate. It was manifest in his choice of friends.

"From early childhood he was greatly attached to Gen. R. F. Hoke, who, next to Gen. Lee and Stonewall Jackson, was the best beloved of all the generals in the Army of Northern Virginia. They were born in the same village and there was a difference of only a few days in their ages. Both were cast in the heroic mold, and from the lofty heights where such spirits are at home look down with scorn upon all that is base and mean.

"As he was being carried from the battle field he sent to Gen. Hoke by the ambulance driver this message: 'Tell Gen. Hoke I die a Christian, and I have done my duty.'

"For Gen. William R. Cox, who led the last charge at Appomattox, and for Gen. Bryan Grimes, who commanded the greater part of the infantry in that last fight, he had sincere affection and friendship.

"During the last years of his life his chaplain, the Rev. Dr. E. H. Harding, was his most intimate friend.

"He was the embodiment of honor and chivalry, and worthy, had he lived in the same era, to have been the associate of Richard Coeur de Leon. He ever helped the weak and those in distress. He was a friend to all humanity.

"He loved little children and they loved him. Children make no mistake in their real friends. They were very happy and full of childish glee when in his presence.

"Unlike Scipo Africanus, the conqueror of Carthage, who died an exile from home and whose remains rested on a foreign shore, he was buried amidst the people he loved so well. Kings Mountain will keep watch over his grave, but his resting place will be in every land where patriotic heroism has a home.

"He died in the triumph and faith of the Christian religion and left a name without blemish and without reproach, a heritage of honor to his wife and to his little girl, whom he had never seen; to his State; and to our common country.

"His name and fame belong not to North Carolina alone, but are the common property of the American people, and will be preserved by them in their pristine splendor when the bronze tablet which we have unveiled to-day has perished by decay and the granite column erected has crumbled into dust."

"ADDRESS OF COL. H. A. DU PONT, SEPTEMBER 16, 1920, AT THE UNVEILING OF THE MONUMENT ERECTED TO THE MEMORY OF MAJ. GEN. STEPHEN D. RAMSEUR, ON THE CEDAR CREEK BATTLE FIELD, NEAR MIDDLETOWN, VA.

"Ladies and gentlemen and representatives of the several societies and Historical Commission of North Carolina, your invitation to be present at the unveiling of the monument to Gen. Ramseur and to speak of my personal relations with that distinguished son of North Carolina was gladly accepted. As a close friend of my youthful days, I held him in most affectionate remembrance, and as I happened to have been personally concerned in much, if not all, that occurred from the time he fell mortally wounded on the Cedar Creek battle field, October 19, 1864, until the end came during the early hours of the following day, I was exceedingly desirous that the information in my possession should be imparted to his immediate relatives and friends.

"My relations with Gen. Ramseur began when I entered the United States Military Academy at West Point, and, as we all know, youthful associations and friendships are not only the strongest but the most enduring. The course of military instruction and discipline at that admirable institution was then five years, and although he entered the academy 12 months before I did we were fellow cadets there for a period of 4 years previous to his graduation in 1860. During the last 10 months of his sojourn at West Point our associations were especially close, as he was at that time captain of Company B of the Corps of Cadets and was quartered on the second floor of the third division of the barracks, in the room next to the second division and facing south. As I then belonged to the cadet noncommissioned staff, I was not tied down to the quarters of any special company, and roomed with my classmate and close friend, the lamented Hoxton, of Virginia, who at that time was a cadet sergeant of B Company. As our room likewise faced to the south and was separated only by a narrow corridor from that of Ramseur and his classmate, John J. Kerr, also of North Carolina, we four were thrown very much together, and the relations between the two North Carolinians, the Virginian, and the Delawarean were exceedingly cordial. At that time Ramseur was very mature for one of his years, somewhat reserved to those who did not know him intimately, but always quiet, courteous, and dignified, a young man of strong character and great good sense, as well as a most excellent soldier.

"Some 12 months later, when Hoxton and I graduated, the Civil War had already begun, and during the campaign of 1864 in the Valley of Virginia my old friend Ramseur was a division commander of the Confederate forces under Early, while I was chief of artillery and commander of the artillery brigade of Crook's corps, which belonged to Gen. Sheridan's opposing army.

"Ramseur fell at the Battle of Cedar Creek, October 19, 1864, and it was my sad privilege to meet him once more during his last hours at the Belle Grove house, in full view of this very spot, which was then the headquarters of both Sheridan and Crook. Before relating what occurred let me first tell you how he happened to be brought to that house, as I believe that I am the only person now living who has any knowledge of the circumstances. To explain them clearly and satisfactorily it will be necessary to speak of the battle, but I shall try to be as brief as possible.

"As a matter of fact, the Battle of Cedar Creek consisted of two distinct general engagements, fought on the same day. In the first, which began at 5.25 a. m., and continued until about noon, the Conferedate Army surprised and completely defeated the Union troops and drove them from the field with heavy loss. Crook's corps, to which I belonged, was a special sufferer, as it was on the left of the Union line and the first objective of the Confederate attack. Our camps were captured and many prisoners taken, among them the senior medical officer of my Artillery brigade, Dr. Isaac D. Knight, of Philadelphia, surgeon of volunteers with the rank of major, then a man on the wrong side of 60 and not endowed with a very robust physique, who at his age had no business in active service with troops in the field. In spite of this, however, he was not only a highly efficient medical officer but also one of the most calm, affable, warm-hearted, and sensible men I have ever known. When captured, Surg. Knight was not sent to the rear with the other Union prisoners, but was set to work in the field hospitals to assist the Confederate medical officers in caring for the wounded, presumably of both armies.

"In the second engagement, which began between half past 3 and 4 p. m., the Union Army, which meantime had been reformed and realigned, attacked the Confederates, who in their turn were disastrously defeated and driven from the field. Early's left was the first to give way and by 5 o'clock the whole Confederate force was retreating in the utmost disorder down the valley turnpike and across Cedar Creek, Surg. Knight, of course, accompanying it as a prisoner. Ramseur, styled by Gen. Early, 'a most gallant and energetic officer whom no disaster appalled,' was shot through the lungs while making a supreme effort to hold the Confederate line, and was carried to the rear accompanied by his adjutant general, Maj. Hutchinson, his medical officer, and two soldiers, one the driver of the ambulance. My batteries were the first to reach the heights on the north bank of Cedar Creek, and I immediately opened fire upon the retreating army which was in full view, little thinking at the time that the guns were trained upon my chief medical officer as well as upon the wounded friend of my youthful days.

"As soon as the Union Cavalry in pursuit had advanced far enough to come within range of my pieces, I gave the order to cease firing, and at this juncture the following incident occurred, as reported to me next day by Surg. Knight: When the horsemen were close at hand and so near that the capture of the ambulance was inevitable, Maj. Hutchinson hailed Surg. Knight, who, as the fates willed it, happened to be trudging along very near the ambulance in which the wounded general lay. Realizing that their respective rôles were about to be reversed, he accosted the quondam prisoner as follows: 'We surrender to you, sir!' Surg. Knight, who took in the situation, upon receiving the surrender of the general with his two staff officers and two Confederate soldiers, ordered the ambulance to be halted and turned to the rear. When the Cavalry came up Knight claimed the five prisoners, took them back directly to the Belle Grove house, which was Sheridan's headquarters, and turned them over to the chief medical officer of the Union Army, Surg. Ghiselin, of Maryland.

"Ramseur was at once installed in one of the most commodious bedrooms in the house and all possible steps taken, in cooperation with his own medical officer, to mitigate his sufferings. The best evidence of the very special consideration extended to the wounded division commander lies in the fact that his adjutant general as well as his two soldiers were permitted to stay with him. In recent years I have often thought of the striking contrast beween the treatment then and there accorded to Gen. Ramseur and the gross brutality displayed by our German foes during the great conflict which has so recently ended.

"The battle was over and night had fallen; after seeing that my remaining men and horses had all the attention possible under the circumstances, it suddenly dawned upon me that I was almost completely exhausted mentally and physically; that I had not tasted food for more than 24 hours; that I had been almost continuously in the saddle since half past 5 in the morning; and, worst of all, that I had no abiding place, as my personal effects had been taken by the enemy when our camp was captured in the morning. The only recourse was to seek food and shelter at the headquarters of my corps, which, as before stated, were with the Army headquarters at the Belle Grove house. One of the first persons I met there was Gen. Torbert, of Delaware, the commander of the Union Cavalry corps, who lost no time in telling me that Ramseur was lying mortally wounded in the house, which information so acutely shocked and distressed me that I forgot for the time my own necessities and hastened upstairs to see him.

"The room was absolutely still; Ramseur, clad in his major general's uniform, lay on his back in the bed, his eyes closed. At the other end of the room were the four Confederates, the surgeon examining medicine bottles on the window sill; on his right as he faced the window sat Maj. Hutchinson, and on his left in the corner of the room stood the two Confederate soldiers, seemingly men of middle age. Approaching the bed, I said, 'Ramseur, do you know me?' mentioning my name. He opened his eyes, in which I saw recognition and apparently a gleam of pleasure. So great was my physical exhaustion that I seated myself as quietly as possible on the side rail of the bedstead, but the almost imperceptible jar thus occasioned gave the sufferer a thrill of pain, to my extreme distress. Speaking with the greatest effort, he said to me, 'Du Pont, you don't know how I suffer,' and then relapsed into silence and closed his eyes, not, however, before extending his hand and firmly grasping and holding mine. I was deeply moved. Strange as it may seem—illogical, if you please—in that supreme moment he turned with content and satisfaction to the one person present who, though officially a foe, was still, as he instinctively felt, the steadfast personal friend of former days.

"As his condition was hopeless and his time short, the Confederate surgeon very wisely sought only to relieve the excruciating pain. The treatment was simple. From a large bottle of laudanum or other opiate on the window sill he filled a wineglass and, approaching the bed, said, 'Drink this, General.' As soon as the sufferer had swallowed the medicine the medical officer went directly back to the window, carefully refilled the wineglass, returned to the bedside, and again said, 'Drink this, General.' This went on for a considerable time, when at length the effect of the opiate became apparent; Ramseur's hand slowly and gradually relaxed in mine and finally became limp—he was unconscious, and remained so until his death, several hours later.

"Had he been in possession of his faculties, I would have stayed to the end, but as nothing more could be done and my need of food and rest was no longer to be ignored, I withdrew and after getting something to eat fell into a profound slumber. Upon awakening next morning I went directly to Surg. Ghiselin and arranged with him to have Gen. Ramseur's remains sent through the lines to his family.

"Such, my friends, is the brief statement of my personal relations with that gallant soldier and splendid son of the old North State."

JOHN A. MOON.

Mr. PARK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to place in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD a short editorial reviewing the congressional service of Hon. JOHN A. MOON, and to extend brief remarks of my own.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a short editorial on the legislative life of Judge MOON. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

LEAVES BEHIND A FINE RECORD—JUDGE JOHN A. MOON RETIRES FROM CONGRESS AFTER SPLENDID SERVICE OF 24 YEARS—MOST ABLE IN DEBATE.

(By John D. Erwin, Washington correspondent of the News.)

WASHINGTON, February 22.

With the close of the Sixty-sixth Congress, March 4, Representative JOHN A. MOON, of the third congressional district of Tennessee, will retire after a continuous service in the House of 24 years, during which time he made an enviable reputation as a useful public servant.

Among his numerous friends and admirers here it is a source of the keenest regret that Judge MOON'S health has become impaired to a degree that he can not be at his post at the close of his service, but under the advice of his physician has been forced to seek rest and quiet at his home away from the strain and turmoil of Congress.

Judge MOON proved himself not only an able and serviceable Member of Congress, but he is popular in his district and the State. Throughout his long tenure he was not only invincible before the people of his district, but his commanding influence changed the district from a doubtful one to a Democratic stronghold. He started out in 1896 by overcoming a Republican majority in the district of 3,500 in 1894, and at each succeeding election until the last one increased the Democratic majority. No Democratic contestant for the nomination nor no Republican contestant in the general election could defeat him until the last election, when his district, with the State, went Republican.

He is regarded as one of the ablest debaters in the House. He does not speak often, but when he does he commands the attention of both Democrats and Republicans, and it may be said that in such conflicts in which he engages the force and logic of his arguments are convincing to both sides of the House. While he commands the respect of the Republicans and wields considerable influence over them, he is a stanch Democrat, faithful always to his party, and an aggressive advocate of Democratic measures and principles. He is an ardent supporter of the Democratic administration, and has been all along one of President Wilson's ablest lieutenants in the promotion of constructive legislation.

During his service Judge MOON looked carefully after the manifold interests of his district and his State, which is matter of public record, but his activities have not been restricted to doing things for his district and his State, for he has waged numerous successful battles in behalf of the whole people. Broad-minded, patriotic, and farseeing, his aspirations for legislative accomplishments have embraced his entire country, and in every conflict in which the principles of right and justice have been involved he has been found on the right side, defiant of the wrong and bravely combating whatever opposition may have confronted him.

Judge MOON has never claimed credit for the many valuable things he has done during his service. He has never boasted of his work, but has been content for his record to speak for him. He has remained constantly at his post, devoting his great talents to the public work instrusted to him. With every impulse of his heart for the good of the American populace and their Government and with a vision broad and far-reaching, he has devoted his life to maintain the principles of justice in the legislation enacted and in all the governmental relationship to the public.

Though his splendid record as a public Representative might with propriety have been blazoned in the papers to his great credit, it has not been done, as he has not sought publicity. He has been satisfied to have been of service in the great constructive work he has done, leaving his public performances to be their own commendation.

When he shall have left the field of his long service, where the strength of his mentality and the sterling qualities of his heart have combined to draw him close to men of worth in the body of which he is a Member those who have been associated with him and have learned to know him may appropriately pay him this honest tribute:

"His life was gentle; and the elements
So mixed in him, that nature might stand up
And say to all the world, 'This was a man.'"

Mr. PARK. Mr. Speaker, I know Judge MOON as well, perhaps, as he knows himself—the gentlest of gentlemen, "as brave as the bravest of the Howards," as loyal and true as the "unchanging blue."

In the tale of King Arthur's "glorious knights" is recited a touching incident of Sir Ector de Maris at the bier of Sir Lancelot du Lac, his half brother, "laid out" in the little "quire" of Joyeuse Garde.

Such is befitting to say of the dying lion of the third district of Tennessee, who languishes sick amongst loving relations and friends in Chattanooga.

Said Sir Ector:

Thou were the kindest man that ever struck with sword, and thou were the goodliest person that ever came among press of knights, and thou was the meekest and the gentlest that ever ate in hall among ladies, and thou were the sternest knight to thy mortal foe that ever put spear in the rest.

Let us hope he may have a speedy deliverance from his present bed of pain.

A MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendment joint resolution (H. J. Res. 382) declaring that certain acts of Congress, joint resolutions, and proclamations shall be construed as if the war had ended and the present or existing emergency expired, had requested a conference with the House of Representatives, and had appointed Mr. STERLING, Mr. NELSON, and Mr. OVERMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 10105) conferring jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to hear, examine, consider, and adjudicate claims which the Choctaw, Chickasaw, Cherokee, Creek, and Seminole Indians may have against the United States, and for other purposes, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bills:

H. R. 14063. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 13944. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War, and certain widows and dependent children of soldiers and sailors of said war.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15812) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, had agreed to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 40, 48, 49, 92, 93, 107, 117, and 118, had further insisted and agreed to the further conference asked by the House on Senate amendments Nos. 11, 12, 31, 32, 33, 79, 80, 82, and 119, had disagreed to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 115 and 116, had further insisted upon these said amendments, and had requested a further conference with the House thereon, and had appointed Mr. GRONNA, Mr. KENYON, Mr. MCNARY, Mr. GORE, and Mr. SMITH of South Carolina as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 15543) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes, had receded from its amendment No. 58, had agreed to the amendments of the House to the amendments of the Senate Nos. 82 and 112, had disagreed to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 113, had further insisted upon its said amendment, and had requested a further conference with the House thereon, and had appointed Mr. WARREN, Mr. SMOOT, and Mr. OVERMAN as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

RECESS TO-NIGHT.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess from 6 to 8 o'clock this evening.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wyoming?

There was no objection.

CONTESTED-ELECTION CASE OF WICKERSHAM AGAINST SULZER AND GRIGSBY.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I call up the contested-election case of Wickersham against Sulzer and Grigsby.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. GRIGSBY].

Mr. GRIGSBY. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that no quorum is present.

The SPEAKER. Evidently there is no quorum present.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move a call of the House.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were closed, and the Sergeant at Arms was directed to notify absentees.

The Clerk called the roll, and the following Members failed to answer to their names:

Andrews, Md.	Dooling	Harreld	Luhring
Ayres	Doughton	Harrison	McAndrews
Baer	Drewry	Haugen	McArthur
Bee	Eagle	Hersman	McCulloch
Bland, Ind.	Ellsworth	Hill	McGlennon
Bland, Va.	Emerson	Hoey	McLeod
Brinson	Evans, Mont.	Huddleston	Magee
Britten	Evans, Nev.	Hull, Iowa	Maher
Brumbaugh	Ferris	Hull, Tenn.	Mann, S. C.
Buchanan	Fish	Ireland	Mead
Burke	Flood	James, Mich.	Moon
Caldwell	Focht	Johnson, Ky.	Mooney
Cantrill	Fordney	Johnson, Miss.	Morin
Carss	Gallagher	Johnston, N. Y.	Mott
Casey	Gandy	Kahn	Nolan
Clark, Fla.	Garner	Keller	Paige
Clark, Mo.	Goldfogle	Kendall	Pell
Classon	Good	Kennedy, Iowa	Phelan
Connally	Goodwin, Ark.	Kettner	Pou
Costello	Goodykoontz	Kitchin	Rainey, Ala.
Crowther	Gould	Kleczka	Rainey, Henry T.
Curry, Calif.	Graham, Ill.	Lampert	Rainey, John W.
Dempsey	Graham, Pa.	Langley	Randall, Wis.
Denison	Hadley	Lesher	Reed, W. Va.
Dent	Hamill	Little	Riddick
Donovan	Hamilton	Lonergan	Riordan

Rodenberg	Scully	Sullivan	Watkins
Rogers	Sears	Thomas	Wilson, Ill.
Rowan	Sells	Tinkham	Wilson, Pa.
Rubey	Small	Vare	Wise
Sanders, La.	Smith, N. Y.	Venable
Sanders, N. Y.	Steele	Voigt
Sanford	Stiness	Walsh

The SPEAKER. Two hundred and ninety-eight Members have answered to their names, a quorum.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I move to dispense with further proceedings under the call.

The motion was agreed to.

The doors were opened.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 minutes to the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. GRIGSBY].

Mr. GRIGSBY. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I can not hope to analyze the testimony in this case in the brief time which has been allotted to me. It is contained in a record of 840 pages. It required an argument of 24 hours before the Elections Committee, 12 hours on a side, and at that two-thirds of them do not know anything about the case yet. I am simply going to discuss some of the features of this case and point out to you the way the case came up. Some of you do not know anything about it and naturally could not be expected to.

Charles A. Sulzer was elected Delegate to this Congress from Alaska on November 5, 1918, by 33 votes on the face of the returns. Mr. Wickersham, the contestant, when he came down here to inaugurate his contest contended that if there had not been fraud in the canvass of those votes by the canvassing board, consisting of the governor and other officials of the Territory, a true count of those votes would have made a change of 40 and have entitled him to the certificate; but your Elections Committee made a recount of every ballot cast at that election, resulting in a change of 2 votes, leaving Mr. Sulzer still with a majority of 31 on the face of the returns.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRIGSBY. Yes.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. The gentleman does not mean to say that there was a recount of all of the ballots?

Mr. GRIGSBY. I do.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Why, no. The gentleman knows that there was only an examination of the rejected ballots. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] will agree with me on that.

Mr. GRIGSBY. I can not yield to the gentleman, I have only 30 minutes. I know that on the point on which Mr. Wickersham said the change would be made, you found a change of 2 ballots, and you found that Mr. Sulzer was elected by 31 votes.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Wherever there was any question about the ballots there was a recount of every ballot.

Mr. GRIGSBY. Yes. Mr. Speaker, I do not want any more interruptions in my time from anyone. When this canvass was made by the canvassing board in January or February of the following year, the canvassing board had no alternative under the law but to issue a certificate of election to Mr. Sulzer, and no one can dispute that statement. About the time the certificate was issued to him he died. His death caused a vacancy, and under the law of Congress it became the duty of the governor of Alaska to call a special election. He had to call it; he had no alternative; he could have been mandamused to call it. There was a vacancy in the office. He did call an election. I was nominated to run as the Democratic candidate at that election. There was a labor candidate put up. The returns came in at that election from 144 precincts out of 164, in the whole of Alaska, and I was elected by a majority of 1,277 votes in an election duly and legally called, and when the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HAYS] gets up here and says that I am standing in anybody's shoes and not in my own shoes as a Member of this House he says what is not so.

I was elected by the people of Alaska. It may be that some time in the remote past political exigencies required a rule which would allow a man to sit idly by for two years and refuse to run and put his community to the trouble of going to the expense of an election, making his population walk thousands of miles to vote, and then come in here on the last day of the session and make his biennial descent on the Treasury of the United States. [Applause on Democratic side.] If I had time, I would take this report of this committee and make them ashamed of every word in it. There is not a member of the committee who is responsible for this majority report who can meet me anywhere in public debate and justify it. Why, they do not give the name of a single illegal voter whose vote they cast out. One of them came up here yesterday with a little list of the illegal votes that they say they cast out in order to sustain these findings, and whom did he mention as one of these illegal voters whose vote is cast out? The Hon. Charles A. Sulzer. Mr. Sulzer is the late Delegate to Congress, and he died before any testimony was taken in this case. His mouth is closed. I have conceded for the sake of his everlasting good name that he did not vote for Mr. Wickersham. [Laughter and applause.] This House does not need to take my concession, and I say that if this committee is so hard up to find illegal votes to cast out in order to give this man his $21,000 that they have to go and cast out the vote of the candidate himself who is dead, then they have got a pretty weak case.

This committee knowingly or unknowingly has violated every rule of conducting election contests. There are three rules which the House has laid down in case after case in respect to election contests. One of them is that every presumption and intendment of the law is indulged in favor of the right of suffrage. Every vote is sustained if it possibly can be sustained. Another is that every presumption is indulged in favor of the sitting Member. The third is, and it obtains not only in election contests but in every kind of legal proceeding, that every presumption is indulged in favor of a dead man. This contestant is attacking the title of a dead man.

But he should not come in here and ask to be seated on the strength of a report that does not clearly prove by itself that he is entitled to prevail. Now, I say that instead of indulging these presumptions in favor of a dead man and in favor of the right of suffrage and in favor of the sitting Member, they have pursued exactly the opposite course in every contention in this case. They have thrown out the vote of Charles A. Sulzer, who voted in Ketchikan instead of down at Sulzer, under the Territorial law, on the presumption that he voted for himself. They threw out the vote of his private secretary who came down there from Fairbanks. Now, if I am wrong about that, tell me what votes you did throw out, because I have never been informed and you do not name one of them, but there were between 21 and 25 alleged illegal individual votes and you must have thrown out some of them because you threw out 21. I conceded 13 of them. I can name you 12 that I can analyze that you can not get a vote on your side in favor of throwing out. Steve Reagan, the assistant United States attorney at Ketchikan, and his wife——

Mr. CHINDBLOM. They were not thrown out.

Mr. GRIGSBY. All right. What was thrown out? Give me your list, please. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. DOWELL. Read them.

Mr. GRIGSBY. All right. Here is William Semar and Mrs. Semar thrown out. There is not any evidence in the case to show how they voted? What is the evidence in the case to show how they voted—William Semar and Mrs. Semar? I have examined the record in reference to these two votes and have not found a line of evidence of any kind in reference to how William Semar and Mrs. Semar voted, unless it was because they went up to the polls in company with people who were thought to be Sulzer supporters. You have thrown out the vote here of Mrs. Kinkaid, and I do recollect in her testimony she testified she did not remember how she voted; does not know to-day. Her husband voted for Sulzer, but she said she did not know how she voted. Bert Heath, a young Ketchikan boy, was away from home six years wandering during his minority. He came back and lived with his father at his father's house, and there was some question as to his legal residence. I concede that. The only evidence as to how he voted was that his father said he thought that young Heath voted for Sulzer. Is not that true?

Mr. KEARNS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GRIGSBY. Yes, sir.

Mr. KEARNS. Had this young man during the six years' absence voted at any place else?

Mr. GRIGSBY. I do not know. There is no evidence of whether he did or not, and, whether he was a resident of Ketchikan or not, here is the damning paper, and you have thrown out his vote, and you have not a line of evidence how he voted except that his father said that he thought the rest of the family voted for Sulzer. If you have any more evidence, state it. [Applause on the Democratic side.] If this vote were the deciding vote in this contest, which it might be, are you going to pay this contestant $21,000 on that kind of evidence? That is as strong a case as you have of the individual illegal votes. J. C. Cochran lived in Ketchikan for years up until shortly before this election in question. He was appointed lighthouse keeper at Lincoln Rock, which is 30 or 40 miles from Ketchikan and outside of Ketchikan recording district. He never lived anywhere else except in Ketchikan, in Alaska, as far as the evidence shows. On election day he left the rock out in the sea, where he was stationed, and returned to his home in Ketchikan and voted. You threw out his vote because he voted in the wrong precinct and said he ought to have voted at Wrangell, where he had never been in his life, simply because this lighthouse where he was officially stationed came within the boundaries of the Wrangell precinct. There is another vote you have thrown out. Now, there are lots more of them, but I am not going to discuss any more individual votes. I can go on and show that I have a stronger case in respect to 16 votes that you did not allow me, and name them. You allowed me 11 votes. I can show votes you have ignored in your report. But what about all this voting in the wrong precincts? A Territorial law was passed in 1915 by the Territorial legislature.

It was so inconvenient to the population in Alaska to compel them to leave their mining business and their fishing business and other occupations to go 50 or 100 or 200 miles to the home precinct to vote that the legislature passed a law stating that they could vote in any precinct in the division in which they lived, and there are four divisions in Alaska. That was passed in 1915, and it is true I rendered an opinion that the legislature exceeded its powers in passing that act, but you have put a section in the organic act that says that when the legislature passes laws at the session of the legislature they shall be submitted to Congress, and if disapproved by Congress they shall be null and of no effect. That law was passed in 1915, when Mr. Wickersham was sitting in Congress, and he knew what the law was, because he was present at that legislature, and he ran under that law in 1916, and, according to the evidence in this case received several hundred votes cast by persons in wrong precincts in 1916. He served in this Congress from 1915 down to the spring of 1919. Did he ever ask Congress to disapprove that legislative act? No; he ran under that act. My successor, who is sitting here to-day and who is a resident of the fourth division, came down from Nome in 1916, just 30 days in the division, and voted for Wickersham, as did 200 others. Now, does it lie in this man's mouth, who has allowed the people of Alaska to imagine they had the right to make their own election laws, to come down here now and try to grab off this lump sum on a technicality? Is there any equity in this case?

Now, I want to talk a little about the soldier vote. This committee, for whom I have the highest respect as individuals, but not as lawyers or judges, has thrown out 44 soldier votes. They do not name them. They do tell where they enlisted at various places in the States, but they omit to mention that nearly all of them also reenlisted in Alaska. They do not draw any distinction between any of these soldiers. They place them all in the class of soldiers in the Regular Army of the United States who are transferred to a locality and stationed there, and have no status in that locality except as soldiers, and then throw them out wholesale.

And, in the first place, they make a mistake numerically. They say that of the soldier vote in 1918 Wickersham received 5 votes, Sulzer received 24 votes, and 16 of them refused to testify; that of the votes of the ones where the testimony showed for whom they voted there should be deducted a net of 19. There were only 16 soldiers who testified how they voted. Five of them testified they voted for Wickersham; 11 of them testified they voted for Sulzer. Of the 11 that testified they voted for Sulzer, 4 of them were legal voters in Alaska, having reenlisted there. One of them had been out of service for a period of nine months before he reenlisted. Now, there is no law, there is no decision of any court, there is no decision of this House, that a soldier can not acquire a residence. The decision in the contest of three years ago of Wickersham against Sulzer does not say so.

The evidence in that case was simply that a body of soldiers stationed at a couple of forts—Fort Eagle and some other fort up the river—were not entitled to vote. And under the facts they were right. But every authority that I have been able to find announces the doctrine that a soldier can change his residence just the same as anybody else, if he has the opportunity. It is true that his opportunity does not come so often, but when he has it he can change his residence.

Now, this House decided a case back in the Forty-first Congress which is exactly in point to this case. And it is a peculiar thing that the two cases cited by your committee two years ago against this soldier vote are both in favor of the soldier vote. And in the trial of this case before the committee, Mr. Wickersham, the contestant, came before the committee and cited the case of Gen. Ames, of Mississippi, who was elected to the Senate back in 1870 or 1871, and he read the committee report, written by Roscoe Conkling, I believe, which stated that because Gen. Ames was in Mississippi in a military capacity only he was not entitled to a seat in the Senate, and he told your committee that the Senate turned Gen. Ames out of the Senate. When he got through I produced the Senate report of that case and showed that the Senate overturned the report of that committee by a vote of 40 to 12, and seated Gen. Ames, and that he never had been thrown out. He was not in when the question came up; but they seated him, and overturned the committee's report on the theory that the mere filing of his candidacy to run for the United States Senate from Mississippi showed his intention to acquire a residence in that State. And if a candidate for office can acquire a residence in that way, an elector who votes for him certainly has the same right, and so it has been decided by the courts and by this House that when a soldier's term of enlistment expires in the State or Territory where he is stationed, if he reenlists in that State or Territory he acquires a residence there if it is coupled with the requisite intention.

Your committee has thrown out the votes, and nearly all the votes they have thrown out are of boys who enlisted once, twice, three, and four times in Alaska. You have thrown out the votes of seven members of the Signal Corps who reside in Valdez, in homes which they own or rent, and who are married and who pay taxes, and who conduct themselves just as any other citizens.

Now, see what this House says about that proposition in the case of Taylor against Reading, in the Forty-first Congress, which was cited against Mr. Sulzer two years ago, involving 20 soldier votes. I find in looking up that case in the House contested-election cases that the House allowed 13 votes of soldiers in the Regular Army. That case is reported in contested-election cases, second session, Forty-first Congress, Miscellaneous Documents.

Now, what is the theory on which they allowed those votes? [Reads:]

> The third class consist of those who did not reside in the district at the time of their enlistment, but remained for some years; in some cases reenlisting once, twice, and in one case three times. Most of these men had either purchased or rented property, had their homes in the district, and had given other evidence of an intention to select this precinct as the place of their abode.

These votes are allowed by this House, and that decision has never been overruled. And I want to show you what the evidence is in this case along the same line. Now, I am talking about the votes they threw out at Valdez. Here is the testimony:

> Q. Now, were the members of the Signal Corps at Valdez in 1918 residing on a Government reservation?—A. They were not.
> Q. Where did they reside?—A. Some in their own homes in the town—the married ones—and the others in other people's homes as boarders or roomers.
> Q. They resided as other citizens of Valdez?—A. With and as other citizens resided.
> Q. Do you know whether the members of the Signal Corps paid taxes on their property like other citizens there?—A. I know they did.
> Q. Did any of the members of the Signal Corps take part in the municipal elections that were held in the town of Valdez in the spring of 1918?—A. They did.
> Q. Was there any difference in their method of living in Valdez from the way other citizens lived?—A. There was not. They were earning their living, associating with other citizens of the town, and willing to be such.
> Q. And they made personal friends among those living in Valdez?—A. They did.
> Q. Do you remember how many Signal Corps boys stationed at Valdez for the year 1918 married Valdez girls and young ladies who had lived in Valdez?—A. About seven.
> Q. Do you know that those that married owned their own homes in Valdez?—A. Some did.
> Q. Did they live in them?—A. They did.
> Q. And others, how did they live?—A. They rented houses.

That brings it squarely in the rules of this House. Now, these are the Signal Corps votes that they are throwing out here. And every one of them, practically, that goes to Alaska goes there at his own request. It is a selective service, and they go there, and they testify that they go there in the first place with the intention of acquiring a residence there and remaining there when their term of enlistment expires.

There is one man whose vote they have thrown out who has been up there since 1903, who has enlisted and reenlisted and has taken his family there, and who is there yet, working in a bank. He never had any other home. They throw out his vote. No wonder they do not mention the name of a man whose vote they have thrown out. There is no evidence, no testimony, to justify them in saying that 24 of these men voted for Sulzer, because we have only 11 of them as to whom there is any evidence.

They have adopted a rule here as to those concerning whom they did not get any evidence which is a relic of those unregenerate days when you wanted arbitrarily to seat somebody, a relic of the remote past, because nowadays election contests are decided upon their merits. It is called the pro rata rule, which is the most ridiculous, asinine, and absurd method of disposing of an election contest that you can devise. If you do not know what the pro rata method is, I will tell you. It is this: If it is ascertained that there were a certain number of illegal votes cast in a precinct and you do not know for whom they were cast, you divide them up in accordance with the proportion of the votes cast in that district.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alaska has expired.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I yield the gentleman five minutes more.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes more.

Mr. GRIGSBY. For instance, if I carry a certain precinct 4 to 1, and there were 50 illegal votes cast in that precinct, you would charge 40 to me and 10 to the other man. In other words, if a man comes down here to contest my seat and is unable to furnish evidence, you get it for him by an arbitrary method which can not be right once in 500 times, because there are hundreds of ways in which those votes might have been cast other than in the proportion of 40 for me and 10 for him. Seldom if ever have you arrived at justice in a case decided by such asinine methods. It is vicious and foolish. The true rule would be that if a contestant comes down here, especially if he comes down here contesting the seat of a dead man who is unable to open his mouth, he should be entitled to his seat only upon legal evidence, even if a new election is necessary on account of the casting of illegal votes.

Now, look at the way they have applied their pro rata rule. I will give you some indication of the care with which they have reviewed this case. They have found that there were four Regular Army votes in Valdez Bay. They have prorated them. Now, in the first place, there were but three Regular Army votes in Valdez Bay, and in the second place, one of them, to wit, Joseph Newman, testified that he voted for Wickersham, and we have got the worst of it there again. I could go through this report and tear it to pieces to the satisfaction or dissatisfaction of you gentlemen on the other side if time would permit.

I have said enough now to place you in doubt about it. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HAYS] yesterday said that the result of this contest would mean no reflection on me, that it was not my contest, but it was a contest between Mr. Wickersham and Mr. Sulzer. In other words, he is greasing the chute to slip me out into the street. [Laughter.]

But when I shall have got out I shall have been kicked out of Congress. This contestant pledged himself to this Congress in my presence three years ago not to contest this election. I have it right here in the RECORD. You will not find it in the permament official RECORD, because he has changed the permanent official RECORD. But Mr. HARRISON, now Senator, asked him who was elected at the last election, referring to the 1918 election. I read:

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. In this last campaign—last November—was the proposition discussed as to whether you were elected or Mr. Sulzer was elected?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. It was discussed a little; yes.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Well, who was elected in the last election, or has not that been decided

Mr. WICKERSHAM. We do not know yet. The answer will depend on whom you ask. If you ask me, I say that I am elected, and I have no doubt that if you ask Mr. Sulzer he will say that he is; but I am perfectly willing to say that it is so close that nobody can honestly tell you, and that neither you nor we will know until the official count is had.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. And there will probably be a contest over that?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Not if I lose, because I have had enough of it. [Laughter.]

Now, that is from the daily RECORD of January 4, 1919. You turn to your official RECORD—that is, the permanent RECORD—and you will find language inserted there so that it gives him an "out" to justify this proceeding. It reads:

Not if I lose here.

When he answered the question he said that if he lost the election in 1918 as the result of the canvass he would not contest again; but when your permanent official RECORD appears he says:

If I lose this contest I will not contest again.

[Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Alaska has again expired.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield 20 minutes to Judge Wickersham.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I propose to pay some attention, first, to the one question which my opponent gave most time to, and that was the question of the legality of voting out of one's precinct in the Territory of Alaska in the election of 1918. I will give my attention chiefly to that, because he is so intimately connected with it himself that I think it is important to show to this House that it was a matter of grave moment to him then, as it is now. It was a grave matter to him then as it is now.

The laws passed by Congress for the government of elections in Alaska provide that no man shall vote in that Territory who is not an actual bona fide resident of the Territory of Alaska for one year immediately preceding the date of voting, and in the precinct in which he votes for 30 days immediately preceding the date of that voting. I want to read the law to you, so that there may be absolutely no question about it. It is section 394 of the Compiled Laws of Alaska, a compilation made by Congress; and it is the act of May 7, 1906, an act passed by Congress for holding elections in the Territory of Alaska for the election of a Delegate to Congress. That section provides that—

SEC. 394. All male citizens of the United States 21 years of age and over, who are actual and bona fide residents of Alaska, and who have been such residents continuously during the entire year immediately preceding the election, and who have been such residents continuously for 30 days next preceding the election in the precinct in which they vote, shall be qualified to vote for the election of a Delegate from Alaska.

Now, that is the act of Congress provided for holding elections for the choice of a Member of this House in the Territory of Alaska, and that act specifically requires that a man shall have a bona fide residence in the precinct 30 days immediately preceding the day of election.

In his opinion to the governor and the canvassing board of the Territory, Mr. Grigsby said at the end of the letter:

I have to advise you that the legislature in attempting to change the qualifications of voters by this act—meaning the act of the legislature allowing persons to vote anywhere in the judicial division—exceeded its powers, the qualifications having been fixed by the act of May 7, 1906, and continued in full force and effect by the organic act or constitution of Alaska. The organic act expressly authorized the legislature to extend the elective franchise to women, but in no other way authorized the changing of the qualifications of electors by the legislature.

Respectfully submitted. GEORGE B. GRIGSBY,
Attorney General.

Now, that opinion of the attorney general, who is my opponent, was given to the canvassing board and the governor of Alaska in February, 1919, after the election on the previous November 5, 1918. In that opinion he correctly stated the law. But, very shrewdly, a gentleman on the floor yesterday called the attention of this House to the fact that Mr. Grigsby had rendered that opinion after the election, and therefore he was not bound to the same rule of opinion on election day November 5, 1918.

But the evidence in this case shows that on November 5, 1918, Mr. Grigsby was the attorney general of Alaska, and the evidence shows that previous to that election he had drawn instructions to all of the election officers in the Territory of Alaska giving them exactly that opinion, and his evidence in this record is to the same identical effect. If you will turn to his evidence at page 774, of the record, you will find him before the canvassing board; this question was then raised, because a vote had come up which involved that question; this question was put to him by Mr. Garfield (who is a member of the canvassing board):

Mr. GARFIELD. There is only one question, and that is the question of precinct and division being synonymous. If it is, I think his vote should be counted.

The CHAIRMAN. Well, we'll put that up to the attorney general.

Mr. GRIGSBY. What?

The CHAIRMAN. Whether precinct and division are synonymous—whether a man that has been 30 days in a division can vote.

Mr. GRIGSBY. Well: I have instructed all the election officials that 30 days' residence in a precinct is required.

Mr. DAVIDSON. Oh, you did?

Mr. GRIGSBY. Yes.

Mr. DAVIDSON. How about Sulzer voting down at Ketchikan?

Mr. GRIGSBY. I don't know. If he voted where he didn't reside 30 days, it isn't good. I know lots of them that voted because the Territorial statute says they can. The Territorial statute contradicts the Federal statute. Thirty days in a division. The Federal statute is, by reference, incorporated into the organic act.

Now, that was his instruction to the canvassing board prior to the time he wrote the opinion. Those were his instructions to the canvassing board prior to the time he gave his opinion to the governor, and in that statement he says that he had given that instruction to the election officers throughout the Territory of Alaska.

Now all the returns from the Territory of Alaska are here. They are all before this House. They are in charge of the Clerk of the House, and every one of those returns carries upon it the instruction of the attorney general of Alaska, Mr. Grigsby, that nobody can vote who has not been a resident of the precinct for 30 days immediately preceding the date of the election.

"Oh," but some gentleman says, "this is technical." Well, it is not technical. It is not only not technical, but it was the source of the gravest crimes in the Territory of Alaska on election day. One of my opponents on this floor has said, "I do not find anything much in the report rendered by this committee. It seems to be rather technical." Well, the report is just as fair as is the report rendered by the gentleman from Louisiana two years ago. It has no spectacular announcements in it. It does not call anybody names or declare that anybody is guilty of crimes, and it ought not to do it. It is not the report of a grand jury. It is the report of an election committee, and its sole duty under the law is to point out illegal votes, if any, and to make a report to the House upon the question of illegal votes. The gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. WILSON] did that two years ago in this case under circumstances almost identical with the present case. This committee has done it this time and followed his report word for word in a very large degree. They have not gone into the question of crimes or pointed them out, and very properly so, but the record shows crimes. The record shows a general conspiracy on the part of the Federal brigade in the Territory of Alaska to violate the election laws. Alaska is a Territory, and all of her officials up there except the attorney general and the members of the legislature are appointed from Washington. Her governor is appointed. The collector of customs is appointed from Washington; the surveyor general is appointed from Washington. All of our officials are appointed. We have a regular carpet-bag government, and those people have control of our election machinery. The judges, the clerks, the marshals—all of those officials are Democrats, and opposed to me. All of them have stood together with Mr. Grigsby to run this election.

Now, I wish to go back just for a moment to the question of voting out of your precinct in Alaska.

Mr. Grigsby was in the city of Cordova, Alaska, and he took quite an interest in the matter of this election. On the witness stand he testified as follows:

In Cordova it is now claimed that the town of Cordova went Wickersham for the reason that a great many Wickershamites from the outside precincts of Cordova were permitted to vote in Cordova. It was agreed there, I believe, by the party managers that no challenges would be interposed on that ground, and there was a general sentiment throughout the Territory that the Territorial law was right; that a man should be permitted to vote anywhere in his division that he happens to be on election day, especially since at that time of the year, the close of the mining season, is when men are more or less in transit.

By Judge Wickersham:

Q. But you have given an opinion to the governor of the Territory of Alaska that the law was invalid and void because it was in conflict with the organic act?—A. That was since the election.

Q. You think it is correct?—A. That was certainly my opinion when I gave it.

Q. You say there was an agreement at Cordova wherein everybody was allowed to vote; you lived in the division for 30 days; how do you know that?—A. I heard it talked of.

Q. Somebody told you?—A. I was there when such a stipulation was made.

Q. On election day?—A. Yes; on election day.

Q. When; at what time on election day?—A. This last year; 1918.

Q. Who made the agreement there at Cordova; who was speaking about it?—A. The matter was discussed between Mr. Jimmie Gallen and Bud Sargent, and some others, and they agreed not to interpose any challenges on that ground.

When the stipulation was made to violate the United States statute Mr. Grigsby says he was there.

He made the agreement at Cordova. The matter was discussed and they agreed not to interpose challenges on that ground.

So that between these gentlemen and Grigsby, who was present, the agreement was made that no challenges should be made, and they filled the ballot box at that place with illegal votes.

They did that down at Ketchikan. I want to call attention to Ketchikan. Ketchikan is an incorporated town, and the election officers are nominated by the city officials and not by the Federal brigade. There they had honest election officers, and outside men who came into that place were challenged and not allowed to vote, the election officers having been instructed by Grigsby not to allow any men to vote that had not been residents of Alaska for one year and of the precinct for 30 days. They challenged a lot of these men, and this record shows that the deputy district clerk of Judge Jennings's court—who decided the district court case against me—took them into his automobile at the polling place and run them a mile out of town, where the officials were appointed by the same deputy clerk acting as commissioner, and there voted them all day long, although everybody knew they were not entitled to vote. Many, many men were run out of Ketchikan to this outside place and voted illegally by this deputy clerk of court. The record is clear about it, and nobody dares to deny it. It resulted in this, though your statute provides that any person offering to vote may be challenged.

These are your laws. Congress passed this law for the government of Alaska, and I want you to pay attention to it. We have no jurisdiction to pass election laws, and if you will not enforce your own laws, I do not know who will. This is the law:

SEC. 401. Any person offering to vote may be challenged by any election officer or any other person entitled to vote at the same polling place, or by any duly appointed watcher, and when so challenged, before being allowed to vote he shall make and subscribe to the following oath: "You do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) that you are 21 years of age and a citizen of the United States; that you are an actual and bona fide resident of Alaska, and have been such a resident during the entire year immediately preceding this election, and have been a resident in this voting precinct for 30 days next preceding this election, and that you have not voted at this election," and further naming the place from which the voter came immediately prior to living in the precinct in which he offers to vote, and giving the length of time of his residence in the former place.

Then, after he has made his affidavit, the person taking it is permitted to vote. I call your special attention to that, that after making that affidavit he is permitted to vote, and there is no further challenge and no way of stopping it.

On election day in Ketchikan certain men came to vote and were challenged by these honest election officers, who were appointed by the city officials of Ketchikan. They were then taken into an automobile, run out of town a mile to be voted, and were voted at Charcoal Point.

Here is what happened in one instance, and it happened in many instances in the Territory of Alaska. This instance was perpetrated in Ketchikan, and at Charcoal Point, by this deputy clerk of Judge Jennings's court; a man by the name of Mahoney, who took these people into his automobile after they had been challenged at Ketchikan, and carried them off to Charcoal Point, and voted them all day long as fast as he could run his automobile up and down the mile track.

Here is the testimony of the election officer at that place—who was appointed by Judge Jennings:

Q. Do you remember George Nix from Hydaburg?—A. I remember there was a man by that name.

Q. An Indian?—A. I think so.

Q. Do you remember whether he was challenged?—A. By Mr. Althouse, I think.

Q. And swore in his vote?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you administered the oath to him?—A. I did.

Q. And he swore that he had lived in that precinct 30 days prior to election?—A. Charcoal Point?

Q. Yes.—A. I don't remember.

Q. Do you know the form of the oath you administered to everyone who was challenged?—A. Yes, sir.

Q. You knew he hadn't been a resident of Charcoal Point 30 days?—A. He registered from Sulzer.

Q. Why did you let him commit perjury?—A. I wasn't there to protect him; he ought to know what he was doing.

Q. He was an Indian?—A. Yes.

Q. From Hydaburg?—A. I don't know. Hydaburg or Sulzer—somewhere on the west coast. I read over the affidavit to him—the challenge before he signed it—and he signed it.

Q. And swore to it before you?—A. Yes.

Q. And you at that time knew he wasn't a resident of that precinct?—A. Yes; certainly I did.

Gentlemen of the House, that took place many times on election day because people were not required to vote in the precinct where they resided. Those frauds and perjuries were committed not by my friends, as the evidence shows in this case, but first by Mr. Grigsby, over at Cordova, and by the deputy clerk of the court at Charcoal Point. They occurred in many other places in the Territory of Alaska; but they are not in this report. This is not a grand-jury investigation. It is an investigation merely as to the illegality of these votes; and the fact that these people committed perjury, the fact that they committed other crimes and frauds, is not mentioned in the report, because it is immaterial. It may not be immaterial long, because we are going to have some officials appointed in Alaska in a very short time who will enforce these criminal laws against those men. [Applause on Republican side.]

Mr. Grigsby appeals to you, gentlemen, very feelingly to prevent me from being paid out of the Public Treasury for the time that I have been really and honestly elected Delegate from the Territory of Alaska. He has but three days left to serve himself, even if he is sustained—three days in which he will get his salary—but he says you must not allow me to take out of the Public Treasury the amount of my salary and mileage, because, forsooth, he has but three days to serve. That is not my fault. I did not start these contests. Four years ago, after the election, a suit was instituted in the Territory of Alaska against the canvassing board by my opponent to compel that canvassing board to throw out six precincts and give him a certificate of election. That was done; and it was denounced by Judge Wilson in his report two years ago as illegal and wrong. That was the beginning of these difficulties. The Federal brigade in our Territory, which has control of our elections, which appoints every election officer from one end of the Territory to the other, has been perpetrating frauds of that kind from that day to this; and I have been fighting them, and I am going to continue to fight them as long as they violate election laws in the Territory of Alaska and commit frauds and perjury such as appear in this record. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I will state to the gentleman from Texas that I have but one more speaker on this side.

Mr. HUDSPETH. And the gentleman does not care to use his time now?

Mr. DOWELL. No; I desire to close the case.

Mr. HUDSPETH rose.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, may I disturb the gentleman for one statement and one question before he begins?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I yield.

Mr. MOORE of Virginia. I find that the Alaska contest in the last Congress was not decided until two months before the Congress ended, on the 4th of January. This contest is going to be decided only two or three days before this Congress ends. Has the gentleman found out as a member of the committee why it is that these very important cases are postponed until the fag end of the last sessions of Congress, when there is no real opportunity for debate or consideration, when we run the risk of acting heedlessly and doing injustice and inviting and deserving the criticism of the country?

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I will answer the gentleman by stating that I can not tell him, unless the majority of the committee have estimated the services of Judge Wickersham to be worth $7,000 a day. This contest should have been decided many months ago.

Mr. Speaker, if I were to consult my personal comfort I would not be here to-day, just having risen from a sick bed. I am not so much interested in whether or not Wickersham or Grigsby is seated, but I am interested in this House making a correct decision in election cases. Yesterday the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. HAYS] stated that a great political machine in the Territory of Alaska had controlled elections there for many years. That is the first time I have heard of this machine. The gentleman flourished a telegram or several telegrams from his district, stating that he had been importuned in his district to vote for Grigsby, and that he knew the telegrams emanated from Washington, because he knew that in his district they had not heard of this contest. Probably they have not heard of it in the district represented by the gentleman from Missouri. After looking at him and hearing his speech yesterday I am prepared to agree with him, and to admit that probably they have not heard of this contest in his district, but down in my district, whether they read it in the newspapers or not, they take it for granted that every two years Wickersham has a contest in Congress.

The majority report asks the seating of Wickersham, and does not disclose the name of any illegal voter, except one man named Probst. Up until this good hour the minority of this committee have never seen a list, although often demanding one, until it was produced by the majority this morning showing a list of the voters that they claim were illegal. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHINDBLOM] and myself canvassed the returns, and I think the gentleman will agree with me—and he did at that time—that there was every evidence that the presiding officers were trying to follow the law in this case, and that there were very few discrepancies, as you would usually find in elections covering such a vast territory as is covered in the Territory of Alaska, 600,000 square miles.

After counting many of these ballots, every one where there was any question as to whether or not there were any illegal votes, we decided there were two that should be deducted from Sulzer and given to Wickersham. Understand, this contest was originally between Wickersham and Sulzer. Sulzer died on the 15th of April, 1919. The election took place in November prior to that. Under the law of Alaska the governor called a special election and Grigsby was elected, the gentleman who now holds the seat, as the Delegate from Alaska. The contest to-day is really between Judge Wickersham and Mr. Grigsby, because Mr. Sulzer is dead and can not be here to defend his rights.

The first question raised is relative to the vote of Cache Creek, and they throw out the entire vote.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUDSPETH. No; I can not yield now. Why do they throw out the vote at Cache Creek? Upon the sole testimony of one Red McDonald, who is shown not to be a citizen of the United States nor a qualified voter in Alaska. They were running a dredge there. They had closed this dredge the evening before, preparing to leave the next morning. They packed up their traps and the testimony of six witnesses who are not quoted in the majority report is that the voting took place between 5 and 8 o'clock. Yet the majority report quotes the statement of Red McDonald, who was not even a citizen of the United States nor a voter in the Territory of Alaska, and I note that the chairman of the committee [Mr. DOWELL] yesterday said that there was some discussion between McDonald and some one as to why he did not vote. He said there was some discussion and he did not vote. He knew at that time that he was not a citizen of the United States and so swore to it afterwards and that he had no right to vote. Nevertheless the majority report relies on the testimony of that man and throws out the Cache Creek precinct, and deprives 26 voters of their ballot, of their franchise, and they do it upon the statement of McDonald that the voting took place around 5 o'clock. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] stated yesterday that it was dark almost during the entire day at that time in that portion of Alaska.

Now, the minutes of the committee will show that originally this committee passed upon the Cache Creek precinct and allowed every vote except one. I say the minutes of your committee will show that you passed upon the Cache Creek precinct and allowed every vote except one, and that is the man where they took the ballot box up to his cabin, and that was rejected. Now, you throw out the entire box, you take 26 voters and deprive them of their ballot, because they say they voted a little too early, and they cite you to a Kentucky case. Now, that Kentucky case, gentlemen, was this; I have it right here. It is the case of Varney against Justice. Under the law the polls closed at 7 o'clock and they continued to vote until 10 o'clock. In that case the court threw out the votes cast after 7 o'clock. They did not throw out the entire box, but what you gentlemen are attempting to do here is to deprive every man there of his right to express his choice for delegate from his Territory notwithstanding that the testimony shows that the three election officers remained and six men remained there all day who belonged to the dredging force.

Yet, you gentlemen come in here and base your statement on the right to throw out these ballots on this Kentucky case, and you throw out the entire vote. The Kentucky case only threw out the votes cast after 7 o'clock. In this instance the election judges remained there the entire day, no evidence of any man having been deprived of his right to vote, no evidence of any fraud committed at Cache Creek, no evidence of any man coming there who was sent away without an opportunity to vote, and yet the majority here in order to seat Judge Wickersham—gentlemen, they intended to count this vote, but when they went to sum up another vote to which I will refer, the Indian vote, it was not leading in the right direction to the seating of Judge Wickersham, and they returned at the dead hours of the night, or some time when the minority was not present, and threw the Cache Creek precinct box out after they had put it upon their minutes as legal, except one man. Why? Because it was not leading in the right direction, and you received your orders overnight, and you had to do it in order to seat Wickersham and give him $21,000 out of the Public Treasury. The testimony is that they turned back the clock two hours. That is the testimony. Then the testimony is that there was two hours difference between the cook's watch and that of Red McDonald, your star witness. I expect every session that clock up over the Speaker's desk will be turned back as a legislative matter. Yet would you hold that acts passed after the clock had been turned back were void, holding as you have in this case, because these men in order to get down to the settlement in the cold time of the year got up and packed their traps and voted? Does any man on that side contend they were not qualified voters; yet Judge Wickersham comes in and says when his watchers got there at 8 o'clock the polls were closed and there is not a single line of testimony that he ever had any watchers; no, you can not find it because the record does not disclose he ever had any watchers or that they appeared at that time. Yet they throw out the votes of 26 people there, take 23 from Sulzer and give them to Wickersham on a discrepancy of an old 8-day clock. Pretty sorely pressed! That is not all; that is not all. Let us take up the Indian vote. You contended, Judge Wickersham, before that committee that the Indian who had not severed his tribal relations was not entitled to vote. You made a speech in which you contended that every Indian who had not severed tribal relations—and I agree with him—was not entitled to vote. What did the committee do? When they got to the Indian vote it was not leading in the right direction to seat Wickersham and they laid off on the Indian vote. Why, I will show you why. If they threw out the illegal Indian voters it would give Sulzer an additional 75 majority, and you know it. Why, let me show you why they laid off of the Indian vote. The testimony of Mr. Dennient, an Indian, by Mr. Rustgard, page 174, is:

Q. Do you know how those natives down there (referring to Klawock) voted; who they voted for?—A. No, sir.

Q. I mean the last election; November 5, 1918.—A. No, sir; but Watson was down there pretty strong for Wickersham.

Q. Who?—A. "Nigger" Watson.

Q. He doesn't live at Klawock, does he?—A. Why, he was there quite a while before the election.

Q. At Klawock?—A. Yes, sir.

Who was "Nigger" Watson? Why, he was the man who carried the news to the Indians that Sulzer had prepared a tentative bill to prohibit the Indians from fishing. He was a representative of Judge Wickersham and appears in a number of different places, Klawock and Craig, where the Indians had tribal relations and scattered this news that Sulzer had introduced a bill prohibiting them from fishing, and naturally if they could not fish they would think that Sulzer was responsible for it. This "Nigger" Watson as a representative of Judge Wickersham had scattered the seeds among the Indians, and naturally Wickersham got the Indian votes, and when it was shown where it was leading, and that it would increase the Sulzer majority the majority report contents itself by saying, "We will not go into the Indian vote."

If they had gone into it, you know they would have thrown out 43 votes at Klawock and Craig and another place, where the Indians voted, where they stated they never had voted before in their lives, and you know they voted for Wickersham. Why do I say that? Out of the mouth of one of Wickersham's own witnesses, a man by the name of Stackpole. He was asked whom these Indians were voting for, and he said they were voting for Wickersham. And those were the Indians that did not have the right to vote. Wickersham went into it before the committee, and this majority saw where it was leading, and saw that it would increase Sulzer's majority.

Now, take the Forty Mile precinct, and a great deal was said about it by my friend from Iowa [Mr. DOWELL] yesterday. Under the law the United States commissioner has the right once a year, and it is his duty, to change election precincts. Under the law no election precinct shall have less than 30 votes.

That is the law of Alaska. In order to economize Commissioner Donovan changed and cut out the Steel Creek in Forty Mile precinct and the Jack Wade precinct. The gentleman from Iowa said he cut out two Republican precincts. They were not Republican precincts—at least, one was not—in 1916, for in the Jack Wade precinct the Socialist candidate got 9 votes, Wickersham 8 votes, and Sulzer 4. The Jack Wade precinct was carried by the Socialists in 1916. In the Steel Creek precinct there were only 11 votes cast, and in 1916 Wickersham got 7, the Socialists got 2, and Sulzer 1. Now, what is the testimony about that? They claim in the majority report that this precinct should be thrown out, because he changed the boundaries in less than the 60 days provided by law. The law is he shall issue his order within 60 days, and shall post his notice within the precincts within 30 days. It is true he did not issue his order within the 60 days, but he did get his notice up. It was posted down there 35 days before the election, and the law only provides for 30 days.

There is no evidence here that anybody protested they had not received the notice. There is no testimony here that anybody was deprived of their vote by reason of the fact that they did not see this posted notice, but, on the contrary, they did receive notice, for he posted it 35 days before the election.

They say they had to walk 16 miles to vote. Let me say to you gentlemen that in many precincts of western Texas people travel 100 miles to cast their ballots as freemen. And to have the contestant come in here in order to get his biennial allowance of $21,000 they throw out the vote of 27 men at Forty Mile precinct, because they claim they changed the precinct and did not issue the notice in the time provided by law. He did not. But he did issue his notices, and they were posted in the time provided by law, and nobody claims in this report that he was deprived of his right to vote because they were not posted. But in order to give Judge Wickersham his money they deprive these people of their right to vote. And so throughout the entire district.

Now, in the case of The People against Cook, in Eighth New York, in regard to closing time—and this is Judge Willard speaking for the court—it is stated:

> If the inspector, after closing the door at sundown, received the votes of persons already in the room when the outer door was closed, but no legal votes were rejected or illegal votes received, the election is not invalid.

They received votes after sundown. That is one of the leading cases. The judge goes on to say:

> The hour of the day is not the essence of the thing required to be done.

Also in the case of Soper against The County of Sibley the judge says that the failure to post a list of electors 10 days prior to election is not sufficient ground for rejecting the votes of that precinct.

This following former decisions. Also if a large number of voters, with the knowledge, consent, and connivance of the said judges of election, were by violence and threats prevented from casting their votes, it did not vitiate the election.

And you say because he did not issue notice within 60 days, although he posted the notices, the election is void, and you cast out 27 votes there, taking 23 from Sulzer and giving them to Wickersham.

Mr. MICHENER. When was this case that the gentleman is citing from now decided?

Mr. HUDSPETH. It was decided in the Eighth New York, page 67. I do not remember the date.

Mr. MICHENER. When was the Kentucky case decided?

Mr. HUDSPETH. I do not remember the date. They stated it in their brief. It was decided before this contest.

Mr. MICHENER. It might be very material.

Mr. HUDSPETH. They rely on it as their leading case.

Now, the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. GOODYKOONTZ] wanted to ask me a question, and I yield for a brief one.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ. The question I wanted to ask was if the notice of this contest was filed by Mr. Wickersham prior to the death of Mr. Sulzer?

Mr. HUDSPETH. He claimed he prepared his notice and was not able to serve it on Sulzer because of Mr. Sulzer dying.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ. When did Mr. Sulzer die?

Mr. HUDSPETH. On April 15. And he claims he was not able to serve it on Sulzer on account of his death.

The testimony shows there were 45 illegal votes cast at Cordova and Anchorage and another precinct—45 illegal votes, according to the testimony, were in those boxes. I asked the majority why they did not prorate those votes, as you did in those other cases, and "Wickersham carried all three of these boxes," is the answer. They have the evidence of how they voted. Why did they not prorate them, and show the vote as to how the rest of them voted? Why did not you gentlemen come in here in your majority report and prorate those votes?

Now, let me say to you that you can not get around that they are in the record. There were 45 illegal votes cast there, and this committee did not prorate a single one. They prorate where Sulzer carried boxes in which they claimed illegal votes, but when they come to the Wickersham votes, where they are flagrant violations, where men did not even live in the Territory, they do not touch any of those boxes in those three precincts, and yet they come in here and ask you to seat a man and give him $21,000 for three days' services.

Take the Signal Corps men. Here is the testimony—and I will quote it. There were 40 votes. Eleven of them swore that they voted for Sulzer, 4 for Wickersham, and 8 would not testify as to how they voted, and yet there were 16 that Judge Wickersham did not take the testimony of, and he may tell you, or the gentleman who comes after me, that it was because he feared for his life. Now, listen, gentlemen. Here is the testimony right here. In one place the judge says, and it was regrettable, that he was set upon up there my a man by the name of Selby. But he did not try to take the testimony of these other 16.

In one place he says it was because he was afraid of his life, and in another place Judge Wickersham testifies, and also through his attorney, Mr. Ritchie, that the reason why he did not take the testimoney of these other Signal Corps men was because they would go up there and swear that they had voted for Wickersham and he knew they did not.

Think of it! One of these men was an artilleryman, one of those soldiers who served 18 months "over there" fighting for your liberty and mine, "over there" fighting for the poor and the weak against the strong, and fighting for universal democracy, while Judge Wickersham was fighting for what? Pelf, $21,000. And he comes down here and stigmatizes those men, and says the reason why they did not finish taking the testimony—and he is corroborated by his own attorney, Mr. Ritchie—the reason why he did not do it is because they would come up there and swear a lie, and swear that they voted for Wickersham when they had voted for Sulzer. That is his reason. They may tell you that some man attacked him, and it is creditable that he did. It may be in Alaska as it is elsewhere in Texas, where red blood runs in men's veins, that whenever you say a man's sister or his wife has sworn to a lie the warship begins to sail. I suppose that prevails up in Alaska just as it does in Texas; when you say a man's sister or his wife has perjured herself there is sure to be trouble. This lady was named Mrs. Tyer. I read from the record on page 212:

> Mr. WICKERSHAM. I want to notify Mr. and Mrs. Tyer that I shall expect them to be here Thursday. I am going to apply to the commanding officer to keep him here until this matter is settled.

The commanding officer had assembled these men for 37 days before examination. The resolution only called for 30 days' examination.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has expired.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Will the gentleman from Iowa yield me just two minutes more?

Mr. DOWELL. I regret I can not. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman may proceed five minutes more.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed for five minutes, and that the gentleman from Iowa may have five minutes more time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the time of debate be extended 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUDSPETH. I read further:

Mr. TYER. Haven't I given my testimony?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Not as fully as I desire it shall be done.

Mr. DIMOND. The only way, then, is for them to come in and testify they voted for Mr. Sulzer. If they state they voted for Mr. Wickersham they must be harassed and hounded around. If they say they voted and refuse to state for whom they voted, they must be pursued and brought into court on various successive days.

* * * * * * *

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Dimond, down at Seattle some time ago I took the testimony of Capt. Faust, Mr. Van Wick, Mr. Mooney, and two more soldiers, all of whom, as you know, took the same position as you are now taking, but on further advice all testified very fully and frankly. I want you to know that.

* * * * * * *

Mr. WICKERSHAM. The notary public understands that we haven't the testimony of this lady. She has refused to testify.

Mrs. TYER. Why are you keeping my husband, then?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. I want her to testify to the truth and the whole truth, and she said she would.

Mrs. TYER. Why are you keeping my husband?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Your husband is being kept because of the resolution of the House of Representatives which requires the assemblage of all these soldiers here for the purpose of testifying.

Mr. TYER. Haven't I testified?

Mr. DIMOND. You and your husband are being kept in order to harass you.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. I want this woman's testimony, and I am going to have it.

Mr. DIMOND. You go ahead and get it. I object to any further delay.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. You can't violate the law with impunity.

Mr. DIMOND. I object to that statement. There is no violation of the law on my part.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Soldiers ought to be the first ones to walk up and bravely and courageously tell the whole truth.

Mr. TYER. I have told the whole truth, and I object to your saying that probably I told the truth, sir.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. I say you probably told the truth. I have no doubt of it. This place is becoming a menace to civilization, almost.

Mr. DIMOND. You have become a worse menace.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. The House of Representatives don't think so.

Mr. DIMOND. All Alaskans do, however.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Even a Democratic Congress doesn't think so. I ask for a postponement.

Now, that is the reason why the gentleman says at first he was afraid of his life, and, second, because there had come up there men in the uniform of their country, men who had enlisted in Alaska, men who had fought in the trenches of the Argonne while Judge Wickersham was making his biennial fight for the $21,000 that he expects. These men, he says, would not tell the truth. Then, in another statement he says he was afraid of his life. A man by the name of Selby, the brother of Mrs. Tyer, did jump on him, but there is no connection between the Signal Corps men and this trouble.

If I had time I would show you that a man can acquire a residence in Alaska under the law as a soldier, and that these men, seven of them, had married Valdez girls and had homes there, and that many of them had enlisted in Alaska in 1902 and mixed with the citizens and paid taxes. And yet this committee comes in here and throws out the votes of 40 and gives them to Wickersham; and as to 16 of them he never attempts to take their testimony, although the Secretary of War had assembled them there for the purpose of Mr. Wickersham taking the testimony.

Are you going to seat him on this testimony? I want to say to you, gentlemen, on that side, if you do, the precedent will rise up and plague you. After the Civil War, when sectional passions ran high, they seated men under various pretexts, but when men like Bailey and Gov. Lanham came up here and conferred with men like LODGE and Root, and said: "We will not do it on these pretexts; we will stop these raids on the Treasury," they did stop. But it seems there has been a return to it, gentlemen, or will be if you seat a man like Judge Wickersham. I do not believe you will do it. I do not believe you will give him $7,000 a day for three days, $4,000 for mileage, and $2,000 for expenses, and $15,000 for salary. I say, when you do and give him a seat here, when he is no more entitled to it than I am entitled to the ground upon which this Capitol is situated, you will do a great wrong, and one that will haunt you, and you will be ashamed of the rest of your natural lives. [Applause.]

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Texas has again expired.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. REAVIS] the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the time be extended five minutes, to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHINDBLOM].

Mr. HUDSPETH. They gave me five minutes, and I agreed that we would give them five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent that the time be extended five minutes more. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. May I ask the Speaker to notify me when I have occupied 15 minutes?

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire what is the present allotment of time?

The SPEAKER. All the time of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] has expired. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. CHINDBLOM] has 25 minutes, which ends all time.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, this is my first participation in an election contest on the floor of this House. I have listened to some other contests which have been concluded here. I have myself participated in election contests elsewhere, and I will say very frankly that I have been somewhat surprised to find that my assumption that such contests should be determined solely upon the law and the evidence was a little far-fetched, and has not been sustained by some of the discussions on this floor. I presume I can make no answer that will be convincing in reply to the suggestion made a moment ago that there was a "nigger Watson," who participated in this case on behalf of the contestant, Mr. Wickersham, and I presume further that I can make no satisfactory reply to the charge that Mr. Wickersham offended or insulted a lady in Alaska; but I most respectfully suggest that these two elements, for whatever purpose they were introduced here, have no proper part in the discussion of this case.

Mr. Speaker, this committee started upon the consideration of this case in very good humor and in very good accord in spirit and purpose. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] suggested that some tentative agreement or arrangement had been made with reference to some of the issues. We did begin to ascertain whether we could arrive at a unanimous conclusion in this case, and tentatively we passed over some controverted questions. We passed over temporarily the Cache Creek proposition, and we also passed over temporarily the Indian vote proposition, and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] and the other minority members of the committee were parties to that discussion in the committee. But the gentleman from New York [Mr. ROWAN], who is not here, and who was expected to take the laboring oar in this contest for the contestee, raised a very novel proposition which has not even been discussed by the gentlemen on the other side, namely, that the requirement of a 30 days' residence in the precinct was not borne out by a proper construction of the organic law of Alaska; and there we stopped. We could not go any further in trying to reach a unanimous agreement in the committee when such an issue as that was raised.

Just one word about this question of the compensation of Mr. Wickersham. I hold that question has no part in the discussion of this case. It has no proper place in this debate. The question is whether Mr. Wickersham was elected a Delegate from Alaska. If he was, he is entitled to the money. Why should you start here in this contest and object to his getting his salary, when you pay a salary to every man who is finally seated in an election contest in this House, whether it be in the last days of the session or at any other time during the session? We seated a man the other day, who will get the full salary, and no such issue as that was raised in his case.

But you say that this gentleman, Mr. Wickersham, has made a contest here before. Maybe he did. I was not here, but I find there are antecedents and ramifications of this case which are entirely unknown to a new Member, and I wish some of those antecedents and ramifications would be forgotten and that the whole thing could be settled upon the evidence and the law.

We can not hope in one hour and a half, nor can the other side hope in one hour and a half, to discuss this evidence which is represented by these documents. It is impossible for us to go into the testimony of individual witnesses and tell you what the effect of that testimony is. But I want to say particularly to the Members on this side that the Republican members of this committee sat down together and they went over this testimony and examined every individual case of every voter whose vote is challenged in this report, of every voter who had not a residence of 30 days in the precinct and whose vote was challenged, and of every soldier whose vote was challenged. We sat down and we spent many weary hours examining this testimony, and we reached the conclusions which you will find in the report of the committee.

Somebody has raised the question of fraud. They tell you that votes should not be cast out unless you prove fraud. That is not the rule of law. The rule of law is that there must be fraud shown unless the things complained of affect the result of the election. In this case the things complained of do affect the result of the election. If there is a violation of an election law, no matter how innocent or how unintentional the violation may be, if there is a violation of law which affects the result of the election, then such violation should be taken into account by those reviewing the testimony.

In this case the things of which we complain do affect the result. The votes which have been discarded and thrown out by your committee affect the result directly, because instead of the plurality of 33 votes which Mr. Sulzer received on the face of the returns the elimination of the votes reported by your committee gives Mr. Wickersham a plurality of 37 votes.

In the discussion of this case we have attempted to divide the various issues among the majority members of the committee. Many of you were not here yesterday afternoon and did not hear the discussion by the chairman of the committee [Mr. DOWELL] of some phases of the case, or the discussion by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. ELLIOTT] of another phase of the case. I can not take the time to repeat what was said by them on the issues which they presented.

I shall try to say a few words with reference to the soldier vote. It may be a popular thing at this very time to charge the majority Members with eliminating soldier votes and making an appeal that soldiers' votes should be allowed to be counted even if they are cast in violation of law. I think all of us have had some experience with reference to soldiers' votes. Fort Sheridan is located in my district in Illinois. Last November I was compelled to advise Republican officers and Republican privates at Fort Sheridan that they could not vote in the election if they had come there through being stationed at Fort Sheridan as soldiers. In the previous case of Wickersham against Sulzer in the Sixty-fifth Congress, the committee of which the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. WILSON] was the chairman, a committee controlled by the Democratic side of this House at that time, brought in a report in which they discussed this very question, and they cited with approval the following:

(I. A.) A person in the military service of the United States is entitled to vote where he has his legal residence, provided he has the qualifications prescribed by the laws of the State. He does not lose such residence by reason of being absent in the service of the United States. The laws of a particular State in which he is stationed and has only a temporary as distinguished from a legal residence may, however, permit him to vote in that State after a certain period of actual residence. (Digest of opinions of the Judge Advocates General of the Army, Howland, pp. 976–978.)

McCrary on Elections, sections 90 and 91, page 70, says, and I have the volume here:

SEC. 90. The fact that an elector is a soldier in the Army of the United States does not disqualify him from voting at his place of residence, but he can not acquire a residence, so as to qualify him as a voter, by being stationed at a military post whilst in the service of the United States.

SEC. 91. Soldiers in the United States Army can not acquire a residence by being long quartered in a particular place, and though upon being discharged from the service they remain in the place where they have previously been quartered, if a year's residence in that place is required as a qualification for voting, they must remain there one year from the date of discharge before acquiring the right to vote.

Now, I am just going to give you an idea of where the soldiers' votes came from. I say that the law is, and every authority will bear me out, that a soldier, who has been sent to a particular post and is stationed there as a soldier of the United States under orders of his superior officers, can not acquire a residence for voting purposes while at that post. I will run through the list:

William T. Barr, enlistment residence, Lincoln, Nebr.
Ike A. Beal, enlistment residence, Amarillo, Tex.
J. W. Boon, enlistment residence, Newnan, Ga.
H. B. Connover, enlistment residence, St. Louis, Mo.
R. N. Cummins, enlistment residence, Fairview, W. Va.
Max H. Faust, enlistment residence, New York City.
G. B. Hawley, enlistment residence, Spokane, Wash.
J. P. Lake, enlistment residence, St. Paul, Kans.
J. B. Looney, enlistment residence, Okmulgee, Okla.
P. F. McQuillan, enlistment residence, Rochester, N. Y.
H. R. Morgan, enlistment residence, Seattle, Wash.
H. Van Wyck, enlistment residence, Seattle, Wash.
G. E. Doyle, enlistment residence, Lawton, Wash.
Sidney Gross, enlistment residence, San Francisco, Calif.
——— Wilson, enlistment residence, States.
D. M. Hocker, enlistment residence, Owensboro, Ky.
J. E. Peques, enlistment residence, Oklahoma, Okla.
H. D. Stenbuck, enlistment residence, Milwaukee, Wis.
E. D. Whittle, enlistment residence, Seattle, Wash.
R. H. L. Noaks, enlistment residence, El Paso, Tex.
H. De Marce, enlistment residence, Veblen, S. Dak.
J. M. Campbell, enlistment residence, Norwalk, Ohio.
L. G. Selk, enlistment residence, St. Louis, Mo.
H. G. Wescott, enlistment residence, Seattle, Wash.

They enlisted at these various places in the Army of the United States, were sent to Alaska under orders from the Army officers, and stayed there and served in the Army of the United States. Now, even if their enlistment expired and they remained in Alaska for a few days or a few weeks, if they reenlisted they did not acquire a residence in Alaska by reason of such stay in Alaska.

Mr. GRIGSBY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. I can not yield now. I think we have been pretty fair.

Mr. GRIGSBY. Did any of them reenlist in Alaska?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Yes.

Mr. GRIGSBY. Then why does not the gentleman say so?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Even if they did reenlist, they could not acquire a residence in Alaska so as to make them legal voters.

Mr. FIELDS. They might have been married and keeping house.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. We have not included any that were married or had homes there.

Mr. GRIGSBY. Where does the evidence show it?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. These 24 men whose names I have read all voted for Sulzer. We threw out five others who voted for Wickersham. We threw out this man Tyer. He was such an extreme partisan that he never would have voted for Wickersham, although he stated that he did vote for Wickersham to muddle the waters and mix up the case.

Now, I can only ask the Members of the House—it is too late to read the hearings or to read the testimony—I can only say this to them: You will have to accept the conclusions of one side or the other in this contest. You will have to accept the conclusions of the majority members of the committee or you will have to accept the conclusions of the minority members. I do not believe that my discussion or any discussion will enlighten Members in any great degree. You can take this record and read detached portions of it—as many people say you can read the Bible—and prove any proposition under Heaven. What you have to do is to take a record of this sort, read it through carefully, and then reach your conclusion.

Mr. ROSE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Yes.

Mr. ROSE. Would it not be well to make known, and is it not the fact, that the majority as well as the minority members of the committee coincided with the views presented by Judge Wilson?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. They did.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Yes. I think it is fair to yield to the gentleman.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. I do not know what the testimony in this case is, but all the testimony in the other case was that at the places of enlistment for the soldier to go into Alaska under military orders they went there and remained there under such orders. Is there anything in the record to show that they made any attempt to the contrary?

Mr. CHINDBLOM. There were some reenlistments in your case also. I want to say, however, that there are a number of cases here where the soldiers were conscripted for the recent World War and happened to be in other precincts than the ones in which they lived. We did not throw them out because Mr. Wickersham did not want it done. These soldiers had been conscripted in Alaska, they were in the United States Army for the World War, but they happened on election day to be in some other precinct than the one in which they were conscripted, and we did nothing about them. They were residents of Alaska, but not of the precincts in which they voted. We treated them more generously than we did the civilians. With reference to the civilians, wherever we found a man as to whom the proof showed conclusively that he was not a resident of the precinct in which he voted, we thought it fair to throw that vote out. That matter was discussed yesterday, and I shall not discuss it any further. The organic law of Alaska requires one year's residence in the Territory and 30 days in the precinct.

That law will be nugatory; it will be practically repealed by this Congress if it is not enforced in this election case. They tell you that the distances are great in Alaska. They are; and that is one reason why they should be compelled to observe the law which is established by the Congress.

The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] said that we "laid off the Indian vote." On the Indian vote we took exactly the same position as was taken by the committee in the 1916 case, of which the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. WILSON] was the chairman.

Mr. HUDSPETH. But you did not follow Judge Wickersham's suggestion in that case as you did in the other.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. We did not. We took the same view that the former committee did. Take this record and you will find the evidence is so inconclusive, so hazy, so misty, that it is impossible for anybody to reach any definite conclusion in respect to the Indian vote. There is, however, no Indian that lives in tribal relations within the meaning of that term in Alaska, as established by the decisions of the courts. There are no tribes up there. They are not living under the tribal form of government, they have no chiefs under whom they live, and to whose government and laws they are subject.

With respect to the 40-mile district, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HUDSPETH] said that while the order was not made in time the notices were posted in time. Let us consider the conditions in Alaska. Many of the people live in the wilderness. They live far away from each other. There were five precincts in the 40-mile district. Two of them were Republican precincts. In those precincts the post offices were located, and they were the centers of population. Under the law the commissioner could reduce the number of precincts and change the polling places by entering an order 60 days before the election. If he had entered the order 60 days before the election, the residents of the district and the people interested in the election could have gone to his office and seen the order; but the gentleman says that sufficient was done when he posted the notices. Where did he post them? On the trees and on the backs of barns, wherever they could find a place. What public places are there in Alaska where a man who lives in the wilderness can find notices? The only way he can be advised of a change in the polling places in a Territory of that sort is by personal information, and that personal information could have been given, and would have been given, if the order had been entered of record at the proper time and at the place where it should have been. When they went to the commissioner's office 60 days before the election there was no such order upon the books; but after that time, under the direction of Judge Bunnell, or under his suggestion—and I have concluded from this testimony that he is as bitter a partisan as any man in Alaska—the commissioner only some 35 days before the election entered an order on the record reducing the number of precincts from five to three, and he removed the polling places from the places where the post offices in the district are located.

With reference now to Cache Creek. The gentleman says it is unfair to discard those votes. You do not have to discard those votes to reach the same result as we have reached here. In fact, you can omit Cache Creek precinct and you can omit 40-mile district, and if you take only the votes which were illegally cast on the ground of nonresidence in the precinct, and by soldiers who were not entitled to vote and the other individual votes, you would still have a majority in favor of Mr. Wickersham on the record in this case. But I say with reference to Cache Creek, if this House will say that men residing in a mining or lumber camp can get together the night before the election and say: "Now, to-morrow, we have to leave at daybreak, and the law requires us to have an election from 8 o'clock in the morning until 7 at night, but we are not going to do that, we are going to take these votes in the morning as soon as we get out of bed, and we are going to close the business up and get out of here"—if you decide that elections can be conducted in that way, you will be setting a very bad and a very dangerous precedent. In fact, there have been arguments here which it seems to me entirely ignore the requirements of the law. One gentleman in debate last evening said that it was "fair and honorable to accommodate the voters." This was certainly an accommodation to the voters, and I think this election was conducted for the accommodation in Alaska of every man who wanted to vote for Sulzer. It was an accommodation election.

Mr. Speaker, if a man presents himself to the voters of his district or of his Territory and is defeated in an election by reason of fraud or by reason of violations of law which affect the result, he has the right not only under the Constitution, but under the laws of Congress, under the statutes of the United States, to bring a contest here.

If it is shown that he had been elected, are we going to let our personal prejudices, or any other similar considerations our personal prejudices, or any other similar considerations determine our action in the case, or are men going to have the privilege of coming to the Congress of the United States, to the House of Representatives, and presenting their case, and securing a verdict on the evidence and the law as presented? I think that is the issue here. I am perfectly satisfied, as every member of the majority of the committee is perfectly satisfied, that Mr. Wickersham is entitled to this election. I did not enter this case with any prejudice in favor of Mr. Wickersham. I will say frankly that I think frequently he rubs the fur the wrong way.. Frequently we had clashes in the committee, and I was not disposed for partisan or personal reasons to give him the best of the argument in this case, but I reached the conclusion that he is entitled to this election, that he obtained a clear majority of the votes in Alaska in the November election of 1918.

Some complaint has been made about delay in this case. Mr. Sulzer died on April 15, 1919, and the certificate of election was issued to him on April 17, 1919. Notice of contest could not be given until the certificate had issued. Mr. Wickersham came here. The gentleman from Alaska, Mr. Grigsby, said that the governor was compelled to call a special election. That is not quite so. The Legislature of Alaska got together in a hurry and passed a law for the holding of a special election, while Mr. Wickersham was perfecting this appeal, this contest in this House. Then this House passed a resolution directing that the contest should proceed against Mr. Grigsby as well as against Mr. Sulzer. Under that resolution we have proceeded. The time for taking evidence was extended. After the depositions in Alaska had been taken, we began the hearings before the committee in March of last year. We had just finished the hearings and had very little time to consider the evidence when the House adjourned on June 5 of last year. We got together shortly after the House reconvened last December and we considered this case and the committee filed its report about three weeks ago. I think there has been no undue delay. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I understand the previous question has been ordered. I move to recommit the report and resolutions in the pending election case of Wickersham against Sulzer and George B. Grigsby to the Committee on Elections No. 3.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee offers a motion to recommit, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. GARRETT moves to recommit the report and resolutions in the pending contested-election case of Wickersham against Sulzer and George B. Grigsby to the Committee on Elections No. 3.

Mr. CHINDBLOM. Mr. Speaker I make the point of order that the previous question was to be considered as ordered at the end of debate.

The SPEAKER. That is true, but that does not preclude a motion to recommit.

Mr. DOWELL. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to recommit.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Tennessee to recommit the resolution to the Committee on Elections No. 3.

Mr. DOWELL. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. GARRETT. Let it advance a step further and the point of order can then be made and the gentleman will get the yeas and nays.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. GARRETT. I make the point of order there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. Apparently a quorum has not voted and is not present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 169, nays 188, answered "present" 3, not voting 68, as follows:

YEAS—169.

Almon	Carss	Flood	Kincheloe
Anthony	Carter	French	King
Ashbrook	Clark, Fla.	Gallivan	Lanham
Aswell	Cleary	Gandy	Lankford
Ayres	Coady	Ganly	Larsen
Babka	Collier	Gard	Lazaro
Bankhead	Connally	Garrett	Lea, Calif.
Barkley	Crisp	Godwin, N. C.	Lee, Ga.
Bee	Cullen	Goodykoontz	Lesher
Bell	Davey	Griffin	Linthicum
Benson	Davis, Tenn.	Hardy, Tex.	McAndrews
Black	Dewalt	Hastings	McClintic
Bland, Mo.	Dickinson, Mo.	Hersman	McDuffie
Bland, Va.	Dominick	Hoey	McGlennon
Blanton	Donovan	Holland	McKeown
Bowers	Doremus	Howard	McKinley
Bowling	Drane	Huddleston	McLaughlin, Nebr.
Box	Drewry	Hudspeth	Major
Brand	Dupré	Hull, Tenn.	Mansfield
Briggs	Dyer	Humphreys	Martin
Buchanan	Eagan	Igoe	Mays
Byrnes, S. C.	Eagle	Jacoway	Mead
Byrns, Tenn.	Echols	James, Va.	Milligan
Campbell, Pa.	Evans, Mont.	Johnson, Ky.	Minahan, N. J.
Candler	Evans, Nev.	Johnson, Miss.	Montague
Cantrill	Ferris	Johnson, S. Dak.	Moore, Va.
Caraway	Fields	Jones, Pa.	Mudd
Carew	Fisher	Jones, Tex.	Neely

Nelson, Mo.	Raker	Steagall	Weaver
Nicholls	Ramsey	Stedman	Welling
O'Connell	Rayburn	Steele	Welty
O'Connor	Riordan	Stephens, Miss.	Whaley
Oldfield	Robinson, N. C.	Stevenson	Wilson, La.
Oliver	Romjue	Stoll	Wilson, Pa.
Olney	Rouse	Sumners, Tex.	Wingo
Overstreet	Rucker	Tague	Woods, Va.
Padgett	Sabath	Taylor, Ark.	Woodyard
Park	Sherwood	Taylor, Colo.	Wright
Parrish	Siegel	Taylor, Tenn.	Young, Tex.
Pell	Sims	Tillman	Zihlman
Phelan	Sisson	Upshaw
Pou	Small	Venable
Quin	Smithwick	Vinson

NAYS—188.

Ackerman	Goodall	McArthur	Sanders, Ind.
Anderson	Gould	McCulloch	Sanders, N. Y.
Andrews, Nebr.	Graham, Ill.	McKenzie	Schall
Bacharach	Green, Iowa	McKinley	Scott
Barbour	Greene, Mass.	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sells
Begg	Greene, Vt.	McLeod	Shreve
Benham	Griest	MacGregor	Sinclair
Bland, Ind.	Hadley	Madden	Sinnott
Boies	Hardy, Colo.	Magee	Slemp
Britten	Harreld	Mann, Ill.	Smith, Idaho
Brooks, Ill.	Haugen	Mapes	Smith, Mich.
Brooks, Pa.	Hawley	Mason	Snell
Browne	Hays	Merritt	Snyder
Burdick	Hernandez	Michener	Steenerson
Burroughs	Hersey	Miller	Stephens, Ohio
Butler	Hickey	Mondell	Stiness
Campbell, Kans.	Hicks	Moore, Ohio	Strong, Kans.
Cannon	Hill	Moores, Ind.	Strong, Pa.
Chindblom	Hoch	Mott	Summers, Wash.
Christopherson	Houghton	Murphy	Sweet
Copley	Hulings	Nelson, Wis.	Swindall
Cramton	Hull, Iowa	Newton, Minn.	Swope
Currie, Mich.	Husted	Nolan	Temple
Dale	Hutchinson	Ogden	Thompson
Dallinger	Ireland	Osborne	Tilson
Darrow	Jefferis	Paige	Timberlake
Davis, Minn.	Johnson, Wash.	Parker	Tincher
Dempsey	Kearns	Patterson	Tinkham
Denison	Keller	Perlman	Towner
Dickinson, Iowa	Kelley, Mich.	Peters	Treadway
Dowell	Kelly, Pa.	Porter	Vaile
Dunbar	Kendall	Purnell	Vestal
Dunn	Kennedy, Iowa	Radcliffe	Volk
Edmonds	Kennedy, R. I.	Ramseyer	Volstead
Elliott	Kinkaid	Randall, Calif.	Walsh
Esch	Kleczka	Randall, Wis.	Walters
Evans, Nebr.	Knutson	Ransley	Ward
Fairfield	Kraus	Reavis	Wason
Farr	Kreider	Reber	Watson
Fess	Lampert	Reed, N. Y.	Webster
Focht	Layton	Reed, W. Va.	Wheeler
Foster	Lehlbach	Rhodes	White, Kans.
Frear	Little	Ricketts	White, Me.
Freeman	Longworth	Robsion, Ky.	Williams
Fuller	Luce	Rogers	Winslow
Glynn	Lufkin	Rose	Wood, Ind.
Good	Luhring	Rowe	Young, N. Dak.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—3.

Crago	Fish	Kiess

NOT VOTING—68.

Andrews, Md.	Ellsworth	Kettner	Rodenberg
Baer	Elston	Kitchin	Rowan
Brinson	Emerson	Langley	Rubey
Brumbaugh	Fordney	Lonergan	Sanders, La.
Burke	Gallagher	McFadden	Sanford
Caldwell	Garner	McPherson	Scully
Casey	Goldfogle	Maher	Sears
Clark, Mo.	Goodwin, Ark.	Mann, S. C.	Smith, Ill.
Classon	Graham, Pa.	Monahan, Wis.	Smith, N. Y.
Cole	Hamill	Moon	Sullivan
Cooper	Hamilton	Mooney	Thomas
Costello	Harrison	Morin	Vare
Crowther	Hayden	Newton, Mo.	Voigt
Curry, Calif.	James, Mich.	Rainey, Ala.	Watkins
Dent	Johnston, N. Y.	Rainey, Henry T.	Wilson, Ill.
Dooling	Juul	Rainey, John W.	Wise
Doughton	Kahn	Riddick	Yates

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. KITCHIN (for) with Mr. FORDNEY (against).

Mr. BURKE (for) with Mr. LANGLEY (against).

General pairs:

Mr. KAHN with Mr. DENT.

Mr. MCPHERSON with Mr. KETTNER.

Mr. NEWTON of Missouri with Mr. HAYDEN.

Mr. YATES with Mr. BRINSON.

Mr. ANDREWS of Maryland with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. CROWTHER with Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania with Mr. CLARK of Missouri.

Mr. ELLSWORTH with Mr. THOMAS.

Mr. COLE with Mr. SULLIVAN.

Mr. SANFORD with Mr. CASEY.

Mr. CURRY of California with Mr. WISE.

Mr. MONAHAN of Wisconsin with Mr. ROWAN.

Mr. JUUL with Mr. WATKINS.

Mr. VARE with Mr. RUBEY.

Mr. WILSON of Illinois with Mr. JOHNSTON of New York.

Mr. ELSTON with Mr. DOUGHTON.

Mr. BAER with Mr. MOON.

Mr. JAMES of Michigan with Mr. SMITH of New York.

Mr. VOIGT with Mr. GOLDFOGLE.

Mr. CLASSON with Mr. JOHN W. RAINEY.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois with Mr. GALLAGHER.

Mr. COOPER with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.

Mr. COSTELLO with Mr. MANN of South Carolina.

Mr. EMERSON with Mr. BRUMBAUGH.

Mr. HAMILTON with Mr. MAHER.

Mr. MCFADDEN with Mr. RAINEY of Alabama.

Mr. MORIN with Mr. DOOLING.

Mr. RIDDICK with Mr. GARNER.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. HARRISON.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

The question comes on the resolutions, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. HUDSPETH. Mr. Speaker, I move to substitute the minority for the majority report.

The SPEAKER. That is already pending. The Clerk will report the resolutions.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That James Wickersham was not elected a Delegate to the Sixty-sixth Congress from the Territory of Alaska, and is not entitled to a seat in said Congress.

Resolved, That Charles A. Sulzer was duly elected a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska to the Sixty-sixth Congress, and that said Charles A. Sulzer having died, and George B. Grigsby having been elected at a special election as a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska, and having been sworn in as a Member of the House of Representatives on July 1, 1920, that the said Grigsby is entitled to retain his seat therein.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the question.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has that right. The question is on agreeing to the first resolution.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 169, nays 179, answered "present" 11, not voting 69, as follows:

YEAS—169.

Almon	Donovan	Lanham	Ramsey
Anthony	Doremus	Lankford	Rayburn
Ashbrook	Drane	Larsen	Reavis
Aswell	Drewry	Layton	Riordan
Ayres	Dupré	Lazaro	Robinson, N. C.
Babka	Dyer	Lea, Calif.	Romjue
Bankhead	Eagan	Lee, Ga.	Rouse
Barkley	Eagle	Lesher	Rucker
Bee	Echols	Linthicum	Sabath
Bell	Evans, Mont.	McAndrews	Sherwood
Benson	Evans, Nev.	McClintic	Sims
Black	Ferris	McDuffie	Sisson
Bland, Mo.	Fields	McGlennon	Small
Bland, Va.	Fisher	McKeown	Smithwick
Blanton	Flood	McKinley	Steagall
Bowers	French	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Stedman
Bowling	Gallivan	Major	Stephens, Miss.
Box	Gandy	Mansfield	Stevenson
Brand	Ganly	Martin	Stoll
Briggs	Gard	Mays	Sumners, Tex.
Brinson	Garrett	Mead	Tague
Buchanan	Godwin, N. C.	Milligan	Taylor, Ark.
Byrnes, S. C.	Goodykoontz	Minahan, N. J.	Taylor, Colo.
Byrns, Tenn.	Griffin	Montague	Taylor, Tenn.
Campbell, Pa.	Hardy, Tex.	Moore, Va.	Tillman
Candler	Hastings	Mudd	Upshaw
Cantrill	Hersman	Neely	Venable
Caraway	Hoey	Nelson, Mo.	Vinson
Carew	Holland	Nicholls	Weaver
Carss	Howard	O'Connell	Welling
Carter	Huddleston	O'Connor	Welty
Clark, Fla.	Hudspeth	Oldfield	Whaley
Cleary	Hull, Tenn.	Oliver	Wilson, Ill.
Coady	Humphreys	Olney	Wilson, La.
Collier	Igoe	Overstreet	Wingo
Connally	Jacoway	Padgett	Woods, Va.
Crisp	James, Va.	Park	Woodyard
Cullen	Johnson, Ky.	Parrish	Wright
Davey	Johnson, Miss.	Pell	Young, Tex.
Davis, Tenn.	Johnson, S. Dak.	Phelan	Zihlman
Dewalt	Jones, Pa.	Pou
Dickinson, Mo.	Jones, Tex.	Quin
Dominick	Kincheloe	Raker

NAYS—179.

Ackerman	Browne	Dallinger	Esch
Anderson	Burdick	Darrow	Evans, Nebr.
Andrews, Md.	Burroughs	Davis, Minn.	Farr
Bacharach	Butler	Dempsey	Fess
Barbour	Campbell, Kans.	Denison	Focht
Begg	Cannon	Dickinson, Iowa	Foster
Bland, Ind.	Chindblom	Dowell	Frear
Boies	Copley	Dunbar	Freeman
Britten	Cramton	Dunn	Fuller
Brooks, Ill.	Currie, Mich.	Edmonds	Glynn
Brooks, Pa.	Dale	Elliott	Good

Goodall	King	Newton, Minn.	Steenerson
Gould	Kinkaid	Ogden	Stephens, Ohio
Graham, Ill.	Kleczka	Osborne	Stiness
Green, Iowa	Knutson	Paige	Strong, Pa.
Greene, Mass.	Kraus	Parker	Summers, Wash.
Greene, Vt.	Kreider	Patterson	Sweet
Griest	Lampert	Peters	Swindall
Hadley	Langley	Porter	Swope
Hardy, Colo.	Lehlbach	Purnell	Thompson
Harreld	Longworth	Radcliffe	Tilson
Haugen	Luce	Ramseyer	Timberlake
Hawley	Lufkin	Randall, Calif.	Tincher
Hays	Luhring	Randall, Wis.	Tinkham
Hernandez	McArthur	Ransley	Towner
Hersey	McCulloch	Reed, N. Y.	Treadway
Hickey	McKenzie	Reed, W. Va.	Vaile
Hicks	McKinley	Rhodes	Vestal
Hill	McLaughlin, Mich.	Ricketts	Volk
Hoch	McLeod	Robsion, Ky.	Volstead
Hull, Iowa	MacGregor	Rogers	Walsh
Husted	Madden	Rose	Walters
Hutchinson	Magee	Rowe	Ward
Ireland	Mann, Ill.	Sanders, Ind.	Wason
Jefferis	Mapes	Sanders, N. Y.	Watson
Johnson, Wash.	Mason	Schall	Webster
Juul	Merritt	Scott	Wheeler
Kearns	Michener	Sells	White, Kans.
Keller	Miller	Shreve	White, Me.
Kelley, Mich.	Mondell	Sinclair	Williams
Kelly, Pa.	Moore, Ohio	Smith, Idaho	Winslow
Kendall	Moores, Ind.	Smith, Ill.	Wood, Ind.
Kennedy, Iowa	Mott	Smith, Mich.	Yates
Kennedy, R. I.	Murphy	Snell	Young, N. Dak.
Kiess	Nelson, Wis.	Snyder

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—11.

Andrews, Nebr.	Crago	Nolan	Siegel
Christopherson	Fairfield	Perlman	Strong, Kans.
Cooper	Fish	Reber

NOT VOTING—69.

Baer	Fordney	Lonergan	Sanford
Benham	Gallagher	McFadden	Scully
Brumbaugh	Garner	McPherson	Sears
Burke	Goldfogle	Maher	Sinnott
Caldwell	Goodwin, Ark.	Mann, S. C.	Slemp
Casey	Graham, Pa.	Monahan, Wis.	Smith, N. Y.
Clark, Mo.	Hamill	Moon	Steele
Classon	Hamilton	Mooney	Sullivan
Cole	Harrison	Morin	Temple
Costello	Hayden	Newton, Mo.	Thomas
Crowther	Houghton	Rainey, Ala.	Vare
Curry, Calif.	Hulings	Rainey, Henry T.	Voigt
Dent	James, Mich.	Rainey, John W.	Watkins
Dooling	Johnston, N. Y.	Riddick	Wilson, Pa.
Doughton	Kahn	Rodenberg	Wise
Ellsworth	Kettner	Rowan
Elston	Kitchin	Rubey
Emerson	Little	Sanders, La.

So the resolution was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. KITCHIN (for) with Mr. FORDNEY (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. BURKE with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. HOUGHTON with Mr. MOONEY.

Mr. HULINGS with Mr. CALDWELL.

Mr. TEMPLE with Mr. SEARS.

Mr. LITTLE with Mr. GALLAGHER.

Mr. SINNOTT with Mr. JOHNSTON of New York.

Mr. SLEMP with Mr. WILSON of Pennsylvania.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the second resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Charles A. Sulzer was duly elected a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska to the Sixty-sixth Congress, and that said Charles A. Sulzer having died, and George B. Grigsby having been elected at a special election as a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska, and having been sworn in as a Member of the House of Representatives on July 1, 1920, that the said Grigsby is entitled to retain his seat therein.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 163, nays 179, answered "present" 5, not voting 81, as follows:

YEAS—163.

Almon	Box	Collier	Eagle
Anthony	Brand	Connally	Evans, Mont.
Ashbrook	Briggs	Crisp	Ferris
Aswell	Brinson	Cullen	Fields
Ayres	Buchanan	Davey	Fisher
Babka	Byrnes, S. C.	Davis, Tenn.	Flood
Bankhead	Byrns, Tenn.	Dewalt	French
Barkley	Campbell, Pa.	Dickinson, Mo.	Gallivan
Bee	Candler	Dominick	Gandy
Bell	Cantrill	Donovan	Ganly
Benson	Caraway	Doremus	Gard
Black	Carew	Drane	Garrett
Bland, Mo.	Carss	Drewry	Godwin, N. C.
Bland, Va.	Carter	Dupré	Griffin
Blanton	Cleary	Dyer	Hardy, Tex.
Bowling	Coady	Eagan	Hastings
Hoey	McDuffie	Padgett	Stephens, Miss.
Holland	McGlennon	Park	Stevenson
Howard	McKeown	Parrish	Stoll
Huddleston	McKiniry	Pell	Sumners, Tex.
Hudspeth	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Phelan	Tague
Hull, Tenn.	Major	Pou	Taylor, Ark.
Humphreys	Mansfield	Quin	Taylor, Colo.
Igoe	Martin	Raker	Taylor, Tenn.
Jacoway	Mays	Ramsey	Tillman
James, Va.	Mead	Rayburn	Upshaw
Johnson, Ky.	Milligan	Reavis	Venable
Johnson, Miss.	Minahan, N. J.	Riordan	Vinson
Johnson, S. Dak.	Montague	Robinson, N. C.	Weaver
Jones, Pa.	Moore, Va.	Romjue	Welling
Jones, Tex.	Mudd	Rouse	Welty
Kincheloe	Neely	Rucker	Whaley
Lanham	Nelson, Mo.	Sabath	Wilson, Ill.
Lankford	Nelson, Wis.	Sherwood	Wilson, La.
Larsen	Nicholls	Sims	Wilson, Pa.
Layton	O'Connell	Sisson	Wingo
Lazaro	O'Connor	Small	Woods, Va.
Lee, Ga.	Oldfield	Smithwick	Woodyard
Linthicum	Oliver	Steagall	Wright
McAndrews	Olney	Stedman	Young, Tex.
McClintic	Overstreet	Steele

NAYS—179.

Ackerman	Glynn	McArthur	Schall
Anderson	Good	McKenzie	Scott
Andrews, Nebr.	Goodall	McKinley	Sells
Bacharach	Gould	McLaughlin, Mich.	Shreve
Barbour	Graham, Ill.	McLeod	Sinclair
Begg	Green, Iowa	McPherson	Slemp
Benham	Greene, Mass.	MacGregor	Smith, Idaho
Bland, Ind.	Greene, Vt.	Madden	Smith, Ill.
Boies	Griest	Magee	Smith, Mich.
Britten	Hadley	Mann, Ill.	Snell
Brooks, Ill.	Hardy, Colo.	Mapes	Snyder
Brooks, Pa.	Haugen	Mason	Steenerson
Browne	Hawley	Merritt	Stephens, Ohio
Burdick	Hays	Michener	Stiness
Burroughs	Hernandez	Miller	Strong, Kans.
Butler	Hersey	Mondell	Strong, Pa.
Campbell, Kans.	Hickey	Moore, Ohio	Sweet
Cannon	Hicks	Moores, Ind.	Swindall
Chindblom	Hill	Mott	Temple
Cooper	Hoch	Murphy	Thompson
Copley	Houghton	Newton, Minn.	Tilson
Cramton	Hull, Iowa	Ogden	Timberlake
Currie, Mich.	Hutchinson	Osborne	Tincher
Dale	Ireland	Paige	Tinkham
Dallinger	Jefferis	Parker	Towner
Darrow	Johnson, Wash.	Patterson	Treadway
Davis, Minn.	Juul	Peters	Vaile
Dempsey	Kearns	Porter	Vestal
Denison	Keller	Purnell	Voigt
Dickinson, Iowa	Kelley, Mich.	Radcliffe	Volstead
Dowell	Kendall	Ramseyer	Walsh
Dunbar	Kennedy, Iowa	Randall, Calif.	Walters
Dunn	Kennedy, R. I.	Randall, Wis.	Ward
Edmonds	King	Ransley	Wason
Elliott	Kinkaid	Reber	Watson
Esch	Knutson	Reed, N. Y.	Webster
Evans, Nebr.	Kraus	Reed, W. Va.	Wheeler
Fairfield	Kreider	Rhodes	White, Kans.
Farr	Lampert	Ricketts	White, Me.
Fess	Lehlbach	Robsion, Ky.	Williams
Focht	Little	Rogers	Winslow
Foster	Longworth	Rose	Wood, Ind.
Frear	Luce	Rowe	Yates
Freeman	Lufkin	Sanders, Ind.	Young, N. Dak.
Fuller	Luhring	Sanders, N. Y.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—5.

Christopherson	Fish	Goodykoontz	Nolan
Crago

NOT VOTING—81.

Andrews, Md.	Evans, Nev.	Kitchin	Rowan
Baer	Fordney	Kleczka	Rubey
Bowers	Gallagher	Langley	Sanders, La.
Brumbaugh	Garner	Lea, Calif.	Sanford
Burke	Goldfogle	Lesher	Scully
Caldwell	Goodwin, Ark.	Lonergan	Sears
Casey	Graham, Pa.	McCulloch	Siegel
Clark, Fla.	Hamill	McFadden	Sinnott
Clark, Mo.	Hamilton	Maher	Smith, N. Y.
Classon	Harreld	Mann, S. C.	Sullivan
Cole	Harrison	Monahan, Wis.	Summers, Wash.
Costello	Hayden	Moon	Swope
Crowther	Hersman	Mooney	Thomas
Curry, Calif.	Hulings	Morin	Vare
Dent	Husted	Newton, Mo.	Volk
Dooling	James, Mich.	Perlman	Watkins
Doughton	Johnston, N. Y.	Rainey, Ala.	Wise
Echols	Kahn	Rainey, Henry T.	Zihlman
Ellsworth	Kelly, Pa.	Rainey, John W.
Elston	Kettner	Riddick
Emerson	Kiess	Rodenberg

So the resolution was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On the vote:

Mr. KITCHIN (for) with Mr. FORDNEY (against).

Mr. CLARK of Florida (for) with Mr. LANGLEY (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. KIESS with Mr. EVANS of Nevada.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington with Mr. GRIFFIN.

Mr. HARRELD with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.

Mr. BOWERS with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. ANDREWS of Maryland with Mr. MOONEY.
Mr. ZIHLMAN with Mr. GALLAGHER.
Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. LEA of California.
Mr. BURKE with Mr. SULLIVAN.
Mr. ECHOLS with Mr. LONERGAN.
Mr. MCCULLOCH with Mr. SCULLY.
Mr. SIEGEL with Mr. WATKINS.
Mr. VOLK with Mr. HAMILL.
Mr. HUSTED with Mr. SEARS.
Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania with Mr. HERSMAN.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. Mr. Speaker, how am I recorded? I want to be recorded "no."

The SPEAKER. Did the gentleman vote when the roll was called?

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. No.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present and listening when his name was called? This is not a no-quorum vote.

Mr. SUMMERS of Washington. No; I was not present.

The SPEAKER. Then the gentleman does not qualify.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the original resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Charles A. Sulzer was not elected a Delegate to the House of Representatives from the Territory of Alaska in this Congress, and George B. Grigsby, who is now occupying the seat made vacant by the death of said Sulzer, is not entitled to a seat herein.

Resolved, That James Wickersham was duly elected a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska in this Congress, and is entitled to a seat herein.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the question.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry; and if the Speaker finds any difficulty in answering it, I am perfectly willing to withdraw the inquiry.

The House having just voted on a resolution declaring that Mr. Sulzer was elected, and having negatived that proposition, is it necessary now to vote on the proposition that Mr. Sulzer was not elected, in order to reach a vote on the resolution declaring that Mr. Wickersham was elected? It has been the universal ruling, and especially during the Speakership of Mr. CLARK, that when a Senate amendment came to the House and a motion was made to concur in the Senate amendment and that motion was defeated that that was in effect and was treated as a motion carried to disagree to the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. It seems to the Chair at first blush that that is a question which should govern gentlemen in demanding a division, rather than a decision by the Chair. As the gentleman says, the House has just voted what is substantially the first clause of this resolution, but it seems to the Chair that if any person desires it, he has a right to demand that the first clause be voted upon separately.

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. I will state that my reason for asking for a division of the question is that I want a vote on the last proposition in this resolution stripped of everything else.

Mr. DOWELL. Has the gentleman any objection to voting on the first part of the resolution without a roll call, and then having a roll call on the other?

Mr. SUMNERS of Texas. Personally I have no objection to that. I do not know what may be desired on this side, but as far as I am personally concerned I have no objection to the vote being taken without a roll call. But I do want a separate vote.

Mr. DOWELL. In order to save the parliamentary question, Mr. Speaker, we may vote without a roll call upon the first part of the resolution, and then have a roll call on the second part.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. BARKLEY. There are apparently three prongs to this motion. One is, resolved that Mr. Sulzer was not elected. Then, resolved that Mr. Grigsby is not entitled to his seat.

The SPEAKER. Those two propositions are both contained in the first resolution.

Mr. BARKLEY. The two in one?

The SPEAKER. Yes. The question is on the first part of the original resolution, declaring that Mr. Sulzer was not elected, and that Mr. Grigsby is not entitled to a seat.

The question being taken, the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, at the request of many gentlemen on this side I ask for the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 183, nays 162, answered "present" 9, not voting 74, as follows:

YEAS—183.

Ackerman	Glynn	McArthur	Sanders, N. Y.
Anderson	Good	McKenzie	Schall
Andrews, Md.	Goodall	McKinley	Scott
Andrews, Nebr.	Gould	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sells
Bacharach	Graham, Ill.	McLeod	Shreve
Barbour	Green, Iowa	McPherson	Sinclair
Benham	Greene, Mass.	MacGregor	Smith, Idaho
Bland, Ind.	Greene, Vt.	Madden	Smith, Ill.
Boies	Griest	Magee	Smith, Mich.
Brooks, Ill.	Hadley	Mann, Ill.	Snell
Brooks, Pa.	Hardy, Colo.	Mapes	Snyder
Browne	Harreld	Mason	Steenerson
Burdick	Haugen	Merritt	Stephens, Ohio
Burroughs	Hawley	Michener	Stiness
Butler	Hays	Miller	Strong, Pa.
Campbell, Kans.	Hernandez	Monahan, Wis.	Summers, Wash.
Cannon	Hersey	Mondell	Sweet
Chindblom	Hickey	Moore, Ohio	Swindall
Cooper	Hicks	Moores, Ind.	Swope
Copley	Hill	Mott	Taylor, Tenn.
Crago	Hoch	Murphy	Temple
Cramton	Houghton	Nelson, Wis.	Thompson
Currie, Mich.	Hull, Iowa	Newton, Minn.	Tilson
Dale	Husted	Ogden	Timberlake
Dallinger	Hutchinson	Osborne	Tincher
Darrow	Ireland	Paige	Tinkham
Davis, Minn.	Jefferis	Parker	Towner
Dempsey	Johnson, Wash.	Patterson	Treadway
Denison	Juul	Peters	Vaile
Dickinson, Iowa	Kearns	Porter	Vestal
Dowell	Keller	Purnell	Voigt
Dunbar	Kelley, Mich.	Radcliffe	Volstead
Dunn	Kendall	Ramseyer	Walsh
Edmonds	Kennedy, Iowa	Randall, Calif.	Walters
Elliott	Kennedy, R. I.	Randall, Wis.	Ward
Esch	Kinkaid	Ransley	Wason
Evans, Nebr.	Kleczka	Reber	Watson
Fairfield	Knutson	Reed, N. Y.	Webster
Farr	Kraus	Reed, W. Va.	Wheeler
Fess	Kreider	Rhodes	White, Kans.
Fish	Lampert	Ricketts	White, Me.
Focht	Lehlbach	Robsion, Ky.	Williams
Foster	Little	Rogers	Winslow
Frear	Luce	Rose	Wood, Ind.
Freeman	Lufkin	Rowe	Young, N. Dak.
Fuller	Luhring	Sanders, Ind.

NAYS—162

Almon	Drane	Lankford	Raker
Ashbrook	Drewry	Larsen	Ramsey
Aswell	Dupré	Layton	Rayburn
Ayres	Dyer	Lazaro	Reavis
Babka	Eagan	Lee, Ga.	Riordan
Bankhead	Eagle	Linthicum	Robinson, N. C.
Barkley	Evans, Mont.	Longworth	Romjue
Bee	Ferris	McAndrews	Rouse
Bell	Fields	McClintic	Rucker
Benson	Fisher	McDuffie	Sabath
Black	Flood	McGlennon	Sherwood
Bland, Mo.	French	McKeown	Sims
Bland, Va.	Gallivan	McKinley	Sisson
Blanton	Gandy	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Small
Bowers	Ganly	Major	Smithwick
Bowling	Gard	Mansfield	Steagall
Box	Garrett	Martin	Stedman
Brand	Godwin, N. C.	Mays	Stephens, Miss.
Briggs	Goldfogle	Mead	Stevenson
Brinson	Goodykoontz	Milligan	Stoll
Buchanan	Griffin	Minahan, N. J.	Sumners, Tex.
Byrnes, S. C.	Hardy, Tex.	Montague	Tague
Byrns, Tenn.	Hastings	Moore, Va.	Taylor, Ark.
Campbell, Pa.	Hersman	Mudd	Taylor, Colo.
Candler	Hoey	Neely	Tillman
Cantrill	Holland	Nelson, Mo.	Upshaw
Caraway	Howard	Nicholls	Venable
Carew	Huddleston	O'Connell	Vinson
Carss	Hudspeth	O'Connor	Weaver
Carter	Hull, Tenn.	Oldfield	Welling
Coady	Humphreys	Oliver	Welty
Collier	Igoe	Olney	Whaley
Connally	Jacoway	Overstreet	Wilson, La.
Crisp	James, Va.	Padgett	Wilson, Pa.
Cullen	Johnson, Ky.	Park	Wingo
Davey	Johnson, Miss.	Parrish	Woods, Va.
Davis, Tenn.	Johnson, S. Dak.	Pell	Woodyard
Dewalt	Jones, Pa.	Phelan	Wright
Dickinson, Mo.	Jones, Tex.	Pou	Young, Tex.
Dominick	Kincheloe	Quinn
Donovan	Lanham	Rainey, Henry T.

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—9.

Begg	Kiess	Perlman	Strong, Kans.
Christopherson	Nolan	Siegel	Volk
Fordney

NOT VOTING—74.

Anthony	Dooling	Hulings	Moon
Baer	Doremus	James, Mich.	Mooney
Britten	Doughton	Johnston, N. Y.	Morin
Brumbaugh	Echols	Kahn	Newton, Mo.
Burke	Ellsworth	Kelly, Pa.	Rainey, Ala.
Caldwell	Elston	Kettner	Rainey, John W.
Casey	Emerson	King	Riddick
Clark, Fla.	Evans, Nev.	Kitchin	Rodenberg
Clark, Mo.	Gallagher	Langley	Rowan
Classon	Garner	Lea, Calif.	Rubey
Cleary	Goodwin, Ark.	Lesher	Sanders, La.
Cole	Graham, Pa.	Lonergan	Sanford
Costello	Hamill	McCulloch	Scully
Crowther	Hamilton	McFadden	Sears
Curry, Calif.	Harrison	Maher	Sinnott
Dent	Hayden	Mann, S. C.	Slemp

Smith, N. Y.	Thomas	Wilson, Ill.	Zihlman
Steele	Vare	Wise
Sullivan	Watkins	Yates

So the resolution was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. FORDNEY (for) with Mr. KITCHIN (against).

Mr. LANGLEY (for) with Mr. CLARK of Florida (against).

Mr. SLEMP (for) with Mr. ANTHONY (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. BRITTEN with Mr. SEARS.

Mr. GATES with Mr. CLEARY.

Mr. COLE with Mr. MOONEY.

Mr. CROWTHER with Mr. DOREMUS.

Mr. HARDY of Colorado with Mr. KETTNER.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania with Mr. ROWAN.

Mr. KING with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. ROBSION of Kentucky with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. WILSON of Illinois with Mr. SANDERS of Louisiana.

Mr. BRUMBAUGH. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote "no."

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present and listening when his name should have been called?

Mr. BRUMBAUGH. I was not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not qualify.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the last resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That James Wickersham was duly elected a Delegate from the Territory of Alaska in this Congress and is entitled to a seat herein.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 177, nays 163, answered "present" 10, not voting 78, as follows:

YEAS—177.

Andrews, Md.	Gould	McKenzie	Sells
Barbour	Graham, Ill.	McKinley	Shreve
Benham	Green, Iowa	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sinclair
Bland, Ind.	Greene, Mass.	McLeod	Smith, Idaho
Boies	Greene, Vt.	McPherson	Smith, Ill.
Britten	Griest	MacGregor	Smith, Mich.
Brooks, Ill.	Hadley	Madden	Snell
Brooks, Pa.	Hardy, Colo.	Mann, Ill.	Snyder
Browne	Harreld	Mapes	Steenerson
Burdick	Haugen	Mason	Stephens, Ohio
Burroughs	Hawley	Merritt	Stiness
Butler	Hays	Michener	Strong, Pa.
Campbell, Kans.	Hernandez	Miller	Summers, Wash.
Cannon	Hersey	Monahan, Wis.	Sweet
Chindblom	Hickey	Mondell	Swindall
Cooper	Hicks	Moore, Ohio	Taylor, Tenn.
Copley	Hill	Moores, Ind.	Temple
Crago	Hoch	Murphy	Thompson
Cramton	Houghton	Nelson, Wis.	Tilson
Crowther	Hull, Iowa	Ogden	Timberlake
Currie, Mich.	Husted	Osborne	Tincher
Dale	Hutchinson	Paige	Tinkham
Dallinger	Ireland	Parker	Towner
Darrow	Johnson, Wash.	Patterson	Treadway
Davis, Minn.	Juul	Peters	Vaile
Dempsey	Kearns	Purnell	Vestal
Denison	Keller	Radcliffe	Voigt
Dickinson, Iowa	Kelley, Mich.	Ramseyer	Volstead
Dowell	Kelly, Pa.	Randall, Calif.	Walsh
Dunbar	Kendall	Randall, Wis.	Walters
Dunn	Kennedy, Iowa	Ransley	Ward
Elliott	Kennedy, R. I.	Reber	Wason
Esch	King	Reed, N. Y.	Watson
Fairfield	Kinkaid	Reed, W. Va.	Webster
Farr	Knutson	Rhodes	Wheeler
Fess	Kraus	Ricketts	White, Kans.
Fish	Kreider	Robsion, Ky.	White, Me.
Focht	Lampert	Rogers	Williams
Foster	Lehlbach	Rose	Winslow
Frear	Little	Rowe	Wood, Ind.
Freeman	Longworth	Sanders, Ind.	Yates
Fuller	Luce	Sanders, N. Y.	Young, N. Dak.
Glynn	Lufkin	Sanford
Good	Luhring	Schall
Goodall	McArthur	Scott

NAYS—163.

Almon	Brinson	Dewalt	Ganly
Ashbrook	Brumbaugh	Dickinson, Mo.	Gard
Aswell	Buchanan	Dominick	Garrett
Ayres	Byrnes, S. C.	Donovan	Godwin, N. C.
Babka	Byrns, Tenn.	Doremus	Goldfogle
Bacharach	Campbell, Pa.	Drane	Griffin
Bankhead	Candler	Drewry	Hardy, Tex.
Barkley	Cantrill	Dupré	Hastings
Bee	Caraway	Dyer	Hersman
Begg	Carew	Eagan	Hoey
Bell	Carss	Eagle	Holland
Benson	Carter	Evans, Mont.	Howard
Black	Casey	Evans, Nev.	Huddleston
Bland, Mo.	Coady	Ferris	Hudspeth
Bland, Va.	Collier	Fields	Hull, Tenn.
Blanton	Connally	Fisher	Humphreys
Bowling	Crisp	Flood	Igoe
Box	Cullen	French	Jacoway
Brand	Davey	Gallivan	James, Va.
Briggs	Davis, Tenn.	Gandy	Johnson, Ky.
Johnson, Miss.	Mays	Pou	Stoll
Johnson, S. Dak.	Mead	Quin	Sumners, Tex.
Jones, Pa.	Milligan	Raker	Tague
Jones, Tex.	Minahan, N. J.	Ramsey	Taylor, Ark.
Lanham	Montague	Rayburn	Tillman
Lankford	Moore, Va.	Reavis	Upshaw
Larsen	Mudd	Riordan	Venable
Layton	Neely	Robinson, N. C.	Vinson
Lazaro	Nelson, Mo.	Romjue	Volk
Lee, Ga.	Nicholls	Rouse	Weaver
Linthicum	O'Connell	Rucker	Welling
McAndrews	O'Connor	Sabath	Welty
McClintic	Oldfield	Sherwood	Whaley
McDuffie	Oliver	Sims	Wilson, La.
McGlennon	Olney	Sisson	Wilson, Pa.
McKeown	Overstreet	Small	Wingo
McKinley	Padgett	Smithwick	Woods, Va.
McLaughlin, Nebr.	Park	Steagall	Woodyard
Major	Parrish	Stedman	Wright
Mansfield	Pell	Stephens, Miss.	Young, Tex.
Martin	Phelan	Stevenson

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—10.

Ackerman	Echols	Goodykoontz	Nolan
Andrews, Nebr.	Edmonds	Kiess	Strong, Kans.
Christopherson	Fordney

NOT VOTING—78.

Anderson	Gallagher	Lonergan	Rubey
Anthony	Garner	McCulloch	Sanders, La.
Baer	Goodwin, Ark.	McFadden	Scully
Bowers	Graham, Pa.	Magee	Sears
Burke	Hamill	Maher	Siegel
Caldwell	Hamilton	Mann, S. C.	Sinnott
Clark, Fla.	Harrison	Moon	Slemp
Clark, Mo.	Hayden	Mooney	Smith, N. Y.
Classon	Hulings	Morin	Steele
Cleary	James, Mich.	Mott	Sullivan
Cole	Jefferis	Newton, Minn.	Swope
Costello	Johnston, N. Y.	Newton, Mo.	Taylor, Colo.
Curry, Calif.	Kahn	Perlman	Thomas
Dent	Kettner	Porter	Vare
Dooling	Kincheloe	Rainey, Ala.	Watkins
Doughton	Kitchin	Rainey, Henry T.	Wilson, Ill.
Ellsworth	Kleczka	Rainey, John W.	Wise
Elston	Langley	Riddick	Zihlman
Emerson	Lea, Calif.	Rodenberg
Evans, Nebr.	Lesher	Rowan

So the resolution was agreed to.

The following additional pairs were announced:

Mr. FORDNEY (for) with Mr. KITCHIN (against).

Mr. LANGLEY (for) with Mr. CLARK of Florida (against).

Mr. SLEMP (for) with Mr. ANTHONY (against).

Mr. MAGEE with Mr. KINCHELOE.

Mr. SWOPE with Mr. HAMILL.

Mr. NEWTON of Minnesota with Mr. SEARS.

Mr. PORTER with Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.

Mr. BOWERS with Mr. CLEARY.

Mr. EMERSON with Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas.

Mr. EVANS of Nebraska with Mr. KETTNER.

Mr. JEFFERIS with Mr. LESHER.

Mr. MICHENER with Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY.

Mr. KLECZKA with Mr. ROWAN.

Mr. MOTT with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. SWOPE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to vote "aye."

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman present in the Hall and listening when his name should have been called?

Mr. SWOPE. I was not.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not qualify.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. DOWELL, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

Mr. WICKERSHAM appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

LEGISLATIVE, EXECUTIVE, AND JUDICIAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. WOOD of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 15543, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, insist on the disagreement of the House to amendment of the Senate No. 113, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The Chair appointed the following conferees: Mr. WOOD of Indiana, Mr. WASON and Mr. SISSON.

QUESTION OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I hold in my hand a photograph of what I believe to be a forged copy of a letter of which there never was an original, which has been brought before this House by reason of a resolution introduced in the House, resolution No. 680, by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. FLOOD], and is found in Report No. 1341. This photographic copy is, in my opinion, a forged copy of a letter of which there never was an original.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state his question of privilege.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I am getting to it. This letter was brought in with the desire of making an assault upon Subcommittee No. 3, of which I am the chairman, and upon myself, upon the theory that that committee has hired men who were blackmailers as investigators to conduct certain investigations in a Pittsburgh case which I believe is full of fraud and graft, as will later be developed by the next Attorney General of the United States. I want to submit this to the Speaker and have him determine whether or not the question of personal privilege is there. I believe it is, because it states that this subcommittee——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will submit to the Chair whatever he relies upon.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I shall send to the Speaker the letter which I believe is a forgery, and a copy of the report.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. Speaker, is not the House entitled to the benefit of the information which the gentleman relies upon?

The SPEAKER. If it is so desired. The gentleman will read to the House what he relies upon.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the gentleman should state the question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. That is what the Chair has asked the gentleman to do.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, to do that it probably would be necessary to first read the letter, which is found in House Document 1341, Sixty-sixth Congress, third session.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks the gentleman should first read whatever reflects upon him.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. I would say that that is largely by inference. On page 3 of this report, No. 1341, which, as I say, was brought into this House by the Committee on Military Affairs because of a resolution introduced by the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. FLOOD, is to be found the following letter from the Secretary of War, who transmitted this letter, of which I have a photographic copy, and which, in my opinion, is a rank forgery and never was written. That letter is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, February 4, 1920.

Hon. W. J. GRAHAM,
Chairman Select Committee on
Expenditures in the War Department,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. GRAHAM: As you know, I have placed every agency of the War Department at the disposal of the select committee of which you are chairman to assist the committee in conducting the investigation with which it has been charged. It has been my practice to arm those special agents employed by the committee with letters of authority, giving them access to all records of the War Department, including those which are regarded as of a secret or confidential nature.

As public servants to whom the handling of Government business has been intrusted, we are equally responsible that the public interest be safeguarded. Because I am certain of your keen appreciation of this responsibility, I have temporarily withheld certain documents from examination by two special investigators in the employ of Subcommittee No. 3, of which the Hon. ROYAL C. JOHNSON is chairman, until I can bring to your attention certain facts with which I am convinced you can not be acquainted.

The investigators to whom I refer are Mr. J. M. Hill and Mr. C. C. Lindsay, both of whom were at one time intimately connected with an investigation of the claims of the Valley Forging Co. concerning the settlement of contracts for 75-millimeter shell. Both of these persons are known to possess an interest in this investigation not wholly inspired by a desire to safeguard the public interest.

I wish again to assure you that it is my desire to facilitate the work of your committee in every way possible, and all information relative to the particular case to which Mr. Hill and Mr. Lindsay have been assigned is at the committee's disposal. It is my opinion, however, that after a consideration of the case you will agree with me that the services of less-interested persons than either of the two named should be employed.

Very truly, yours,
NEWTON D. BAKER,
Secretary of War.

Mr. Speaker, of course the Secretary of War had no personal information of the matter, and it came undoubtedly through the Military Intelligence of the War Department. They bring my name into it as having hired these investigators whom they claim to be blackmailers. They based that claim upon this photographic copy of an alleged letter, which they do not now have, and of which they never did have the original. There was none. They bring it before this House with the idea of casting aspersions upon me as chairman of the committee, and of attacking Mr. Edmund Leigh, who was brought over here from Baltimore by Mr. Daniel Willard, one of the great railroad men of this country. Mr. Leigh is the former chief detective of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, was placed in charge of industry plant protection, and hired many men afterwards in the Government's employ. They make a report upon which the Attorney General in my opinion will be forced to ask indictments, and on which he will secure convictions, in the War Claims Board in Pittsburgh. This is brought here to embarrass that investigation and to attack these men who have made that investigation and to attack me as chairman of the committee, and they come before the House with this letter, which I believe to be a forgery. I believe that states a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think that the gentleman has made out a case of personal privilege. The most the gentleman can claim, it seems to the Chair, is that there is a charge that he has employed men who are unworthy, but there is no intimation that the gentleman did so knowingly.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. The Chair does not see anything of personal privilege in this letter?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think the gentleman makes out a case of personal privilege.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota. Of couse, I must accept the ruling of the Chair. I can not agree with the Chair, but I recognize that the Chair knows the precedents, so I shall not press the matter further.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Sharkey, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

On March 1, 1921:

H. R. 15441. An act making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes;

H. R. 15935. An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 15962. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, and prior fiscal years, and for other purposes;

H. R. 397. An act to authorize a lieu selection by the State of South Dakota for 160 acres on Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, and for other purposes;

H. R. 567. An act for the relief of John Chick;

H. R. 1035. An act for the relief of the widow of Joseph C. Akin;

H. R. 1430. An act to authorize the addition of certain lands to the Weiser National Forest, Idaho;

H. R. 2946. An act to amend acts to permit the use of the right of way through the public lands for tramroads, canals, and reservoirs, and for other purposes;

H. R. 5081. An act for the relief of James E. Adams;

H. R. 5416. An act to authorize corporations organized in the District of Columbia to change their names;

H. R. 7573. An act authorizing the payment of compensation to Pasquale Dolce for personal injuries;

H. R. 8535. An act to provide for the redistribution of general taxes and special assessments due and payable on real estate in the District of Columbia in cases of subdivision or sales of land therein;

H. R. 9028. An act to authorize the addition of certain lands to the Nezperce National Forest, Idaho;

H. R. 9702. An act granting certain lands to the city of Sandpoint, Idaho, to protect the watershed of the water-supply system of said city;

H. R. 10434. An act to add certain lands to the Targhee National Forest;

H. R. 11004. An act to grant certain lands to the board of trustees of the village of Downey, State of Idaho, for the protection of its water supply;

H. R. 11307. An act to amend section 5146 of the Revised Statutes of the United States in relation to the qualifications of directors of the National Banking Association;

H. R. 13051. An act to add certain lands to the Lemhi National Forest, Idaho;

H. R. 13319. An act for the relief of Wilson Certain;

H. R. 13592. An act to authorize certain homestead settlers or entrymen who entered the military or naval service of the United States during the war with Germany to make final proof of their entries;

H. R. 15769. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge over the Rio Grande between the cities of Del Rio, Tex., and Las Vacas, Mexico; and

S. 3225. An act for the relief of bona fide settlers who intermarry after having complied with the homestead law for one year.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bill of the following title, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 15275. An act imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

JOURNAL OF NATIONAL ENCAMPMENT, GRAND ARMY OF THE REPUBLIC.

Mr. KIESS. Mr. Speaker, I present the following privileged resolution from the Committee on Printing, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 76) to print 1,500 copies of the Journal of the Fifty-fifth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there shall be printed as a House document 1,500 copies of the Journal of the Fifty-fifth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic for the year 1921, not to exceed $1,700 in cost, with illustrations, 1,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House and 500 for the use of the Senate.

Mr. KIESS. Mr. Speaker, this resolution is passed by every Congress and is to provide for the year 1921. I move the adoption of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

INAUGURATION CEREMONIES.

Mr. REAVIS rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for three minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska asks unanimous consent to address the House for three minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. McCLINTIC. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, would the gentleman care to state what he wishes to discuss?

Mr. REAVIS. Mr. Speaker, a great many inquiries have come to the inaugural committee as to the privileges of Members on inauguration day, and I wanted to state what those privileges were.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. REAVIS. Gentlemen of the House, I will state as briefly as possible the arrangements that have been made for the inaugural ceremony and the privileges that will come to the membership of the House because of those arrangements. Nobody will be admitted into the Capitol Building on the morning of the inauguration except the Members and those holding tickets to the Senate Gallery. Each Member of the House is entitled to one ticket to the Senate Gallery to witness the inauguration of the Vice President and other ceremonies incident thereto. The membership of the House, and that includes, of course, the Members elect, are entitled under the rules of the Senate to the privilege of the floor of the Senate.

After the inauguration in the Senate Chamber is finished all Members of the House and Members elect, together with their guests in the gallery, will go through the Rotunda of the Capitol to the reserved standing-room space immediately in front of the inaugural stand. There will be no seats, and only those admitted to the Capitol on the morning of the inauguration, which includes Members and Members elect and their one guest each, are entitled to this reserve standing space, entrance to which shall be through the Capitol. In addition to that there will be two other standing spaces, one immediately north of the space in front of the inaugural stand and one immediately south. It is thought that those spaces will accommodate between 1,600 and 2,000 people each. The southern standing-room space has been assigned to the membership of the House. Entrance to that standing-room space shall be from the outside through an aisle or alleyway that will be kept open by officers. Admission to the standing-room space, which will be roped off, will be by tickets.

The tickets to this outside standing-room space, three for each Member and each Member-elect, will be distributed some time to-morrow and due notification will be given you. With the space of these two standing-room spaces and the privilege of the Senate floor and one guest in the gallery there are no other privileges given Members.

Mr. HAWLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. I will.

Mr. HAWLEY. Who will be admitted to these standing places on the east front of the Senate and House wings of the Capitol?

Mr. REAVIS. Those spaces will be roped off. These barricades are being constructed there for the purpose of protecting the crowd from itself. There was an occasion when a large crowd congregated, it was at the time of President McKinley's funeral, when no provisions were taken to protect the crowd from itself in reference to the steps. The crowd behind surged forward and a number were very badly injured. These spaces will be open to everybody except so far as it has been necessary to barricade them to protect the crowd from injury.

Mr. HAWLEY. I do not think the gentleman understood my question. There are being constructed on the east steps of the House near——

Mr. REAVIS. The gentleman means the House Chamber?

Mr. HAWLEY. Yes; on those east steps.

Mr. REAVIS. I have no information with regard to that at all. I know there is no space reserved there that is in the disposition of the inaugural committee.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. I will.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Does this order forbid employees of the House coming to the House Friday morning?

Mr. REAVIS. No; as a matter of course it would not.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Not ordinary employees, but——

Mr. REAVIS. The House officers not only have the privilege of the floor of the Senate, but each one will have a ticket for the gallery.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I know four years ago my secretary was refused admission to the Capitol, until I got busy.

Mr. REAVIS. There is no rule or order to that effect made by the inaugural committee.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I hope the inaugural committee will not make a ruling that would forbid employees coming to the House.

Mr. REAVIS. No such ruling has been made and no such suggestion has been made.

Mr. DOWELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. I will.

Mr. DOWELL. How may they be admitted if there are no tickets issued?

Mr. REAVIS. Well, I assume those who will be in charge of the door will be familiar with the House employees as well as with the membership of the House. I do not know how otherwise they will be admitted.

Mr. DOWELL. Can the gentleman ascertain how that may be done and advise the Members of the House?

Mr. REAVIS. I will endeavor to do so.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REAVIS. I will.

Mr. BARKLEY. I do not think the gentleman understood the question of the gentleman from Oregon. On the east steps there is this big space which they have floored and put banisters all around. What are those for?

Mr. REAVIS. I will state to the gentleman from Kentucky I know nothing about that.

Mr. BARKLEY. Under whose jurisdiction is it?

Mr. REAVIS. Probably under the jurisdiction of the Architect or Superintendent of the Capitol. It may be he has given directions to build such barricades or such platforms as would be necessary to protect the crowd or Government property, but, so far as those spaces are concerned, we have no disposition of them.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks that he can answer the question. The Chair was told yesterday that it had been the custom at those steps for such space to be prepared and tickets were issued to them, half of which were given to the Committee on Ways and Means, who have the corner room, and the other half of the tickets, about 200 each, the Chair thinks, to the Speaker, but the Speaker told them he did not think he had any right to them and declined to take them. [Applause.]

Mr. GARRETT. I would just like to say with regard to what was stated a few moments ago by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that there was never any order four years ago by the inaugural committee precluding any of the employees from entering the Capitol. The inaugural committee not only never made such an order but it had never thought of it. I think there was some sort of a regulation, probably put into effect under orders of the Speaker, possibly, for the purpose of protection, that they required identification in some way, and the Sergeant at Arms issued a card or something to the employees which admitted them. The inaugural committee never did anything of that sort, nor was there, I think, any official order to that effect.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I would like to ask the gentleman if the word "employees" includes secretaries to Representatives?

Mr. REAVIS. I do not think so, because I do not think they would be classed as Capitol employees.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. Then, of course, there comes out this great unfairness, inasmuch as some Members of the House have their offices in this building, and their secretaries would be in here, and the secretaries of the others could not get in.

Mr. REAVIS. Without regard to the fairness or unfairness of the proposition, it is a matter that the inaugural committee has no possible jurisdiction of.

Mr. GREENE of Vermont. I am not debating that side of it.

Mr. REAVIS. We have not advanced the proposition. We do not know anything about it.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask the gentleman from Nebraska a question, but I think I can propound the question to the Speaker, if he thinks it proper for me to do so.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can do so by unanimous consent.

Mr. RAYBURN. The only question I wanted to ask was this: The gentleman said that this arrangement out here on the steps had been made in the past by the Speaker and members of the Ways and Means Committee, and the Speaker said he did not care to take the tickets himself. I would just like to know under what authority those arrangements are being made out there for the Ways and Means Committee?

The SPEAKER. The Chair was told by the Superintendent of the Capitol that they were not constructed for any particular person, but the reason the construction was put there was that those steps would be crowded with people, and that unless they put these railings around them injury was pretty certain to result. Therefore, they put the railings around them.

Mr. RAYBURN. I am talking about the platform up on top.

The SPEAKER. That is what I mean. It was put there to prevent the people from being pushed off.

Mr. RAYBURN. I did not understand the statement of the Speaker, then, about the distribution of the tickets.

The SPEAKER. After the platforms were erected, tickets to them were issued, half to the Ways and Means Committee, because their room, I suppose, opens onto that space, and half to the Speaker—I presume that is the theory—because his room also opens on that space.

Mr. RAYBURN. I would certainly have no objection to the Speaker having all the space opening on his room, but I do not see any reason why one committee of the House should have the privilege.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I call for the regular order.

FORTIFICATIONS APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. FRENCH. Mr. Speaker, at the request of Chairman SLEMP, of the fortifications subcommittee, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the fortifications appropriation bill, H. R. 16100, and consider the Senate amendments. It will be my purpose to ask that the House concur in the Senate amendments, and I assume that the Speaker will want to have the Senate amendments reported and have a statement as to what they are.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the fortifications bill and consider the Senate amendments. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. WINGO. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves to consider the Senate amendments.

Mr. BEGG. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know if we can have any copies of this bill. There have been $50,000,000 added to that, and we would like to know what it consists of.

Mr. FRENCH. The gentleman will understand, if he will bear with me a minute, instead of anything being added, we are recovering certain amounts back to the Treasury.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman state how many million dollars have been added?

Mr. FRENCH. If the gentleman will bear with me now——

Mr. BLANTON. That is an easy question.

Mr. FRENCH. Not a cent has been added by the Senate.

Mr. BLANTON. I mean by this conference report.

Mr. FRENCH. If the gentleman will bear with me a minute, I think I can explain the whole situation. There are 21 amendments. The first two bear upon distinct propositions. The latter 19 bear upon one proposition, but are made up of separate amendments. Now, I think that we can arrange to concur in these amendments, the first separately and the second separately, and the other 19 en bloc. The first amendment is on page 2 of the bill, and the language in the House bill was as follows:

The sum of—

And after that the appropriation of $50,000 for a particular purpose. The Senate has stricken out the words "the sum of" and in lieu thereof has inserted the words "a sum not exceeding."

I have gone over this matter with various members of the subcommittee, with the ranking Member on the Democratic side [Mr. EAGAN], and we are all agreeable to the proposition.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I will.

Mr. BLANTON. There are 21 different amendments on this proposition, and every one of those amendments increase the appropriation from about $75,000 up to more than $1,000,000.

Mr. FRENCH. If the gentleman will be patient, he will see that his statement is not quite accurate.

Mr. BLANTON. How many millions does it increase it?

Mr. FRENCH. It does not increase it one dollar. There is no appropriation.

The amendments provide for covering money heretofore appropriated back into the Treasury, I will say to the gentleman.

Now, as to amendment No. 2, on page 5 of the bill. The Members of the House will recall that the Committee on Appropriations reported a proviso that the Secretary of War shall sell 2,000 tractors. This went out on a point of order, but was reinserted through the Mann amendment, and it was provided—that the Secretary of War be authorized and directed to sell as soon as possible after the approval of this act, upon such terms and under such conditions as he may deem most advantageous to the best interests of the Government, 2,000 of the tractors owned by the War Department.

To that paragraph there was added an amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], providing that 1,250 tractors should be distributed to the highway-department work of the several States. That amendment is left in the bill, but the first amendment providing for the sale of 2,000 tractors the Senate has stricken from the bill.

Mr. BLANTON. If objection is withdrawn, will the gentleman permit us to pass upon each of these items separately?

Mr. FRENCH. I shall have no objection at all.

Mr. BLANTON. You will not force us to count them all as one amendment?

Mr. FRENCH. Not at all. I will withdraw that request if the gentleman desires.

The Senate amendment strikes out the provision of the House bill directing the Secretary of War to sell 2,000 of the tractors owned by the War Department. Now, it was not exactly understood by everybody what the situation was when the Anderson amendment was inserted. Some did not know whether the 1,250 were to be in addition to the 2,000 or to be taken from the 2,000. I think under the strict language of the bill we were directing the Secretary of War to dispose of the 2,000 by sale, and the 1,250 were additional, to be distributed among the highway departments of the several States for use on roads. It may seem advisable just to dispose of the 1,250 instead of the 2,000, or an additional 2,000, and that is what the Senate thought we ought to do.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. I shall be glad to.

Mr. GARD. I remember when we had that matter under consideration on the fortification bill. I made the point of order to the paragraph which the Senate has now stricken out.

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. GARD. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] offered an amendment, and under the guise of a reduction of the appropriation by lessening the sum appropriated, sought to restore the item. Then the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] made an entirely separate and distinct amendment, which was incorporated and remains in the bill. The difference, as I recall, between the first and second propositions was that the Secretary of War was directed to sell, and in the proposition advocated by the gentleman from Minnesota the Secretary was directed to turn over to the Department of Agriculture or the Bureau of Public Roads, I have forgotten which, 1,250 tractors for work on the public roads.

Mr. FRENCH. Yes; 1,250. The one was a sales proposition, and the other was a transfer proposition. The Senate has stricken out the sales proposition and retained the transfer proposition. It was the intention of the House to sell, according to the restored amendment of the gentleman from Illinois, and then to authorize this transfer, so that instead of there being 5,000 that would remain there would be 3,750. It was intended to dispose of 2,000 by sale and 1,250 by transfer from a total of 7,000.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It was 3,250 altogether. That was perfectly clear.

Mr. FRENCH. Yes; to me it was perfectly clear. Yet the question has been raised whether we wanted to dispose of 1,250 and 2,000, or just 2,000.

I think the interpretation of the gentleman from Illinois and that of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARD] is correct. But the members of the subcommittee feel that since that is the one essential amendment which probably the House would care to act upon, it is hardly worth sending the bill to conference, and therefore we will ask to concur. Under another bill we have authorized the Secretary to sell the tractors in his discretion.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes; I yield.

Mr. GARD. The remaining propositions are 19 in number?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. GARD. And these are all additional returns made by the War Department of money heretofore advanced and found not to be necessary?

Mr. FRENCH. Yes.

Mr. GARD. How much do these sums aggregate?

Mr. FRENCH. On pages 14 and 15 of the bill as it passed the House we provided for turning back into the Treasury of the United States $233,555,760. Under Gen. Lord still further checking up has been done of the various funds that have been appropriated during the last several years—in fact, some appropriations running back 30 or 40 years—and as a result of this further checking up it is found that various other items can be turned back; and the Senate has added 19 amendments, increasing in the 19 several instances the amount to be turned back, making a total of a little bit more than $17,000,000, so that the grand total to be turned back is $250,807,628.28.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. Mr. Speaker, I call attention to the fact that one of these amendments does not represent a turn back. It represents about $71,000 for aviation in seacoast defense. That is amendment No. 4. I am sure the gentleman did not want to be inaccurate, and I call his attention to it with that idea in mind.

Mr. FRENCH. No. I am in error there. Amendment No. 4 is a separate amendment and refers to a new item.

Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee. That goes back anyway, does it not?

Mr. FRENCH. The item No. 4 is not an increase, I should say, but it is an entirely new item. It is an item that goes back, however. It is not an increase. It is a new item and it is to be turned back into the Treasury.

Mr. GARD. The situation, then, is that in truth and in fact the Senate did not add any of these restorations, but from the time the bill left the House until it got to the Senate there were discovered in the War Department, in the different agencies, reasons for believing that they did not need certain appropriations, and certain additional appropriations were found not to be necessary between the time the bill was considered in the House and the time it was considered in the Senate?

Mr. FRENCH. That is correct.

Mr. GARD. What the Senate did was to put on these amounts to be returned the additional amounts found not to be necessary by the War Department and reported by the War Department to the Senate committee?

Mr. FRENCH. That is correct.

Mr. BLANTON. Amendments Nos. 3 to 21, inclusive, being amounts to be turned back into the Treasury, then it is proper to vote on all of them at one time.

Mr. FRENCH. It was suggested by me at first that we should vote on the three propositions, amendments 1 and 2 separately, and amendments 3 to 21 en bloc.

Mr. BLANTON. I have no objection to doing that.

Mr. FRENCH. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House vote upon the several amendments, the first and second separately, and the amendments Nos. 3 to 21, inclusive, en bloc.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 1: Page 2, line 24, strike out "the sum of" and insert in lieu thereof "a sum not exceeding."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 5, line 12, strike out the following language: "Provided, That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to sell as soon as possible after the approval of this act, upon such terms and under such conditions as he may deem most advantageous to the best interests of the Government, 2,000 of the tractors owned by the War Department."

Mr. FRENCH. I move that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. BLANTON) there were—ayes 93, noes 1.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, upon that I make the point of no quorum present. This is an important matter, the sale of 2,000 tractors that the people want sold.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's statement is out of order. It is clear that there is no quorum present. The Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 291, nays 4, answered "present" 1, not voting 132, as follows:

YEAS—291.

Almon	Echols	Larsen	Robsion, Ky.
Anderson	Elston	Layton	Rogers
Andrews, Md.	Esch	Lazaro	Romjue
Andrews, Nebr.	Evans, Mont.	Lea, Calif.	Rose
Anthony	Evans, Nebr.	Lehlbach	Rouse
Ashbrook	Fairfield	Linthicum	Rowe
Aswell	Farr	Longworth	Sanders, Ind.
Babka	Ferris	Luce	Sanders, N. Y.
Bacharach	Fess	Lufkin	Sanford
Bankhead	Fish	McAndrews	Schall
Barbour	Fisher	McClintic	Scott
Barkley	Fordney	McDuffie	Sherwood
Bee	Foster	McKiniry	Shreve
Begg	French	McKinley	Siegel
Bell	Fuller	McLaughlin, Mich.	Sinclair
Benson	Gallivan	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Sinnott
Bland, Ind.	Ganly	McLeod	Sisson
Bland, Va.	Gard	McPherson	Slemp
Boies	Garrett	Madden	Small
Bowers	Glynn	Magee	Smith, Idaho
Bowling	Godwin, N. C.	Mann, Ill.	Smith, Ill.
Box	Good	Mansfield	Smithwick
Brand	Goodykoontz	Mapes	Snell
Briggs	Gould	Martin	Stedman
Brinson	Graham, Ill.	Mays	Steenerson
Brooks, Ill.	Green, Iowa	Mead	Stephens, Ohio
Brooks, Pa.	Greene, Mass.	Michener	Stevenson
Browne	Greene, Vt.	Miller	Stoll
Buchanan	Griest	Minahan, N. J.	Strong, Kans.
Burdick	Griffin	Mondell	Strong, Pa.
Burroughs	Hardy, Colo.	Montague	Summers, Wash.
Butler	Hastings	Moore, Ohio	Sweet
Byrns, Tenn.	Hawley	Moores, Ind.	Swindall
Campbell, Kans.	Hayden	Mott	Tague
Campbell, Pa.	Hernandez	Murphy	Taylor, Ark.
Cannon	Hersey	Nelson, Mo.	Taylor, Colo.
Cantrill	Hickey	Nelson, Wis.	Taylor, Tenn.
Caraway	Hicks	Newton, Minn.	Temple
Carew	Hoch	Newton, Mo.	Thompson
Carss	Holland	O'Connell	Tillman
Carter	Houghton	O'Connor	Tilson
Casey	Howard	Ogden	Timberlake
Chindblom	Hull, Iowa	Oldfield	Tincher
Christopherson	Humphreys	Oliver	Tinkham
Cleary	Husted	Olney	Treadway
Coady	Hutchinson	Osborne	Upshaw
Collier	Ireland	Overstreet	Vaile
Cooper	Jacoway	Padgett	Venable
Crago	James, Va.	Paige	Vestal
Cramton	Jefferis	Park	Vinson
Crisp	Johnson, Ky.	Parker	Voigt
Crowther	Johnson, Miss.	Parrish	Volk
Cullen	Johnson, S. Dak.	Patterson	Volstead
Currie, Mich.	Johnson, Wash.	Pell	Wason
Curry, Calif.	Jones, Pa.	Peters	Weaver
Dale	Jones, Tex.	Porter	Webster
Dallinger	Juul	Pou	Welling
Darrow	Kearns	Purnell	Wheeler
Davey	Keller	Quin	White, Kans.
Davis, Minn.	Kelly, Pa.	Radcliffe	White, Me.
Davis, Tenn.	Kendall	Rainey, Henry T.	Williams
Dempsey	Kennedy, R. I.	Raker	Wilson, Ill.
Denison	Kettner	Ramseyer	Wilson, La.
Dewalt	Kiess	Randall, Calif.	Wilson, Pa.
Dickinson, Iowa	King	Ransley	Wingo
Dickinson, Mo.	Kinkaid	Rayburn	Woods, Va.
Dominick	Kleczka	Reavis	Woodyard
Doremus	Knutson	Reber	Wright
Drane	Kraus	Reed, N. Y.	Yates
Dunn	Kreider	Rhodes	Young, N. Dak.
Dupré	Lampert	Ricketts	Young, Tex.
Dyer	Lanham	Riddick	Zihlman
Eagan	Lankford	Robinson, N. C.

NAYS—4.

Blanton	Huddleston	MacGregor	Steagall

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Sumners, Tex.

NOT VOTING—132.

Ackerman	Dunbar	Haugen	McGlennon
Ayres	Eagle	Hays	McKenzie
Baer	Edmonds	Hersman	McKeown
Benham	Elliott	Hill	Maher
Black	Ellsworth	Hoey	Major
Bland, Mo.	Emerson	Hudspeth	Mann, S. C.
Britten	Evans, Nev.	Hulings	Mason
Brumbaugh	Fields	Hull, Tenn.	Merritt
Burke	Flood	Igoe	Milligan
Byrnes, S. C.	Focht	James, Mich.	Monahan, Wis.
Caldwell	Frear	Johnston, N. Y.	Moon
Candler	Freeman	Kahn	Mooney
Clark, Fla.	Gallagher	Kelley, Mich.	Moore, Va.
Clark, Mo.	Gandy	Kennedy, Iowa	Morin
Classon	Garner	Kincheloe	Mudd
Cole	Goldfogle	Kitchin	Neely
Connally	Goodall	Langley	Nicholls
Copley	Goodwin, Ark.	Lee, Ga.	Nolan
Costello	Graham, Pa.	Lesher	Perlman
Dent	Hadley	Little	Phelan
Donovan	Hamill	Lonergan	Rainey, Ala.
Dooling	Hamilton	Luhring	Rainey, John W.
Doughton	Hardy, Tex.	McArthur	Ramsey
Dowell	Harreld	McCulloch	Randall, Wis.
Drewry	Harrison	McFadden	Reed, W. Va.

Riordan	Sears	Stiness	Ward
Rodenberg	Sells	Sullivan	Watkins
Rowan	Sims	Swope	Watson
Rubey	Smith, Mich.	Thomas	Welty
Rucker	Smith, N. Y.	Towner	Whaley
Sabath	Snyder	Vare	Winslow
Sanders, La.	Steele	Walsh	Wise
Scully	Stephens, Miss.	Walters	Wood, Ind.

So the motion to concur in the Senate amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Mr. MERRITT with Mr. HERSMAN.
Mr. HADLEY with Mr. GANDY.
Mr. BENHAM with Mr. LESHER.
Mr. EDMONDS with Mr. STEELE.
Mr. KENNEDY of Iowa with Mr. SEARS.
Mr. STINESS with Mr. KITCHIN.
Mr. SMITH of Michigan with Mr. GARNER.
Mr. REED of West Virginia with Mr. WELTY.
Mr. RAMSEY with Mr. KINCHELOE.
Mr. LUHRING with Mr. WATKINS.
Mr. BURKE with Mr. WISE.
Mr. HILL with Mr. GALLAGHER.
Mr. MCKENZIE with Mr. HULL of Tennessee.
Mr. NOLAN with Mr. MOORE of Virginia.
Mr. DUNBAR with Mr. HOEY.
Mr. LANGLEY with Mr. CLARK of Florida.
Mr. SNYDER with Mr. CONNALLY.
Mr. COPLEY with Mr. HARRISON.
Mr. MCARTHUR with Mr. WHALEY.
Mr. WALSH with Mr. IGOE.
Mr. FOCHT with Mr. DREWRY.
Mr. DOWELL with Mr. AYRES.
Mr. KELLEY of Michigan with Mr. HUDSPETH.
Mr. MASON with Mr. MCKEOWN.
Mr. WARD with Mr. STEPHENS of Mississippi.
Mr. RANDALL of Wisconsin with Mr. BLACK.
Mr. ACKERKMAN with Mr. MAJOR.
Mr. MUDD with Mr. FIELDS.
Mr. HARRELD with Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina.
Mr. WINSLOW with Mr. NICHOLLS.
Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. SABATH.
Mr. WOOD of Indiana with Mr. FLOOD.
Mr. ELLIOTT with Mr. CANDLER.
Mr. WATSON with Mr. PHELAN.
Mr. TOWNER with Mr. RUCKER.
Mr. FREAR with Mr. LEE of Georgia.
Mr. HAUGEN with Mr. NEELY.
Mr. WALTERS with Mr. SIMS.
Mr. SELLS with Mr. HARDY of Texas.
Mr. FREEMAN with Mr. EAGLE.
Mr. HAYS with Mr. MCGLENNON.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

Mr. FRENCH. I move that the House concur in Senate amendments 3 to 21, inclusive, en bloc.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Idaho, pursuant to the agreement that he may do so, moves that the House concur in Senate amendments 3 to 21, inclusive, en bloc.

The motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. FRENCH, a motion to reconsider the votes by which the House concurred in the several Senate amendments was laid on the table.

REORGANIZING THE INDIAN SERVICE.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 4039) to amend section 3 of the act of Congress of June 28, 1906, entitled "An act for the division of lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes."

Be it enacted, etc., That all that part of the act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. L., p. 539), entitled "An act for the division of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians in Oklahoma, and for other purposes," which reserves to the Osage Tribe the oil, gas, coal, or other minerals covered by the lands for the selection and division of which provision is made in that act is hereby amended so that the oil, gas, coal, or other minerals covered by said lands are reserved to the Osage Tribe for the period ending April 7, 1946: Provided, That all valid existing oil and gas leases on the 7th day of April, 1931, are hereby renewed upon the same terms and extended, subject to all other conditions and provisions thereof, until the 8th day of April, 1946, and as long thereafter as oil or gas is found in paying quantities, and the Secretary of the Interior and the Osage Council are hereby authorized and directed to offer for lease for oil and gas purposes all of the remaining portion of the unleased Osage land prior to April 8, 1931, offering the same annually at the rate of not less than one-tenth of the unleased area.

SEC. 2. That the bona fide owner or lessee of the surface of the land shall be compensated, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior in connection with oil and gas mining operations, for any damage that shall accrue after the passage of this act as a result of the use of such land for oil and gas mining purposes or out of damages to the land or crops thereon occasioned thereby, but nothing herein contained shall be construed to deny to the surface owner or lessee the right to appeal to the courts without the consent of the Secretary of the Interior, in the event he is dissatisfied with the amount of damages awarded him.

SEC. 3. That all members of the Osage Tribe of Indians are hereby declared to be citizens of the United States, but this shall not affect their interest in tribal property or the control of the United States over such property as is now or may hereafter be provided by law, and all restrictions against alienation of their allotment selections, both surplus and homestead, of all adult Osage Indians of less than one-half Indian blood, are hereby removed, and the Secretary of the Interior shall, within four months after the passage of this act, determine what members of said tribe are of less than one-half Indian blood, and their ages, and his determination thereof shall be final and conclusive. The homestead allotments of the members of the Osage Tribe shall not be subject to taxation if held by the original allottee prior to April 8, 1931.

SEC. 4. That from and after the passage of this act the Secretary of the Interior shall cause to be paid at the end of each fiscal quarter to each adult member of the Osage Tribe having a certificate of competency his or her pro rata share, either as a member of the tribe or heir of a deceased member, of the interest on trust funds, the bonus received from the sale of leases, and the royalties received during the previous fiscal quarter, and so long as the income is sufficient to pay to the adult members of said tribe not having a certificate of competency $1,000 quarterly except where incompetent adult members have legal guardians, in which case the income of such incompetents shall be paid to their legal guardians, and to pay for maintenance and education to the parents or natural guardians or legal guardians actually having minor members under 21 years of age personally in charge $500 quarterly out of the income of said minors, all of said quarterly payments to legal guardians and adults, not having certificates of competency, to be paid under the supervision of the superintendent of the Osage Agency, and to invest the remainder after paying all the taxes of such members either in United States bonds or in Oklahoma State, county, or school bonds, or place the same on time deposits at interest in banks in the State of Oklahoma for the benefit of each individual member under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That at the beginning of each fiscal year there shall first be reserved and set aside out of the Osage tribal funds available for that purpose a sufficient amount of money for the expenditures authorized by Congress out of the Osage funds for that fiscal year: Provided further, That all just existing individual obligations of adults not having certificates of competency outstanding upon the passage of this act, when approved by the superintendent of the Osage Agency, shall be paid out of the money of such individual as the same may be placed to his credit in addition to the quarterly allowance provided for herein.

SEC. 5. That the State of Oklahoma is authorized from and after the passage of this act to levy and collect a gross production tax upon all oil and gas produced in Osage County, Okla., and all taxes so collected shall be paid and distributed, and in lieu of all other State and county taxes levied upon the production of oil and gas as provided by the laws of Oklahoma, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay, through the proper officers of the Osage Agency, to the State of Oklahoma, from the amount received by the Osage Tribe of Indians as royalties from production of oil and gas, the per centum levied as gross production tax, to be distributed as provided by the laws of Oklahoma: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to pay, through the proper officers of the Osage Agency, to Osage County, Okla., an additional sum equal to 1 per cent of the amount received by the Osage Tribe of Indians as royalties from production of oil and gas, which sum shall be used by said county only for the construction and maintenance of roads and bridges therein: Provided further, That the proper officials of Osage County shall make an annual report to the Secretary of the Interior showing that said fund has been used for road and bridge construction and maintenance only.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CARTER. I demand a second.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SWINDALL. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York and the gentleman from Oklahoma will act as tellers.

Mr. SWINDALL. I withdraw my objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma withdraws his objection, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. SNYDER] is recognized for 20 minutes and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] for 20 minutes.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, the bill under consideration is for the purpose of extending the law that now exists for a period of 15 years in addition to the time it has to run. For the information of those Members who have Indians in their districts, I will say that there is nothing in the bill that affects any Indians anywhere outside of the Osage Tribe. It is purely and simply in the interest of the Osage Indians and those that are operating and doing business with them.

This bill has the universal indorsement of the Osage Tribe, of the oil operators, of the gas operators, and practically the universal indorsement of the surface owners. It is absolutely essential at this time, in the interest of the public, for the simple reason, taking the last phase of my statement, that under existing law and under the operation of the production of oil and gas by the authorities we are getting a continuous and universal flow of oil and gas from these lands and from the wells of the Osage Nation. The Osages themselves, about 2,100 in number, full bloods and others, are receiving this year in royalties and bonuses an average income of more than $10,000 per capita. There are instances where families of seven, all of whom are drawing this income, are spending it riotously and otherwise; so the law is simply modified to the extent that we are impounding a portion of the money of these Indians for their future welfare and benefit. We are providing in here that every adult Indian who is a citizen shall have all of the money that is coming to him, of course, quarterly, and every incompetent Indian who has heretofore not only had his own $10,000 but the $10,000 of his children to do with as he likes—we are permitting him to have $1,000 quarterly and each of the minor children $500 quarterly for their maintenance, and that the balance will be impounded under the rules and regulations of the Secretary of the Interior in school and municipal bonds or put in the banks of the State of Oklahoma at such a rate of interest as will be a satisfactory rate.

It is provided in this bill that all of the Osage Indians less than half blood shall be made citizens, whether they desire to become citizens or not; and within four months after this law becomes effective the Secretary of the Interior is directed to make an order declaring these Indians to be competent. The committee believes that the time has come when the Indians who are competent in this tribe, who are getting all this money, should take their burdens as citizens of the country, pay their taxes, and be forced to have their children educated in the white schools, the same as other citizens.

Of course, it has been the desire of the Indian Committee to make laws of that sort operative throughout the country, but it was found impossible to do it at this session, and since the business situation is such and the agencies surrounding this proposition are so important the committee saw fit in its wisdom to submerge its efforts for two years in working out a fundamental bill for reorganization of the Indian Service and let it go in the interest of the public and in the interest of the business of the country and in the interest of the Osage Tribe and oil operators and cut everything out of the bill except that which belongs to the Osages themselves.

In my judgment, the bill should pass without a dissenting vote. It has been very carefully prepared. For a year and a half we have studied and worked upon this bill and amended it probably a thousand times. There may be some things in it yet that ought to be changed.

Just to give a little idea of what is going on out in this Osage country I would say that there are at present 6,400 wells in the Osage country that are averaging about 9 barrels per day of 24 hours and about 5,500 wells producing an average of about 3 barrels of oil a day. I have an idea that the average Member of the House when he reads about an oil well never thinks of one that produces less than 300 barrels or a thousand barrels a day, and the facts are that in the State of Pennsylvania there are about 30,000 wells that are producing less than one-third of a barrel of oil a day of 24 hours, and the same situation exists in the State of New York and in the State of Ohio. Some years they run less than half a barrel of oil per well, and the real necessity for the extension of this period is that these 6,400 wells producing 9 barrels a day each and 5,500 wells producing 3 barrels a day each are gradually running out. Unless we grant this extension, so that these people can prepare themselves to continue in such a way as to afford to operate the wells at a lower average rate than they now produce, when the time under the present law expires they will pull up their casings and leave the country. The result will be that the moneys which we hope to impound for the Osage Indians would not be there, and the public would be short of its continuous flow of oil. In the interest of the public and in the interest of the Osage Indians, in the interest of the men who have put $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 in there, this extension is absolutely necessary, in my judgment.

Mr. HASTINGS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes.

Mr. HASTINGS. This is a unanimous report from the Committe on Indian Affairs?

Mr. SNYDER. Yes. [Cries of "Vote!"]

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I have charge of the remainder of the time, and I am quite willing to go to a vote at this time.

Mr. HASTINGS. This is a Senate bill, and this is an amendment to the Senate bill.

Mr. SNYDER. The House amendment to the Senate bill was read into the bill.

The SPEAKER. The question will be taken upon suspending the rules and passing the Senate bill as amended.

Mr. HASTINGS. And that strikes out the Senate bill and puts in the amendment as a substitute.

The SPEAKER. That is correct. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman withhold that, in order that I may present a conference report?

Mr. BARKLEY. I withhold the point for a moment.

FORT BELKNAP INDIAN RESERVATION, MONT.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report upon the bill (H. R. 13225) providing for the allotment of lands within the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation, Mont., and for other purposes, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing vote of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill H. R. 13225, an act providing for the allotment of lands within the Fort Belknap Indian Reservation, Mont., and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: On page 2, line 25, of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "lands," insert the word "chiefly"; and on page 10, line 14, after the word "lands," insert the word "chiefly"; and the Senate agree to the same.

HOMER P. SNYDER,
P. P. CAMPBELL,
C. D. CARTER,
Managers on the part of the House.

CHARLES CURTIS,
A. J. GRONNA,
T. J. WALSH,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

STANDARD WEIGHTS AND MEASURES, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 8067) to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia; to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia; and for other purposes, with Senate amendments thereto.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Clerk read the Senate amendments.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in the Senate amendments. The first four amendments are simply verbal amendments to correct the language of the bill. Amendment numbered 5 strikes out the paragraph in the House bill fixing the weight of a standard sack of potatoes, and amendment numbered 6 strikes out the provision in the House bill fixing the weight of a standard barrel of flour. There was a good deal of objection to both these provisions at the time the matter was considered in the House. Amendments 7, 8, 9, and 10 relate to the cubic inches of liquid measure, the half-pint, the gill, and the fluid ounce. They reduce the decimal; that is, the Senate amendments do not carry out the decimal as far as the bill did as it passed the House. The sealer of weights and measures says that the Senate figures are the correct ones and should be adopted.

I move the adoption of the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

On motion of Mr. MAPES, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were agreed to was laid on the table.

SENATE BILL REFERRED.

Under clause 2, Rule XXIV, Senate bill of the following title was taken from the Speaker's table and referred to its appropriate committee as indicated below:

S. 3487. An act for the relief of Clarence L. Reames; to the Committee on Claims.

COPPER TRANSACTIONS DURING THE WAR.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, quite a number of times the subject of copper transactions during the period of the war has been before the House for discussion. Those transactions have been mentioned in official reports made from committees to the House. There has been much discussion of this in the public prints. There has been a great deal of misinformation, a great deal of misunderstanding concerning that matter, and various gentlemen have been subjected to criticism who had no connection with the matters for which they were criticized.

I have just received a letter from the President of the United States which gives some information touching this matter which, so far as I know, has not been published before, and I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk read this letter in my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the Clerk read the letter in his time. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, March 1, 1921.

MY DEAR MR. GARRETT: My attention has recently been called to certain attacks made in the House of Representatives, charging that certain men who rendered distinguished service in the war had profited out of the Government as a result of the fixing of the price of copper. These charges and intimations have been satisfactorily answered, but a statement of the facts in the matter of the fixing of the price of copper during the war, on my part, may further clarify the situation.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Bernard M. Baruch and Mr. John D. Ryan, whose names have been linked with irresponsible gossip in connection with the fixing of the price of copper, had nothing whatever to do with the price-fixing negotiations, which finally resulted in the statement I made, fixing the price either at the time the price was fixed or subsequent thereto. Judge Lovett acted as chairman of the committee which considered the first price fixing of copper, and after due consideration recommended to the President, in September, 1917, that he had fixed the price at 23½ cents per pound, on condition that the wages of the employees of the copper-producing companies should not be reduced below the then prevailing price, which was based on 27-cent copper.

A year later a readjustment of the price was made necessary by an increase in the railroad rates and costs of supplies, and after negotiations which extended over many months a further increase was recommended by Mr. Robert Brooking, chairman of the War Industries Board. Neither Mr. Baruch nor Mr. Ryan had any part in these two negotiations which resulted in the fixing of the price announced by me, and the prices were fixed only after an independent investigation and most thorough report by the Federal Trade Commission as to the costs of production.

For six months after the United States entered the war the producers furnished all the copper necessary for our own war needs and all that was required by our allies without any price being asked or fixed, the producers taking the admirable position that they would furnish all the copper necessary for war purposes and adjust their business to whatever prices the Government would consider fair and just in the circumstances. The full production of the copper mines was placed at the disposal of the Government and the Allies, and without unnecessary urging upon the part of the Government or the President the production of copper was notably increased, this being an additional proof on the part of the men at the head of the copper industry of the country of their unselfish patriotism. It was their example of meeting the needs of the country that gave impetus to the movement to increase production in all the industrial plants of the country in the early stages of the war. To state that either Mr. Baruch or Mr. Ryan had influenced the action of the Federal Trade Commission in ascertaining the cost of production or attempting to dictate the recommendations either of the War Industries Board or any of the price-fixing committees is utterly foolish and without foundation of any kind. The price of copper was fixed solely by me upon the recommendations of the War Industries Board and the Federal Trade Commission, after full examination into the costs of production and without any attempt upon the part of copper producers or Mr. Baruch or Mr. Ryan to exert any pressure upon this Government or upon anybody connected with either of the boards having to do with these vital matters.

I can not allow this occasion to pass, my dear GARRETT, without again expressing my great confidence in the gentlemen, Mr. Bernard M. Baruch and Mr. John D. Ryan, whose names have been unfortunately connected with this matter. There was not a suggestion of scandal connected with either of these gentlemen in any of the war activities in which they played so notable a part, and I wish, before the closing days of this administration, again to say how admirably they served the needs of the Nation and how unselfishly they devoted their fine talents to the Government in every crisis which faced us during the critical days of the war. In every transaction which they handled for the Government in the varied activities in which they played so distinguished a part they were actuated by the highest patriotism. I know you share my opinion in this matter, for you have admirably covered it in your addresses in the House of Representatives.

With sincere regards,

Cordially, yours,

WOODROW WILSON.

Hon. FINIS GARRETT,
House of Representatives.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent——

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not recognize the gentleman for that purpose. The gentleman from Minnesota.

ENLARGING JURISDICTION OF MUNICIPAL COURT, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the bill H. R. 10074, with Senate amendments, may be laid before the House, and I shall move to concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota calls up the House bill with Senate amendments, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 10074. An act to enlarge the jurisdiction of the municipal court of the District of Columbia, and to regulate appeals from the judgments of said court, and for other purposes.

The Senate amendments were read.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, this bill is for the purpose of enlarging the jurisdiction of the municipal court of this city. It was passed by the House, went to the Senate, and was amended there in some respects. The first amendment changes the amount the court may take jurisdiction of from $2,000 to $1,000. The House in passing the bill fixed the amount at $2,000, and the Senate reduced it to $1,000.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. I will.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. I notice in the bill that where a party is aggrieved by a judgment of the lower court that he may present his petition to the justice of the court and ask for an appeal and that he signs a bill of exceptions. Now, in the event a justice refuses to sign a bill of exceptions, the bill makes no provision anywhere for the litigant. There ought to be some provision in there made, because an arbitrary justice could prevent a man from prosecuting an appeal, and it is a frequent occurrence in some courts.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. We make a provision, one that is quite common in courts of this kind. We provide a writ of error. This matter has been submitted and fully agreed to by the court interested and——

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. That does not make it perfect, for my observation is——

Mr. VOLSTEAD. If the gentleman will allow me to explain—by the bar association and the Chamber of Congress. It has been very carefully gone over and they have all agreed to this bill so far as I know.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Is there a provision that in the event a justice declines to sign a bill of exceptions as presented to him he may have members of the bar who are present when proceedings were had to sign this bill of exceptions and prosecute his appeal? If not, what remedy has a man if an arbitrary judge refuses to sign it?

Mr. VOLSTEAD. But I do not expect there will be any arbitrary judges——

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. In nearly all jurisdictions that is frequent.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. In cases where the amount in controversy is small, as in municipal courts, a writ of error is usually considered an appropriate mode of review.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. The only remedy would be to mandamus the judge, and the gentleman knows that the poor litigants can not do that. I think there ought to be some provision in there for poor people to prosecute their cases by an appeal.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. As a general rule there is no unrestricted right of appeal in small cases; and I do not believe that poor people would profit by unrestricted appeals; it is the rich that usually resort to appeals.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. As suggested by the gentleman from Michigan, I would not think of offering an amendment now to interfere with the passage of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendments.

The question was taken, and the motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. VOLSTEAD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a concurrent resolution in connection with this particular measure shall be considered. There is a rather immaterial error, but it is one which I think might well be corrected now.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the concurrent resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 77.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That in the enrollment of the bill (H. R. 10074) entitled, "An act enlarging the jurisdiction of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, and to regulate appeals from the judgments of said court, and for other purposes," the Clerk of the House be, and is hereby, authorized and directed to incorporate the following amendment: On page 9, line 1, after the word "and" strike out the following, "Fuel, approved August 10, 1917," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "Fuel, approved August 10, 1917, and to regulate rents in the District of Columbia."

The SPEAKER. Without objection the resolution is agreed to.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF DAUPHINE STREET, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Mr. O'CONNOR. Mr. Speaker, I move to take up the bill S. 5030.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana moves to take up the bill S. 5030, a bill of similar import having been reported in the House before the Senate bill came over. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5030) authorizing the city of New Orleans, La., to extend Dauphine Street in said city across the United States military reservation known as the Jackson Barracks.

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana, be, and it hereby is, authorized to extend Dauphine Street, in said city, across and through the property of the United States, known as the military reservation of Jackson Barracks, said extension to be of the same width and a continuation of the same lines as said street at its juncture with Delery Street upon the easterly side of said reservation, upon condition that said street shall be improved and maintained by said city of New Orleans as a public street and without cost to the United States: Provided, however, That there is hereby expressly reserved to the United States the right to construct and maintain over, under, and across that said street water, gas, and sewer mains, electric lights, and telephone wires and cables, and any other requisite utilities which the use of said military reservation may require.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. O'CONNOR, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

CLOSING OF CEDAR ROAD, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table Senate bill to provide for the closing of Cedar Road, between Quincy and Shepherd Streets NW., in the District of Columbia, a bill of similar import having been reported by the District Committee in the House before this Senate bill came over.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5023) to provide for the closing of Cedar Road between Quincy Street and Shepherd Street NW., in the District of Columbia.

Be it enacted, etc., That the commissioners are hereby authorized to close Cedar Road between Quincy Street and Shepherd Street NW., in the District of Columbia.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. How does the bill come before the House?

The SPEAKER. It is a Senate bill, a House bill of similar import having been reported before the bill came over.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. If it is a calendar bill, I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. It is on the House Calendar.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I do not make any objection.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman from Michigan yield?

Mr. MAPES. I yield.

Mr. BLANTON. What is to be done with this land as the result of the street being closed up?

Mr. MAPES. I will yield to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. ZIHLMAN], a member of the committee, who reported the bill, to answer the gentleman's question.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. I will say to the gentleman from Texas that under the practice here the land reverts to the abutting property owners.

Mr. BLANTON. Private individuals who would benefit by this bill, because the abutting land would revert to them?

Mr. ZIHLMAN. The land is about 20 feet wide, intersecting a city square diagonally, and quite a number of property owners would secure a few feet of land.

Mr. BLANTON. And the people living around there that would have the right otherwise to go through this street would have to go around?

Mr. ZIHLMAN. No. It is a city square, and this street which intersects it is much above the grade of the street. It is not in use. It is a private road on the old map of the District of Columbia, but under the District laws and practices it is necessary to have an act of Congress to authorize the commissioners to close any street. The commissioners have recommended the closing of this street.

Mr. BLANTON. It benefits private-land owners?

Mr. ZIHLMAN. Yes; in a limited way.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, is this up by unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It is not.

Mr. BLANTON. I raise the question of consideration, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Did the abutting property owners petition for this?

Mr. ZIHLMAN. A number of them did.

Mr. JOHNSON of Mississippi. Under the law, how are you going to close it unless all the abutting owners petition for it? You can not legally close it up otherwise.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. The road intersects a city square, and all the property owners in that square want it closed. I do not know that they have all joined in a petition for closing it, but it is not in use.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would state that the gentleman has moved to take up this bill, which was agreed to, and the Chair thinks that that is equivalent to a question of consideration.

Mr. BLANTON. And it is not proper to raise a question of consideration?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks not.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. This is only one of a number of streets the District Commissioners are endeavoring to close. The committee took up this one street because it was asked for by a number of people of the District and because they are convinced it is not needed.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman from Maryland realizes if, five years from now, when new commissioners might be in office they should decide it is necessary to reopen this street for the benefit of the public, it will then cost money and the Government will have to buy all this land back in order to reopen the street?

Mr. ZIHLMAN. I will say to the gentleman it could not be reopened. It is diagonally across a city square——

Mr. BLANTON. It is a thoroughfare which belongs to the Government; a part of the Government property.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. Part of the District or Government property.

Mr. BLANTON. And if we pass this bill, if the Government should ever need this street again, we would have to pay for it again.

Mr. ZIHLMAN. The gentleman is entirely wrong. The District engineer has laid off streets in that section. The commissioners recommend that this street be closed.

Mr. BLANTON. Does the gentleman think this is a measure that ought to come up in the later days of the Congress, when we have important matters to consider here?

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman that this is the only time that we could get it up. The bill has been referred to the District Commissioners and they recommended its passage. The only way to close streets in the District of Columbia is by special acts of this kind. This is a small matter, but it is a step that has to be taken in order to get the street closed. It is a narrow street and only one block long, and it is not used by the public at all.

Mr. DEWALT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman allow me to make an inquiry?

Mr. MAPES. Yes.

Mr. DEWALT. In response to the inquiry of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BLANTON], whom does this injure and whom does it benefit? Does it injure somebody, or does it benefit somebody?

Mr. MAPES. It does not injure anybody, and it does not benefit anybody, but under the law of the District the land reverts to the adjoining owners.

Mr. DEWALT. And nobody is injured?

Mr. MAPES. Nobody is injured.

Mr. BLANTON. The gentleman, however, will admit this, that if we close it up and it should be desirable to open it in the future, the people of the United States would have to pay for the reopening of it by buying this land back from the abutting property owners?

Mr. MAPES. If that contingency should occur, I think the public would have to pay a part of the expense of reopening it. But the committee has been very reluctant in reporting bills of this kind and has refrained from passing any general legislation which would allow the Commissioners of the District of Columbia to close streets without special acts. Now, this is a special act for closing this one little street, and, as I said before, it is the only way that the commissioners can be authorized to close the street.

Mr. BLANTON. If it were not for the fact that the people of the United States generally have to pay 40 per cent in connection with all of these items, I would have no objection at all. But it is that 40 per cent consideration that affects me.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. These street openings are made by a special assessment now.

Mr. BLANTON. Everywhere else they are condemned, and the party condemning them pays for them.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. They are here now. Formerly that was not the case, but we passed a law to that effect a few years ago.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the motion of the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. MAPES] to take the bill from the Speaker's table and consider it.

The question was taken, and the Speaker announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division.

The SPEAKER. A division is demanded.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 61, noes 1.

Mr. BLANTON. Mr. Speaker, in order to have a record vote, I make the point that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas makes the point that there is no quorum present. It is evident that there is no quorum present. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 263, nays 2, not voting 163, as follows:

YEAS—263.

Almon	Curry, Calif.	Hicks	Mann, Ill.
Anderson	Dale	Hoch	Mansfield
Andrews, Nebr.	Dallinger	Hoey	Mapes
Anthony	Darrow	Holland	Martin
Ashbrook	Davey	Houghton	Mead
Aswell	Davis, Minn.	Howard	Merritt
Babka	Davis, Tenn.	Hudspeth	Michener
Bankhead	Dempsey	Hull, Iowa	Miller
Barbour	Dewalt	Humphreys	Minahan, N. J.
Barkley	Dickinson, Iowa	Husted	Mondell
Begg	Dominick	Hutchinson	Moore, Ohio
Bell	Dowell	Igoe	Moore, Va.
Benham	Drane	Jacoway	Moores, Ind.
Black	Dunbar	James, Va.	Murphy
Bland, Mo.	Dunn	Jefferis	Nelson, Mo.
Bland, Va.	Dupré	Johnson, Ky.	Nelson, Wis.
Boies	Eagan	Johnson, Miss.	Newton, Minn.
Bowers	Edmonds	Jones, Pa.	Newton, Mo.
Bowling	Esch	Jones, Tex.	Nicholls
Box	Evans, Nebr.	Juul	Nolan
Brand	Fairfield	Kearns	O'Connell
Briggs	Farr	Keller	O'Connor
Brinson	Fess	Kiess	Ogden
Brooks, Ill.	Fish	King	Oldfield
Brooks, Pa.	Fisher	Kinkaid	Osborne
Browne	Foster	Kreider	Overstreet
Buchanan	Frear	Lampert	Paige
Burdick	French	Lanham	Park
Burroughs	Fuller	Lankford	Parker
Byrns, Tenn.	Ganly	Larsen	Parrish
Campbell, Kans.	Gard	Layton	Patterson
Campbell, Pa.	Garrett	Lea, Calif.	Peters
Cannon	Glynn	Lee, Ga.	Phelan
Caraway	Good	Lehlbach	Purnell
Carew	Gould	Linthicum	Quin
Carss	Green, Iowa	Longworth	Radcliffe
Carter	Greene, Mass.	Luce	Raker
Chindblom	Greene, Vt.	McArthur	Ramseyer
Christopherson	Griest	McClintic	Randall, Calif.
Cleary	Griffin	McDuffie	Randall, Wis.
Coady	Hadley	McKeown	Ransley
Collier	Hardy, Colo.	McKiniry	Rayburn
Cooper	Hastings	McKinley	Reber
Crago	Hawley	McLaughlin, Mich.	Reed, N. Y.
Cramton	Hayden	McLaughlin, Nebr.	Reed, W. Va.
Crisp	Hernandez	McLeod	Rhodes
Crowther	Hersey	McPherson	Ricketts
Cullen	Hersman	MacGregor	Riddick
Currie, Mich.	Hickey	Magee	Robsion, Ky.
Rogers	Smithwick	Taylor, Tenn.	Weaver
Romjue	Snell	Temple	Webster
Rose	Snyder	Thompson	Wheeler
Rouse	Steagall	Tillman	White, Kans.
Rowe	Stedman	Tilson	White, Me.
Sabath	Stephens, Miss.	Timberlake	Wilson, La.
Sanders, Ind.	Stephens, Ohio	Tincher	Wilson, Pa.
Schall	Stevenson	Tinkham	Wingo
Scott	Stoll	Valle	Winslow
Sherwood	Strong, Kans.	Vestal	Wood, Ind.
Shreve	Strong, Pa.	Vinson	Woods, Va.
Siegel	Summers, Wash.	Volk	Woodyard
Sinclair	Sumners, Tex.	Volstead	Wright
Sinnott	Sweet	Walters	Young, N. Dak.
Sisson	Swindall	Ward	Young, Tex.
Slemp	Tague	Wason	Zihlman
Smith, Idaho	Taylor, Colo.	Watson

NAYS—2.

Blanton	Huddleston

NOT VOTING—163.

Ackerman	Ferris	Kleczka	Reavis
Andrews, Md.	Fields	Knutson	Riordan
Ayres	Flood	Kraus	Robinson, N. C.
Bacharach	Focht	Langley	Rodenberg
Baer	Fordney	Lazaro	Rowan
Bee	Freeman	Lesher	Rubey
Benson	Gallagher	Little	Rucker
Bland, Ind.	Gallivan	Lonergan	Sanders, La.
Britten	Gandy	Lufkin	Sanders, N.Y.
Brumbaugh	Garner	Luhring	Sanford
Burke	Godwin, N. C.	McAndrews	Scully
Butler	Goldfogle	McCulloch	Sears
Byrnes, S. C.	Goodall	McFadden	Sells
Caldwell	Goodwin, Ark.	McGlennon	Sims
Candler	Goodykoontz	McKenzie	Small
Cantrill	Graham, Ill.	Madden	Smith, Ill.
Casey	Graham, Pa.	Maher	Smith, Mich.
Clark, Fla.	Hamill	Major	Smith, N. Y.
Clark, Mo.	Hamilton	Mann, S. C.	Steele
Classon	Hardy, Tex.	Mason	Steenerson
Cole	Harreld	Mays	Stiness
Connally	Harrison	Milligan	Sullivan
Copley	Haugen	Monahan, Wis.	Swope
Costello	Hays	Montague	Taylor, Ark.
Denison	Hill	Moon	Thomas
Dent	Hulings	Mooney	Towner
Dickinson, Mo.	Hull, Tenn.	Morin	Treadway
Donovan	Ireland	Mott	Upshaw
Dooling	James, Mich.	Mudd	Vare
Doremus	Johnson, S. Dak.	Neely	Venable
Doughton	Johnson, Wash.	Oliver	Voigt
Drewry	Johnston, N. Y.	Olney	Walsh
Dyer	Kahn	Padgett	Watkins
Eagle	Kelley, Mich.	Pell	Welling
Echols	Kelly, Pa.	Perlman	Welty
Elliott	Kendall	Porter	Whaley
Ellsworth	Kennedy, Iowa	Pou	Williams
Elston	Kennedy, R. I.	Rainey, Ala	Wilson, Ill.
Emerson	Kettner	Rainey, Henry T.	Wise
Evans, Mont.	Kincheloe	Rainey, John W.	Yates
Evans, Nev.	Kitchin	Ramsey

So the motion to take the bill from the Speaker's table and consider it was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Mr. STEENERSON with Mr. SMALL.

Mr. REAVIS with Mr. VENABLE.

Mr. PORTER with Mr. TAYLOR of Arkansas.

Mr. MOTT with Mr. ROBINSON of North Carolina.

Mr. SANDERS of New York with Mr. LESHER.

Mr. KRAUS with Mr. DOREMUS.

Mr. BRITTEN with Mr. RIORDAN.

Mr. ECHOLS with Mr. GODWIN of North Carolina.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota with Mr. WELLING.

Mr. SMITH of Illinois with Mr. MAYS.

Mr. LUFKIN with Mr. FERRIS.

Mr. KELLEY of Michigan with Mr. JOHNSTON of New York.

Mr. GOODALL with Mr. EVANS of Montana.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania with Mr. OLIVER.

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island with Mr. BRUMBAUGH.

Mr. FORDNEY with Mr. CONNALLY.

Mr. BUTLER with Mr. STEELE.

Mr. YATES with Mr. GALLIVAN.

Mr. DYER with Mr. DICKINSON of Missouri.

Mr. KLECZKA with Mr. GOLDFOGLE.

Mr. MUDD with Mr. MILLIGAN.

Mr. KNUTSON with Mr. LAZARO.

Mr. WILSON of Illinois with Mr. UPSHAW.

Mr. TREADWAY with Mr. MONTAGUE.

Mr. RODENBERG with Mr. MCANDREWS.

Mr. MONAHAN of Wisconsin with Mr. OLNEY.

Mr. LITTLE with Mr. FIELDS.

Mr. KENDALL with Mr. CANTRILL.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington with Mr. AYRES.

Mr. IRELAND with Mr. POU.

Mr. GOODYKOONTZ with Mr. CASEY.

Mr. BLAND of Indiana with Mr. WELTY.

Mr. WILLIAMS with Mr. BEE.

Mr. ANDREWS of Maryland with Mr. BENSON.

Mr. SANFORD with Mr. HENRY T. RAINEY.

Mr. WALSH with Mr. PADGETT.
Mr. PERLMAN with Mr. SIMS.
Mr. BACHARACH with Mr. DONOVAN.
Mr. DENISON with Mr. GANDY.
Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois with Mr. WHALEY.
Mr. MASON with Mr. FLOOD.
Mr. VOIGT with Mr. WISE.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The Doorkeeper will open the doors.

Mr. MAPES. Mr. Speaker, I move the passage of the bill.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. MAPES, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

By unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. MAPES, a corresponding House bill was ordered to lie on the table.

ALLOTMENTS FROM NATIONAL DEFENSE FUND.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President, which, with the accompanying documents, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations:

To the House of Representatives:

In response to the resolution of the House of Representatives of February 15, 1921, requesting the President—

if not incompatible with the public interests to furnish the House of Representatives with an itemized statement showing disbursements and allocations of all sums allotted by him to the various departmental branches of the Government, to any special commission or committee, or to any individual, from the $100,000,000 appropriation authorized in the deficiency appropriations act approved April 17, 1917, and from the appropriation of $50,000,000 authorized in the sundry civil act approved July 1, 1918, which were to be expended at his discretion for the national security and defense—

I transmit herewith a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, together with memoranda and data, regarding the subject matter of the resolution.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
1 March, 1921.

Mr. LONGWORTH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. Will the message and the accompanying documents be printed so that Members may have them in the morning?

The SPEAKER. Not so that Members may have them in the morning. The message has been referred to the Committee on Appropriations, so that they can determine the wisdom of printing the whole of it.

LOTS ON LOW GROUNDS OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Mr. COADY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 12045) to provide for the conveyance of lots on the low grounds of Washington, D. C., and move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Maryland calls up House bill 12045, with a Senate amendment, and moves that the House concur in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was read.

The motion of Mr. COADY was agreed to.

JOHN E. MOORE CO.

Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 11572) for the relief of the John E. Moore Co.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania presents a conference report, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11572) for the relief of the John E. Moore Co., having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their several Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

GEO. W. EDMONDS,
E. C. LITTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.

SELDEN SPENCER,
HENRY W. KEYES,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement of the House conferees is as follows:

STATEMENT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 11572) for the relief of the John E. Moore Co., having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

The Senate amendment struck out the following: "and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of the John E. Moore Co., or against the John E. Moore Co. in favor of the United States, upon the same principles and measures of liability as in like cases in admiralty between private parties and with the same rights of appeal."

The matter which was struck out by the Senate is restored to the bill.

GEO. W. EDMONDS,
E. C. LITTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. GARD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. EDMONDS. Certainly.

Mr. GARD. What is the matter which the Senate has stricken out?

Mr. EDMONDS. This bill, as well as the one which I will present in a moment, gave jurisdiction to the admiralty courts in the different localities to hear these cases and render judgments either way. They were cases that were in dispute. The Senate have receded from their amendment and have left both bills as they were passed by the House.

Mr. GARD. Do they now go to the admiralty courts?

Mr. EDMONDS. They now go to the admiralty courts for decision. I move that the conference report be agreed to.

The question was taken, and the conference report was agreed to.

WILHELM ALEXANDERSON.

Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill (H. R. 12634) for the relief of Wilhelm Alexanderson.

The Clerk read the conference report, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12634) for the relief of Wilhelm Alexanderson, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

GEO. W. EDMONDS,
E. C. LITTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.

SELDEN P. SPENCER,
HENRY W. KEYES.
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The statement is as follows:

STATEMENT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 12634) for the relief of Wilhelm Alexanderson, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment.

The Senate amendment struck out the following: "and said court shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine such suit and to enter a judgment or decree for the amount of such damages and costs, if any, as shall be found to be due against the United States in favor of Wilhelm Alexanderson, or against Wilhelm Alexanderson in favor of the United States," and inserted in lieu thereof the following: "to hear said suit and to make a finding of facts therein."

The matter which was struck out by the Senate is restored to the bill.

GEO. W. EDMONDS,
E. C. LITTLE,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bill:

H. R. 15275. An act imposing temporary duties upon certain agricultural products to meet present emergencies, to provide revenue, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. RAMSEY, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 12634. An act for the relief of Wilhelm Alexanderson;

H. R. 16100. An act making appropriations for fortifications and other works of defense, for the armament thereof, and for the procurement of heavy ordnance for trial and service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, and for other purposes;

H. R. 12045. An act to provide for the conveyance of lots on the low grounds of Washington, D. C.;

H. R. 8067. An act to establish standard weights and measures for the District of Columbia, to define the duties of the superintendent of weights, measures, and markets of the District of Columbia, and for other purposes; and

H. R. 11572. An act for the relief of the John E. Moore Co.

AMENDING FEDERAL POWER COMMISSION ACT.

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, I ask to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 4554, a bill to eliminate from the water power act national parks and monuments.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

S. 4554. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to create a Federal power commission; to provide for the improvement of navigation; the development of water power; the use of the public lands in relation thereto; and to repeal section 18 of the river and harbor appropriation act, approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes," approved June 10, 1920.

Be it enacted, etc., That hereafter no permit, license, lease, or authorization for dams, conduits, reservoirs, power houses, transmission lines, or other works for storage or carriage of water, or for the development, transmission, or utilization of power, within the limits as now constituted of any national park or national monument shall be granted or made without specific authority of Congress, and so much of the act of Congress approved June 10, 1920, entitled "An act to create a Federal power commission; to provide for the improvement of navigation; the development of water power; the use of the public lands in relation thereto; and to repeal section 18 of the river and harbor appropriation act, approved August 8, 1917, and for other purposes," approved June 10, 1920, as authorizes licensing such uses of existing national parks and national monuments by the Federal power commission is hereby repealed.

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, the object of the bill is to modify the Federal water power act so as to eliminate from its provisions national parks and monuments. When the act was originally passed we supposed we had sufficiently safeguarded national parks and monuments so that there would not be constructed therein any water power or reclamation projects. However, the President was in doubt as to whether he would sign the bill which was presented to him on the 4th day of June, the day before we adjourned. He referred the bill to the Secretaries of the Interior, War, and Agriculture. The Secretary of the Interior had great doubt as to the policy of giving to a commission control over national parks and monuments in the matter of water-power development. Senator JONES, chairman of the Committee on Commerce, and Senator WALSH of Montana, called upon the Secretary and conferred with him regarding the signing of the bill. The Secretary conferred with Senator UNDERWOOD and the majority leader [Mr. MONDELL], and an understanding was reached whereby the bill was to be introduced at this session eliminating the parks and monuments from the operation of the Federal power act, and this bill carries out that understanding.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ESCH. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. What is the difference between the bill as it passed the Senate and as it was reported from the Interstate Commerce Committee of the House?

Mr. ESCH. They are identical.

Mr. BARKLEY. Would the gentleman consider an amendment to the bill as it passed, striking out the word "existing"?

Mr. ESCH. That is in the bill.

Mr. BARKLEY. The word "existing," which limits it to national parks and monuments now in existence, is in the bill as it passed the Senate?

Mr. ESCH. Yes; and as reported by the Select Committee on Water Power.

Mr. BARKLEY. I would like to ask whether the gentleman would be willing to consider an amendment to the bill striking out the word "existing"?

Mr. ESCH. I fear, Mr. Speaker, that with such an amendment the bill would fail in this Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time; was read the third time.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield for a question? This does not create any commission?

Mr. ESCH. Not at all.

Mr. BLANTON. It is only an amendment perfecting the act, and it does not increase any salaries, or anything of that kind?

Mr. ESCH. No.

Mr. BARKLEY. Mr. Speaker, is it in order to offer an amendment to the bill?

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks it is.

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, I did not yield the floor for that purpose.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ESCH. Yes.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I hope that the gentleman from Kentucky will not do that. I am in full sympathy with what the gentleman wants.

Mr. BARKLEY. If the gentleman from Wisconsin will yield to me for a moment?

Mr. ESCH. I do.

Mr. BARKLEY. When the bill was under consideration the question arose whether a limitation should be made applying to national parks now in existence or also to future parks that might be created.

As the bill passed the Senate and as it was reported to the House it limited its effect to existing national parks only, so that hereafter if more national parks shall be created, or those already in existence shall be enlarged, we must fight out on every individual bill creating a new national park or enlarging one already in existence the question whether the water power in the national park shall be used. It was my thought that we ought to make this provision apply to all parks that exist now as well as those that may be created in the future; but if the House feels that such an amendment would endanger the passage of this bill and thinks it is better to get what we can under this bill than to try to get more, I have no disposition to offer an amendment. I do desire, however, to register my objection to the provision that limits it to existing national parks instead of including all that may hereafter be created.

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, the thought as presented to the committee by Secretary Meredith and Secretary Payne was that this would safeguard existing parks and monuments, and hereafter if any project was presented to Congress for the creation of a new park or monument or the extension of existing parks or monuments it would be within the power of Congress to determine whether or not the water power act should apply to them.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken, and the bill was passed.

On motion of Mr. ESCH, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

On motion of Mr. ESCH the bill H. R. 14469, an identical House bill, was ordered to lie on the table.

UNCLAIMED FUNDS FROM OKLAHOMA TOWN SITES.

Mr. SINNOTT. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Public Lands I call up the bill (S. 4710) to authorize the Commissioner of the General Land Office to dispose of certain trust funds in his possession, a similar House bill having been previously ordered, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of the General Land Office is hereby directed to deposit with the Treasurer of the United States as miscellaneous receipts the sum of $623.59, which by virtue of the act of July 7, 1898 (30 Stat., p. 674), is now in his custody as ex officio trustee of certain Oklahoma town sites created under the act of May 14, 1890 (26 Stat., p. 109), and the joint resolution of Congress approved September 1, 1893 (28 Stat., p. 11).

Mr. SINNOTT. Mr. Speaker, this bill needs very little explanation further than the reading of the bill. It merely authorizes the Commissioner of the General Land Office to deposit in the Treasury of the United States certain funds which he holds in trust, the owners of which he has been unable to find.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the Senate bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

SURVEY OF ATCHAFALAYA, RED, AND BLACK RIVERS.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I call up from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 5000) directing the Mississippi River Commission to make an examination and survey of the Atchafalaya, Red, and Black Rivers and to report plans for the protection of their basins from the flood waters of the Mississippi River, a similar House bill being on the House Calendar previously reported favorably from the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana calls up the Senate bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That an examination and survey, with a report to Congress, shall be made by the Mississippi River Commission, of the Atchafalaya, Black, and Red Rivers in Louisiana, specifying a general plan with recommendations for the execution thereof that will give the greatest measure of protection to the basins of said rivers from the flood waters of the Mississippi River consistent with all other interests of the lower Mississippi Valley.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry. How does this bill come before the House?

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. It is a Senate bill, a similar House bill having been reported favorably by the committee, being on the House Calendar.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. I make the point of order that it belongs on the Union Calendar.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. This does not require any appropriation.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It involves the expenditure of money. It directs the War Department to make a survey and it involves necessarily the expenditure of money and belongs on the Union Calendar.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, this is a survey and report to be made by the Mississippi River Commission out of the problem it is already handling, under the funds it now has. The Senate did not take that view of it, and the Committee on Flood Control did not take that view of it, because it does not make any further charge on the Treasury.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It directs the Mississippi River Commission to make a survey of a river which necessarily involves an expenditure. There is no problematical question about it at all.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. Of course, the Mississippi River Commission can make the report on data it already has.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. The gentleman may know about that. I do not. I know what the bill provides.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. It does not require any additional appropriation.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's point is that the money has already been appropriated?

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. Yes; this would come under the operations of the Mississippi River Commission under the appropriations already made. It does not require any additional charge on the Treasury. That was clear when it passed the Senate, and it was clear before the Committee on Flood Control.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. If this bill passes, it would be an authorization at once for an appropriation for this purpose.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. I beg to differ with the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It would be an authorization at once for an appropriation for this purpose.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. No; this is expended under an amount already given the Mississippi River Commission. The gentleman, of course, is familiar with the act——

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to hear the gentleman. The Chair is disposed to think, under the provision of the rule—the Chair understands the appropriation has already been made?

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. It has been.

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the gentleman ask unanimous consent to consider the bill.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. If the Chair feels the point of order is good, I would ask unanimous consent to consider it——

Mr. MANN of Illinois. It is now 6 o'clock, according to the clock above the Speaker's desk, and we had agreed to recess at 6 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The matter can go over until 8 o'clock. The hour of 6 o'clock having arrived, the House stands in recess until 8 o'clock.

EVENING SESSION.

AFTER RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House (at 8 o'clock p. m.) resumed its session.

The SPEAKER. When the House took a recess it was considering a bill which the Clerk will report by title.

SURVEY OF ATCHAFALAYA, RED, AND BLACK RIVERS.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 5000.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Louisiana asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table a bill which the Clerk will report by title.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5000) directing the Mississippi River Commission to make an examination and survey of the Atchafalaya, Red, and Black Rivers, and to report plan for protection of their basins from flood waters of the Mississippi River.

The SPEAKER. A similar House bill having been reported.

Mr. WILSON of Louisiana. The House bill having been reported favorably.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That an examination and survey, with a report to Congress, shall be made by the Mississippi River Commission, of the Atchafalaya, Black, and Red Rivers in Louisiana, specifying a general plan with recommendations for the execution thereof that will give the greatest measure of protection to the basins of said rivers from the flood waters of the Mississippi River consistent with all other interests of the lower Mississippi Valley.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. WILSON of Louisiana, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Also, on motion of Mr. WILSON of Louisiana, a House bill of similar tenor was laid on the table.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE, AMERICAN NATIONAL RED CROSS.

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I call from the Speaker's table the bill S. 4826, to increase the number of directors of the Red Cross, an identical bill having been reported from the House committee. I ask to take the Senate bill from the Speaker's table and move its passage.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent to consider the Senate bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 4826) to amend section 5 of the act entitled "An act to incorporate the American National Red Cross," approved January 5, 1905.

Be it enacted, etc., That section 5 of the act for the incorporation of the American National Red Cross, approved January 5, 1905, be, and the same hereby is, amended so that the executive committee of the central committee shall consist of nine instead of seven persons, five of whom shall be a quorum.

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect immediately.

Mr. GARRETT. Will the gentleman from Kansas yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I yield.

Mr. GARRETT. As I understand it, the only effect of this bill is to increase the number of directors?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. It refers to the question of a quorum. It makes possible a quorum of the directors here in the city.

Mr. GARRETT. In the District of Columbia?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. In the District of Columbia, where the Red Cross was incorporated by an act of Congress.

Mr. GARRETT. Was there a provision in the act incorporating the Red Cross that limited the number of directors that might live in the District of Columbia? Does the gentleman remember?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. I do not recall that, but it did provide, I think, that seven could constitute a quorum, and it was quite impossible to get a quorum of the directors here. This simply makes it possible to get a quorum of the directors so that they can transact the business of the organization.

Mr. BLANTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. At present there are seven directors?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. This increases the number to nine?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. All during the war they handled their business with seven directors, and, up to this time, for three years after the armistice?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

Mr. BLANTON. Do these directors draw remuneration from the Red Cross?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Oh, no.

Mr. BLANTON. They serve without remuneration?

Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. CAMPBELL of Kansas, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

BRIDGE ACROSS ROCK RIVER, BELOIT, WIS.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to call up the bill S. 5032, which is a bridge bill. An identical bill has been reported by the House committee and this Senate bill has passed the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Indiana calls up Senate bill 5032, an identical bill having been reported by the House committee, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 5032) for the construction of a bridge across Rock River at or near Shirland Avenue, in the city of Beloit, Wis.

Be it enacted, etc., That the city of Beloit, in the State of Wisconsin, be, and the same is hereby, authorized to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge and approaches thereto across the Rock River, at a point suitable to the interests of navigation, at or near the point where Shirland Avenue, in said city of Beloit, crosses the said Rock River, in accordance with the provisions of the act entitled "An act to regulate the construction of bridges over navigable waters," approved March 23, 1906.

SEC. 2. That the right to alter, amend, or repeal this act is hereby expressly reserved.

Mr. DEWALT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Indiana yield for a moment?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I yield.

Mr. DEWALT. Is this a bill which was reported from our committee for the international bridge?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. I think it is not the international bridge.

Mr. DEWALT. Has the gentleman any definite information in regard to that matter?

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. Not any additional information. It is embraced in the report from our committee. An identical bill has been reported from our committee unanimously, but this bill has passed the Senate and has come over here. It is not the international bridge.

Mr. DEWALT. So I understand, but I understood that possibly that this very project was open to suspicion because it was an international bridge.

Mr. SANDERS of Indiana. No; it is not, I will say to the gentleman. It is not an international bridge.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. SANDERS of Indiana, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. ANTHONY] desire recognition at this time?

Mr. ANTHONY. I do not care for recognition.

REPEAL OF WAR LEGISLATION.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VOLSTEAD] is recognized.

Mr. VOLSTEAD. Mr. Speaker, I ask that House joint resolution 382 be laid before the House. It is a House joint resolution with Senate amendments. I move that the amendments be agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota calls up House joint resolution 382, with a Senate amendment. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 382) declaring that certain acts of Congress, joint resolutions, and proclamations shall be construed as if the war had ended and the present or existing emergency expired.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the resolving clause and insert:

